

Toronto University Library

Presented by

Messrs J. Frost & Co

through the Committee formed in

The Old Country

to aid in replacing the loss caused by

The disastrous Fire of February the 14th 1890

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2007 with funding from Microsoft Corporation

<http://www.archive.org/details/holybibleaccordi01scotuoft>

REV. THOMAS SCOTT'S COMMENTARY ON THE HOLY BIBLE.

VOLUME I.

Bible
Com
S

THE

HOLY BIBLE;

CONTAINING

THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS,

ACCORDING TO THE AUTHORIZED VERSION;

WITH EXPLANATORY NOTES, PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS, AND COPIOUS MARGINAL REFERENCES,

BY THE LATE REV.

THOMAS SCOTT,

RECTOR OF ASTON SANDFORD, BUCKS.

A NEW EDITION,

WITH THE AUTHOR'S LAST CORRECTIONS AND IMPROVEMENTS; AND EIGHTY-FOUR ILLUSTRATIVE MAPS AND ENGRAVINGS.

VOLUME I.

LONDON:

JAMES NISBET AND CO., 21, BERNERS STREET.

MDCCCLXVI.

11/11/90
11/11/90
11/11/90

4307
14/11/90
Vol 1 - 6

P R E F A C E ;

CONTAINING ESPECIALLY

A COMPENDIOUS VIEW OF THE EVIDENCES THAT THE HOLY SCRIPTURES, AND EVERY PART OF THEM, AS THEY STAND IN OUR BIBLES, WERE GIVEN BY INSPIRATION FROM GOD.

WHOEVER seriously reflects on the powers and capacities of the human mind, regarding them as the work of Him who doeth nothing in vain, and comparing them with those of the inferior creatures, will readily perceive that man alone was created to be RELIGIOUS. Of all the inhabitants of this earth, none else are capable of obtaining any knowledge of their Creator, or of rendering him worship and praise. Man alone possesses the capacity of distinguishing between truth and falsehood, between moral good and evil ; and of receiving instruction in social and relative duties, with the obligations under which he lies to perform them, and the advantages of doing it. He alone is capable of being governed by a law, and of being influenced by the proposal of rewards and punishments ; of acting as under the eye of an invisible Observer, and with reference to a future season of retribution. From these premises we infer with absolute certainty, that the all-wise Creator thus constituted our minds, and conferred on us these distinguishing endowments, in order to render us capable of Religion, for the purpose of his glory, and of our own felicity in the most intimate connexion with that of our fellow creatures.

When further, we consider what this word RELIGION implies ; and understand it, according to its most general acceptation, to be such an habitual regard to the one, true, living, and eternal God, the Creator, Governor, and Judge of all, as influences us to seek his favour, to do his will, and to aim at his glory, in the temper of our hearts, and the regulation of our actions, both in the worship which we render to him, and the duties which we perform to man, for his sake and according to his will ; we shall be constrained to allow, that it is most reasonable and excellent.—Doubtless, the exercises of true devotion form the noblest employment of the human mind, which in them emulates the angelick nature. A conscientious regard to the all-seeing eye of a righteous and omnipotent Judge is the best bond of human society, and regulator of our relative conduct ; insomuch that if this principle of action were universal and complete, human laws and tribunals would be entirely unnecessary. This would likewise most effectually moderate our appetites and passions ; and produce the greatest possible proportion of peace, contentment, and felicity, personal and social, of which our nature, in its present state, is capable. And when we look forwards, beyond the grave, to that immortality and future state of recompence, which reason itself pronounces at least highly probable ; the absolute necessity of religion to our felicity appears evident beyond all dispute.

Hence, we determine with certainty, that religion is that great business, to which all men ought to attend ; and that blessing, after which all men should seek, whatever else be neglected, or superseded, or postponed.

While, however, it is demonstrable, that man is capable of religion, and in duty and interest bound to it by the most indispensable obligations ; stubborn facts, in every age and nation of the world, undeniably prove, that, left to himself, man would never be truly religious. According to the statement above given, where shall we find religion on earth, in any age or nation, which has not possessed, in a greater or less degree, the advantage of those writings, which we will now take for granted to be a divine Revelation, and which will hereafter be shewn to be so? An assemblage of the grossest idolatries in varied forms, and of the wildest absurdities in opinion; the most vain and irrational superstitions in worship; and the most dangerous mistakes, as well as the most horrible cruelty, and abandoned licentiousness, in morals; form that religion, (if it may be dignified by so venerable a name,) which forces itself upon our observation, wherever the light of revelation has not shone. Nor can so much as a single nation, or city, or family, be excepted from this general charge. If there have been a few individuals, who have manifested something not wholly dissimilar from true religion; and any be disposed to allow, that indeed it was such: it must be far more rational to ascribe it to the remains of original tradition, or even to a personal revelation afforded to them for their own benefit, though not authenticated for the good of others; than to make it an exception to the general rule, That without revelation, there never was any true religion on earth, since the fall of Adam.

PREFACE.

Those indeed, who live under the light of revelation, and make what use they choose of that light, may draw up systems of natural religion, sufficiently plausible, and apparently rational. But it should be remembered, that this light is originally, through one channel or another, derived from the Bible; though too often, with equal absurdity and ingratitude, set up in opposition to its sacred and sublime truths: and universal experience demonstrates, that no such natural religion ever was discovered, and delineated, by men of any nation, who had never seen any part of the Bible, or any thing deduced from that source.

However reasonable and excellent many of those truths and precepts are, which are proposed to us as the oracles of reason; not one of them ever was proposed by reason without revelation, with such certainty, clearness, and authority, as to become a constant principle and rule of action, in secret and in publick, towards God and towards man, to any company of men on earth, perhaps not to one individual.

Indeed, after all the supposed improvements and discoveries of modern times, if we exclude the peculiar instructions of the Bible, what darkness and uncertainty rest upon points of the greatest imaginable importance!—Even in respect of the immortality of the soul, when Reason, at her best advantage, has done her utmost, her boasted power of demonstration fails: for even, were the arguments indisputably conclusive, by which the natural immortality of the soul is supported; who knows, or can know without revelation, how it may please a just and holy God to deal with the souls of his offending creatures? ‘He can create, and he destroy.’—But far greater obscurity and uncertainty rests on those subjects, which relate to the nature of the future world, and the rule of judgment, with which our whole conduct, and our hope and peace, are inseparably connected. It is difficult, if not impossible, to perceive by the light of nature, the consistency of perfect justice with boundless mercy: it still remains dubious, except to those who possess and believe revelation, whether God will punish at all, or pardon at all; or by what rule he intends to punish, or pardon: and indeed, wherever we turn, a thick cloud darkens our view, and discourages our enquiries, if we leave “the sure testimony of God,” and bewilder ourselves in speculations on matters evidently too high for us.—But how much worse has the case been of almost all the nations of the earth, and generations of men! Indeed so far have they been, from advancing in religious knowledge, where revelation has not been afforded; that they have evidently sunk deeper and deeper into ignorance, and several of them almost into absolute atheism: as if the little glimmering which once shone among them, being the effect of original tradition, was gradually expiring and leaving them in utter darkness.

PREFACE.

The most complete information, however, respecting doctrines and duties, would be wholly inadequate to the production of the desired effect; except such information were enforced by sufficient authority, gave necessary encouragement, and proposed effectual assistance. The knowledge of duty and of its reasonableness is utterly unavailing, whilst men are under the dominion of their lusts and passions; as the laws and judicial proceedings of every civilized nation sufficiently manifest. In this case there is no disposition to perform the dictates even of conscience or prudence. A heathen could say, Vide meliora proboque, deteriora sequor. The proposal of virtue as amiable and excellent, by the feeble recommendation of the moralist's pen, is infinitely inferior in energy, to the authoritative command and sanction of the Almighty, denouncing his awful and eternal indignation against the transgressor: and yet facts undeniably shew, that men venture upon sin, even with the threatenings of everlasting misery sounding in their ears; nay, with the trembling apprehensions of it dismaying their hearts: for divine as well as human laws "are weak through the flesh,"¹ and, with all their sanctions and barriers, are unable to affix boundaries to the swelling tide of human depravity.

Indeed, were men fully acquainted with all the glorious perfections of God; with his holy law, with the nature and malignity of sin, with their own real character and situation as sinners, and with the rule and consequences of the future judgment; and were they, at the same time, left utterly destitute of the encouragements and assistances, which the Gospel proposes, and which form the grand peculiarity of the Bible; their knowledge, so far from rendering them religious, would probably, by leaving them without hope, annihilate all appearances of religion.² Wherever any semblance of religion is found, which has no respect at all to the mercy of God, as revealed in the gospel, through the righteousness, atonement, and mediation of Emmanuel, and to the effectual teaching and assistance of the Holy Spirit, it seems to have its foundation, not in men's knowledge, but in their ignorance, of God, of themselves, of his law, and of the evil of sin; and this might easily be evinced to be the case even upon rational principles.

But the proposal of suitable encouragements and assistance is entirely out of the province of reason: these are "heavenly things,"³ of which we can know nothing, except by immediate revelation; and of which we can have no assurance, but the express declaration and faithful promise of God. He alone can inform us, on what terms, or in what manner, his honour permits him, and his sovereign pleasure disposes him, to forgive his offending creatures; and to communicate those gracious influences, which may produce a holy disposition of heart, and enable sinners to overcome all the obstacles, which retard the progress of those who endeavour to lead "a sober, righteous, and godly life."

From such considerations, the necessity of a revelation from God, in order to true religion among men, may be decidedly inferred: and it might reasonably have been expected, that he would afford such a revelation, if he intended to accept of any worship and service from them. Indeed this expectation has been very general in the world. And as counterfeit coin proves the existence of sterling money, and the value which men put on it; so counterfeit revelations, (instead of invalidating the argument,) if they do not prove the existence of a real revelation, yet evince that men have felt their need of one, have been sensible that it would be a most valuable acquisition, and have been generally disposed to expect it.

All the counterfeits, which hitherto have advanced a claim of being divine revelations, have also been successively exposed, and have sunk into general contempt or neglect: and, in this age and nation, it may be asserted, without hazard of contradiction, that there is but ONE BOOK in the world, which so much as appears to be of divine original. This we call, THE BIBLE, that is, by way of eminence, THE BOOK: and such is the internal and external evidence, which authenticates its claim; that I am persuaded,

¹ Note, Rom viii. 3, 4

² Note, Ps. cxxx. 3, 4.

³ John iii. 12, 13.

PREFACE.

were men as open to conviction on this subject, as they are in mathematical investigations, they could no more, after due examination, reject it, than they could contradict an evident demonstration.

It may therefore not be improper to insert, in this place, a few of the most obvious reasons, which the more studious Christian is “ready to give of the hope which is in him;”¹ and which is grounded upon this first principle, ‘THE BIBLE IS THE WORD OF GOD;’ in order to shew that it is highly reasonable to believe the Bible to be a divine revelation; and if so, then equally reasonable to take all our measures of truth and duty from it, and to bow our understandings and inclinations to its teaching and governance.

Let it be here carefully observed, that the DIVINE INSPIRATION, and not merely the authenticity, or genuineness, of each part of the sacred writings, is intended.—Each part, and every part, may be authentick, or genuine; the work of the authors whose names they severally bear; or true and unsophisticated narratives of the times to which they refer: and yet they may be merely human, and of no authority in matters of doctrine and duty. The Odes of Horace, and Cæsar’s Commentaries, are authentick: probably the first book of Maccabees is genuine history: yet they are not, on that account, in any degree the authoritative guides or standards of our faith and practice.—Many able and admired writers, who apparently have stood forth, as the champions of the Bible, appear to the author of this Exposition, to have (he hopes undesignedly) betrayed the cause. An ancient warrior, having murdered his predecessor, and usurped his throne, was some time after requested to permit him to be numbered among the gods; and it is said that he answered, ‘Sit divus, modo non sit vivus:’ ‘Let him be a god, provided he be not living.’ These apologists for the Bible, seem to reverse the words, and to say, ‘Sit vivus, modo non sit divus;’ ‘Let it be genuine, provided it be not divine.’ It would, however, be waste of time, to attempt to prove either the authenticity or the genuineness of the sacred writings; unless in entire subserviency to the demonstration that they are divinely inspired. All the works and words of mere men are fallible, and may be erroneous: and the desideratum, that which is especially wanted, is an INFALLIBLE STANDARD; to which all other books, and instructions of every kind, may be referred, with which they may be compared, and by which they may be judged. Now, if the sacred writings are indeed “THE WORD OF GOD;” if “all scripture is given by inspiration of God;” we have this desideratum; and have nothing further, in this respect, to expect or desire. But if the books, called by the apostles “The oracles of God,”² are merely the authentick writings of Moses, David, Isaiah, and others in former times, and not the infallible word of God; we are as far off from the desideratum above-mentioned as ever. We may indeed learn what these sages of Israel thought, as well as what the sages of China, Egypt, and Greece maintained, concerning God and religion; and we may examine the testimony of each, and bring in our verdict, some in favour of the one, and some of the other: but we are still far from an infallible standard; as far, as if the Bible had never been written; whatever value, in other respects, may be attached to such ancient, venerable, and interesting records.

With this view of the subject, gathering strength from year to year,¹ the Author of this work is decided against any compromise; and he ventures to stand forth, as vindicating ‘the divine inspiration of the Holy Scriptures.’ He wishes indeed to see far abler champions enter the lists against the Goliath of modern scepticism: but as most of those learned and eminent men, who take up the challenge, seem in some measure to compromise the main point, or to decline the discussion of it; he takes his sling and his stone, and says, “Who is this uncircumcised Philistine, that he should defy the armies of the living God?”

¹ 1 Pet. iii. 15.

² Rom iii. 2. Heb. v. 12. 1 Pet. iv. 11.

³ This part of the preface was written above thirty years ago; and the expression, here used, may be considered as the author’s present deliberate judgment.

PREFACE.

By ‘the divine inspiration of the Scriptures, the Author would be understood to mean, ‘Such a complete and immediate communication, by the Holy Spirit, to the minds of the sacred writers, of those things which could not have been otherwise known; and such an effectual superintendency, as to those particulars, concerning which they might otherwise obtain information; as sufficed absolutely to preserve them from every degree of error, in all things, which could in the least affect any of the doctrines or precepts contained in their writings, or mislead any person, who considered them as a divine and infallible standard of truth and duty.’ Every sentence, in this view, must be considered as “the sure testimony of God,” in that sense in which it is proposed as truth. Facts occurred, and words were spoken, as to the import of them, and the instruction contained in them, exactly as they stand here recorded: but the morality of words and actions, recorded merely as spoken and done, must be judged of, by the doctrinal and preceptive parts of the same book.—On this ground, all difference or disparity between one and another of the sacred writers is wholly excluded: Moses, Samuel, David, and Isaiah; Paul, James, Peter, and John, are all supposed to speak, or write, “as they were moved by the Holy Ghost:” they are the voice, but the divine Spirit is every where the SPEAKER. They wrote indeed in such language, as their different talents, educations, habits, and associations suggested, or rendered natural to them: but the Holy Spirit so entirely superintended them, when writing, as to exclude every improper expression, and to guide them to all those which best suited their several subjects: “Which things also we speak, “not in the words which man’s wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth.” Many particulars, which philosophers, orators, or critics, think inaccurate, may consist with this complete inspiration: but every kind and degree of misrepresentation, as springing from personal, popular, or national prejudices or opinions, or as calculated to mislead the humble believer, or to sanction error, must be totally excluded.

It will also appear, in the course of the work, that the few passages, (and they are but few, compared with the whole,) in which errors or interpolations have taken place, through the mistakes of transcribers, form no formidable difficulty, in thus regarding the Holy Scriptures. Nearly all such interpolations and errors may be detected and pointed out, by sober and well-informed critics, in this, as well as in other books: and if a few escape detection, it is because they do not so immediately affect the sense, as to make it evident to the most acute, penetrating, and accurate student, that they deviate from the style and sentiment of the writer, in whose works they are found.

The Author has indeed, to this present time, always decidedly rejected all emendations of the sacred text, which are adduced either on conjecture, or without adequate authority: and even where the authority is respectable, he has chosen to abide by the present text, when there appeared no evident necessity, nor any very cogent reasons, for the contrary: being aware, how far such alterations may, and often do, lead men from the Scriptures; and how directly they tend gradually to substitute another book in the place of the Bible. Yet it is proper to observe, that if all the various readings, for which any respectable authority can be given, were adopted; they would not alter either the standard of truth, or the rule of duty, in one material point: but whither conjectural emendations might lead, he cannot undertake to prognosticate.

These things having been premised, he proceeds to state some of the leading reasons, which any intelligent man may assign, for believing the Scriptures, as we now have them, to be the infallible word of God.

I. Great numbers of wise and good men, through many generations and in distant countries, have agreed in receiving the Bible as a divine revelation. Many of them have been distinguished and generally approved, for seriousness, erudition, penetration, and impartiality in judging of men and things. With much labour and patient investigation, they detected the impostures, by which their contemporaries were duped: yet the same assiduous examination confirmed them in believing the Bible to be "THE WORD OF GOD;" and induced them, living and dying, to recommend it to all others, as the source of all true wisdom, hope, and consolation. In this view, even 'the tradition of the church' has great weight: for, whatever abuse has been made of the term, by such as generally were no part of the true church; yet it must be allowed to be a consideration of vast importance, that the whole company of those, who have "worshipped the living God in spirit and truth," (including those who ventured and laid down their lives for conscience' sake, and who were the most pious, holy, and useful men in every age,) have unani- mously concurred in handing down to us the Scriptures as a divine revelation, and have very little differed about the books, which form that sacred deposit. And I cannot but suppose, that if a being of entire impartiality, of sound mind, and holy disposition, should be shewn the two companies, of those who have received, and of those who have rejected the Scriptures; and should compare the seriousness, learning, patient investigation of truth, solid judgment, holy lives, and composure in a dying hour, without unmanly terror or indecent levity, of the one company, with the character and conduct of the other; he would be induced to take up the Bible with profound veneration, and the strongest prepossession in its favour.

PREFACE.

II. The agreement of the sacred writers among themselves is another cogent argument of their divine inspiration. Should an equal number of contemporaries, of the same country, education, habits, profession, natural disposition, and rank in life, and associating together as a distinct company, concur in writing a book on religious subjects as large as the Bible, each furnishing his proportion, without comparing notes together; the attentive reader, whose mind had been long inured to such studies, would be able to discover some diversity of opinion among them. But the writers of the Scripture succeeded each other, during the term of fifteen hundred years: some of them were princes or priests, others shepherds or fishermen; their natural abilities, education, habits, and employments, were exceedingly dissimilar; they wrote laws, history, prophecy, odes, devotional exercises, proverbs, parables, doctrines, and controversy; and each man had his distinct department: yet they all exactly coincide in the exhibition which they give us of the perfections, works, truths, and will of God; of the nature, situation, and obligations of man; of sin and salvation; of this world and the next; and in short of all things connected with our duty, safety, interest, and comfort, and in the whole of the religion inculcated by them. They all were evidently of the same judgment, aimed to establish the same principles, and applied them to the same practical purpose. Apparent inconsistencies may indeed perplex the superficial reader; but they vanish after a more accurate and persevering investigation: nor could any charge of disagreement, among the sacred writers, ever be substantiated; for it can only be said, that they related the same facts with different circumstances, which are perfectly reconcileable; and that they gave instructions suited to the persons whom they addressed, without systematically shewing the harmony of them with other parts of divine truth. They did not write by concert, and they bestowed no pains to avoid the appearance of inconsistency: yet the exact coincidence, which is perceived among them by the diligent student, is most astonishing, and cannot be accounted for on any rational principles, without admitting that they wrote "as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."¹ ²

¹ 2 Pet. i. 21.

² Mohammed, to serve present purposes, produced his Koran by a little at a time: this occasioned an evident inconsistency of one part with another: concerning which he only said, that God had a right to change his laws as he saw good.

PREFACE.

To this we may add, that the scriptural history accords, in a wonderful manner, with the most authentic records which remain, of the events, customs, and manners of the countries and ages to which it stands related. The rise and fall of empires; the revolutions which have taken place in the world; and the grand outlines of chronology, as mentioned or referred to in the Scriptures, are coincident with those stated by the most approved ancient writers: whilst the palpable errors in these respects, detected in the apocryphal books, constitute one most decisive reason for rejecting them as spurious. But the history of the Bible is of far greater antiquity, than any other records extant in the world: and it is remarkable that, in numerous instances, it shews the real origin of those absurd fables, which disgrace and obscure all other histories of those remote times; and this is no feeble proof, that it was derived from some surer source of information, than human tradition.¹

III. The miracles, by which the writers of the Scriptures confirmed their divine mission to their contemporaries, afford us also a most convincing proof in this matter. The narratives of these miracles may be clearly shewn to have been published, very soon after the time, and at the places, in which they were said to have been wrought in the most conspicuous manner, and before very great multitudes, enemies as well as friends. This constituted a publick challenge to every man, to contradict or disprove them, if he could: yet this publick challenge never called forth a single individual to deny that they were really performed; nor was an attempt of the kind ever made till long afterwards.—Can any man of common sense think, that Moses and Aaron could possibly have persuaded the whole nation of Israel, that they had witnessed all the plagues of Egypt, passed through the Red Sea with the waters piled on each side of them, gathered the manna every morning for forty years together, and seen all the wonders recorded in their history, had no such events taken place? If then, that generation could not be thus imposed on, when could the belief of these extraordinary transactions be palmed upon the nation? Surely, it would have been impossible in the next age, to persuade them, that their fathers had seen and experienced such wonderful things, when they had never before heard a single word about them; and when an appeal must have been made to them, that these were things well known among them! What credit could have been obtained to such a forgery at any subsequent period? It would have been absolutely necessary, in making the attempt, to persuade the people, that such traditions had always been current among them; that the memory of them had for ages been perpetuated, by days and ordinances observed in every succeeding age by all the nation; and that their whole civil and religious establishment had thence originated: nay, that the very tenure, on which they held their estates was grounded on it! And could this have possibly been effected, if they all had known, that no such memorials and traditions had ever before been heard of among them? The same might be shewn concerning the other miracles recorded in Scripture, especially those of Christ and his apostles; and the sacrament of the Lord's supper in remembrance of his death, and the observance of the Lord's day on the first day of the week, in commemoration of his resurrection, in all ages to this present time. If not instituted at the time, immediately succeeding the events on which they are grounded; at what subsequent period could they have been introduced, so as to persuade multitudes in very many nations, that they and their fathers and fathers' fathers had always observed them? So that it might be made evident, that the man, who denies that the miracles were actually performed, must believe more wonderful things, without any evidence, than those are which he rejects, though established by unanswerable proof. To evince this, as to one most important instance, namely, the resurrection of Christ, which, being once proved, undeniably establishes the divine original and authority of Christianity, let the reader consult the latter part of the note on John xx. 24—29.

¹ Preface to the Book of Genesis.

PREFACE.

On this subject, it may again be demanded, When could the belief of the resurrection of Christ, and the miracles wrought by his apostles and disciples in proof of it, have been obtruded on mankind, if they had never happened? Surely not in the age, when they were said to have been witnessed by hundreds of thousands, who were publicly challenged to deny them if they could! certainly not in any subsequent age; for the origin of Christianity was expressly ascribed to them, and millions must have been persuaded, that they had always believed those things, of which they had never to that time so much as heard! We may indeed venture to assert, that no past event was ever so fully proved as our Lord's resurrection; and that it would not be half so preposterous to doubt whether such a man as Julius Cæsar ever existed, as it would be to question whether Jesus actually rose from the dead. What then do they mean, who oppose some trivial apparent variations, in the account given of this event by the four Evangelists, (which have repeatedly been shewn capable of an easy reconciliation,) to such an unparalleled complication of evidence that it did actually take place?

IV. The prophecies contained in the sacred Scriptures, and fulfilling to this day, fully demonstrate that they are divinely inspired. These form a species of perpetual miracles, which challenge the investigation of men in every age; and which, though overlooked by the careless and prejudiced, cannot fail of producing conviction proportioned to the humble and reverential attention paid to them. The prophecies of the Messiah, which are found in almost all the books of the Old Testament, when compared with the exact accomplishment of them, as recorded in the authentick writings of the Evangelists, abundantly prove them to have been written under the guidance of the Holy Spirit: while the existence of the Jews as a people differing from all others upon the face of the earth, and their regard to these writings, as the sacred oracles handed down from their progenitors, sufficiently vouch for their antiquity: though that admits of full and clear proof of another kind. According to the predictions of these books, Nineveh has been desolated;¹ Babylon swept with the besom of destruction;² Tyre become a place to dry nets in;³ Egypt the basest of the kingdoms, which has never since been able to "exalt itself above the nations."⁴ These, and many other events, fulfilling ancient prophecies, very many ages after they were delivered, can never be accounted for; except by allowing, that He, who sees the end from the beginning, thus revealed his secret purposes, that the accomplishment of them might prove the Scriptures to be his word of instruction to mankind.

In like manner, there are evident predictions interwoven with the writings of almost every writer of the New Testament, as a divine attestation to the doctrine contained in them. The destruction of Jerusalem, with all the circumstances predicted in the Evangelists; (the narrative of which may be seen in Josephus's History of the Jewish wars;) the series of ages, during which that city has been "trodden down of the gentiles;"⁵ the long continued dispersion of the Jews, and the conversion of the nations to Christianity; the many antichristian corruptions of the gospel; the superstition, uncommanded austerities, idolatry, spiritual tyranny, and persecution, of the Roman hierarchy; the division of the empire into ten kingdoms; the concurrence of those who ruled those kingdoms during many ages, to support the usurpations of the church of Rome; and the existence of Christianity to this day, amidst so many enemies, who have used every possible method to destroy it:—all these occurrences, when diligently compared with the predictions of the New Testament, do not come short of the fullest demonstration, of which the case will admit, that the books, which contain those predictions, are the unerring word of God.

¹ The Jews, at this day, do not deny, that the miracles recorded in the New Testament history were actually performed; but they absurdly ascribe them all to enchantment.—See Answer to Rabbi Crooll, by the Author

² Nah. i, ii, iii.

³ Is. xiii, xiv.

⁴ Ez. xxvi. 1, 5

⁵ Ez. xxix. 14, 15

⁶ Luke xxi. 24.

PREFACE.

There are two further observations, on this subject, which seem of great importance.

1. The predictions of Scripture, if carefully examined, will be found to contain a prophetic history of the world, as to all the grand outlines, from the beginning to this present time; not to speak of such, as are yet unfulfilled. Who can deny, that the history of Abraham's posterity; of Israel especially; of Judah and Joseph, the most renowned sons of Jacob; and of the Jews, in their present dispersions; and their preservation, as a distinct people, "dwelling alone, and not reckoned among the nations," might be clearly and particularly stated in the very words of prophecy? ¹ Does not almost the whole of ancient profane history, as distinguished from that contained in the sacred Scriptures; and also a large proportion of modern history, consist principally of the records of the four great empires, the Chaldean, the Medo-persian, the Grecian or Macedonian, and the Roman? And are not these predicted in the book of Daniel so exactly and particularly, as to give some plausibility to the objection, which is demonstrated to be unfounded, that they were written after the event? ² But especially, "the testimony of Jesus is the "spirit of prophecy."³ The changes which have taken place in the state of the world, in consequence of the birth of Jesus at Beth-lehem, and of his claim to be the Messiah, the Son of God, which has by some been virulently opposed, by others zealously supported, have been great, extensive, and durable beyond comparison with all other revolutions: but is there one particular, in all the history of Jesus, and of the subsequent establishment of Christianity, with all the opposition made to it, and the corruptions afterwards introduced, which is not expressly predicted in Scripture? And might not a narrative, in many instances very circumstantial, of our Lord, from his birth to his death, be drawn up in the words of prophecy?

2. From the preceding consideration another arises, as inseparably connected with it. The prophecies of Scripture are not detached or insulated predictions, but constitute a grand system of previous information, as to the secret designs of Providence, extending from the earliest ages even to the consummation of all things; and accompanied by such distinct notations of order, place, and time, as may well be called the geography and the chronology of prophecy. Insomuch that any one, in any age, who well understood the prophecies extant in his day, might have known what to expect, at the specified times, and in the specified countries. As one prediction received its accomplishment, others were given, connecting prophecy with history; ⁴ till the Revelation of St. John concluded the whole. Events have hitherto, in every age and nation, corresponded with these predictions. This is well known to each individual, in exact proportion to the degree in which he becomes acquainted with Scripture and with historical records, and to the care and impartiality with which he compares the prophecies with those records. As it is the manifest and avowed plan of prophecy, to predict events, occurring in their own place and season to the end of the world; the circumstance of several prophecies being yet unfulfilled, does not in the least deduct from the proof of the divine inspiration of the Scriptures, derived from this source: for on such a plan, some must remain unfulfilled, till the end shall come.—It may also be added, that, in respect of the state of the Jews, and in many other particulars, there is an evident preparation made for the accomplishment of all the prophecies, which yet remain to be fulfilled. Now, I ask, is there any thing in the least coincident with such a system of prediction, from age to age, in any other book in the world, except the Bible? And could so many and so extraordinary and improbable events, through so many ages and nations, have occurred, in so undeniable a manner, as foretold in the Scriptures, had not the Omniscient God himself inspired the Scriptures? The grand outline of prophecy generally takes in all

¹ Notes, Gen. xii. 1—3. xvi. 12. xlix. 8—12. 22—26. Num. xxiii. 9. Deut. xxviii. 65—67.

² Notes, Dan. ii. 38—45. vii. viii.

³ Rev. xix. 10.

⁴ Notes, Is. xli. 26—29. xlii. 8, 9.

PREFACE

that space of time, which was included between the period when the prophet wrote and the end of the world; and as subordinate predictions, concerning Israel and the nations, and which form a kind of episode to the main design, were fulfilled, other prophecies were delivered from age to age; till St. John closed the whole, in The Revelation.¹ Can any reasonable man conceive that a design of this kind could ever have entered into the thoughts of an uninspired writer; that he could form the astonishing idea into a regular plan; and that during more than fifteen hundred years, he should have successors, who entered fully into his views, and assisted in carrying them into effect? Or can it be conceived, that such a plan, however formed, could have been so executed, as to have even a plausible appearance of being successful? He, who can believe this, has no right to call those credulous, who receive the Bible as the word of God.

V. The Bible alone, and such books as make it their basis, introduce the infinite God speaking in a manner worthy of himself, with simplicity, majesty, and authority. His character, as there delineated, comprises all possible excellence without any intermixture; his laws and ordinances accord to his perfections; his works and dispensations exhibit them; and all his dealings with his creatures bear the stamp of infinite wisdom, power, justice, purity, truth, goodness, and mercy, harmoniously displayed. The description given in the sacred oracles, of the state of the world and of human nature, widely differs from our previous ideas of them; yet facts on full investigation unanswerably prove it to be exactly true. The records of every nation, the events of every age, and the history of every individual, most entirely confute the self-flattery of man in this respect; and prove that the writers of the Bible knew the human character immensely better, than any philosopher, ancient or modern, ever did. Their account teaches us what men are actually doing, and what may be expected from them: while all, who form a different estimate of human nature, find their principles inapplicable to facts; their theories incapable of being reduced to practice; and their expectations strangely disappointed. The Bible, well understood, enables us to account for those events, which have appeared inexplicable to men in every age: and the more carefully any one watches and scrutinizes all the motives, imaginations, and desires of his own heart, during a length of time; the more manifest will it appear to him, that the Scriptures give a far more just account of his disposition and character, than he himself could have done. In short, man is such a being, and the world is in such a state, as the Scriptures have described: yet multiplied facts, constant observation, and reiterated experience, are insufficient to convince us of it, till we first learn it from the Bible; and then comparing all which passes within us, and around us, with what we there read, we become more and more acquainted with our own hearts, and established in the belief of the divine original of this most wonderful book. To this we may add, as a most convincing internal proof that the Bible is the word of God, who “knoweth what is in man;” that it is exactly suited to our real state, character, and wants; and proposes an adequate remedy, or supply, to all of them; which in proportion as self-knowledge increases, we see more and more. While others, through ignorance and self-flattery, cannot perceive that its proposals and promises suit their ease, the experienced Christian is deeply convinced, that he wants all that is thus proposed and promised, to render him happy, and that he wants nothing more.

The mysteries contained in Scripture rather confirm than invalidate this conclusion: for a book, claiming to be a revelation from God and yet devoid of mystery, would, by this very circumstance, confute itself. Incomprehensibility is inseparable from God and from all his works, even the most inconsiderable; such as, for instance, the growth of a blade of grass. The mysteries of the Scriptures are sublime, interesting, and useful; they display the divine perfections; lay a foundation for our hope; and inculcate humility, reverence, love, and gratitude. What is incomprehensible must be mysterious: but it may be intelligible as far as it is revealed; and though it be connected with things above our reason, it may imply nothing contrary to it. So that, in all respects, the contents of the Bible are suited to convince the serious enquirer, that it is 'The word of God.'

¹ Note, Is. xl. 21—24

PREFACE.

VI. The tendency of the Scripture constitutes another unanswerable proof. Did all men believe and obey the Bible, as a divine revelation; let us seriously enquire, to what tenour of conduct it would lead them, and what would be the effect on society? Surely if repentance, and renunciation of all vice and immorality, when combined with the spiritual worship of God in his ordinances; faith in his mercy and truth, through the mediation of his Son; and all the fruits of the Holy Spirit, as visible in the life of every true believer, were universal, or even general, they would form the bulk of mankind to such characters, and would produce such effects, as the world has never yet witnessed. Men would then habitually and uniformly do justice, speak truth, shew mercy, exercise mutual forgiveness, follow after peace, bridle their appetites and passions, and lead sober, righteous, and godly lives. Murders, wars, slavery, cruel oppressions, rapine and fraud, and unrestrained licentiousness, would no more desolate the world, or fill it with misery; and bitter contentions would no more destroy domestick comfort: but righteousness, goodness, and truth would bless the earth with a felicity exceeding all our present conceptions. This is, no doubt, the direct tendency of the scriptural doctrines, precepts, motives, and promises: nothing is wanting to remedy the state of the world, and to fit men for the worship and felicity of heaven, but to believe and obey the Scriptures. And if many enormous crimes have been committed, under colour of zeal for Christianity; it only proves the depravity of man's heart: for the Scripture, soberly understood, most expressly forbids such practices; and men do not act in this shameful manner because they duly regard the Bible, but because they will not believe and obey it.

The tendency of these principles is exhibited in the characters delineated in the sacred writings; while the consistency between the doctrines and precepts of Scripture, and the actions of men recorded in it, implies another argument of its divine original. The conduct of ungodly men, as there related, entirely accords to the abstract account given of human nature: and it appears, that believers conducted themselves exactly in that manner, which the principles of the Bible might have led us to expect. They had naturally like passions with other men; but these were habitually restrained and regulated by the fear and love of God, and by other holy affections. Their general behaviour was good, but not perfect; and sometimes their natural proneness to evil broke out, and made way for bitter repentance and deeper humiliation: so that they appear constantly to have perceived their need of forgiveness and divine assistance; to have expected felicity from the rich mercy of God; and, instead of making a bad use of that consideration, to have deduced from it motives for gratitude, zeal, patience, meekness, and love to mankind.

But one character is exhibited, in the simplest and most unaffected manner, which is perfection itself. Philosophers, orators, and poets, in their several ways, have bestowed immense pains to delineate a faultless character: and they have given us complete models of their own estimate of excellence, and sufficient proof that they had laboured the point to the uttermost of their ability. But the four Evangelists, (whose divine inspiration is now frequently doubted on the most frivolous pretences,) without seeming to think of it, have done that, in which all other writers have failed. They have set before us a perfect human character, by recording facts, without making any comment on them, or shewing the least ingenuity in the arrangement of them. 'They have given the history of one, whose spirit, words, and actions were, in every particular, what they ought to have been; who always did the very thing which

PREFACE.

‘ was proper, and in the best manner imaginable ; who never once deviated from the most consummate wisdom, purity, benevolence, compassion, meekness, humility, fortitude, patience, piety, zeal, or any other excellency : and who in no instance let one virtue or holy disposition entrench on another, but exercised them all in entire harmony, and exact proportion.’—‘ This subject challenges investigation, and sets infidelity at defiance. Either these four men exceeded, in genius and capacity, all other writers that ever lived ; or they wrote under the guidance of divine inspiration : for, without labour or affectation, they have performed what hath baffled all others, who have set themselves purposely to accomplish it.’¹ This is a fact which cannot be denied : no perfect character is elsewhere delineated, and probably no mere man could have drawn one ; and no one would have thought of such a character as that of Jesus. This alone, I apprehend, joined to their entire consistency in this respect with one another, demonstrates that the Evangelists wrote under the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

It has often been observed, that Satan would never have influenced men to write the Bible ; for then he would have been divided against himself : wicked men would not have written a book, which so awfully condemned their whole conduct ; and good men would never have ascribed their own inventions to divine inspiration, especially as such forgeries are most severely reprobated in every part of it. But indeed, it is a work as much exceeding every effort of mere man, as the sun surpasses those scanty illuminations, by which his splendour is imitated, or his absence supplied.

VII. The actual effects, produced by the Scripture, evince their divine original. These are indeed far from being equal to its tendency ; because, through human depravity, the gospel is not generally or fully believed and obeyed : yet they are very considerable ; and we may assert, that even at present, there are many thousands, who have been reclaimed from a profane and immoral course of conduct, to sobriety, equity, truth, and piety, and to good behaviour in relative life, simply by attending to the sacred oracles. Having been “ made free from sin, and become the servants of God, they have their fruit unto holiness ; ” and after “ patiently continuing in well-doing, ” and cheerfully bearing various afflictions, they joyfully meet death, being supported by the hope of eternal life “ as the gift of God through Jesus Christ : ” while those who best know them, are most convinced, that they have been rendered more wise, holy, and happy, by believing the Bible ; and that there is a reality in religion, though various interests and passions may keep them from duly embracing it. What a different nation would Britain become, if all its inhabitants were rendered as upright, sincere, peaceable, beneficent, and active in doing good to mankind, as a remnant of them are on scriptural principles ? How would the state of the whole earth be changed, if all men every where thus “ denied ungodliness and worldly lusts, and lived “ soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world ? ” This alone would do much towards introducing a state of things, resembling that of the millennium.²—There are indeed enthusiasts ; but they become such, by forsaking the old rule of faith and duty, for some new imagination : and there are hypocrites ; but they attest the reality and excellency of religion, by deeming it worth their while to counterfeit it.

VIII. Brevity is so connected with fulness in the Scriptures, that they are a treasure of divine knowledge, which can never be exhausted. The things, that are absolutely necessary to salvation, are few, simple, and obvious to the meanest capacity, provided it be attended by a humble, teachable disposition : but the most learned, acute, and diligent student cannot, in the longest life, obtain an entire knowledge of this one volume. The more deeply he works the mine, the richer and more abundant he finds the ore : new light continually beams from this source of heavenly knowledge, to direct his conduct, and illustrate the works of God, and the ways of men; and he will at last leave the world confessing, that the more he studied the Scriptures, the fuller conviction he had of his own ignorance, and of their inestimable value.

¹ The author's Answer to Paine's Age of Reason, p. 66, 2^d ed

² Note, Rev. xx. 4—6

PREFACE.

IX. Lastly, "He that believeth hath the witness in himself." ¹ The discoveries which he has made by the light of the Scripture; the experience which he has had, that the Lord fulfils its promises to those who trust in them; the abiding effects produced by attending to it, on his judgment, dispositions, and affections; and the earnestness of heaven enjoyed by him in communion with God, put the matter beyond all doubt: and though many believers are not at all qualified to dispute against infidels, they are enabled, through this inward testimony, to obey the gospel, and to suffer for it: and they can no more be convinced, by reasonings and objections, that uninspired men invented the Bible, than they can be persuaded, that man created the sun, whose light they behold, and by whose beams they are cheered.

And now, if an objector could fully invalidate more than one half of these arguments, (to which many more might easily be added,) the remainder would be abundantly sufficient.—Nay, perhaps, any one of them so far decides the question, that, were there no other proof of the Bible's being the word of God, a man could not reject it, without acting in direct opposition to those dictates of common sense, which direct his conduct in his secular affairs.—But in reality, I have a confidence, that not one of these proofs can be fairly answered; at least it has never yet been done: and the combined force of the whole is so great, that the objections, by which men cavil against the truth, only resemble the foaming waves dashing against the deep rooted rock, which has for ages defied their unavailing fury. But, though these can effect nothing more, they may beat off the poor shipwrecked mariner, who was about to ascend it, in hopes of deliverance from impending destruction.

A very small part of the evidences, which, with combined force, establish the divine original and authority of our holy religion, has here been adduced. Many books have, of late years, been published on the important subject; the writers of which have treated it in different ways: yet, in general, the arguments advanced by each seem separately to be conclusive. It does not appear, that any view of the subject, materially new, remains to be exhibited: but the following particulars have not, as far as the Author has observed, been as yet brought forward, in that prominent manner, and to that advantage, of which they are capable.

I. Many, in these days, allow the sacred writers to have been wise and good men; but they hesitate, and speak doubtfully, as to their divine inspiration. Yet, do not all the prophets, in the Old Testament, speak most decidedly of themselves and of their predecessors, as declaring, not their own words, but the word of God? ² Do not the apostles, and other writers of the New Testament, speak concerning the prophets who wrote the Old Testament, "as holy men of God, who spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost?" ³ Do they not adopt language, which, in its most obvious meaning, claims the attention of their readers to their own instructions, as to the WORD OF GOD? Do they not thus attest and sanction one another's writings? ⁴ Do they thus attest and sanction any other books? The answer to these questions at least effectually confutes the sentiment above stated. If the sacred writers were indeed wise men, but not inspired; how were they deluded into the false imagination, that they and their predecessors and

¹ Note, 1 John v. 9, 10.

² 2 Sam. xxiii. 1, 2. Neh. ix. 30. Ps. xix. 7—11. Is. viii. 20. Jer. xx. 7—9. xxv. 3, 4. xxvi. 12—19. Ez. i. 1—3. xxxviii. 16, 17. Dan. ix. 12, 13. Mic. iii. 8—12. Zech. i. 5, 6.

³ Notes, Rom. iii. 1, 2. 2 Tim. iii. 14—17. Heb. i. 1, 2. 2 Pet. i. 19—21

⁴ Notes, 1 Cor. vii. 39, 40. 1 Thes. iv. 6—8. v. 23—28, v. 27. 2 Pet. iii. 1—4. 14—16. 1 John iv. 4—6

PREFACE.

coadjutors were inspired? If they were good men, but not inspired, would they have thus confidently asserted their own inspiration, and sanctioned that of each other; knowing that this was contrary to the truth, and that they merely delivered their own private sentiments?

II. There are also very many, who so far reverence the name of our Lord Jesus, as to suppose his words to be divine and infallible; and yet they speak of the writers, both of the Old and New Testament, in more hesitating language. Now our Lord himself, in numerous instances, has quoted and referred to the Old Testament, and the several parts of it, as “of divine authority;” and this in a manner which directly tended to mislead the people, if the passages referred and appealed to, were merely the private opinion of some venerable men of former ages, but not the infallible word of God. And his appointment of the apostles, and his giving them the power of the keys, of opening and shutting the kingdom of heaven; must imply, that in their writings, and in those which they sanctioned, his doctrine and religion might be found unmixed and genuine. Indeed, if it cannot be found there, where are we to look for it? These considerations shew, that he himself has attested the divine inspiration of both the Old and the New Testament.

An argument, comprising so many and important transactions, cannot here be fully discussed; but a few specimens may not improperly be annexed, of the manner in which the author supposes that the position might be maintained, with great effect, by any man who had talents and leisure for such an attempt.

When the divine Redeemer was tempted by the devil, he selected all the texts, with which, as ‘by the sword of the Spirit,’ he put the enemy to flight, from one of the Books of Moses.¹ Does he then quote these books as the words of man? Surely not. He says repeatedly, “It is written.” And had any one enquired, Where? Would he not have answered, “In the word of God?”—In his sermon on the mount he continually refers to the law given by Moses; declaring that “till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled;” for he came not to destroy “the law, . . . but to fulfil.”² Now who can deny that our Lord came to fulfil the types of the ceremonial law, and the requirements of the moral law? And who can imagine, that the Son of God was manifested, thus to honour any institutions of mere human authority?—Yet many learned writers speak of the laws of Moses, as if they had originated with him.

The Pharisees and Scribes in general maintained, that JEHOVAH spake by Moses, and that his writings were the word of God: but does our Lord ever so much as intimate that this opinion was unwarranted, or held in too absolute and unrestricted a manner?³ Nay, when he saw good to expose the traditions of the elders, he charges them with rejecting and “making void the commandment of God by their traditions:”⁴ but where was that commandment of God to be found, except in the books of Moses? for he expressly referred to the fifth commandment.—Again, when the Pharisees proposed a question to him respecting divorces, he referred them to the Mosaick history of the creation, and to the original institution of marriage; saying, “Have ye never read, that he which made them at the beginning, made them “male and female?” Does not this method of appealing to these records imply an express attestation to the indisputable truth of them? And does not that attestation amount to a declaration, that they were written by divine inspiration?

Who was intended by the Householder, that inclosed the vineyard of Israel, but JEHOVAH? By whom did he inclose it, but by Moses? What Moses enacted and performed, was done in the name and by the

¹ Notes, Matt. xvi. 18—20.

² Matt. iv. 4—11.

³ Note, Matt. v. 17, 18

⁴ Notes, John v. 45—47. ix. 27—34.

⁵ Notes, Matt. xv. 1—14. Mark vii. 1—9.

PREFACE.

authority of JEHOVAH: and can his writings be treated as the word of man, by any who consider the testimony of Christ as “the word of God?”¹

The Sadducees proposed a case to Jesus, which they imagined inconsistent with the resurrection of the dead: but he decisively answered, “Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures, nor the power of God;” and he then referred them to the Books of Moses, as a confutation of their error. But did the Son of God in reality appeal to the writings of an uninspired man? or did he not appeal to “the oracles of God?” This however is not all; for he says expressly, “Have ye not read, that which was spoken unto you by God, saying, &c.?”—What Moses recorded was spoken by God.²

On another occasion he inculcated a regard to the Scribes and Pharisees, as sitting in Moses’s seat, that is, teaching according to his law; though, at other times, he exposed their instructions, when, following their own traditions, they disannulled that law: what could this mean, but that the one was a divine revelation, the other a mere human invention?³

In the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, (if indeed it be a parable,) our Lord introduces Abraham saying to the rich man concerning his brethren, “They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them:” and again, “If they believe not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead.”⁴—But would he have thus called the attention of his hearers, and of all through revolving ages who read his words, to the writings of Moses, if any part of them had been erroneous and the mere opinion of a fallible man?—It is worthy of notice, that our Lord also expressly attested the truth of the Mosaick history, in some particulars which have not been most implicitly credited, in their evident and literal import: I mean the account given by Moses of the universal deluge, and Noah’s preservation in the ark while all else were drowned; and of the destruction of Sodom by fire and brimstone from heaven, with the sudden and awful doom of Lot’s wife.⁵

When discoursing with Nicodemus, he referred to the Mosaick history of the brazen serpent, in such a manner as both attested the typical import of that transaction, and the reality of the miracle recorded by Moses.⁶

On another occasion, probably before the Sanhedrim, our Lord says to the Jews, “Had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me, for he wrote of me. But if ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe my words?”—Hence we may infer, that an intelligent belief of the words of Moses necessarily leads to faith in Christ; and that it could not be expected, that the Jews, who did not believe the testimony of Moses in this particular, would believe in him of whom he spake.⁷ Let this suffice, in respect of the Books of Moses.

It may be proper also to adduce a few specimens, respecting the other parts of the Old Testament. When the Pharisees condemned the disciples for rubbing the ears of corn on the sabbath-day, our Lord said unto them, “Have ye not read what David did?” “Have ye not read so much as this, what David did?”⁸ and directly referred also to the law in the same sentence.⁹ Now this surely authorizes us to conclude, that he regarded both the law and the Books of Samuel, as equally “the word of God.”—In like manner he called the attention of his hearers to the history of the queen of Sheba, as of undoubted authority; and this is recorded both in the Books of the Kings and in the Chronicles.¹

¹ Matt. xxi. 33—46. Mark xii. 1—12. Luke xx. 9—18.

² Note, Matt. xxiii. 1—4.

³ Luke xvi. 27—31.

⁴ Notes, Matt. xxii. 23—33, v 31.

⁵ Matt. xxiv. 37—39. Luke xvii. 26—32.

⁶ Note, John iii. 14, 15.

⁷ Notes, John v. 39—47.

⁸ Matt. xii. 1—5. Luke vi. 3, 4.

⁹ Lev. xxiv. 5—9. 1 Sam. xxi. 1—6

¹ 1 Kings x. 1—13. 2 Chr. ix. 1—12. Note, Matt. xii. 41, 42.

PREFACE.

When he anticipated the objection of the Nazarenes, by referring them to the conduct of the Lord in sending Elijah to Zarephath, to a Zidonian woman, rather than to any of the widows in Israel; and in cleansing Naaman the Syrian, by Elisha, rather than any of the lepers in Israel; he not only authenticated the historical records of those facts as genuine, but attested the miracles recorded in them; which, admitted in their full extent, can never be separated from the divine inspiration of those who wrought them.¹ It should also be observed, that our Lord never referred to any writings in this manner, except those received by the Jews as the word of God; he opposed oral traditions, and has not once quoted the Books of the Apocrypha, some of which were then extant. It may therefore be fairly inferred, that he expressly designed to confirm the opinion of the Jews on that subject, by his repeated attestations, and to establish exclusively the divine inspiration of their sacred books.

JEHOVAH had given commandment by Moses, that the people should offer sacrifices, exclusively at the place which he should appoint: and Joshua after his death, by divine direction, as the Jews supposed, placed the tabernacle at Shiloh, where it continued till the ark was taken by the Philistines. Afterwards David removed the ark to Jerusalem, and Solomon built the temple on mount Zion, which was from that time regarded as exclusively the place appointed by God for sacrifice.—A large proportion of the Old Testament, from the Books of Moses to the end of it, relates to this tabernacle and temple; to the sins of the people in offering sacrifice elsewhere, or in hypocritically attending on the ordinances there administered; to the judgments of God upon them for these sins; to the destruction of the temple by the Chaldeans; to the rebuilding of it by Zerubbabel; and to events of a similar nature.—These things are so interwoven with the historical records of the Old Testament; that to deny the divine authority, by which Joshua separated Shiloh, and David appointed mount Zion, as the exclusive place for offering sacrifice, according to the command given by Moses, would tend to invalidate the whole narrative; as it would imply, that the Lord inflicted tremendous judgments on the nation, merely for violating the appointments of uninspired men.—The Samaritans indeed argued, that “men ought to worship” on mount Gerizim, and not at Jerusalem: but our Lord declared to the woman of Samaria, that the Samaritans “knew not what they worshipped; for salvation was of the Jews.”² Now, who can doubt, that this declaration of Jesus Christ, and his own constant attendance on the worship performed at Jerusalem, fully attest the divine inspiration of those books, in which the appointment of this place and the building of the temple are recorded, as having been done by the directions and command of God himself?

Let us also very briefly consider our Lord's testimony to the writings of the Prophets, and to the Book of Psalms. The Psalms are indeed ascribed to different writers; but it is evident that they constituted a book of the Scriptures among the Jews at that time, as they now do:³ so that a quotation from that book, as the word of God, without adding any limitation, is in fact an attestation of the whole.

When the children in the temple cried, “Hosanna to the Son of David;” the chief priests said to Jesus, “Hearest thou not what these say?” To which he answered, “Yea; have ye never read, Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise?”⁴ Did not this attest the words of David, as the language of inspiration, and of prophecy?

On another occasion he demanded of the Pharisees, “how David in Spirit,” or, “by the Holy Ghost,” “called the Messiah Lord:”⁵ which is equivalent to David's declaration concerning himself; “The Spirit of God spake by me, and his word was in my tongue.”⁶ And accordingly our Lord, after

¹ Luke iv. 23—27.

² John iv. 20—22.

³ Luke xxiv. 44. Acts i. 20. xiii. 33

⁴ Ps. viii. 2 Matt. xxi. 15 16.

⁵ Notes, Ps. cx. 1. Matt. xxii. 41—46. Mark xii. 35—37.

⁶ Note, 2 Sam. xxiii. 1, 2

PREFACE.

his resurrection, declared that "all things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, "and in the prophets, and in the Psalms concerning him." ¹—But why must this have been, except as the writings referred to were inspired by God himself? Could there be any necessity, that the words of fallible men, however wise and good, should be fulfilled, in such extraordinary events, as the crucifixion and resurrection of Christ?

Referring to a passage, in the Psalms, ² he asks, "Is it not written in your law, I said, Ye are gods? If he called them gods, to whom the word of God came; and the Scripture cannot be broken, &c." ³ Who called the magistrates gods, but ЖЕHOBAH? And why could not the Scripture be broken, but because it is "the word of God?"

I shall only, in a general way, refer the reader, to some of our Lord's attestations to several of the Prophets, whose writings form a part of our Scriptures. The texts referred to are sure'y a sufficient attestation to the prophecy of Isaiah. ⁴ When our Lord says, "Well did Esaias prophesy of you;" could he mean any thing less than St. Paul did, in saying, "Well spake the Holy Ghost by Esaias the prophet?" ⁵—Christ gives similar attestations to the prophecy of Daniel: ⁶ and to Hosca. ⁷ He also expressly attests the history contained in the book of Jonah, which is often treated very irreverently. ⁸ He evidently refers to the words of Micah, in predicting the persecutions, to which his disciples would be subjected. ⁹ And he explicitly attests the prophecy of Malachi. ¹⁰ Several others of the prophets are quoted by the evangelists: but none are here adduced, except those who are mentioned by our Lord himself, in a manner attesting the divine inspiration of the writers, or their language, as "the word "of God"

It only remains to mention his attestation to the Scriptures in general, and to the division of them which was received at that time, into "the Law, the Prophets, and the Psalms." Thus he says to the Scribes, "Did ye never read in the Scriptures, The Stone which the builders rejected, the same is become "the Head of the corner?" ¹¹ And when he adds, "Therefore I say unto you, the kingdom of God "shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof;" he evidently shews, that he quoted the passage as the word of God, which "cannot be broken."—"How then shall "the Scriptures be fulfilled, that thus it must be?" and again, "All this was done that the Scriptures "of the prophets might be fulfilled." ¹²

Would we know more particularly what Scriptures he meant? Let us hear his words to the apostles: "All things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the "Psalms concerning me." ¹³

The words of our Lord are very remarkable; "Search," says he, "the Scriptures, for in them ye think "ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me." ¹⁴ Now what could the Jews suppose Jesus to mean by "the Scriptures," but the books which they had been accustomed to distinguish by that appellation? They had thought, that in these the way of eternal life was to be found; these testified of Jesus as the Messiah; and yet they rejected him, without whom they could not obtain eternal life!—This one testimony confirms indubitably the divine revelation of the whole Old Testament, as it stood at that

¹ Luke xxiv. 44—46.

² Ps. lxxxii. 1, 6, 7.

³ Note, John x. 32—39.

⁴ Matt. xiii. 13—15. xv. 7—9. xxi. 13. Mark vii. 6, 7. Luke iv. 17—21.

⁵ Acts xxviii. 25.

⁶ Matt. xxiv. 15. Mark xiii. 14.

⁷ Hos. vi. 6. Matt. ix. 13. xii. 7.

⁸ Matt. xii. 39—41. xvi. 4. Luke xi. 29—32.

⁹ Mic. vii. 6. Matt. x. 35, 36.

¹⁰ Mal. iii. 1. Matt. xi. 10, &c. Luke vii. 27.—Mal. iv. 5, 6. Matt. xvii. 10—12. Mark ix. 11—13.

¹¹ Ps. cxviii. 22, 23. Matt. xxi. 42, 43.

¹² Matt. xxvi. 54—56.

¹³ Luke xxiv. 27. 44—46.

¹⁴ John v. 39, 40.

PREFACE.

time, to all who truly believe the words of Christ : but, reversing his conclusion in another case, we may fairly say to men who call themselves Christians, ‘ If ye believe not his words, how can ye believe the writings of the Old Testament ? ’

When the Jews went about to stone him, because he had said, “ I and my Father are One ; ” he quoted a passage from the Psalms, adding, “ The Scripture cannot be broken.”¹ But what can we understand by “ the Scripture,” in this connexion, but the canonical books of the Old Testament as then received by the Jews ? And who can deny this to be a complete authentication of them, as the unchanging word of the unchangeable God ? Indeed all those passages, in which Christ speaks of his sufferings, death, and resurrection, with the various circumstances connected with them, as what “ must be,” with reference to the types and prophecies of the Old Testament, prove, as far as men regard his testimony, that not one tittle of those sacred records could pass away, till the whole had received its full accomplishment : for which no other satisfactory reason can possibly be given, than this, that the whole is a divine revelation ; “ for the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man : but holy men of God spake as they were “ moved by the Holy Ghost.”

But, should it be granted that our Lord’s own words demonstrate the whole Old Testament to be “ given by inspiration from God,” as far as men reverence and believe his testimony ; yet it may still be asked, Does it follow, that the books of the New Testament admit of the same kind of proof from the words of Christ himself ?—Let us briefly examine this subject also. It is not indeed practicable to adduce so large a body of evidence, as has been brought in the former case ; nor is it necessary : yet I apprehend that the argument may in a short compass be made very conclusive.—When Peter confessed Jesus to be “ the Christ, the Son of the living God,” He answered, “ I will give thee the keys of the kingdom “ of heaven ; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven ; and whatsoever thou “ shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.”—Peter had spoken in the name of the other apostles, as well as in his own ; and it is generally allowed, that the answer included them also : indeed this appears by other passages of similar import, in which they were all addressed.*

If it be allowed, that this absolute promise was given exclusively to the apostles ; we must next enquire, how they could exercise this power of binding or loosing, especially after their decease, except by their doctrine ? And where must the church or the world look for that doctrine, if not in their writings ? Should we suppose, that the exercise of this exclusive authority was confined to the short time of their continuance on earth ; then the church has ever since been left destitute of any rule, either for censures or absolutions, even of a declarative nature ; and also of all criteria for the discrimination of true Christians from other men, either for the purpose of self-examination, or for the regulation of our conduct “ towards the household of faith,” and the world around us. But if this promise was not exclusively made to the apostles, nor the authority given by it intended to be exercised according to their doctrine ; the consequence must be, either that there are in every age, ministers of religion possessed of this absolute power of binding and loosing ; or that the words of Christ have not received their accomplishment. And, as it does not seem to accord with the prevailing sentiments of this age, to invest ministers, of any kind or description, with such an infallible and decisive authority ; we may, I apprehend, be allowed to conclude, that the promise was made exclusively to the apostles ; and was fulfilled, when they were inspired by the Holy Spirit to deliver that doctrine to the church, according to which the state of all men, in respect of acceptance or condemnation, is and will be finally decided. If this be allowed, it will inevitably follow, that our Lord's express testimony proves that their writings are a divine revelation; for in them especially they delivered to the church what they received from the Lord; and these have been, and will be to all subsequent generations, exclusively 'the doctrine of Christ.'

¹ John x. 34, 35.

* Notes, Matt. xvi. 13—19. xviii. 18. John xx. 19—23.

PREFACE.

On the night before his crucifixion, our blessed Saviour repeatedly promised to send to his apostles, "the Spirit of Truth, who should guide them into all Truth," and "shew them things to come;" who should "teach them all things, and bring all things to their remembrance whatsoever he had said unto them," and who "should receive of his and shew it to them." There is a subordinate sense, in which these promises are, in a measure, accomplished to all true Christians: but the persons, who advance doubts respecting the divine authority of the books contained in the New Testament, will scarcely deny that they are addressed in a far superior sense, to the apostles and those immediately connected with them.¹ Now the Spirit was given to them, as well as to others, "to profit withal:" and it is undeniable, that genuine Christianity, without unremitted miracles, could be delivered down to future ages for the profit of mankind, only by writings, in which it should be stated without error or corrupt mixture, and preserved as a sacred deposit in the church from generation to generation. What then could the Holy Spirit, promised in this energetick language to the apostles, be so rationally supposed to do for them, as to guide their minds by an immediate superintending inspiration, when they dictated those writings, by which it was evidently the design of Providence that the doctrine of Christ should be perpetuated in the church? Indeed, either they did deliver to mankind the doctrine of their Lord and Master, pure and uncorrupted, or they did not: if they did not, the revelation, which God made of himself by his well-beloved Son, has answered very little purpose; as no man, without a new revelation properly so called, can or ever could distinguish the truths of Christ from the errors of the apostles: but if they did deliver their doctrine pure and uncorrupted to mankind; why should we maintain, that they were preserved from error when preaching the gospel, in which one generation of men alone was immediately concerned; and yet left to fall into errors in their writings, in which all future ages and nations were most deeply interested? If when they were brought before governors for a testimony to them, it was not they that spoke, but the Holy Spirit who spake by them;² we may surely conclude, that what they wrote for a testimony to all future ages and nations, was arranged under the same efficacious teaching and superintendency.

Our Lord, just before his ascension, renewed and ratified his commission to the apostles: "All power," says he, "is given unto me in heaven and earth: go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always even to the end of the world." "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature: he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned."³ Yet none, those alone excepted, to whom the apostles personally preached, can have any concern in this important declaration; unless the doctrine of Christ, delivered to the apostles, may be certainly found in their writings.—Our Lord just before his crucifixion intercedes for his whole future church in these words, "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word:"⁴ and indeed all real Christians in every age have believed in him, not so much through the word of the ministers who preached to them, as through that of the apostles, by which their doctrine must be tried; from which, if sound, it is deduced, and to which it is properly their custom to make an unreserved appeal. In this sense St. Paul says, that believers are "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ being the chief Corner

¹ Note, John xiv. 25, 26.

² Notes, Matt. xxviii. 18—20. Mark xvi. 15, 16.

³ Notes, Matt. x. 19, 20. Luke xxi. 12—19.

⁴ Note, John xvii. 20, 21.

PREFACE.

“ Stone :” for the Old Testament written by the prophets, and the New Testament by the apostles, under “ the inspiration of the Holy Spirit,” contain that doctrine, which is the foundation of the faith and hope of the whole church, as resting on Christ, and united in him into an holy temple, “ an habitation of God “ through the Spirit.”¹

The several books of the New Testament were written by the apostles themselves, excepting the gospels of Mark and Luke, and the Acts of the Apostles : and these were penned by the attendants on the apostles, and under their immediate inspection, and consequently were equally authenticated by them, as if they had themselves written them. If any should object, that Paul was not one of those apostles, to whom Christ gave his express testimony, and yet he wrote a great part of the Epistles: it may be answered, first, that there is no alternative between denying all the facts recorded concerning him, and allowing his apostolical authority in its fullest extent, or that at least “ he was not a whit behind the very “ chiefest apostles :” and secondly, that Peter has attested his Epistles to be a part of the Scriptures, in these remarkable words, “ Even as our beloved brother Paul also, according to the wisdom given unto “ him, hath written unto you ; as also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things ; in which are “ some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do “ also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction.”² If therefore, our Lord’s own words authenticate the writings of the other apostles as a divine revelation ; Peter, who in some respects might be called the chief of the apostles, authenticates by divine inspiration the writings of his beloved brother Paul.

Finally, the only portion of Scripture, of which our Lord can in any sense be called the Writer, is that which contains the epistles to the seven churches in Asia, which he dictated to the apostle John as his amanuensis. All his discourses (as well as his miracles, and the events of his life, death, resurrection, and ascension,) were written, not by himself, but by the evangelists, two of whom were not apostles. What greater assurance then have we, that they recorded faithfully his words, than that the apostles faithfully delivered his doctrine to mankind ? If the evangelists were not inspired in recording his words, we are not infallibly sure, that he spoke what they ascribe to him : and why should we allow the divine inspiration of his historians, in recording his words ; and yet doubt the divine inspiration of his apostles, in communicating his doctrine to the church and to the world ? This opinion therefore is, in fact, both hostile to the whole of the sacred oracles, and at variance with itself.

The consequences of our present conduct, according to the Scriptures, are so immense, that if there were only a bare possibility that these were divine truth, it would be madness to run the risk of rejecting them, for the sake of gaining the whole world. What then shall we think of those who having such unanswerable demonstrations of their being the word of God, that they cannot reasonably doubt of it for a moment, yet disobey the commands, and neglect the salvation, revealed in them, for the veriest trifle which can be proposed ! Especially, as it may be shewn, that, (besides the eternal consequences,) the firm belief of the Scriptures, and the conscientious obedience which true faith always produces, will render a man far happier in this present life, even amidst trials and self-denying services, than any other man can be made, by all the pomp, pleasure, wealth, power, and honour, which the world can bestow on him.

If these arguments, which certainly contain a complete moral demonstration of the divine inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, excite in any reader a greater attention to the sacred volume, and dispose him to read it with more strict impartiality, and larger expectations of improvement; if they induce any one, who has not hitherto turned his attention to the subject, to examine it carefully for himself; if they obviate the unhappy prejudices, or confirm the wavering faith, of one individual; if they stir up any one to seek and wait for "the witness in himself;" the Author's object, in prefixing them to this publication, will be thus far attained.

Note, Eph. ii. 19—22.

• Note, 2 Pet. iii. 14—16.

PREFACE.

We must next proceed to consider the nature of a divine revelation, and the reception to which it is entitled.—Knowledge, in different degrees, may be acquired by us in various ways. We know some things by intuition, or the testimony of our senses; and other things by demonstration, or undeniably conclusive arguments. Many things, which do not admit of this kind of proof, may be shewn to be probable, in so great a degree that it would be absurd to doubt of them, and madness not to regulate our conduct according to them. A very small proportion of men's actions are directed by intuitive knowledge, by demonstration, or even by the higher degrees of probability. A moderate degree of probability is generally sufficient to excite them to activity, and to direct their conduct. TESTIMONY, especially, influences by far the greatest part of human actions; and forms the main spring of men's vigorous, self-denying exertions, their daring attempts, and their persevering labours. By crediting the assertions, and relying on the engagements, express or implied, of one another, all the grand concerns of nations are conducted; causes, in which life and death are involved, receive their final determination; and commerce, in all its branches, is directed and influenced: and the same regard to testimony, and confidence in our fellow-creatures, is inseparable from the most ordinary affairs of human life.

Now, "if the testimony of man be great, the testimony of God is greater,"¹ infinitely greater. Indeed his testimony, when fully ascertained, is the highest possible degree of demonstration: and when the Bible is proved, by adequate evidence, to be "the testimony of God," the information contained in it is sure, far beyond all other information, from whatever quarter or in whatever manner it is obtained.—The judge and the jury in court, the merchant on the exchange, the commander of a fleet or army, the minister of state in council, (not to mention cases of subordinate importance,) are fully aware, that no testimony or information can be useful to direct their conduct, in their respective concerns, except it be credited. To appreciate its credibility and its import, is the first consideration; and the next, when it is believed and understood, should be to form the plan of conduct according to it. Thus almost all human actions, and those especially of the greatest importance, are performed and regulated by faith, by that same principle, which is the main spring of human activity, in the great concerns of religion: with this sole difference, that belief of human testimony, and reliance on human faithfulness to promises and engagements, by word or on paper, and in very many cases, as in that of physicians, lawyers, and even those who prepare our food, by what is regarded as a professional engagement, influence men in their secular concerns; the belief of God's testimony, and reliance on his faithfulness to his promises, as written in the Scriptures, influence Christians in their spiritual and eternal concerns.—These things are obvious: but they are seldom duly considered, in this connexion.

The Bible is the "testimony of God" to truths and facts, many of which are not otherwise discoverable; or not with sufficient clearness and certainty, to become principles of our habitual conduct. Things past, future, and invisible; truths most important, sublime, and mysterious, are thus brought to our knowledge, attested by him, who cannot mistake, who cannot deceive. But faith is the only exercise of our rational faculties, the only operation of the human mind, by which we can avail ourselves of this information. Faith, receiving and appropriating the testimony of God, is to reason, not unlike what the telescope is to the eye of the astronomer; who by it discerns objects invisible to all others; and sees, clearly and distinctly, those things, which to others appear obscure and confused. Reason, thus appropriating, by faith, the information communicated by revelation from the "only wise God," adds immensely to her former scanty stock of knowledge; possessing at the same time certainty instead of conjecture: and thus, in the posture of a humble disciple, she receives that instruction, which must be for ever withheld from her, while she proudly affects to be the teacher. Thus, even the most illiterate of mankind, believing and becoming more and more acquainted with the sacred oracles, acquire a knowledge in the things of God and religion, far more certain and useful, than ever was possessed by the wisest and most learned unbeliever: in the same manner as the bosom friend or confidential counsellor of the prince, who is informed of his real purposes and designs, exceeds in practical knowledge of state-affairs the most sagacious speculating politician; who merely supposes that those things have been done, or will be done, which he thinks ought to be done, or in some way conjectures to be most probable.

¹ Note, 1 John v. 9, 10.

PREFACE.

When, relying on the veracity of God, we receive the Scriptures, as in every proposition infallibly true; the whole of the instruction contained in them becomes our own: and we may consider them as a mine of precious ore, which will more and more enrich us, in proportion to our diligence in exploring them, and, so to speak, in working the mine.

But this faith differs widely from the mere assent of the understanding to any proposition, without respect to its importance, and to our own concern in it. Noah, for instance, was informed, that the deluge would come; and we are informed that it actually came: but he was immediately interested in the event; we are not. We may therefore assent to the truth of it, as an historical fact, without being influenced by it in our habitual conduct; but if he truly believed the divine testimony and monition, this belief must necessarily influence his conduct. "By faith, Noah, moved with fear, prepared the ark." The truths of revelation, (wholly unlike the reports of the day, which, whether true or false, are of little consequence to us,) all relate to our eternal interests; and therefore have an inseparable connexion with our practice. The Bible, received in true faith, becomes the foundation of our hope, the standard of our judgment, the source of our comfort, "the lantern of our feet, and the light of our paths:" and implicit faith always produces unreserved obedience.

The province of reason therefore, in respect to revelation, is, first to examine and decide, (with modesty and caution,) on the evidences by which it is supported; to understand and explain the language in which it is conveyed; to discern, in many things, the excellency of the things revealed to us; and to use them as motives, encouragements, and rules of obedience: and, in things evidently mysterious, to bow in humble submission to the divine teaching; to receive in adoring faith and love what we cannot comprehend; to rest satisfied with what is revealed; and to leave secret things with God, to whom alone they belong.—Should any one indeed presume to interpret a text of Scripture, in a sense which contradicts the testimony of our senses or clear demonstration; we may venture to reject this interpretation: for nothing can possibly prove that to be true, which we certainly know to be false. But when the doctrines of revelation, or the obvious interpretations of them, according to the common use of language, are only mysterious, but involve no real contradiction; when they are merely above our comprehension, or contrary to the general notions, and preconceptions, or ordinary reasonings, of mankind; but are not opposite to the testimony of our senses, or to any demonstrated truth: to reject, on such grounds, the testimony of God, must be irrational in the highest degree; unless man be indeed wiser than his Creator.

Seeing therefore, that the Bible may be unanswerably proved to be the word of God, we should reason from it, as from self-evident principles, or demonstrated truths : for “ His Testimony is sure, making “ wise the simple.”

PREFACE.

Many parts of Scripture accord so well with the conclusions of our rational powers, when duly exercised, that either they might have been known without revelation, or else men have mistaken the capacity of perceiving truth, for that of discovering it. Hence various controversies have arisen about natural religion, which many suppose to be rather taken for granted by revelation, than made known by it. But the term is ambiguous : for the word natural includes the propensities of our hearts, as well as the powers of our understandings ; and the same truths, which accord to the latter, are often totally opposite to the former. The gentiles might have known many things concerning God and his will, if they had “ liked to “ retain him in their knowledge ;” but their alienation of heart from him prevailed to keep them in ignorance, or entangle them in error. So that the term, “ The religion of reason,” would express the idea much more intelligibly, if any such distinction be deemed necessary.

This however is obvious, that many truths and precepts, which are found in the Bible, have been maintained by persons who were ignorant of that divine revelation, or who did not choose to own their obligations to it : and many others, professing to receive the Scriptures as the word of God, assent to some truths contained in them, not so much because they are revealed, as because they think that they may be proved by other arguments ; while they reject, neglect, or explain away those doctrines, which are not thus evident to their reason, or level with their capacities. So that at last it comes to this, that they discard all which is deemed peculiar to revelation ; and refuse to believe “ the testimony of God,” if their own reason will not vouch for the truth of what he says.¹

It may indeed be questioned, whether those opinions, which men so confidently magnify as ‘ The oracles of reason,’ were not originally, without exception, borrowed from revelation, as far as there is any truth in them : and it is evident, that they cannot possess sufficient certainty, clearness, and authority, to render them efficacious principles of action, except as enforced by revelation and its awful sanctions. And the wildest enthusiast never dreamed of a grosser absurdity, than those persons maintain, who suppose that the only wise God has given a revelation to man, confirmed by miracles and prophecies, and established in the world by the labours and sufferings of his servants, and by the crucifixion of his well-beloved Son ; and that this revelation at last is found to contain nothing, but what we might have known as well without it ! Nay, that it is expressed in such language, as has given occasion to those, who have most implicitly believed and reverentially obeyed it, to maintain sentiments and adopt practices, erroneous and evil in themselves, and of fatal consequence to mankind !

We might therefore have previously expected, that the revelation from God should illustrate, confirm, and enforce such things, as seem more level to our natural powers : and that it should make known to us many important matters, which we could not have otherwise discovered ; and which would be found exceedingly different from all our notions and imaginations ; seeing that our contracted views and limited capacities are infinitely distant from the omniscience of God. So that it is most reasonable to conclude, that the doctrinal truths, which more immediately relate to the divine nature, perfections, providence, and government, to the invisible and eternal world and the mysteries of redemption, constitute by far the most important part of revelation ; as discovering to us such things, “ as eye hath not seen, nor ear “ heard, neither have they entered into the heart of man ;” and yet they are essentially connected with our present hope, worship, and duty, and with our future happiness or misery.²

He therefore cannot, according to the common use of language, be called a believer, who only holds

¹ Note, 1 John v. 9, 10.

² Notes, John iii. 12, 13. 1 Cor. ii. 6—9.

PREFACE.

those doctrines, which he deems the dictates of reason as well as of revelation ; whilst he rejects the testimony of God, whenever he deems it unreasonable. And we may hence learn what judgment we ought to form of those, who affirm, without hesitation, that the moral precepts with the annexed penal sanctions, and the more evident truths of the Bible, are the only important part of it ; that it is of little consequence what men believe, especially concerning those things which are in any degree mysterious ; and that none but narrow-minded bigots, and weak and ignorant people, lay any stress upon speculative opinions.—“ He that believeth not, maketh God a liar ;” especially “ he that believeth not the testimony, which God hath given of his Son,” and of eternal life bestowed on sinners through him. This is the uniform doctrine of Scripture ; and to contradict it is equivalent to a total rejection of divine revelation.¹ Can it be supposed, that the prophets and apostles were commissioned, and that the Son of God was “ manifested in the flesh,” died on the cross and rose from the dead, merely to inform mankind, that the Lord approved honesty, temperance, truth, and kindness ; and disapproved the contrary vices ? or, that the unnumbered testimonies which the Scriptures contain to the mysteries of the Divine Nature, the Person of the Redeemer, the work of Redemption, and the influences of the Holy Spirit, may, without any criminality, be disbelieved, derided, or reviled ; provided men are moral in their conduct towards one another ? Or, that God is equally pleased with those who thus affront his veracity, as with those who implicitly submit to his teaching and credit his testimony ? If this be the case, in what does the difference between the infidel and the believer consist ? All, except avowed atheists, will allow the propriety of many precepts, and the truth of some doctrines, coinciding with those contained in Scripture : but the infidel admits them as the dictates of reason, not as “ the testimony of God ;” and many professed believers reject all, without hesitation, that does not appear to accord to the same standard. So that both of them believe their own reasonings, “ lean to their own understandings,” and “ make God a liar,” when his testimony contradicts their self-confident decisions ! The prevailing notion therefore, of the comparatively small importance of doctrinal truth, is subversive of revelation ; and in fact is only a more plausible and more dangerous species of infidelity. The decided belief of the “ sure testimony of God,” on the most important doctrines of revelation, and those most intimately connected with our eternal salvation, our rejoicing hope, and our adoring gratitude ; is often, under the word speculative, or speculation, confounded with the boldest investigation of things unrevealed, by the most presumptuous efforts and conclusions of reasoning unbelievers : and this sometimes by pious men, whose excessive antipathy to controversy will not allow them to admit the difference, or come near enough to perceive it.

If we believe the Scriptures to have been written by “ inspiration from God,” and have any suitable apprehensions of his omniscience, veracity, and perfections ; we must be convinced, that it is the height of arrogance for us, short-sighted, erring creatures of yesterday, to speak of any doctrine contained in them as false or doubtful, because it is not coincident with our reasonings or conceptions. Surely, a small portion of modesty and humility might suffice to induce a confession, that we are more likely to be mistaken, than that the only wise God should attest what is not exactly true ! In rejecting his authenticated testimony, we must either advance our knowledge above his omniscience, or impeach his veracity, or deny the Scriptures, altogether or in part, to be his word ; reserving to ourselves the determination, what part is of divine authority, and what is not ! If, on the other hand, we deem any part of the Scriptures, though true, to be of little or no importance, or of dangerous tendency ; what do we, but affront the infinite wisdom or goodness of God, as if he did not know what truths were proper to be revealed to man ; or as if he purposely discovered those matters, which it would have been better for mankind never to have known? And, seeing it is evident that the Lord has, in the Scriptures, required the belief of certain doctrines, as absolutely necessary to salvation;¹ to insinuate that these doctrines are either false, doubtful, or of no value, must involve in it the grossest and most affronting blasphemy imaginable.

¹ Notes, John iii 17—21. 31—36. 1 John v. 9—12.

PREFACE.

We do not indeed maintain, that all the truths of revelation are of equal importance; because they are not stated in Scripture to be so: but none can be wholly unimportant, and we are not always competent to decide upon their comparative value. Some things are more obvious than others; and such as are more hard to be understood, are not so well adapted to those persons, "who are unstable and unlearned" in the school of Christ: yet we are not authorized to reject, or even to doubt, any of them. We may indeed demur as to the true interpretation of them, whilst, in humble, reverent teachableness and prayer, we wait for clearer light upon the subject: and we must remain for some time in partial ignorance or error, because we cannot at once become acquainted with all the truths which are revealed, even when we possess a disposition implicitly to believe them. There are some things, which relate to the very life and essence of true religion; and others are rather necessary to our stability, comfort, and holy conduct: these we must by no means reject, or treat with indifference; but it is possible, even that the teachable and diligent Christian may to the last be mistaken or ignorant about some of them, and yet be found among "the heirs of salvation:" nay, there is ground to conclude, that this is indeed the case with great numbers, in one way or other.

The importance of revealed truth may be shewn in another way; for it is the seed or principle in the soul, whence all inward or real holiness proceeds. "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth."² "Beholding as in a glass," (namely in the person, redemption, and doctrine of Christ,) "the glory of the Lord, we are changed into the same image."³ "Without controversy great is the mystery of godliness, God was manifest in the flesh." This doctrine was, in the judgment of the apostle, "the great mystery of godliness;" and indeed all the holy dispositions and affections towards God, all the genuine spiritual worship, all the willing obedience of filial love, and all the cheerful acquiescence in the divine will, and affiance on the divine truth and mercy, which have been found in the world since the fall of man, have arisen from a proper reception of this great truth, and the doctrines connected with it.⁴ Spirituality, which consists in a supreme valuation of the holy excellence of spiritual things, and a disposition to seek pleasure and satisfaction in religion, is intimately connected with a believing dependence on the promised influences of the Holy Spirit. And that view of the worth of the soul, the evil of sin, the justice and mercy of God, the vanity of the world, and the believer's obligations to a Saviour, "who loved him, and redeemed him to God with his blood," which the doctrine of the cross communicates; is fundamental to deep repentance, genuine humility, gratitude, patience, meekness, forgiveness of injuries, love of enemies, and other parts of the Christian temper and character. Without this, a proud morality, and a pharisaical task and form of godliness, will comprise the sum total of man's religion; except as he is brought under those impressions and that guidance, which will in due time influence him to embrace "the truth as it is in Jesus;" or as he is carried away, into the mazes of anti-scriptural enthusiasm and delusion.

The Holy Scriptures should likewise be considered as a complete revelation: so that nothing needs be known, believed, or practised, as essential to religion, except what may be plainly proved from them. On the other hand, it should be carefully observed, that the whole word of God is our rule; and that all preference of one part to another, (except as some parts are more immediately connected with our faith and

¹ Notes, Mark xvi. 14—16. John iii. 27—36, v. 36 1 John ii. 20—25. v. 11, 12.

² Note, John xvii. 17—19.

³ Notes, Matt. xiii. 18, 19. 33. Mark iv. 26—29. 2 Cor. iii. 17, 18. iv. 3—6. Jam. i. 19—21. 1 Pet. i. 23—25

⁴ Note, 1 Tim. iii. 16.

PREFACE.

practice, than others,) derogates from the credit of the whole; and implies a latent and indulged doubt, whether the Bible be altogether of divine authority; and whether only that part of it be so, which coincides with the favourite tenets of the person concerned.—True and intelligent faith receives the whole “testimony of God;” gives every part its proper place and measure of attention, and applies it to its proper use: for “all scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works.”¹

But all unwritten tradition, and apocryphal additions to the word of God, must be decidedly rejected. Tradition is so uncertain a way of conveying the knowledge either of truths or facts, that no dependence whatever can be placed on it; so that it is highly improbable, that, without written revelation, any one thing revealed to the prophets and apostles, would have been transmitted to us uncorrupted. Indeed there is some probability in the opinion, that the art of writing was first communicated by revelation, to Moses, in order to perpetuate, with certainty, those facts, truths, and laws, which he was employed to deliver to Israel. Learned men find no traces of literary or alphabetical writing, in the history of the nations, till long after the days of Moses; unless the book of Job be regarded as an exception.² The art of expressing almost an infinite variety of sounds, by the interchanges of a few letters or marks, seems more like a discovery made to man from heaven, than a human invention; and its beneficial effects, and almost absolute necessity, for the preservation and communication of true religion, favour the conjecture.

But however that may be decided, all who love the Bible, will be thankful to God for this most important advantage; and also for the invention of printing, by which copies of the Scriptures are rendered cheap and plentiful, beyond all calculation, or comparison with the state of things, before printing was discovered. This gives modern Christians advantages for disseminating the knowledge of divine truth among the nations, in some respects even beyond what the apostles themselves possessed: and how noble and Christian is that grand design, which has lately been grounded on this circumstance by ‘The British and Foreign Bible Society,’ which is no less, than that of causing prophets and apostles to speak to the inhabitants of every country on earth, to each in their own language. May God accomplish to its full extent this grand, pious, and beneficent purpose!

We do not need any apocryphal additions to the Scripture. Considered as human writings, the apocryphal books have their use: but if custom sanction any of them being bound up in the same volume with the sacred oracles; truth requires that we explicitly declare, that they are not THE WORD OF GOD. Should it be enquired, how we may distinguish between the genuine books of Scripture, and those which are apocryphal; we answer, that not only some, but all the books, contained in our authorized version of the Scriptures, have many or all of those evidences of a divine original, which have been insisted on: but there is not one, of those called the Apocrypha, which may not be proved destitute of such evidence; and most of them contain internal proof that they are spurious.

The sacred writers often express themselves in language, taken from their own habits of life and the scenes with which they were conversant. Knowledge therefore, of various kinds, must be very advantageous, and in some instances necessary, in order fully to understand them: and the knowledge of eastern manners, and the local customs of the nations, in that part of the world, is doubtless useful to an expo-sitor; though not to that degree, which many suppose. But I own, I am deliberately of opinion, that what is called Rabbinical learning, is rather a hindrance than a help to the understanding of the sacred writings, in their spiritual meaning and practical import: ' and this conviction grows stronger, in proportion to the opportunity which I have had in later years, of becoming more acquainted with it. The writers, as their predecessors of old did, "make void the commandment of God, that they may keep their own tradition."

¹ Notes, Deut. xxix. 29. 2 Tim. iii. 14—17.

² Preface to the Book of Job.

PREFACE.

We are, in the sacred Scriptures, addressed as rational creatures, endued with understanding; and as required to employ it, with diligence and earnestness, in deducing instruction, both doctrinal and practical, from what we read; "comparing spiritual things with spiritual." If we do not so value divine truth, as willingly to apply labour in "searching for it, as for hid treasure;" revelation must be "a price put into the hands of a fool to get wisdom, who has no heart to it." A humble and teachable spirit is above all things requisite; for "except we receive" the testimony of God, concerning "the kingdom of heaven, as little children, we shall not enter into it." This will lead us to ask heavenly wisdom from God, by daily fervent prayer; and as "he giveth liberally to all men, and upbraideth not," we shall in this way "be made wise unto salvation:" and this will appear in our habitual conduct; for all our researches will be found vain, unless we endeavour to practise what we have already learned.

The Author of Revelation, "the Giver of every good and perfect gift," has endued men with talents, differing both in their nature and degree. He has also afforded some men far more advantages, by education, by leisure, and by opportunities for study, than others have. Some of these persons, in every age, are induced, by divine grace, to devote their endowments and advantages to the acquisition and communication of religious knowledge; for the benefit of those, who are necessarily employed in another manner, whose talent is of another kind, whose time is otherwise occupied, and who need exciting to consider, and help in understanding, those things which belong to their eternal peace.

This is, especially, the object and service of the Christian ministry, when conscientiously and ably fulfilled. Men, previously endowed with suitable qualifications of mind and heart, by the great Source of all good, giving themselves up wholly to this one thing, become "mighty in the Scriptures," "scribes well instructed in the kingdom of God:" and are made useful, in diverse ways, in calling the attention of mankind to the sacred Scriptures, and assisting them to understand the things contained in them, and in animating them to a correspondent tenour of conduct.

The bare reading of the Scriptures, no doubt, is frequently blessed to the souls of men, in making them "wise unto salvation;" and few more egregious absurdities have by Antichrist been palmed upon mankind, than the persuasion, that unlearned men will learn heresy from the Scriptures, if put into their hand 'without note or comment,' or without some 'guard' to counteract the danger: yet commonly "faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." This is his appointed ordinance; and general, if not universal, experience and observation shew, that vital religion has uniformly prospered, in almost exact proportion to the measure, in which the word of God, unadulterated and unmutilated, has been earnestly and publickly preached, by those persons, whose disinterested labours and holy lives have "adorned the doctrine of God our Saviour," which they testified.

But though oral preaching is the grand means of promoting true religion; written preaching, (if I may be allowed the expression,) has been rendered exceedingly useful. A large proportion indeed of the Scriptures themselves, were occasional epistles or messages, sent to those, whom the writers could not address by preaching; and many pious and eminent men, who died long since, still speak to us, with great effect, by the books which they left behind them.—Provided, what is written is truly scriptural, the multiplication of religious books is not more justly a cause of complaint, than the increase of faithful ministers; and false or superficial religion is, at least, as likely to be disseminated from the pulpit, as from the press.

PREFACE.

No method of conveying truth seems more advantageous, than that of plain expository lectures on Scripture, with animated addresses to the heart and conscience. Now if this be allowedly true in respect of preaching, it cannot be far otherwise in respect of writing. When the word of God is kept in sight, and the hearer or reader perceives, that he is not amused with ingenious fancies or speculations, but instructed in the true meaning and import of the sacred oracles; an authority over his conscience may be exercised, beyond what can in any other way be obtained.

I would not be understood, to depreciate critical comments of the Scripture; these have an important use: yet practical expositions are more directly suited to edification. Indeed expositions of every kind may be perverted to bad purposes, by such persons as “wrest the Scriptures themselves to their own destruction:” but the pious, diligent, and impartial commentator is no more to be blamed for this, than the labour of the husbandman is to be considered as the cause of the intemperate use, which men make of the productions of the earth. Indeed, if expositions, really and fully explaining the Scriptures, and not attempting to exalt human authority, learning, genius, tradition, reasoning, or conjecture, above the “sure testimony” and authoritative law of God; if such expositions were multiplied ten-fold, there would be no redundancy: unless some one had exhausted the subject, which in fact is inexhaustible; and unless this one comment was in every person’s hands, and read by all. But as it is impossible, that all men should hear the same preacher; so it is in the highest degree improbable, that all men should read the same book.

The formation of men’s minds, and their habits of thinking, are so various, that ministers of different endowments, who take diverse methods of delivering and enforcing the same truths, advantageously engage the attention of distinct descriptions of hearers. In like manner, some are suited with the style, method, and peculiarity of one writer; while others are more pleased and profited by another, whose peculiarity is very different. Every man likewise has his connexions. Some will read, with candour and attention, what he writes; who have not so favourable a disposition towards others, who may be even of superior excellence.—Thus some read one man’s books, and some another’s; and a few have leisure and inclination to read and profit by many of them: and so knowledge is dispersed, and it may reasonably be hoped that good is done.

There are indeed a considerable number of persons, who avowedly disparage all commentators and their labours, and profess to read the Scriptures alone. But if knowledge, in a variety of things, be useful, (not to say absolutely needful,) in order to understand the Scriptures, and to make the best application of them to practical purposes; and if these persons have not that knowledge, and despise the labours of those who have; it is not likely that they should make much proficiency, even in understanding the book to which they exclusively confine themselves. And surely, a man, who has daily and for a long course of years been traversing an intricate path through a forest, may, without arrogance, propose to give some useful directions and cautions, to those who are beginning to explore the same path. Nor would it savour either of wisdom or humility, if such persons should contemptuously refuse to avail themselves of the experience and observation of him, who had long traced and retraced the way; and determine to proceed on their journey, without a guide, or a chart of the road.

A man’s main object indeed should be, to approve himself to God and to his own conscience, as to his motives and intentions in any undertaking : yet, when so many comments on the Scriptures are already extant ; the bold undertaking of adding one more to them, may seem to require an apology. The preceding observations may properly introduce that of the Author. Experiencing the benefit and comfort, arising from that measure of acquaintance with the sacred oracles, with which he has been favoured ; he longs that, were it possible, all others should enjoy the same felicity ; and he would contribute, according to his ability, to promote so desirable an object.

PREFACE.

It is in no degree the design of this publication, to detract from the merit of former commentators, or to intimate that any thing will here be added, which has never before been advanced : but the Author having, for many years, made the Bible his daily and principal study ; and having bestowed great pains to satisfy his own mind, as to the meaning of most parts of Scripture, and the practical use which should be made of them ; and supposing also that his talent chiefly lies, in speaking plainly and intelligibly to persons of ordinary capacity and information ; he adopts this method of communicating his views of divine truth, in connexion with the Scriptures themselves, from which he has deduced them.

Some comments are far too learned for common people, and some too voluminous : while others are too compendious, to admit either any adequate explanation or application of the several subjects, which fall under consideration. Some are in very few hands, and not likely to be more generally read ; and others, however excellent, are to numbers antiquated, through that fastidiousness, which disrelishes the style and manner of former and perhaps better times. Were the present attempt therefore made almost entirely upon the plan of former expositions, it would not, if duly executed, be found supernumerary. But, in arranging old truths, the Author purposes to adopt something of a new method. Not indeed entirely new : for Browne's self-interpreting Bible suggested the idea ; and the improvements in Doddridge's family-expositor of the New Testament, were proposed, as, in some respects, models for imitation. He has often remarked, that some persons so confine their interpretation of Scripture, to its meaning and use, with respect of those who were immediately addressed ; as to leave the reader in doubt, whether he is at all concerned in it, or can derive any instruction from it : while others, so immediately and abruptly apply to the persons whom they address, the passages which they undertake to explain and enforce ; without enquiring whether they be, in character and situation, similar to those, whom the prophets and apostles taught, warned, or encouraged ; that their instructions seem rather more like an immediate revelation from God, than the explanation and practical improvement of a revelation given many ages ago. As this must be unsatisfactory to men of reflection, and as it is frequently connected with inattention to the primary meaning of the passage, (if it be not a fanciful misinterpretation of it ;) many are ready to conclude, that the Scriptures have no precise meaning in themselves, but may be modelled almost to any thing, by men of lively imaginations and superior ingenuity. It therefore occurred to the Author, that one remedy of these evils, (if not the best remedy,) would be, to keep the two parts distinct : and first to explain in the notes, the primary meaning, as addressed to the writer's contemporaries ; and then, in practical observations, to shew what we may learn from each passage, allowing for all difference in circumstances, and in every other respect. It is indeed far more easy to form a plan of this kind, than duly to execute it ; but this has been the purpose of the present attempt : and if some abler hand should, either in any portion of the sacred volume, or on the whole, more completely realize the idea ; he cannot but think, it would be found the best method of expounding Scripture. The applications of each chapter are entitled, Practical Observations ; not as excluding doctrine and experience, but as referring the whole to the practical effect on the heart and life. The reader must therefore expect, that the main object of the exposition is to lead him to the true meaning of the sacred Scriptures, his own concern in them, and the proper use which he ought to make of them to his edification, and that of others connected with him ; without any attempt of the Author, to give him information on a variety of subjects, at most only collaterally connected with the right understanding and use of the Scripture.

PREFACE.

When the Author published the first edition of this work, he proposed almost entirely to comment on the translation, without calling the reader's attention to the original languages : but during a course of thirty years, in which he has been almost constantly employed in this work, or in studies relative to it ; he has turned a considerable share of his attention to those languages ; and has ventured to deviate from his first design. He hopes however, that he has done this with caution and diffidence ; and in very few instances, in that measure, which can perplex the unlearned reader, or interrupt his progress, or interfere with his edification. He has neither learning, nor leisure, nor inclination, to engage in merely critical discussions ; and he has not gone into any investigations, concerning even chronology, history, or similar subjects, further than he thought subservient to the main design of the work.—The contents of each chapter are chiefly intended to assist the reader, in finding any subject which he wishes to consider.

Upon the whole, to store the understanding with the knowledge of divine truth, to awaken and direct the conscience, to affect and improve the heart, to promote the comfort and fruitfulness of true Christians, and to assist young students in divinity, in acquiring those endowments, which may qualify them for future usefulness, are the leading objects which the Author had in view, and which he hopes he has never lost sight of, from his first engaging in this work to the present day. He has therefore purposely avoided sharp and eager controversy, and studied exactness and consistency ; choosing rather to follow the leadings of Scripture, than to press it into the service of a pre-established system ; and preferring the satisfaction of promoting the edification of persons, who differ in some things from each other, to the reputation of being exclusively the approved expositor of any party.

Whatever acceptance this work may find from man, the Author hopes to be satisfied with the testimony of his own conscience, and at length to meet the gracious approbation of his Saviour and Judge : and he would conclude with intreating the reader, to join with him in praise and thanksgiving to God, who has spared and enabled him to bring this work to a conclusion and to superintend so many editions of it ; and in prayers, that he would pardon all that he has seen sinful in the writer, and prevent the bad effect of whatever may be erroneous in the publication ; and also render what is true and right abundantly useful, by his special grace and blessing To Him, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, the God of our Salvation, be everlasting praise and glory. Amen.

POSTSCRIPT.

As the Marginal References formed no part of the original plan of this publication ; but have, with very great labour, been added to the subsequent editions ; it may be proper here to state some particulars respecting them.

They are arranged, according to the following method : The numeral letters always denote the chapter ; and the figures, the verse. When a figure is found directly after the letter which marks a new set of references, it points to a verse in the same chapter ; when numeral letters follow, without any book being mentioned, they refer to a chapter in the same book : and afterwards, the references are made in the order of the books, as they stand in the Bible. For example, on Gen. xxxi. 28 : r 55. xxix. 13. Ex. iv. 27. Ruth i. 9. 14, &c. Here 55. refers to the 55th verse of Gen. xxxi : and xxix. 13. to Gen. xxix. 13. and so on in regular order. This method is invariably adhered to ; and it has so many advantages, as abundantly to compensate any supposed disadvantages. Especially, it relieves the reader from perplexity, and prevents confusion by a regular arrangement: and it so greatly saves room, that more references may be adduced in a column very little crowded, than could on any other plan, by very much under-running. In pursuance of this plan, no more letters are used for marking any book, than are necessary clearly to distinguish it from all others: and as the prophecy of Ezekiel is referred to so much more frequently, than the book of Ezra; the letters Ez. mark the former, and the latter is printed at full length. A little habit will render this easy and familiar to the reader.

PREFACE.

The Author has availed himself of the pious labours of his predecessors, in selecting Marginal References; especially of the later Editions of the Oxford Bible in Quarto, of Mr. Browne's Bible, and Mr. Canne's; yet he has by no means taken their references as such: on the contrary he has omitted many, (especially of the two latter,) which did not appear to bear on the subject, or to elucidate it; in numerous instances the references are entirely original, and in almost all many are so.—The degree of labour and attention, which has been used to render the printing of the references correct, cannot easily be conceived: yet probably some errors still remain.

In some of the original references, the Author's idea may not at once be perceived by the reader: but, if the several places referred to be consulted, it will generally appear. He has sometimes proceeded by way of contrast, that the reader, by comparing the opposite characters or conduct of the persons mentioned, may more clearly perceive the excellency or evil of the case in question: or by comparing the different language of Scripture, used on the same subject, he may more readily see the true interpretation, especially on controverted subjects; or at least be better enabled to judge for himself.—The meaning of scriptural phrases may also be often fixed, by comparing the several places where they are used. This is the intent of many sets of references; while others refer to the doctrine or promise inculcated in the passage, and tend to establish a scriptural interpretation. Where several sets of references are adduced on one verse, they are generally of the former kind.—Some pains have likewise been taken, even on those parts of Scripture which chiefly consist of names, to point out other passages, in which the same persons or places are mentioned; and to mark the difference in spelling the same name, or the different names for the same person or place which occur in different parts, and the different places and persons called by the same name. Sometimes the unlearned reader is perplexed or misled by these variations; and this part of the references often contains all, which even the most learned know upon the subject, especially in the genealogies.

It is a great discouragement, in the laborious task of collecting marginal references, that it may be feared, but few, in comparison, will take the pains to consult them: indeed many persons may not have leisure to do it, in every part, or fully. But though the Author had, for many years, previously studied the Scriptures as his one grand business; he can truly aver, that the insight which he has thus obtained into many parts, which before he had not so carefully noted, is so great, as abundantly to repay his labour, and to convince him, that, along with other means, (for none should be recommended exclusively,) consulting well selected marginal references forms one of the best helps for fixing the word of God in the memory, leading the mind to a just interpretation of it, and in many cases rendering it most affecting to the heart. It tends powerfully to counteract all sceptical doubts, when every part of Scripture is thus found, (like the stones in an arch,) to support and receive support from the rest, and to constitute one grand whole; the divine inspiration of which is proved by every prophecy or miracle, and all kinds of internal and external evidence. It serves also to satisfy the mind, as to the meaning of disputed passages, when one sense is found manifestly to accord with the rest of the sacred word, and other interpretations evidently run contrary to them. And in many cases the Author has found a kind of delightful surprise in striking coincidences, which he had not before at all noticed.

PREFACE.

To those, who desire to study the Scriptures, accurately and deeply ; (especially to young men, either intended for the sacred ministry, or newly engaged in it;) he would very earnestly recommend to set apart an hour, or half an hour, every day, when it can be done ; and regularly to go through the Scriptures, carefully consulting all the references.—When it is considered, that the Author has for eight or nine years, spent at least thrice as much time each day in arranging them ; this will not appear unreasonable to those who favour his attempts : and he has no doubt, that it will eventually be found amply to repay their labour.

He would also advise those, who only occasionally consult the references, to examine all referred to under any one letter : for very frequently, those from the Old Testament are principally adduced, to make way for some still more pertinent in the New ; to shew the coincidence of both Testaments ; and to point out similar language concerning JEHOVAH in the one, and JESUS in the other ; and in various ways to prove, that the same doctrine pervades the whole.

ADVERTISEMENT.

THE following is a brief account of the principal points in which the present edition differs from the preceding:—

1. In the first place, it is in stereotype. To this laborious and expensive process it was submitted under the conviction (which has proved too well founded), that it was the last which the revered Author would be able to superintend. From the great pains, also, with which it was determined that the revision in every part should be conducted, it was anticipated that this edition might deserve, by its accuracy, the distinction thus conferred upon it, of being rendered permanent and nearly unalterable. And though, in the course of so long a work, it is scarcely possible but that some errors should have escaped detection, it is confidently hoped, that, upon the whole, this expectation has been realized.—It may be added, that should any mistakes be discovered of sufficient consequence to require it, the plates are not so unalterable as to render the correction impracticable.

2. It appears that during the lapse of two centuries, sundry small variations have crept into our common English Bibles. This was some time since pointed out by Bishop Horsley in the instance of “thy doctrine” substituted for “the doctrine,” 1 Tim. iv. 16; and it has since been shown concerning the change of the stop, from a full point to a semicolon, at the close of the verse, Heb. xiii. 7.—Hence considerable pains have been taken, by the collation of different editions, to exhibit an accurate copy of the sacred text according to the authorized version.

3. Not only have the Marginal References throughout been revised with the utmost care, but it will be found that the Author has inserted, in the Notes and Practical Observations, frequent references to other parts of his Commentary. To this improvement he attached considerable importance: and its value will, no doubt, be felt by those readers, who may bestow sufficient pains upon the subject to enter into his design.—The student may be advantageously referred to the Book of Proverbs for a specimen of this addition to the work.

4. But the most important improvement, which it has received, consists in the copious critical remarks which have been introduced. Many of these occur in the Old Testament, in all which the original words, in Hebrew characters, pointed, have been substituted for the English letters, by which they had been before expressed, wherever anything of the kind occurred. In the New Testament these remarks are numerous. Here also new authorities are adduced in support of the criticisms which had been previously made, particularly from Schleusner, to whose valuable Lexicon of the Greek Testament the Author was indebted for much assistance.—The critical remarks, it is also to be observed, are now uniformly carried to the end of the note, instead of being interspersed in the body of it.

The Names and Order of all the Books of the Old and New Testament.

OLD TESTAMENT.

Genesis hath Chapters	50	Ecclesiastes.....	12
Exodus	40	The Song of Solomon	8
Leviticus	27	Isaiah	66
Numbers	36	Jeremiah	52
Deuteronomy	34	Lamentations	5
Joshua	24	Ezekiel	48
Judges	21	Daniel	12
Ruth	4	Hosea	14
I. Samuel	31	Joel	3
II. Samuel	24	Amos	9
I. Kings	22	Obadiah	1
II. Kings	25	Jonah	4
I. Chronicles	29	Micah	7
II. Chronicles	36	Nahum	3
Ezra	10	Habakkuk	3
Nehemiah	13	Zephaniah	3
Esther	10	Haggai.....	2
Job	42	Zechariah	14
Psalms	150	Malachi	4
Proverbs	31

NEW TESTAMENT.

Matthew hath Chapters	28	I. Timothy	6
Mark	16	II. Timothy	4
Luke	24	Titus	3
John	21	Philemon	1
The Acts.....	28	The Hebrews	13
Epistle to the Romans	16	The Epistle of James.....	5
I. Corinthians.....	16	I. Peter	5
II. Corinthians	13	II. Peter	3
Galatians.....	6	I. John	5
Ephesians	6	II. John	1
Philippians	4	III. John.....	1
Colossians	4	Jude.....	1
I. Thessalonians	5	Revelation	22
II. Thessalonians	3

INTRODUCTION

TO THE

OLD TESTAMENT, AND TO THE BOOKS OF MOSES.

IT does not appear, that the distinction of the two parts of the sacred Scripture by the appellations of the Old Testament and the New Testament, is of divine authority; though it is of very ancient use in the Christian Church. The original word, both in the Hebrew, and in the Greek, rendered Testament, in this connexion, is more generally rendered Covenant, and perhaps ought always to be so.* It refers to the condescending manner, in which it has pleased God to deal with men, by covenant-transactions and engagements: and not merely by commands and sanctions. The covenant of works, as distinguished from the covenant of grace, does not seem to be intended by “the Old Testament:” for the covenant of grace and mercy was introduced, immediately after the fall of Adam, by the promise that “the Seed of the woman should bruise the serpent’s head:” the hopes of believers in every age have arisen from that source alone: and all unbelievers, even under the Christian Dispensation, remain under the condemnation of that covenant, which Adam transgressed; the terms of which are simply, ‘Do this and live; transgress and die.’—But of the covenant of mercy and grace, there have been, so to speak, several editions; yet that which Christianity has made known to mankind, is by far the most full, clear, and enlarged. Above four hundred years after God had established his covenant with Abraham, as ‘the father of the faithful,’ (which the apostle refers to, as the same in substance, as that made with Christians under the gospel,†) it pleased him to make a covenant with Israel, as a nation, at mount Sinai. The Mosaical dispensation, and the writings of the prophets, chiefly related to that period, during which this national covenant was in force; and the prophets themselves speak of the change, which would take place in the days of the Messiah, as “a new covenant,” distinguishing it from that which was made with Israel when brought out of Egypt. This, St. Paul says, “waxed old and was ready to vanish away.”‡—At the opening of the Christian dispensation, these predictions were fulfilled: and as the writings of the apostles and evangelists relate principally to the dealings of God with his church, in the days of the Messiah, the “Mediator of the new covenant;” this part of the sacred volume has received the appellation of ‘the New Testament,’ or New Covenant; and that part which was published before his coming, is called the Old Testament, or Covenant.—Thus they are distinguished from, but are by no means opposed to, each other. The same discoveries of the glorious God, and the same views of true religion, pervade both. They reciprocally establish the authority and illustrate the meaning of each other: and even those parts of the Mosaick Law, which we are not now required to obey as commands, are replete with important instruction.—In short, the whole is the unerring WORD OF GOD.

* Note, Heb. ix. 15—17.

† Notes, Gal. iii. 15—29.

‡ Notes, Ex. xix. 5. Jer. xxxi. 31—34. Heb. viii. 7—13.

INTRODUCTION.

The Preface to each of the books of Moses, with which the sacred Volume opens, renders it superfluous to add much in this place respecting them collectively. They are generally in the New Testament, as well as in uninspired writers, called "the Law;" as distinguished from the other parts of the Old Testament. Yet a great proportion of them is historical; they contain several most extraordinary prophecies; * and some devotional compositions, exquisitely sublime and beautiful. † If the single book of Job be excepted, (and concerning it there are different opinions, ‡) the books of Moses are, beyond comparison, the most ancient writings extant; and certainly by far the most ancient authentick records. Immediate revelation alone could make known to the writer, or to those from whom he had his information, very many of those events which he records: and on this account, the Author of this publication is at least doubtful, whether the endeavours, which many persons have used, to shew how, by tradition or other similar means. Moses might receive the knowledge of the facts which he narrates, are of salutary tendency. For instance, Adam could not know the particulars of the creation of the world, or of his own creation, except by immediate revelation. Adam might indeed make these things known to Methusaleh, Methusaleh to Shem, Shem to Isaac, Isaac to Levi, or Amram, and Amram to Moses: I am not sure, that the chain might not be made shorter, by a link or two. But does it strengthen, or does it not rather greatly weaken, the proof, or rather the impression, of the divine original of the Mosaick History; to suppose that it was derived from traditional revelation, handed down from father to son, through a few generations; rather than from a revelation made directly from God to Moses? Nothing is conveyed down by oral tradition, without alteration and deviation: Moses informs us, that "God spake with him face to face:" the prophecies extant in his books, compared with their accomplishment during three thousand years, as fully confirm his testimony to us, as his miracles did to his contemporaries: and the simplest as well as the most ancient method of stating the case, is the most rational. Whatever he might have known or collected otherwise, he wrote under the infallible superintendency of the Holy Spirit, or by immediate divine inspiration.

• Notes, Gen. ix. 24—27. xii. 1—3. xvi. 12 xxvii. 27—29. xlix. 8—12. Num. xxiv. 17—24. Deut. iv. 25—28. xxviii. 15—68.

† Notes, Ex. xv 1—21. Deut. xxxii. 1—43.

‡ Preface to Book of Job.

THE FIRST BOOK OF MOSES,

CALLED

GENESIS.

THE original Hebrew distinguishes this Book merely by the first word of it, viz. בְּרֵאשִׁית, or In the beginning: but the Greek translation, called the Septuagint, names it GENESIS, The Beginning, or Original; that is of the world.—The sacred historian first records the creation of the heaven and the earth, the formation of Adam and Eve after the image of God, and the institution of marriage. He then relates how “sin entered into the world, and death by sin;” and how the first promise of a Redeemer was given to our fallen progenitors.—He next illustrates the effects of the fall; which were manifested in the conduct of Cain, who murdered righteous Abel his brother, and in the general and almost universal prevalence of wickedness; and he likewise illustrates the power of divine grace in the examples of Abel, Enoch, and Noah.—A few hints are dropt concerning some of Cain’s descendants, and their inventions and actions; but a genealogy of the descendants of Seth to Noah, with the age to which each person lived who is mentioned in the genealogy, is carefully given.—At length, at the end of 1656 years, the Lord, provoked by man’s wickedness, desolated the earth by a flood of waters, preserving his servant Noah and his wife, with his three sons and their wives, in the ark; of which extraordinary catastrophe all nations retain some traditions and vestiges. The re-peopling of the earth by the descendants of Noah’s sons is next recorded: and the genealogy is continued from Shem, in the line of Abraham, to Jacob and his sons.—Indeed, this narrative, though very compendious, throws more light on the original of nations and on many coincident subjects, than can be obtained from all other records of antiquity taken together: and its agreement with such as have the greatest claim to authenticity, conclusively proves that it gives a true account of those ancient times, which the pagan historians had only heard of by obscure tradition, and which they mutilated, or blended with most absurd fables; while the interspersed prophecies, fulfilling through all succeeding generations even to the present day, fully attest its divine inspiration. (Notes, xii. 1—3. xlviii. xlix.) Many particulars indeed, in this part of the history, must be beyond the investigation of the unlearned: but the founding of Nineveh and Babylon, two of the greatest cities the world ever saw; the source of the vast variety of languages, which has in all ages interrupted the intercourse of mankind; and the original of the two most remarkable people which have ever appeared on earth, namely, the Jews and the Ishmaelites, are clearly and satisfactorily shewn. Important information is also given concerning the Moabites, Ammonites, Midianites, Edomites or Edumeans, all descended from Abraham. The most ancient war known to genuine history is here recorded; and the awful destruction of Sodom and the neighbouring cities, as producing the Dead Sea, the peculiarities of which have always excited the attention of travellers.—The mass of interesting historical materials contained in this wonderful Book, concerning those remote ages of which we have no other even plausible records, must ever render it an invaluable treasure of ancient erudition to the sober scholar. But the copiousness with which the history of Abraham, “the father of the faithful,” the repository of the promises, and the ancestor of Christ, is given, with that of Isaac and Jacob the heirs of the same promises, shews what is deemed most important by him, whose “judgment is according to truth:” and the story of Joseph exceeds applause, being inimitably written, and unparalleled in the annals of the world.—The impartiality also of the sacred historian, in recording the imperfections of the most approved characters, though his own ancestors; and the strong expressions of abhorrence, with which he marks the crime of his immediate progenitor Levi, are worthy of an inspired writer, and hitherto almost entirely peculiar to the Scriptures. The narrative is thus continued to the death of Joseph, about 713 years after the deluge, or 2369 from the creation. And the important religious instruction contained in this book, concerning God our Creator, our fallen condition, the promise of a Saviour, and the redeemed sinner’s walk with God, must more endear it to the pious Christian, than all its immense and invaluable literary treasures can possibly recommend it to the learned antiquary or historian.—‘Without this history the world would be in total darkness, not knowing whence it came or whither it goeth. In the first page of this sacred book, a child may learn more in one hour, than all the philosophers in the world learned without it in thousands of years.’ Fuller.

CHAP. I.

God creates heaven and earth, 1; forms the light, and the firmament, 2—8; separates the dry land from the waters, and produces the vegetable tribes, 9—13; forms the sun, moon, and stars, 14—19; causes the waters to produce fishes and fowls; and the earth to bring forth cattle, wild beasts, and creeping things, 20—25; creates man in his own image; blesses him; gives him dominion; grants the fruits of the earth for food; and pronounces the whole “very good,” 26—31.

IN ^athe beginning ^bGod created the heaven and the earth.

2 And the earth was ^cwithout form, and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep: ^dand the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.

3 ¶ And ^eGod said, ‘Let there be light: and there was light.’

4 And God saw the light, ^fthat it was good: and God ^gdivided the light from the darkness.

5 And God called the light ^hDay, and the darkness he called Night. ⁱAnd the evening and the morning were the first day.

NOTES.

CHAP. I. V. 1. It is natural and unavoidable for us, who are but of yesterday, to enquire about those things which have been before us, and to form conjectures even about the original of all things: but our reason is evidently incompetent to enquiries of this kind; and uncertainty, contrariety, and absurdity, always bewildered the wisest of the heathens on this subject. However rational it is to conclude, that all things were at first created by the eternal, self-existent, and almighty God; yet man has in every age lamentably failed of drawing this conclusion: and after all, it is “by faith we understand that the worlds “were framed by the word of God; so that things, which “are seen, were not made of things which do appear:” Heb. xi. 3. Reason is indeed capable of approving, appropriating, and applying, the information conveyed to us by the word of God, but not of anticipating it. The knowledge imparted by revelation is useful and necessary: but nothing is mentioned about ‘eternity a parte ante,’ (a past eternity,) that abyss which swallows up all our thought, and involves all our reflections and discourse in inextricable perplexity; for this could only have gratified curiosity, and increased our stock of barren notions. The Scriptures, in perfect harmony with the conclusions of our reason when soberly exercised, declare that God is “from ever—“lasting to everlasting.” (Marg. Ref. Note, Ex. iii. 14.) All else had a beginning. With this the inspired historian opens his narration, and, in most sublime abruptness, breaks forth, “In the beginning:” as if he had said, ‘This, O man, is enough for thee to know; here stop thy presumptuous enquiry; call back thy intruding thoughts from things too high for thee, and learn to adore thy Creator.’—The Scriptures are especially intended to teach us “the knowledge of God,” which is done, in the manner best suited to inform and affect us, by recording his works. From the creation of the world, we learn “his eternal power and Godhead;” and discern, in the things which he hath made, his infinite wisdom and goodness: while the simplicity and harmony, subsisting in the midst of the richest variety, lead the mind in the easiest manner, to conceive of the Creator, as “the ONE LIVING “and TRUE GOD.”—It is well known that the original word, commonly translated GOD, is plural, in a language which has three numbers; and that when thus used it is joined to singular verbs. The Hebrew seems to have been at least a dialect of the original language; and it is evident that the Lord made choice of it, for the first written revelation of himself to man: so that this grammatical anomaly, at the very opening of the Scriptures, seems intended to give us some intimation concerning that mystery, which is afterwards more fully revealed; namely, the Plurality in the Unity of the Godhead. It would indeed be improper to rest a doctrine, which is of such importance in the Christian system, on these intimations; yet this should not be rejected as a mere verbal criticism.—God created the heaven and the earth, or the whole universe, visible and invisible. The word heaven is sometimes used in Scripture for that place, where the divine glory is especially displayed, and where angels and happy spirits have their residence; at other times for the boundless expanse, in which the sun, moon, and stars are placed; and at others for the circumambient air, even to the very surface of the earth; it must therefore be interpreted as the context requires.—This general account warrants no conclusions respecting the angels, or the inhabitants of other systems, except that they are all the creatures of God. But this visible world was formed in six days.—The chaotick mass seems to have been first instantaneously created out of nothing, and then gradually reduced to order and beauty.

V. 2. The matter, from which this earth, and the solar system connected with it, were created, was at first a confused mass of component elements, without form; and void, empty, or destitute of plants, trees, or animals; and it was covered with thick darkness resting on the abyss, or the unformed chaos, till dispersed by the agency of “the Spirit of God;” to which the subsequent effects are ascribed, by a remarkable word, taken from the manner in which the fowls brood on and hatch their eggs. Thus, at the very first opening of the Sacred Volume, we have an intimation of that divine Spirit, whose influence and operations form so conspicuous and distinguishing a part of Revelation: for, as the efficient cause of the creation, “He moved upon the surface of the waters.”—Let the impartial reader here turn his attention to those texts of the New Testament, which expressly ascribe all creation to Jesus Christ, the Son and Word of God: and, comparing them with this account of the agency of the Spirit in creation and with those Scriptures which declare that God created all things; he must allow, that, from the beginning of the Bible, there is a real foundation for the doctrine of three divine Persons in the unity of the Godhead.

V. 3—5. The sublimity of the language, here used, i 14. 20. vii. 11. 12. Job xxxviii. 11—18. xxxviii. 22—26. Jer. x. 13. * Heb. expansion.

6 ¶ And God said, 'Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters.

k Prov. viii. 28, 29. Job xxxv. 8. Ps. c. v. 10—13. cxlviii. 4. Ec. xi. 3. m 9. 11. .5. 24. Matt. viii. 27.

7 And God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament, from the waters which were 'above the firmament: ^m and it was so.

n 5. 10. v. 2. xxxiii. 28. o 5. 13.

8 And ⁿ God called the firmament Heaven: ^o And the evening and the morning were the second day.

p Job xxxvi. 10. xxxviii. 8—11. Ps. xxiv. 2. xxxiii. 7. xcv. 5. civ. 3. 5—9. cxxxvii. 6. Prov. viii. 28, 29. Jer. v. 22. 2 Pet. iii. 5. Rev. x. 6.

9 ¶ And God said, ^p Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry-land appear: and it was so.

q 4. Deut. xxxii. 4. Ps. civ. 31. r ii. 5. Job xxviii. 5. Ps. civ. 14—17. cxlviii. 8. Matt. vi. 30. Heb. vi. 7.

10 And God called the dry-land Earth, and the gathering together of the waters called he Seas: ^q and God saw that it was good.

† Heb. tender grass.

11 And God said, ^r Let the earth bring forth [†] grass, the herb yielding s 29. ii. 9. 16. Matt. vii. 17. Luke vi. 43, 44. Jan. iii. 12.

seed, and the fruit-tree yielding ^s fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself, upon the earth: and it was so.

t Is. lxi. 11. Mark iv. 28. u Is. lv. 10, 11. Matt. xiii. 24. 25. 2 Cor. ix. 10. Gal. vi. 7.

12 And ^t the earth brought forth grass, and ^u herb yielding seed after his kind, and the tree yielding fruit, whose seed was in itself, after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

x Job xxv. 8. 5. xxxviii. 12—14. Ps. viii. 3, 4. xix. 1—6. lxxiv. 16, 17. civ. 19, 20. cxix. 91. cxxxv. 7—9. cxlviii. 3—6. Is. xl. 26. Jer. xxxi. 35. xxxiii. 20, 25.

13 And the evening and the morning ^x were the third day.

y viii. 22. z Deut. iv. 19. Josh. x. 12—14. Job xxxi. 26—28. Is. xlii. 10. xxiv. 23. xlv. 7. Ez. xxxii. 7, 8. Joel ii. 10, 31. iii. 15. Am. v. 8. viii. 9. Hab. iii. 11. Matt. xxiv. 29. xxvii. 45. Acts ii. 20. Rev. xvi. 8, 9. xxi. 23.

14 ¶ And God said, ^y Let there be lights in the firmament of the heaven, to divide ^z the day from the night: ^y and let them be for signs, and for seasons, and for days, and years.

15 And let them be for lights in the firmament of the heaven, to give light upon the earth: and it was so.

16 And God made two great lights; the greater light ^z to ^z rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night: he made the stars also.

has been universally admired by men of learning and taste; and indeed the simplicity of the whole narrative is unspeakably more majestick, than those studied ornaments which are generally employed and admired.—Before the formation of the sun, moon, and stars, there was, in some way which we cannot explain or understand, a regular succession of light and darkness on the chaotick mass, which thus measured out “the first day.” “God saw the light “that it was good;” good in itself, and admirably adapted to the benefit of his creatures.—How wonderful and inexplicable is light! How indispensably necessary to all the purposes of human life!

V. 6—8. The word, translated firmament, and expansion, (Marg.) is used for the whole space which surrounds the earth, even to the fixed stars, which are “set in the “firmament of heaven;” as “the fowls” are said “to fly “in the open firmament of heaven;” and “he called the “firmament, heaven.”—It must therefore be understood according to the context: but it is generally in this place interpreted to mean the atmosphere, or air, in which the clouds are suspended, and from which they water the earth.

V. 9. The waters, being separated from the dry ground, which they had hitherto overspread, or been mixed with, were divided into those “under the firmament,” which are deposited in the oceans, seas, lakes, rivers, brooks, fountains, and subterraneous receptacles; and those “above “the firmament,” which are suspended in the air, form the clouds, and descend in rains and dews.—Instead of attempting a further explanation of the terms here used, I would rather call the reader’s attention to the power, wisdom, and goodness of God, displayed in this part of creation. In the vast reservoir of the oceans and seas, the waters are treasured up, being preserved from putridity by their saltness and incessant motion. These facilitate commerce and friendly intercourse betwixt distant nations, supply immense quantities of wholesome provisions, and are in many ways serviceable to mankind. From them originally, by various modes of conveyance, the whole earth is supplied with water, which is rendered fresh and fit for use, and communicated in the gentlest method. With this all living creatures “quench their thirst;” by this the surface of the earth is thus rendered fertile, and all the purposes of cleanliness are answered: and the same waters, continually returning to the sea, by brooks and rivers, enrich and beautify the adjacent countries, and confer manifold benefits upon mankind through the whole of their course.

V. 10. It is observable that God himself gave names to those creatures, over which Adam could not exercise dominion; but left him to give names to the rest.—Without doubt, the original names were expressive of the nature of the creatures.

V. 11, 12. Hitherto the whole was inert and lifeless: but the vegetable system was next produced, in all its varied and numerous tribes, for the use of man and beast: and each was created with the surprising power of propagating, and multiplying almost infinitely, its peculiar species, by seeds, often very minute, and scarcely discernible from each other; and yet never failing to produce plants of the same species as those from which they sprang, each after his kind! ‘God has secured the seeds of all plants with ‘singular care; some of them being defended by a double, ‘nay, a triple inclosure.’ Bp. Patrick.—Thus creation is still carried on from year to year; and, in an incomprehensible manner, the earth is filled with the riches and liberality of the Lord!

V. 14—19. By the word of the omnipotent Creator the light was, as it were, treasured up in the heavenly orbs, (as water is in the seas;) and with it warmth and fertility have ever since been conveyed to the different regions of the globe; while, by the regular circuits of the celestial

^a 1x. 3. Ps. viii. .
Acts xiii. 47.

17 And God ^a set them in the firmament of the heaven, to give light upon the earth;

18 And to rule over the day, and over the night, and to divide the light from the darkness; and God saw that it was good.

19 And the evening and the morning were the fourth day.

^b 22 ii. 19 viii. 17.
Ps. civ. 24, 25.
cxviii. 10. Acts xvii. 25.
^c Or, creeping
1 Kings iv. 33.
^d Heb. a living soul. 30. Ec. iii
21.
^e Heb. let fowl fly.
^f Heb. face of the firmament of heaven. 7. 14.
^g Job vii. 12. xxvi.
5. Ps. civ. 26.
Ec. xxxii. 2.
Jon. i. 17. ii. 10.
Matt. xii. 40.
^h viii. 17. ix. 7.
Ex. i. 7. viii. 3.
ⁱ 18. 25. 31.

20 ¶ And God said, ^b Let the waters bring forth abundantly the ^{*} moving creature that hath [†] life, and [‡] fowl that may fly above the earth in the [§] open firmament of heaven.

21 And God created [°] great whales, and every living creature that moveth, which the waters ^d brought forth abundantly after their kind, and every winged fowl after his kind: [°] and God saw that it was good.

bodies, time is measured out for our convenience in various respects. 'By times are meant the spring, summer, autumn, and winter; and by consequence, the seasons for plowing, sowing, planting, pruning, reaping, vintage, sailing; and by a swift motion round in twenty-four hours, to make a day; and by a longer to make years, and the grateful variety of seasons.' Bp. Patrick.—The moon is undoubtedly an opaque body, much smaller than the primary planets; and it is with great probability supposed, that the fixed stars are lights themselves, immensely large: yet the moon is here called a great light in distinction from the stars; which proves that the sacred writers were not inspired to speak of natural things with philosophical exactness; but were left to use popular language, and to discourse of them according to their appearance. As a light to us, with reference to whom the sacred writer speaks, the moon is greater than the stars: and indeed a modern Astronomer, when not purposely expressing himself scientifically, would use similar language. Ignorance or error in these respects is not fatal, and the most exact knowledge is comparatively of small value: "Unto man he said, Behold, the fear of the LORD, that is wisdom; and to depart from evil, is understanding." Job xxviii. 28.

V. 20—25. The earth, reduced to order and beauty, replenished with vegetable treasures, and lighted up with unspeakable splendour, had yet remained destitute of inhabitants: but in these verses we have a concise account of the formation of the various species of animals, which inhabit the waters, the air, and the dry land. The similarity between fishes and birds, in the general manner of producing their young, and moving in their respective elements, is supposed to mark the common original of both from the waters. (ii. 19.) The word rendered whales may include all the large inhabitants of seas and rivers.—A very superficial acquaintance with the numerous tribes of animals, of different sizes, immensely large, or invisibly minute; their distinct modes of existence, in different elements and on different sustenance; the surprising exact-

22 And God blessed them, saying, Be fruitful, and multiply, and fill the waters in the seas, and let fowl multiply in the earth.

23 And the evening and the morning were the fifth day.

24 ¶ And God said, [§] Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind, cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after his kind: and it was so.

25 And God ^h made the beast of the earth after his kind: and cattle after their kind, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

26 ¶ And God said, 'Let us make man ^k in our image, after our likeness: and let them ^l have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the [†] 28. viii. 17 ix. 1.

xxx. 27. 30. xxxv.
11. Lev. xxvii. 9.
Ps. cvii. 38.
[‡] vi. 20. vii. 14
viii. 19. Job
xxxviii. 39. 40.
xxxix. 1. 5. 9.
19. xl. 15. Ps. l
9. 10. civ. 18—
23. cxlviii. 10.
[§] ii. 19. 20. Job
xii. 8—10. xxvii.
13.
[¶] i. iii. 22. xi. 7.
John v. 17. xiv.
23.
[°] k v. 1. ix. 6. Ec.
vii. 29. Acts
xvii. 28. 29.
1 Cor. xi. 7.
2 Cor. iii. 18. iv.
4. Eph. iv. 24.
Col. i. 15. iii. 10
Jam iii. 9.
^h ix. 2. 3. Job v.
23. Ps. viii. 4—8
civ. 20—24. Jer.
xxvii. 6. Heb.
iii. 4—9. Jam.
iii. 7.

ness and kind contrivance, with which the organized body in every species is formed; and the various ways in which they subserve the use and pleasure of man; may suffice to shew us that we have abundant reason to admire and adore the great Creator: while the nature of life itself, and its production, continuance, and propagation, in every distinct species, forms a very proper subject for our speculations; if we would be convinced how incomprehensible the works of God are, and how ignorant man is.—The great Creator had no occasion minutely to enumerate his works, in order to display his glory; though we may properly descend to the minute investigation of them. There is therefore no particular mention here made of many things, which are to us of the greatest importance. The air, which modern experiments have evinced to be of absolute necessity to animal and vegetable life, and in which surprising traces of divine wisdom and goodness are discovered, is not particularly mentioned; though doubtless it is implied in the general term expansion. (G. Marg.) While the surface of the earth is constantly replenished with vegetable riches, and inhabited by useful animals; underneath it most valuable treasures are stored up, placed thus out of our way, but not out of our reach. "O LORD, how manifold are thy works! In wisdom hast thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches."

V. 26, 27. The language, here used, is that of consultation, and not of deliberation only; and it intimates far more than the superior excellency and dignity of the creature about to be formed. It is not to be conceived, that the infinite God, by speaking in the plural number, should employ a language assumed by many princes; which is indeed, as thus used, more ostentatious than dignified. But it is still more intolerable to suppose, that the eternal God addressed any of his own creatures, as fellow-workers with him in the creation of man. Yet these seem the only expedients for interpreting this language, which can be adopted, by those who allow the divine inspiration of the whole Scripture, and still refuse their assent to the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.

doctrine of the Trinity: whereas, admit this doctrine to be scriptural, and the expressions are suitable, natural, and need little explanation. The three Persons in the sacred Trinity at first concurred, in counsel and operation, in the creation of man, as afterwards in his recovery from the fall. And let it not be said, that, in avoiding one difficulty, we run ourselves into another and a greater; for it can never be shewn impossible, that the same infinite Being should be Three in one respect, and One in another. We know, and it is absurd to deny it, that the soul and body are distinct substances; yet they form one man, who is two in one respect, and one in another: but who can comprehend the bond of union betwixt his own soul and body, or explain how they mutually operate on each other? And if we are incomprehensible to ourselves, how should it be possible for us to comprehend our great Creator? This indeed seems the limitation of human knowledge: by experiments the natural philosopher discovers, that things are so, and have such and such properties and powers; but how and why they are so and operate as they do, remains still an impenetrable secret. The process of nature in vegetation, from a grain of corn being cast in the earth until the gathering of harvest, is no more comprehensible by us than the doctrine of the Trinity; and he who will believe no more than he can comprehend, must, to be consistent, question his own existence. The authenticated testimony of God is surely as sufficient to establish the doctrine, as to its truth and certainty, in matters of revelation; as experiments are to establish the fact in philosophy: and the manner how is no more matter of faith in the one case, than of science in the other; nor are the difficulties greater, except as infinity exceeds the grasp of our finite capacities.

The great Creator said, "Let us make man, in our image, after our likeness." The expression is doubled and varied, that it may the more engage our attention, and ensure our belief. This image and likeness of God cannot be in the body; for God is a Spirit, which no bodily shape can in any respect resemble. We must therefore look for it in the rational soul. Even in the present state of human nature, the soul of man bears some faint resemblance to its Maker: the understanding, memory, and imagination, in their several operations, exhibit a faint shadow of the divine wisdom and knowledge; the will, as exciting and directing our activity in all respects, bears a similitude to the almighty effects of the divine volitions, and shews that mind can act on matter in some inexplicable manner; nay, conscience, in the exercise of her dictatorial and judicial functions, gives a feeble reflection of the justice and holiness of the Judge of all: whilst the derived and dependent immortality of the human soul reminds us of Him who is self-existent and eternal. But fallen angels, who possess these powers in a higher degree, are never said to bear the image of God; and few places in Scripture can be fairly interpreted of fallen man's being like his Maker, till renewed by divine grace. There must then be a nobler sense, in which Adam was formed in the image and likeness of God.—No adequate conception indeed can be formed of man's 27 So God created man in his own image; in the image of God created he him; ^m male and female created he them. m ii. 21—25. v. 2. Mal. ii. 15. Matt. xix. 4. Mark x. 6. 1 Cor. xi. 8, 9.

primæval state and powers, from the brief account given of him in Scripture. But we may also avail ourselves of the revelation given us, concerning the moral attributes of God; we may contemplate the character of Jesus Christ, who in human nature displayed the divine image in full perfection; we may examine the moral law which describes, and the Christian's character, which, being "renewed in knowledge," "righteousness, and true holiness," exemplifies, the image of God. And the expression renewed, implies that it is the same image which sin had defaced. (Marg. Ref. k.) From these sources of information satisfactory conclusions may be deduced. God alone can have perfect, infallible, immutable knowledge: but Adam was created after the divine image, both in the capacity of receiving, and in the disposition of heart to entertain, true knowledge; and he actually possessed, from the gift of God, a right understanding and a competent knowledge of his Creator, of himself, of his own situation, his duty, his interests, his obligations to obedience, and the odious nature and evil consequences of disobedience.—In these and similar concerns, we may be assured, that he knew and judged according to the knowledge and judgment of his Maker; though not infallibly or immutably.—Resulting from this state of his understanding and judgment, he doubtless possessed a disposition to value or contemn, to approve or disapprove, to love or detest, every object which presented itself to his mind, according to its real excellency, worthlessness, or hatefulness.—In such a state of the heart, that is, of the judgment, will, and affections, the divine image evidently must consist: and we may thence certainly infer, that in these things Adam resembled his Maker. Knowledge in a creature must be limited; error may follow, and thence a change of judgment and heart may be induced; that is, a holy creature may fall, and become unholy: but imperfection in the original disposition of the heart, supposes the creature to be formed unholy, and is inconsistent with its being created after the image of God.—We determine then, that the image of God, in which Adam was created, consisted in an understanding prepared to imbibe true knowledge, a judgment free from corrupt bias, a will disposed to obedience, and affections regulated according to reason and truth: nor can we conceive that it could consist in any thing else. From such a state of mind, godliness, in all its internal exercises and external expressions, righteousness, truth, benevolence, purity, and an exact regulation and government of every appetite and passion, must necessarily result, and every duty to God and man be constantly and delightfully performed. The same disposition would ensure belief of every truth which God should afterwards reveal, obedience to every precept which he should enjoin, a cordial acceptance of every proposal which he should make, and admiration of every discovery of the divine glory at any time vouchsafed: and could it have been possible for man to sin, without losing the divine image, it would have disposed him to repent; and, with faith, love, and joy, to receive the Mediator in whom believers trust; and to exercise all those graces, and practise all those duties, which spring from the character of a redeemed sinner.—

n 22. ix. 1. 7. xvii. 16. 20. xxii. 17. 18. xxiv. 60. xxvi. 3. 4. 24. xxxiii. 5. xlii. 25. Lev. xxv. 3. 1 Chr. xxvi. 5. Ps. cxviii. 3-5. cxxviii. 3. 4. 1 Tim. iv. 3.

• Heb. creepeth. Ps. lxxix. 34. Marg.

• Ps. xxiv. 1. xcv. 16. Hos. ii. 8. Acts xvii. 24. 25. 1 Tim. vi. 17.

† Heb. seed.

28 And ⁿ God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that [•] moveth upon the earth.

29 ¶ And God said, Behold, ^o I have given you every herb [†] bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit p ii. 16. ix. 3. Job xxvii. 31. Ps. civ. 27. 28. cxxxvi. 25. cxlv. 15. 16. cxlvii. 9. Acts xiv. 17. q Job xxxviii. 29. —41. xxxix. 4. 8. 30. xl. 15. 20.

r Heb. a living soul

30 And ^a to every beast of the earth, and to every fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is ⁱ life, I have given every green herb for meat: and it was so.

31 And God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was ^r very good. ^s And the evening and the morning were the sixth day.

r Job xxxviii. 7. Ps. xix. 1, 2. civ. 24. 31. 1 Tim. iv. 4. s 5. 8. 13. 19 23. ii. 2. Ex. xx. 11.

Man, thus created in the divine image, was constituted ruler over the other creatures. This dominion has been frequently termed a part of the divine image: but it seems more natural, to consider the capacity for exercising dominion as the result of that image; and that the actual grant of dominion was made to man, in consequence of that capacity, and as shadowing forth the sovereignty of God over all his works. The subjection of the animals, had not sin entered, would doubtless have been far more entire and voluntary, and the exercise of man's authority far more benign and gentle, than they are at present. For man is now, too generally, a severe tyrant over the animals, which are within his reach and under his power; and many creatures seem to have shaken off, or fled from, his abused dominion.

V. 28. It appears from this verse, that both the man and the woman were created on the sixth day; and that the subsequent account is only a more circumstantial recapitulation of the interesting event.—The beneficent Creator, having formed them with capacities for enjoyment, and furnished them with all things externally conducive to it, assured them of his favour and blessing, to consummate their felicity and secure its continuance: and it is probable Adam was taught to expect, that, after a term of probation upon earth, he and his descendants, if they persevered in obedience, would be translated into heaven, or favoured with some confirmation in happiness equivalent to it. The increase of the human species formed a part of the Creator's benediction; and, had not sin entered, it would have been a progressive communication and multiplication of endless felicity.—In this method creation is still carried on, and the divine perfections are exercised and displayed in the continuance, as well as in the first production, of the creatures; though the former excites little surprise, because custom leads us to expect it.

V. 29, 30. Our wants and inclinations give us no right to use the creatures of God, however suitable they may be to supply and gratify them: the grant of the great Proprietor alone confers it. In this grant the animals are joined, as equally entitled to provision from the Creator's bounty.—Animal food seems not to have been generally allowed, till after the flood, or to have been desired or thought of before the fall. But it is not certain, either that no part of the sacrifices offered after that event were eaten, or that a rebellious race did not take the liberty of using animal food, before it was granted them.

V. 31. Very good.] Each production of creative power had before been pronounced good:—but after man's creation, the whole was declared to be very good. A superior excellency, from an harmonious connexion of perfect parts in one perfect whole, was produced by each part deriving beauty from, and reflecting beauty upon the rest: and the creation of man, the image and vicegerent of his Maker, the only worshipper in this august temple, who in reasonable adoration might render him the glory of the whole, completed the design, and stamped it “very good.”—The perfections of God are worthy of being exercised, displayed, contemplated, admired, and adored. Man was formed capable of perceiving that manifested glory, of rendering the tribute of vocal praise, and of finding felicity in his Maker's worship and love: this was well pleasing to the Lord, who was most perfectly satisfied with his work, “while the morning-stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy.” Thus the creation of the heaven and the earth was completed in six days, which doubtless the Creator could have effected in an instant; but he deemed it more suited to his majesty and wisdom to do it gradually, and by progressive advances; that we, leisurely contemplating these wonders, might note more carefully the glories displayed in them; and, seeing each majestically rise superior to all that went before, might be more suitably affected with admiring gratitude, and excited to adoring praise.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The account given us in this chapter, of the Author and Original of all things, is so rational, satisfactory, and sublime; and the visible creation, as it subsists at this day, displays such wise contrivance, powerful operation, and beneficent attention to the wants and welfare of all creatures; that atheists, and all others who, with the Bible in their hands, and the creation before their eyes, “honour not the Creator as God, neither are thankful,” must be for ever left without excuse: and infidelity and impiety must at length manifestly appear to be as absurd and foolish, as they are wicked.—The Creator of all things is, without controversy, the sole Proprietor and sovereign Lord of all. Our very bodies and souls are his, and not our own; for “he made us, and not we ourselves.” He has therefore an undoubted right to dispose of us, and of all creatures, as he pleases. To him an account must be rendered of the use which we make of all his gifts: nor should we ever allow ourselves to lose sight of this important truth; which is suited, not only to restrain us from abusing the work and gift of God in the practice of sin, but also to quicken us in employing all that we possess and enjoy, in the service of our liberal Benefactor. We should also accustom ourselves, to contemplate his glory in every object

CHAP. II.

The sabbath is instituted, 1—3. Farther particulars concerning the production of the vegetables, and the creation of man, 4—7. The garden of Eden, how planted, and where situated, 8—14; man is placed in it; and permitted to eat of the fruit, with a solemn interdiction of one tree, 15—17. The animals are named by Adam; and an account given of the creation of woman, and the institution of marriage, 18—25.

a 4. i. 1. Ps. civ. 2
Is. xlv. 18. Iv.
9. Ixv. 17. Heb.
iv. 8.
b Deut. iv. 19.
xvii. 3. 2 Kings
xxi. 3—5. Ps.
xxxiii. 6. Is. xl.
26—28. xlv. 12
Jer. viii. 2. Luke
ii. 13. Acts vii.
42.
c i. 31. John v.
17.

THUS ^a the heavens and the earth were finished, and all the ^b host of them.

2 And ^c on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made:

and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made.

3 And God ^d blessed the seventh day and sanctified it: because that in it he had rested from all his work, which God ^e created and made.

4 ¶ These ^f are ^g the generations of the heavens and of the earth, when they were created: in the day that the LORD God made the earth and the heavens;

5 And ^h every plant of the field, before it was in the earth, and every herb of the field, before it grew: for the LORD God ⁱ had not caused it to rain d Ex. xvi. 22—30.

xx. 8—11. xxxi.
13—17. xxxv. 2.
3. Lev. xxv. 2.
3. Deut. v. 12—
14. Neh. ix. 14.
xiii. 15—22. Is.
lvi. 2—7. lviii.
13, 14. Jer. xvii.
21—27. Mark ii
27. Heb. iv. 4—
10.
* Heb. created to make.
e v. 1. x. 1. xi.
10. xxv. 12. 19
xxxvi. 1. 9. Ex.
vi. 16.
f i. 12.
g Job v. 10.
xxxviii. 26—28.
Ps. lxx. 9—11.
Jer. xiv. 22.
Matt. v. 45.

which we behold, and to taste his bounty in all our comforts and enjoyments. As our obligations are so vast, his largest demands of love, worship, and service, are perfectly reasonable: yet, tried by this plain rule, our own hearts must certainly condemn our past and present conduct.—In our own private history, as well as in that of the world through every age, we may read what havoc sin has made in the creation of God, once by infallible wisdom pronounced “very good;” especially in man, created in his own image and likeness! Let us then bless his name for the Gospel of Christ; and take warning from the consideration of the almighty power of that God against whom we have sinned, (the stupendous effects of which we have been contemplating,) to “flee from the wrath to come,” and to seek reconciliation to him, that his powerful arm may be employed for our salvation, and not for our destruction. And what deliverances, supports, and consolations may we not expect, in our greatest distresses and perils, from the most powerful enemies; if the omnipotent Creator be our Father and our Friend? Being thus rendered victorious over all our enemies, and new created unto the image of God in holiness; we shall at length obtain admission into the “new heavens and new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.”

NOTES.

CHAP. II. V. 1. Host.] All the parts of the visible creation occupy their proper places, like soldiers in a well-disciplined host, or army: so that number and variety connect with regularity and beauty, and conduce to the perfection of the whole. (Marg. Ref.)—The sacred historian, having given a brief account of the orderly production of all things, explains in this chapter some particulars more fully, which would otherwise have interrupted the order of his narration.

V. 2. The Lord was pleased to complete his design, just when the sixth day ended and the seventh commenced; and then he rested from all his work: not that the exertion of creating power had caused weariness, or that his rest was inactivity; for he still upholds, preserves, renovates, and governs the whole; in which sense Christ says, “The Father worketh hitherto, and I work.” But he ceased from creating, and added no more; and he rejoiced with perfect satisfaction in the whole, as worthy of himself and manifesting his glory.

V. 3. The sacred writer here both records the appointment of the sabbath, and assigns the reason for it: “Be- cause that in it the LORD rested from all his work.” This is evidently historical, and not by anticipation: for the reason subsisted from the beginning; and was more cogent immediately, than it could be at a distance of more than two thousand years, when the command was solemnly renewed from Mount Sinai, long after sin had marred the beauty of the great Creator’s works: and it concerns the whole human race, as much as the nation of Israel. This is confirmed by the custom of measuring time by weeks, which has generally prevailed in the world; and which is most reasonably accounted for, by supposing it to have arisen from an original tradition, handed down from Adam and Noah to all their posterity. And the silence of Moses concerning the observation of the sabbath by the patriarchs, so far from proving that they were not commanded to observe it, will not render it so much as probable that they did not actually keep it, to those who attentively consider how much darkness rests upon many similar subjects, in the scriptural history of the Church. Yet some intimations are given in this book, which shew that the patriarchs divided time into weeks, and regarded the seventh day. (Notes, viii. 6—14. xxix. 27.)—The “sabbath, being made for man,” was no doubt coeval with his creation.—Even in the state of innocence, Adam and Eve were employed in dressing and keeping the garden: and though exempt from sin and suffering, yet their rational nature was capable of a far more exalted state; and they were taught to consider themselves as preparing for it by progressive improvement. The seventh day therefore, being blessed and sanctified by God, separated from common employments, and consecrated to religious worship; on it especially they were required to remember their Creator, to contemplate his works, and to render him their tribute of thankful praise; and this would, even in Paradise, be conducive to the glory of God, and beneficial to them; perhaps absolutely necessary to their safety and felicity. (Notes, Ex. xvi. 22—27. xx. 8—11.)

V. 4. This is the real and true account of the origin of the heavens and the earth; and may therefore be opposed to the fables of poets, and the fancies of speculating philosophers.—The word Jehovah, the peculiar name of the living God, is here first used. It seems to mean Self-existence, underived, independent, and immutable. (Notc, Ex. iii. 14.)

V. 5, 6. In general, God employs the genial warmth upon the earth, and there was not a man ^h to till the ground.

6 But ^{*} there went up a mist from the earth, and watered the whole face of the ground.

7 And the LORD God formed man [†] of the ¹ dust of the ground, and ^k breathed into his ¹ nostrils the breath of life: and man became ^m a living soul.

8 ¶ And the LORD God planted ^a a garden ^o eastward in Eden: and there he put the man whom he had formed.

9 And out of the ground made the LORD God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food: ^p the Tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and ^q the Tree of knowledge of good and evil.

10 And ^r a river went out of Eden to water the garden; and from thence it was parted, and became into four heads.

11 The name of the first is Pison: that is it which compasseth the whole land of ^{*} Havilah, where there is gold; ^s ^{x. 7. 29. xxxv 18} ^{1 Sam xv. 7.}

12 And the gold of that land is good: there is ^{} bdellium and ^{} the onyx-stone.

13 And the name of the second river is Gihon: the same is it that compasseth the whole land of ^{*} Ethiopia.

14 And the name of the third river is ^{*} Hiddekel: that is it which goeth ^x towards the east of ^y Assyria. And the fourth river is ^{*} Euphrates.

15 And the LORD God took ¹ the man, and ^{*} put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it.

16 And the LORD God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden ^{*} thou mayest ^b freely eat:

17 But ^c of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not of the sun and the refreshing rains, and also the labour of man, in producing the fruits of the earth: but he needs them not; and therefore these first productions, (which doubtless were in full perfection,) were prepared before the sun was created, before the rain descended, or man was formed: but from the time that the vegetables were produced, a mist arose from the earth, and fell in gentle dews for their refreshment and preservation.—It is God's immediate work to communicate the first principles of things, 'but their growth is promoted by the instrumentality of man.' Fuller. Thus regeneration is immediately the work of God; but in progressive sanctification man is willing and active.

V. 7. The Creator's skill was manifested, in forming so exquisite a structure as the human body, of so mean materials. Yet the Lord not only gave man life in common with the other animals, which had bodies formed of the same dust; but immediately communicated from himself the rational soul, here denoted by "breathing into his nostrils the breath of life." Thus "the first Adam became a living soul:" but man by the fall having become dead in sin; in infinite mercy, "the second Adam, "the Lord from heaven," became "a quickening spirit," and, by the communication of the Holy Spirit, he restores divine life and renews the divine image.—It is remarkable that Jesus, after his resurrection, (with apparent reference to this expression,) "breathed upon his disciples, and said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost." (Marg. Ref.)

V. 8, 9. This garden, planned doubtless with exquisite beauty, and stored with every thing which could regale the senses, seems to have been intended as a pledge of heavenly felicity.—The word paradise, (which the Septuagint use in this place for garden;) in allusion to Eden, is in some instances used for heaven itself, and there are many references to it in scripture. (Luke xxiii. 43. 2 Cor. xii. 4.) "The Tree of Life" seems also to have been a sacramental pledge of immortality; and, by eating the fruit of it, life and felicity were sealed to Adam, as long as he continued obedient. "The Tree of knowledge" might be thus called, because that, by the prohibition of its fruit, a revelation was made to Adam of his Creator's will; of his own duty, interest, situation, and danger; of the consequences of his future conduct; and of the prescribed condition of life or death, happiness or misery; in which things his most interesting knowledge consisted. By abstaining from this fruit the knowledge of good would be enjoyed; but by eating of it the knowledge of evil would be fatally introduced. It might also intimate that man should set boundaries to his thirst for knowledge; and covet rather to know and obey the commands of God, than to pry into unrevealed secrets. To these meanings Satan artfully superadded his pernicious misinterpretation, which will shortly require our attention.—This garden was situated eastward of Canaan, or of the wilderness where Moses wrote the history.—Adam and Eve seem to have been created without the garden, and to have been afterwards brought into it.

V. 10—14. From the well-known names of the Hiddekel or Tigris, and the Euphrates, we determine that the garden of Eden was situated in or near Mesopotamia; and some learned men have supposed that almost the precise spot may be ascertained; but this is doubtful. It is supposed, that the Tigris and Euphrates met and united their streams at the garden of Eden, and that below it, the river parted again into two streams, called Pison and Gihon; and that all these are called heads. It is manifest, that Moses intended to give an intelligible description of the situation of Eden to his countrymen; who might doubtless, by attending to the several particulars here mentioned, find the precise spot, though we cannot: and notwithstanding the subsequent convulsions during the deluge, which must have greatly changed the face of the country; it is evident that the Tigris and Euphrates continued nearly the same course after that catastrophe as before.

V. 16, 17. Man, created in the image of God, doubt

* Heb. dying thou shalt die.
 † iii. 9. 4. Deut. xxvii. 26. Ez. iii. 18—20. xviii. 4. 13. 32. Rom. i. 32. v. 12—21. vi. 16. 23. vii. 10—13. viii. 2. 1 Cor. xv. 22. 56. Gal. iii. 10. Eph. ii. 1—6. v. 14. Col. ii. 13. 1 Tim. v. 6. Jam. i. 15. 1 John v. 16. Rev. ii. 11. xx. 6. 14. xxi. 8.
 • i. 31. Prov. xviii. 22. Ec. iv. 9—12.
 † iii. 12. 1 Cor. xi. 7—12. 1 Tim. ii. 11—13.
 † Heb. as before him.
 † i. 20—25.
 † h 22, 23.
 † Or, the man. 15.
 † Heb. called.

eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof, * thou shalt ^d surely die.

18 ¶ And the LORD God said, It is not ^e good that the man should be alone: ^f I will make him an help [†] meet for him.

19 And ^g out of the ground the LORD God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air; and ^h brought them unto Adam to see what he would call them: and whatsoever ⁱ Adam called every living creature, that was the name thereof.

20 And Adam ^j gave names to all cattle, and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field; ^k but for ^l Adam there was not found an help meet for him.

21 And the LORD God caused ^k a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept; and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof;

22 And the rib which the LORD God had taken from man ^l made he a woman, and ^m brought her unto the man.

23 And Adam said, This is now ⁿ bone of my bone, ^o and flesh of my flesh: she k xv. 12. 1 Sam. xxvi. 12. Da. i. viii. 18.

 Heb. builded.
 1 Tim. ii. 13.
 19. Prov. xviii. 22. xix. 14. Heb. xiii. 4.
 m xxix. 14. Judg. ix. 2. 2 Sam. v. 1. xix. 13. Eph. v. 30.
 n 24.

less had the moral law written in his heart as the law of his holy nature; and was both bound and inclined to that love of God and his creatures, which constitutes its substance and fulfilment. But the prohibition, here imposed, was an additional instituted test of obedience; and, being accompanied with the liberal allowance which precedes it, formed a proper trial of his love, and of the submission of his inclinations to the will of his beneficent Benefactor. It likewise intimated to him, that the favour of God, and not animal gratification, was the proper felicity of his nature; and taught him not to consider himself at the summit of his happiness, in a state where self-denial was required.—The annexed denunciation, “thou shalt surely die,” or, dying thou shalt die, evidently implied, that by transgression he would totally forfeit his Maker’s favour, and incur his displeasure with all its awful effects; that immediately he would become liable to pain and disease, which, as a tedious execution, would not cease but in the dissolution of the body; that he would lose the holy image of God and the comfort of his favour; and that he would experience the torment of sinful passions and the terror of his Creator’s vengeance, which, according to this covenant, must endure coeval with the existence of his immortal soul. The event shews that all this was implied: for the just and holy God would not subsequently inflict more than he had previously denounced to Adam and Eve. The same evidence proves, that the whole human race, then in the loins of their common father, and represented by him as their federal head, were interested in the transaction. To argue against this, is to combat stubborn facts, as well as divine revelation; unless some more satisfactory account of the present condition and character of man can be assigned, but which has never yet been done. For man is evidently a sinful creature, and shews his natural propensities by his first actions and continual conduct; he is under undeniable tokens of divine displeasure, and exposed to sufferings and death; a dark cloud, impenetrable except by the light of revelation, rests upon his state beyond the grave; the Scriptures always address him as in this miserable situation, and as bearing this sinful character; and these things have been universally verified in all ages and nations. If men find fault with that which God has evidently done, let them answer it to him. He deigns not to apologize for his own conduct; and, with our dark and imperfect views, we shall be deemed too officious, if we attempt it.—“Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?” seems the proper answer to objectors; and to wait for a world of clearer light is our proper behaviour. To allow the wisdom, justice, and goodness of the divine conduct, only when we can perceive them, savours neither of humility nor of faith; for the same approbation is due to an equal or an enemy: but it becomes us, and is honourable to God, when we adore the depths which we cannot fathom, and believe that while “clouds and darkness are round about him, righteousness and judgment are the basis of his throne.” Could we divest ourselves of partiality, we might discern in some degree the reasonableness of the prohibition; the peculiar meetness of Adam, as the common father of the human race, to be their representative; and the divine goodness in selecting, as the condition of this covenant, so easy a test of obedience, and in making the implied stipulation, that if he did not eat he should not die. Many things have been copiously and plausibly argued upon these topics: but it is readily granted, that great difficulties remain; and that they, who will give their Creator credit for justice and goodness, no farther than they can perceive them, must stumble at this stumbling stone, after all that can be done to remove it. Man’s mortality and depravity, as well as universal history, coincide with, and confirm, the scriptural account of this transaction; and, as collateral evidences, prove that it is the “testimony of God,” and that we do not mistake its meaning: on this ground faith receives it; and humbled reason submits to her Teacher, God, and allows his righteousness, though she cannot fully comprehend it.

V. 18. It was not conducive to the happiness of man, to remain without the solace of society, and the endearment of tender friendship; nor consistent with the end of his creation to be without marriage, by which the earth might be replenished, and worshippers and servants of God continually raised up to render him praise and glory.

V. 19, 20. Adam seems to have been vastly better acquainted, by intuition or immediate revelation, with the distinct properties of every creature, than the most sagacious observers, since the fall, have been by study. When, therefore, God brought the several species before him, he gave them names expressive of their distinct natures or exterior forms. This was also a token of his dominion over them.—Yet, upon this review, not one was found in outward form his counterpart, (as the animals were created male and female;) nor one suited to engage his affections, participate in his enjoyments, or associate with him in the worship of God.

V. 21—23. Adam, being supernaturally cast into a deep

• Heb. Isha. 1 Cor. shall be called 'Woman, because she xi 8, 9.
† Heb. Ish. was taken out of † Man.

c Pa. xlv. 10. 24 Therefore shall a man °leave his p Deut. iv. 4. x. father and his mother, and shall °cleave 20. Josh. xxiii.
8. Acts xi. 23

sleep, without consciousness or pain, the Lord took from that part of his body which was near the heart, the substance of which he formed the woman; who was to be as part of himself, and the object of his most cordial affections. She was taken from him, and not out of the ground; that there might be a natural foundation of moderate subordination on the woman's part, and sympathizing tenderness on the man's; as a man rules over, yet carefully defends and tenderly takes care of, his own body. The Lord then conducted her as his gift to Adam, that they might be united in marriage for their mutual good; and that he might thus authorize, and give an example for the regulation of, future marriages. Doubtless he made known to Adam, perhaps during his sleep, in what manner the woman had been created from a part of himself, to be his companion.—The original word translated woman, is the same as is rendered man, excepting the feminine termination: it imports that she was exactly his counterpart, taken from him, united to him, and like him in every thing but sex; and it expressed his satisfaction in his Creator's gift, and his thankful acceptance of it.

V. 24. According to the original institution of marriage, the nearest of all relations and the proper source of all the rest, men in every subsequent age would leave the immediate society even of their parents, to lay the foundation of new families; and thenceforth all other relative affections and duties must be regulated, in subordination to the affections and duties of that new relation. Thus one man and one woman are so closely united as to become "one flesh:" so that, according to the original institution, nothing can separate them, but that which dissolves the union of soul and body, and even divides the component parts of the body from each other. This seems to be the remark of Moses rather than of Adam; but certainly it was the word of God, speaking by one of them. Neither polygamy nor divorces can accord with this original institution. "In the beginning it was not so;" nor would such things have been practised, but for the sinful lusts of men. And equally unscriptural are constrained celibacy, and needless restraints upon marriage. The records of former times, and impartial observation on the present, evince that it is not generally "good for man to be alone." The mutual inclination of the sexes for each other, (which, however debased by sin, was originally implanted by the Creator,) when regulated by the law of God, and free from other restraints, becomes the foundation of all the relations of life, the source of the most rational, of our earthly comforts, and equally beneficial to individuals, families, and nations: like a river, which, gliding within its banks, beautifies and enriches the neighbouring plains. But when unscriptural restraints are imposed, or when it bursts through the appointed bounds, it diffuses vice, discord, disease, and misery, with horrible rapidity; like the same river, obstructed in its natural channel, overflowing its banks, inundating and desolating the fields, and converting the neighbouring country into a noxious marsh or fen.—Go 'among the enemies of the gospel, and you shall see the unto his wife: and † they shall be one ^q flesh.

Mal. ii. 14—16.
Matt. xix. 3—9.
Mark x. 6—12.
1 Cor. vi. 16, 17.
vii. 2—4. Eph. v.
28—31. 1 Pet. iii.
1—7.
iii. 7, 10, 11.

25 And they were both † naked, the man and his wife, and were not ashamed.

' woman either reduced to abject slavery, or basely flattered ' for the vilest of purposes: but in Christian families, you ' see her treated with honour and respect; as a friend, as ' naturally an equal, a soother of man's cares, a softener ' of his grief, and a partner of his joys.' Fuller.

V. 25. The human body, the most noble production in the material creation, would not have required concealment, had not sin disgraced the Creator's work: and probably shame would never have been excited, in the manner in which it has been ever since, had not the sinful nature been communicated with the propagation of the human species.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—15.

As God himself contemplated his whole work with cordial approbation, and rested in it with entire complacency; it must be great presumption for us to find fault with any part of it. We are indeed capable of perceiving the wisdom and goodness of God, in many of the constituent parts of the vast creation, and of rendering to him the tribute of adoring praise; but it is most daring pride, to suppose ourselves competent to understand the whole.—The only wise God instituted the Sabbath in Paradise before the entrance of sin; and thus he has shewn, not only the advantage, but the absolute necessity, of time set apart for his immediate service, as the world now is; if we would pay any suitable regard to religion, or to the salvation of our immortal souls. How diligently then should we sinners keep holy the Christian Sabbath; and take care that our children and domesticks have leisure and opportunity, and make use of them, for the same salutary purposes! But the rest to be observed is not indolent repose. The rest of heaven consists in serving God without weariness and with entire satisfaction; and our sabbaths should be earnest of that blessedness, and a preparation for it. Indeed, God gives every thing to labour, which was needful in innocence and in paradise; because true excellence and happiness consist in action, not in inactivity.—The reflection likewise, that our bodies were formed from the dust of the earth, may tend to repress the pride of beauty, strength, or agility; to abate our solicitude about them; and to teach us to prepare for the execution of the sentence, "Dust thou art, "and unto dust shalt thou return."

V. 16—25.

Additional favours lay us under additional obligations to grateful obedience: and as our liberal Benefactor indulges us in all things truly good for us; it is highly reasonable that we should give him credit for his wisdom and kindness, even in restraints and prohibitions, and cheerfully deny ourselves at his requirement.—The covenant of works was holy, and just, and good; being proposed by a God of perfect holiness, justice, and goodness; and acceded to by Adam, before sin had impaired his powers, perverted his judgment, or depraved his heart: yet it is contrary to us, who in Adam, and after his example, have violated the terms of it. We have, therefore, great reason to be thankful for

CHAP. III.

The woman, tempted by the serpent, eats the forbidden fruit, and induces Adam to do the same, 1—6. They are alarmed and ashamed, in vain attempt concealment, and are convicted by God, 7—13. Sentence is denounced against them, containing the gracious promise of a Redeemer, 14—19. They are clothed, but expelled from Eden, 20—24.

^a 13—15 Is xxxvii.
1. Matt. x. 16.
2 Cor. xii. 3. 14.
Rev. xii. 9. xx. 2.

NOW ^a the serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field which the LORD God had made: and he said unto the woman, ^a Yea, ^b hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden? ^c Heb. Yea, because, &c. ^d Matt. iv. 3. 6. 9.

2 And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden:

3 ^e But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye ^f touch it, lest ye die. ^c ii. 16, 17. ^d xx. 6. Ex. xix. 12, 13. 1 Chr. xvi. 22. Job i. 11. ii. 5. xix. 21. 1 Cor. vii. 1. 2 Cor. vi. 17. Col. ii. 21.

another covenant, established upon better promises, and ratified by the engagements of a better Surety. To him let us flee for refuge, and from him alone seek deliverance from shame and pain, from sin and death. And while we receive all worldly and relative comforts from the hand of our reconciled God; and seek his blessing on them, use them according to his appointment, and attend to the duties which they require according to his command; let us not forget, that a union must be formed with the Lord Jesus, of which marriage itself is but a type and shadow. (2 Cor. xi. 2.) We must be one spirit with him, and cleave to him in simple dependence, cordial attachment, and devoted obedience and submission; even though it should interfere with the comfort of that most endeared relation. Then death, which dissolves all other unions, will complete this to eternal ages.

NOTES.

CHAP. III. V. 1. Adam and Eve, perhaps, had noticed with pleasure and partiality, that the serpent possessed an instinctive sagacity, which more resembled the effects of reason, than that of any other creature did; and this might suggest to Satan the device of using this animal as his instrument in temptation. For the serpent appeared to speak, but in reality Satan spake by the serpent; as, in the days of Christ, the unclean spirits employed the tongues of possessed persons. Common sense and the whole Scripture lead us to conclude, that the serpent was only the instrument; Satan the real agent, who is therefore called the serpent, the old dragon, a liar, and a murderer from the beginning. (Note, Rev. xii. 7—12.)—The word of God reveals to us the world of spirits, holy and unholy, of which otherwise we should have had no certain knowledge. Faith avails itself of this information; but unbelief rejects it to the infidel's irreparable detriment: as nothing better answers the purpose of the powers of darkness, than to work in the dark; and none serve their interests more effectually, than they who deny and endeavour to disprove their existence; for we never can guard against the attacks of unseen and unsuspected enemies. From the Scriptures we learn, that "angels sinned, and kept not their first estate;" and that, being created holy and happy, they by transgression forfeited the favour, and incurred the displeasure, of their Creator, and became unholy and miserable; yea, desperate in the certain expectation of increasing and everlasting misery. Being, however, still endued with vast capacities, profound sagacity, extensive knowledge, and great power; and, wholly actuated by enmity, malice, envy, pride, ambition, and subtlety; they maintain determined rebellion against their Maker: and as they are very numerous, they have established a kingdom in opposition to his kingdom, under the dominion of the arch-apostate, the Devil or Satan; so that, as far as they are permitted, they are unwearied and insatiable in mischief; aiming at nothing less than reducing the whole creation to a state of rebellion, anarchy, and misery, and rendering all creatures as vile and wretched as themselves.—Doubtless, the beauty of the recently created world, the glory of God, and the happiness of man, excited the envy and rage of these evil spirits, and suggested to Satan the malicious design of ruining the whole. For this purpose, he, with dark craftiness, concealed himself in the subtle serpent, and thus made his unsuspected attack on the woman when alone; perhaps insinuating that by eating the fruit of the forbidden tree, the serpent had acquired the gift of reason and speech: nor can we satisfactorily account for the woman's entering into conversation with the serpent, and shewing no marks of surprise or suspicion, unless we admit a supposition of this kind. Some learned men indeed have conjectured, that this serpent appeared so beautiful and resplendent, that Eve supposed it to be an angel, and listened to it as a heavenly messenger; and they confirm this opinion by observing, that the fiery serpents are called in the original Seraphim; (Num. xxi. 6. 8); as the heavenly worshippers are by Isaiah; (Is. vi. 2); and that the apostle notes, that "Satan is transformed into an angel of light," in the same chapter in which he says, "The serpent beguiled Eve by his subtlety." (2 Cor. xi. 3. 14.) This supposition, however, makes more excuse for the conduct both of Eve and Adam, than the word of God authorizes; and certainly we cannot learn it from the narrative.—Nothing can be conceived more artful than Satan's first address; "Yea, hath God said?" "How is it that God should speak thus? Can it be true, that he has given you appetites, and placed gratifications before you, only to mock you?—You must misunderstand his meaning; or some envious being has counterfeited his authority; or at least it must be allowed to be a very capricious restraint." Such insinuations were artfully couched in this insidious question, and such objections are continually raised by him and his instruments, against every restriction in the word of God which calls for self-denial.—It is observable, that no notice is taken of the largeness of the grant, but merely of its limitation.

V. 2, 3. The first mistake of the woman seems to have consisted, in attempting to answer the ensnaring question proposed to her. She ought not to have listened for a moment to such suggestions; nor to have entered into a parley with one, whose words directly tended to excite hard thoughts of God and of his express command. She mentioned the grant of the bountiful Creator, but not in the 18. Deut. xxix. 19. Ps. x. 11. 2 Cor. ii. 11. 19. Ex. xx. 7. 1 Kings xxii. 6. Jer. xiv. 13. 14. xxviii. 2. 3. Ez. xiii. 2—6. 22. 2 Cor. xi. 3. 13—15.

4 And the serpent said unto the woman, ^e Ye shall not surely die;

5 For ^f God doth know, that in the day ye eat thereof, then ^g your eyes shall be opened: and ye shall be ^h as gods, ⁱ knowing good and evil.

6 And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food; and that it was h Ex. v. 2. 2 Chr. xxxii. 15. Ps. xii. 4. Ez. xxviii. 2. 9. xxix. 3. Dan. iv. 30. vi. 7. Acts xii. 22. 23. 2 Cor. iv. 4. 2 The. ii. 4. Rev. xiii. 4. 14. 22. ii. 17.

expressive language in which it had been made; "Of every tree in the garden thou mayest freely eat;" and she added to the restriction, "neither shall ye touch it." This is, indeed, an excellent precaution; we should not come within the attractive force of forbidden objects: yet it seems, as here used, to be an intimation of severity in the prohibition. The Lord had said, "In the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die:" but the undoubted certainty of the event is here omitted. Indeed it is evident, that the poison began to work; Eve made too little of the liberal grant of the Creator, stated the prohibition in strong terms of severity, and rather faulted as to the certain and immediate execution of the threatening.

V. 4, 5. Perceiving his advantage, the tempter grew bolder, and gave a direct contradiction to the divine denunciation; and, to gain the more credit to his daring assertions, he proceeded to confirm them by an oath, blasphemously calling on God to attest his horrid falsehoods: or rather, he insinuated that the Lord knew his own threatening would not be executed, at least in the sense in which Adam and Eve had understood it; but that, on the contrary, most abundant advantage would accrue to them from the violation of the Creator's law: no less than a vast advance in knowledge, and an independent felicity, without subjection to the will, or dread of the displeasure, of any superior. Thus he insinuated, that God forbid this fruit, in order to keep them in ignorance, and in a mean state of dependence and subjection. There is likewise an equivocation in the words; a latent truth, the reverse of their apparent meaning. "Your eyes," says Satan, "shall be opened;" that is, 'When you have eaten the fruit, you will too late see your own folly. "Ye shall be as gods;" revolted from God, and losing his image and favour, you will ambitiously affect independency; demand the homage of flattery and praise; aspire at the pinnacle of pre-eminence, and grasp at dominion; act as if you were your own lords and avengers; and thus attempt to usurp the throne of God. By this conduct you will be left to make trial of your ability to contrive, effect, and secure a happiness to yourselves, as if ye were gods, till you find death and misery seize upon you; "knowing good and evil," by losing the good and experiencing the evil.'—Of such a paraphrase the words will admit, and such have been the effects of eating the forbidden fruit; but nothing could be further from Eve's thoughts than this interpretation.—Thus the assertions of the tempter resembled the ancient heathen oracles, of which, in one way or other, this "father of lies" was doubtless the author: for these were generally couched in such ambiguous language, as might afterwards be accommodated to the event; though often in direct opposition to the disappointed expectations of the deluded votaries.—'Nothing is more common, than for the most false and pernicious doctrines to be advanced with a boldness, which stuns the minds of the simple, and induces a doubt; 'Surely I must be in the wrong, and they in the right, or 'they would not be so confident!' Fuller.

V. 6. "The lust of the eye" made way for the "lust of the flesh;" when the woman looked on the fruit, till she fancied there must be some very extraordinary pleasure in the taste of it. As her ear, formed to receive the truth of God, had just before been opened to admit Satan's lies; so now the eye, formed to behold his works, became an inlet to concupiscence. Now first the members became, as they have ever since continued in unconverted men, "instruments of unrighteousness unto sin." (Notes, Rom. vi. 12, 13. 16—19.) Eve had no testimony except that of Satan concealed in the serpent, that "it was a tree to be desired to make one wise;" yet she neither hesitated, nor suspected any delusion; but, at his instance, "she took of the fruit, and did eat," without consulting Adam, or allowing herself leisure for consideration! Thus she listened to the tempter, till, entangled in unbelief, she suspected the divine veracity and goodness, conceived hopes of impunity in transgression, and expected a vast gratification both of ambition and of the sensual appetite; and at length, with confident presumption, she took the forbidden fruit, and ate. In this manner was "lust at first conceived, then sin brought forth; and sin being finished, brought forth death."—But Satan's success was yet incomplete: for had Adam refused to eat, the woman's transgression would have remained with herself. It was, indeed, a great point gained to prevail with her whom Adam loved so tenderly, and one who would employ her fascinating influence, to prevail on him to follow her example. But whether Adam sinned in presumption, as not seeing death immediately inflicted on Eve; or in despair, as giving up all for lost; or as overcome by Eve's persuasions and reasonings, it does not clearly appear. Yet the apostle intimates, that he was not deceived in the same manner and degree as the woman. (1 Tim. ii. 14.)—Considering this offence in all its circumstances, and with all its aggravations, we may term it the prolific parent and grand exemplar of all the transgressions committed ever since. Whatever there hath been in any sin, of unbelief, ingratitude, apostasy, rebellion, robbery, contempt, defiance of God, hard thoughts of him, and enmity against him: whatever of idolatry, as comprehending faith in Satan, "the god" and "prince of this world," worship of him, and obedience to him; or of pride, exorbitant self-love, and self-will, in affecting that independency, exaltation, and homage which belong only to God; and of an inordinate love to the creatures, in seeking our happiness in the possession and enjoyment of them: whatever discontent, sensual lust, covetousness, murder, and mischief, were ever yet contained in any one sin, or in all which have been committed upon earth, the whole were concentrated in this one transaction. Nor have they been wide of the truth, who have laboured to prove, that all the ten commandments, extensively and spiritually expounded, were at once violated; while, in proportion as the prohibition was reasonable, and the inducements to rebel against it trifling, the offence was the more aggravated.—In this manner sin entered, and Satan triumphed in establishing his usurped authority; "for of

* Heb. a desire
Ez. xxiv. 16 21
25.
k vi. 2. xxxix. 7.
Josh. vii. 21.
2 Sam. xii. 2. Job
xxxi. 1. Matt. v.
23. 1 John ii. 16.
l 1 Tim ii. 14.
m Hos. vi. 7. Marg.
Rom. v. 12—18.
n 5. Deut. xxviii.
34. Luke xvi. 23.
o 10, 11. ii. 25.
p Job ix. 29—31.
Is. xxviii. 20.
lix. 6.
† Or, things to gird about.
q 10. Deut. iv. 33
v 25.
r Heb. wind. Job
xxviii. 1.
s Job xxxii. 14.
xxxiv. 22. Ps.
xxxix. 1—12.
Prov. xv. 3. Jer.
xxiii. 24. Am. ix.
2, 3. Jon. i. 3, 9,
10. Heb. iv. 13.

* pleasant ^k to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise; she took of the fruit thereof, and ^l did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her, ^m and he did eat.
7 And ^a the eyes of them both were opened, and they ^o knew that they were naked; ^p and they sewed fig-leaves together, and made themselves [†] aprons.
8 And ^q they heard the voice of the LORD God walking in the garden in the cool of the day: and Adam and his wife ^r hid themselves from the presence of the LORD God amongst the trees of the garden.
9 And the LORD God called unto Adam, and said unto him, 'Where art ^a thou?'

10 And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden: 'and I was afraid, ^u because I was naked; and I hid myself.
11 And he said, Who told thee that ^u thou wast naked? ^x hast thou eaten of the tree, whereof I commanded thee, that thou shouldest not eat?
12 And the man said, ^y The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat.
13 And the LORD God said unto the woman, ^z What is this that thou hast done? and the woman said, ^a The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat.

iv. 9. xvi. 8. Josh.
vii. 17—19. Rev.
xx. 12, 13.
Job xxxii. 15. Ps.
cxix. 120. Is.
xxxiii. 14. Ivii.
11.
7. ii. 25. Eze.
xxxii. 25. Is.
xlvii. 3. Rev. iii.
17, 18. xvi. 15.
x iv. 10. Pa. i. 21
Rom. iii. 20.
ii. 18. 22. Ex.
xxxii. 21—24.
1 Sam. xv. 20—
24. Job xxxi. 33.
Prov. xxviii. 13.
Luke x. 27. Rom.
x. 3. Jam. i.
—15.
z iv. 10—12. 2 Sam.
xii. 9—12.
a 4—6. 2 Cor. xi.
3. 1 Tim. ii. 14.

“whom a man is overcome, of the same is he brought in “bondage.” Thus man apostatized, God was provoked, the Holy Spirit forsook his polluted temple, the unclean spirit took possession, the divine image was defaced, and Satan’s image impressed in its stead: hence the wickedness and the misery of man. A lamentation it is, and should be: yet, “righteous art thou in all thy judgments, O “LORD.” Let not the enemy further prevail against us, we beseech thee, by taking hence occasion to produce in our minds one hard thought of thee, or of thy mysterious judgments!

V. 7. Satan’s promise soon began to be accomplished.
The eyes of Adam and Eve were opened to see the snare, when they were already caught in it: they saw also misery before them with horror and dismay, and their new discoveries were their torment. Their bodily nakedness had not previously excited the sensation of shame: but being stripped of the robe of innocence, and despoiled of the image of God, the defence of his protection, and the honour of his presence, they perceived that they were indeed made naked to their shame; and their outward nakedness appeared an indication of the exposed and shameful condition to which they were reduced. Their vain attempt to cover themselves, by fig-leaves plaited together, represents the fruitless pains and worthless expedients, which men employ to conceal their real character, and hide their sins from each other, and even from themselves. For all men are naturally more ashamed of being detected in sin, than of committing it; and more desirous of keeping up a good opinion of themselves, than of obtaining pardon from God: though they can hide nothing from him, and can neither elude his justice, nor recover his favour, by any of their own contrivances.

V. 8. Some visible tokens of the Lord’s presence, perhaps in human form, seem here intimated, of which we shall hereafter find undeniable instances; and which should be considered as anticipations of his incarnation, who is called “The Word of God:” though the word rendered walking may be referred to the voice, and not to the LORD.
—Some learned men, indeed, explain all these appearances of the SHECHINAH, or visible glory indicating the divine presence, which at some times shone with mild lustre, at others in terrific majesty. But I shall hereafter assign my reasons for thinking, that this hypothesis has its sole foundation in the imaginations of Jewish Rabbies, and is totally destitute of scriptural proof, except where express mention is made of visible glory. (Note xxxii. 30).—“The cool of “the day” was, probably, one time of Adam and Eve’s accustomed worship; when, doubtless, they had been used to welcome the tokens of the divine presence with that kind of exulting joy, with which a dutiful child meets the approbation of an indulgent parent. But now, conscious guilt inspired terror; and they desired to flee and hide themselves from God, as no longer their loving Father and bounteous Friend, but their dreaded Enemy, who was about to take vengeance on them.—Where was now the wisdom, which they were to derive from the forbidden fruit? Alas! they could only devise a foolish project of hiding themselves from the all-seeing eye of God, under the shade of a few trees! (Marg. Ref.)

V. 9. Where art thou? Words of more terror, perhaps, never sounded in man’s ears, or will be heard till the day of judgment!—The command had been peremptory, the threatening absolute, the transgression undeniable; no escape or resistance was practicable; no mention had been made of mercy, and probably the offenders had no expectation of forgiveness.

V. 10, 11. Adam did not say, ‘I saw thy glory,’ but “I heard thy voice;” which implies that he saw nothing to affright him; but merely that conscious guilt appalled him, on hearing the accustomed tokens of God’s special presence.—Without any humiliation before his offended Lord, or confession of sin, or supplication for mercy, he evasively attempted to account for his flight and concealment. But the true cause was at once detected. It arose from conscious guilt, for he had dared to transgress the righteous command of the Most High. Thus “every mouth “shall be stopped,” and every excuse silenced, when God shall arise to judgment.—“Who told thee that thou wast “naked?” Whence could arise this idea? It had before no existence.

V. 12, 13. Adam could neither deny nor excuse his transgression of his Creator’s most express mandate; yet, instead of frankly confessing it, he cast the blame upon the woman; as if he had been allowed to hearken to her, rather than to obey God! Nay, he covertly charged the blame

14 ¶ And the LORD God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field: upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life.

15 And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy c Ps. lxxii. 9. 1s.

xxix. 4. lxxv. 25.
Mic. vii. 17.
d Num. xxi. 6, 7.
Am. ix. 3. Mark
xvi. 18. Luke x.
19. Acts xxviii.
3-6. Rom. iii.
13. e Matt. iii. 7. xii. 34. xiii. 38. xxiii. 33. John viii. 44. Acts xiii. 10. 1 John iii. 10.

b 1. ix. 6. Ex. xxi.
28-32. Lev. xx.
25.

upon the Lord himself, saying, "The woman, whom thou gavest me."—Here we discern the pride, and stoutness of heart, which characterize that evil spirit, who had just set up his kingdom in Adam's heart. The woman likewise discovered the same spirit, in her vain attempt to exculpate herself, by throwing the blame upon the Serpent.

V. 14, 15. It is probable, that the serpent was previously beautiful and innoxious; but it now assumed the reptile form, and became mischievous and hateful. From that season, serpents have been more shunned, and persecuted unto death, as enemies to the human race, than almost any other animal: by the venomous bite of many of them they have often severely avenged themselves; and, by reason of their proneness on the earth, they eat their food mingled with dust. Thus the words may imply a visible punishment to be executed on the serpent, as the instrument in this temptation: but the curse was in reality directed against the invisible tempter; whose abject degraded condition, and base endeavours to find satisfaction in rendering others wicked and miserable, might be figuratively intimated, by the serpent's moving on his belly, and feeding on the dust. Yet this curse on Satan is expressed in language, which contains the sum of all the blessings, which a merciful God bestows on sinful man! It is a prophecy and a promise, which have ever since been fulfilling, but have not yet received their entire accomplishment. It comprises the whole Gospel, and a prophetic history of the opposition with which it should meet, and the success with which it should be crowned, in all ages and countries to the end of time.—Christ himself is "the Seed of the woman," as the most illustrious of the human race. Yet all true believers, as one with him, are also included. He is called the Seed of the woman, and not the Seed of Adam, though descended from both; not only because Satan had prevailed first against the woman, but likewise with an evident prophetic intimation of his miraculous conception and birth of a pure virgin. Maimonides, an eminent Jewish writer, says, "This is one of the passages in Scripture which is most wonderful, and not to be understood according to the letter; but contains great wisdom in it." "In which words he wrote more truth than he was aware, but was not able to unfold this hidden wisdom, as we Christians, blessed be God, are able to do." Bp. Patrick.—The devil, his angels, and wicked men, are the Serpent and his seed: "Ye are of your father, the devil, and the works of your father ye will do." God himself hath put enmity between these two contending parties. The effect of his grace in the heart of true Christians is enmity, not against the persons of sinners, but against their character, the image of Satan which they bear, and the cause of Satan which they favour; for "that mind is in believers which was in Christ," "who was manifested to destroy the works of the devil." Their character and conduct also, the testimony which they bear against the wickedness of the world, and the opposition which they make to it, as well as the success which the Lord vouchsafes them, excite the rage, envy, and malice of Satan and his servants; whose pride they affront, whose consciences they disturb, whose real characters they detect, and whose iniquity they oppose. (Marg. Ref.) Hence Satan and his seed, by open violence and cruel persecutions, by secret machinations and base slanders, by artful temptations and pernicious heresies, fight against the "Seed of the woman." In doing this, they "bruise his heel." They once "crucified the Lord of Glory" himself; they have massacred perhaps millions of his disciples, and by one means or other are always bringing inward or outward tribulations on them: yet this is no mortal wound, for it does not hinder the final glorification of the whole multitude, who thus in succession have "Satan bruised under their feet."—"The seed of the woman," fighting under the Redeemer's standard, by the doctrine of truth and the armour of righteousness, which are united with prayers and patience, hatred of sin, and compassion for sinners, carry on their benevolent war; and they gain most illustrious victories, when the power of Satan is broken, and his deluded servants are converted unto Christ. But their victories are the fruit of his severe conflict, and glorious triumph over the tempter, especially upon the cross; where, in human nature, giving himself a ransom for sinners, he broke the whole force of Satan's usurped empire: and now, risen from the dead, and having "all power in heaven and earth" vested in him, he is continually employed in crushing the Serpent's head; yet in measure and order, "according to the purpose of him, who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will." Eph. i. 11. Already, by his apostles and ministers, he hath shaken the very foundations of Satan's kingdom, and rescued millions of his wretched captives: but ere long he will even on earth gain a more decisive victory; and at last, setting his foot, as it were, on the Serpent's head, he will entirely crush his interests, deprive him of all power to do further mischief, and execute condign punishment on all his seed. (Notes, Rev. xix. 17—21. xx. 1—3. 11—15.)—From this short explication we perceive, that the person, sufferings, glory, and triumphs of the Redeemer; the character, tribulations, and felicity of the redeemed; the temporary success and final ruin of all the enemies of Christ and his people; and indeed almost the whole history of the church, and of the world, through time and to eternity, are compendiously delineated in this singular verse; which stands, and will stand to the end of time, an internal demonstration that the Scripture was given by inspiration from God.—Satan's cause would be ruined by one in a nature inferior to his own; by one emphatically called the "Seed of the woman," over whom the tempter had triumphed; and the victory over the enemy would be obtained, not only by the Messiah, but by all his servants. (Note, Ex. viii. 16, 17.)—It is remarkable that this gracious promise of a Saviour was given unsolicited, and previous to any humiliation on the part of man. (Note, Rom. v. 7—10.) Without a revelation of mercy, inspiring hope of forgiveness, the convinced sinner would be hardened in despair: this intimation therefore formed that encouragement to hope, which was followed by true repentance and true religion, (as it is generally supposed,) in fallen Adam and seed and 'her Seed: ^q it shall bruise thy head, and ^b thou shalt bruise his heel.

16 Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; ⁱ in sorrow shalt thou bring forth children; and ^m thy desire shall be ⁿ to thy husband, and he shall ^o rule over thee.

17 And unto Adam he said, ^o Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of ^f Is. vii. 14. Jer. xxxi. 22. Mic. v. 8. Matt. i. 23. Luke i. 31—35. Gal. iv. 4. Rom. xvi. 20. Col. ii. 15. Heb. ii. 14, 15. I John iii. 8. Rev. xx. 1—3, 10. ^g xlix. 17. Is. liii. 3, 4. 12. Dan. ix. 23. Matt. iv. 1—10. Luke xxii. 39—44. 53. John xii. 31—33. xiv. 30, 31. Heb. ii. 18. v. 7. Rev. ii. 10. xii. 9—13. xiii. 7. xv. 1—6. xx. 7, 8. ^h xxxv. 16—18. I Sam. iv. 19—21. Ps. xlviii. 6. Is. xiii. 8. xxi. 3. xxvi. 17, 18. liii. 11. Jer. iv. 31. John xvi. 21. 1 Thes. v. 3. 1 Tim. ii. 15. v. 3. 14. Eph. v. 22—24. 1 Tim. ii. 11, 12. Tit. ii. 5. 1 Pet. iii. 1—6. 23, 24. Matt. xxii. 12. xxv. 26, 27. 45. Luke xix. 22. Rom. iii. 19.

thy wife, ^p and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: ^q cursed is the ground for thy sake; ^r in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life;

18 ^s Thorns also and thistles shall it ^t bring forth to thee: and thou shalt eat ^u the herb of the field;

19 In ^v the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, ^w till thou return unto the ground: for out of it wast thou taken: for ^x dust thou art, ^y and unto dust shalt thou return.

^p II. ii. 16, 17. Jer. vi. 23, 24. ^q v. 23. Ps. cxxvii. 2. Ec. i. 2, 3. 13, 14. ii. 11, 17. Is. xxiv. 5, 6. Rom. viii. 20—22. ^r Job v. 6, 7. xlv. 1. Ps. xc. 7—9. Ec. ii. 22, 23. v. 17. John xvi. 33. ^s Job xxxi. 40. Jer. iv. 3. xii. 13. Matt. xiii. 7. Heb. vi. 8. ^t Heb. cause to bud. ^u Ps. civ. 14, 15. Rom. xiv. 2. ^v Ec. i. 3. Luke xxii. 44. Eph. iv. 28. 1 Thes. ii. 9. 2 Thes. iii. 10. ^w Job i. 21. Ps. xc. 3. civ. 23. Ec. v. 16. ^x Job i. 21. Ps. xc. 3. ^y II. v. xviii. 27. z. xxiii. 4. Job xix. 26. Ps. civ. 29. Ec. iii. 20. xii. 7. Dan. xii. 2. Rom. v. 12—21. 1 Cor. xv. 21, 22.

Eve: and though the revelation was at first obscure, it became brighter and brighter, like the increasing light of the morning, till "the Sun of righteousness arose with healing in his wings."

V. 16. The woman was first in the transgression, and had tempted Adam, as the serpent had tempted her; she therefore next received her sentence, respecting the sufferings to which she and her daughters would be subjected. It cannot be supposed, that pain or sorrow would have been connected with pregnancy, or child-bearing, had not sin been committed: but now, the Lord threatened to multiply the woman's sorrows, even those of her conception; so that, in a world of suffering, the pains and sufferings of the female sex are thus greatly multiplied indeed, almost beyond expression.—It might therefore have been expected, that on this account women would generally prefer the single state, and thus prevent the increase of the human species: but God (according to the probable meaning of the expression as used in this connection, Note iv. 6, 7.) hath so ordered it, that marriage is notwithstanding generally chosen even by the suffering sex.—The authority of the husband, when exercised uniformly with wisdom and tenderness, would have increased mutual felicity: but, by the entrance of sin, it is often converted into unreasonable and unfeeling despotism, and becomes an additional source of misery to vast numbers of unhappy females: and they too are equally prone to neglect the duties of their station, which occasions a still further increase of misery and distraction. To prevent or mitigate these evils, submission in things lawful is here commanded, notwithstanding this change in the conduct of the husband, which seems also to be predicted.—'It is well, that enmity was not put between the man and woman, in the manner that it is betwixt her seed and that of the serpent.' Henry.

V. 17—19. The plea, by which Adam tried to extenuate his crime, was adduced as the reason of his punishment: instead of hearkening to the voice of God, he had hearkened to the voice of Eve, whom he was appointed to counsel and command, not to obey. Yet the Lord did not denounce a curse on him and his seed, having before given intimations of rich blessings intended for them: but "he cursed the ground for his sake;" that as he had transgressed in eating the forbidden fruit, so he might be chastised in the labour and sorrow connected with his future sustenance. In consequence of this curse, useless and noxious weeds and plants spring up spontaneously, and both grow and multiply with immense rapidity. These must be eradicated, the soil prepared, and much labour bestowed, before the precious fruits of the earth can be obtained: hence incessant fatigue, pain, and penury are the lot of the bulk of mankind; which would not have been the case, had not sin occasioned it. And at last, the herb of the field, the ordinary productions of the earth, were substituted for the delicious fruits of Eden, as a sharp rebuke for man's coveting and eating the forbidden fruit. The weight of this part of the sentence falls chiefly on the man, to whom it is addressed, as that of the former on the woman. Nor was any respite or termination of this labour and sorrow to be expected, till death should consign the body to the earth again, to mingle with its original dust.—As we feel that this sentence, in every part, is in full force against the whole human species; it is absurd to deny that we were all joined in the covenant with Adam, our common representative. (Marg. Ref. q—z.) But as the sentence upon the Serpent couched, under its outward meaning, the threatening of vengeance on the invisible tempter, so the death denounced against the body, which is but "the instrument of unrighteousness," comprehends also the awful punishment prepared for the soul, the deviser of every sin, and the real agent in committing it. This is evinced by the sinful propensities of the human race, compared with the threatenings of "the wrath of God against every soul of man, that doeth evil." Our very nature is fallen under the curse for Adam's sake, and produces only sinful desires, words, and actions, unless renewed by divine grace: for in the very day in which Adam sinned, he died, he became spiritually dead, the Holy Spirit having left his soul: and all capacity of delighting in the holy service and spiritual worship of God, is extinct in every descendant of Adam, till "the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus" restores divine life, by regeneration. Indeed, the apostle directly opposes the death which came by Adam, to the life which comes by Christ: and therefore, if the one is eternal, so is the other. (Rom. v. 12—19.) Thus all are concluded under sin and wrath, and none but Jesus, the Mediator of a new covenant, can deliver us. And thus He, "the second Adam, the Lord from heaven," as our Surety, was under subjection, and made a curse for us, laboured through his sorrowful life, sweat blood in the garden, endured the travail of his soul; and at length expired on the cross, and was laid in the grave, that he might bear every part of the sentence deserved by man's sin, and so finally save the whole multitude of his believing people.

20 ¶ And ^a Adam called his wife's name ^e Eve; because she was the mother ^b of all living.

21 Unto Adam also and to his wife did the LORD God ^c make coats of skins, and clothed them.

22 And the LORD God said, Behold, the man is become ^d as one of us, to know good and evil: and now lest he put forth his hand and take also of the

ii. 20. 23. v. 29
xvi. 11. xxix. 32.
—35. xxxv. 18.
Ex. ii. 10. 1 Sam.
i. 20. Matt. i. 21.
23.
• Heb. Charah.
• Acts xvii. 25.
c 7. 14. lxi. 10.
Rom. iii. 22.
2 Cor. v. 21.
d 5. i. 26. xi. 6. 7.
14. xix. 12. xviii.
12. 13.

tree of life, and ^f eat, and live for ever;

23 Therefore the LORD God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to ^g till the ground from whence he was taken.

24 So he drove out the man: and he placed at the ^h east of the garden of Eden ⁱ Cherubims, and ^k a flaming sword which turned every way, ^l to keep the way of the tree of life.

e ii. 9. Prov. iii. 18.
Rev. ii. 7. xxii.
2.
f Ps. xxii. 26. John
vi. 48—58.
g ii. 5. iv. 2. 12. ix.
20. Ec. v. 9.
h i. 8.
i Ex. xxv. 22.
1 Sam. iv. 4.
1 Kings vi. 25—
35. Ps. lxxx. 1.
xcix. 1. Ez. x. 2
&c.
k Num. xxii. 23.
Josh. v. 13. 1 Chr.
xxi. 16.
l John xiv. 6. Heb.
x. 18—22.

V. 20. Adam thankfully accepted the reprieve comprehended in the sentence, and looked forward to the increase of the human species with submissive satisfaction, notwithstanding its attendant miseries; because he by faith embraced the promise of that future "Seed of the woman, which should bruise the Serpent's head." And he called his wife Eve, which signifies Life, or Living; not only as she was to be the mother of the whole human race, but also of him especially who is the Author and Source of life eternal to all believers.

V. 21. Coats of skins.] Some conclude from this circumstance, that a considerable time had elapsed between the creation and the fall, and that the animals had already begun to increase, or none could have been spared to be slain: but this is mere conjecture; as are all other opinions on the subject, in which it has not pleased God to gratify our curiosity. It is extremely probable that some beasts, sacrificed by divine appointment, furnished the skins with which Adam and Eve were clothed: for, as they certainly had never slain any animals before the fall, and as we have no reason to suppose that any had died of themselves, it is hard to conceive in what other way these skins could be procured.—Innocent animals, slain in sacrifice, furnishing garments to fallen Adam and Eve, would very aptly typify the promised Seed, who suffered for our sins, that we might stand accepted before God in his righteousness: and the circumstance of the Lord God making these coats of skins, and clothing them, not only intimates the kind instruction and assistance which he afforded them, in accommodating themselves to their present situation; but represents to us, that the Saviour and salvation are of his providing; and that faith, which receives and puts on Christ, is his gift, and must be sought and received from him.

V. 22—24. The expression, "become as one of us," emphatically denotes the plurality of persons in the Deity. (Note, i. 26.)—The Lord was pleased to point out, in language, expressive both of pity and indignation, the sad change which had taken place, by thus alluding to the ambitious desire and vain expectation of being as gods, which had been excited in Adam and Eve, and to their woeful disappointment. As they had forfeited the blessing of immortality, it was very proper that they should be deprived of the sacramental pledge of it. But this by no means proves, that the fruit of the tree of life had any inherent efficacy of conferring immortality: it rather reflected upon their folly, who had been deluded to believe that the fruit of the tree of knowledge could of itself make them wise!—After this expulsion from Eden, some angelick guards, with a visible appearance, and the similitude of a flaming sword, forbade all entrance into it, or access to the tree of life. This indicated, that, according to the covenant sealed by the tree of life, the favour of God and eternal happiness were for ever unattainable by fallen man. (Marg. Ref.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—6.

In deducing practical instruction from this important part of Scripture, the only difficulty lies in selection; for every part of revealed religion is virtually comprised in it.—The subject calls upon us to lament and mourn; not so much for these primitive transgressors, as for ourselves, our children, and the whole human race, thus involved in one common ruin; but at the same time it reminds us to rejoice in God our Saviour, from whom come everlasting righteousness and felicity. It behoves us, however, "to rejoice with trembling," lest we be found among those who neglect this great salvation, through the deceitfulness of our hearts, and the snares of the world; and, above all, through the subtlety of our watchful, unwearied, and malicious enemies, the powers of darkness, and the agents in whom they lie concealed, who are still envious of our happiness, and covertly plotting our destruction. For, though the several steps be not always so discernible, there is the same concurrence and succession in all temptations, by which we are overcome, as there were in the case of Eve: and it contains a picture in miniature of all Satan's devices and victories in every age. Still he insinuates hard thoughts of God and his commandments; flatters men with hopes of impunity, in direct contradiction to the sacred oracles; enhances to the imagination the pleasure or advantage of sinful indulgence; pays court to pride and the sensual appetite: he still entangles men in error, seduces them into unbelief, hurries them on with precipitation, and prevails with them to "trust in their own hearts," and "lean to their own understandings," till he has effected his destructive purposes. Whenever therefore our pride is flattered, or discontent, ambition, affectation of independence, covetousness, or sensual lust is excited; when we are ready to promise ourselves impunity in sin, or advantage from it; when hard thoughts of God and his commandments, doubts about his veracity and faithfulness, or low apprehensions of the value of his favour and of spiritual blessings are suggested; and when we are urged forward in self-confidence, not brooking opposition, and not taking time for prayer, and consulting pious and prudent friends: then we may be sure the old Serpent is tempting us; then especially we are called to "watch and pray;" and our only safety consists in speedy flight, or vigorous resistance, being "stedfast in the faith."—We have also in Satan's conduct the first example of perjury, and a specimen of its horrible consequences: and

CHAP. IV.

Cain and Abel are born, 1, 2. Abel's offering is accepted, and Cain's rejected, 3—7. Cain murders Abel; is convicted, condemned, and banished: his subsequent behaviour, 8—17. His descendants to Lamech, the fifth in descent from him; with some particulars of Lamech and his children, 18—24. Serh is born, 25, 26.

AND Adam knew Eve his wife: and she conceived, and bare Cain, and said, ^a I have gotten a man from the LORD. ^a 25. v. 29. 1 John iii. 12.

perjurers would do well to contemplate, as in a glass, their own character, and learn whose children they are, and whose similitude they bear.—We should, however, not only be upon our guard against avowed enemies, or wicked people: we must also reject every temptation to unbelief or disobedience, though sent by the hands of the most lovely or beloved object on earth; recognizing the concealed tempter, and with indignation answering, "Get thee behind me, Satan; for it is written," &c. (Note, Matt. xvi. 21—23): for he still seduces us by those who possess our warmest affections; and he has in all ages employed men and women as tempters to each other, with immense success.—Transgressors can seldom be contented to sin alone; but they endeavour to draw others to imitate their own misconduct. Indeed, should our own senses or understandings seem to testify, that forbidden objects are good and desirable, we must reject that testimony, if we would be safe and happy. Nor let it be forgotten, that the desire of knowledge is as liable to exorbitancy, as the sensual appetites; and when not restricted by the word of God, it degenerates into bold curiosity, scepticism, and infidelity.

V. 7—13.

"The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God." "The knowledge which puffeth up," induces men to "praise themselves wise, till they become fools;" and either to say, "There is no God," or to speak and act as if there were none; or as if he were "altogether such an one as themselves."—The triumphs of successful wickedness are short, and often terminate in shame and anguish; and agreement in sin commonly produces bitter recriminations, and often implacable enmities.—When God shall "judge the world in righteousness," a summons even more dreadful, than that which called forth our affrighted progenitors, will constrain every impenitent sinner's attendance at his awful tribunal. Then "every mouth shall be stopped, and all the world will become guilty before God:" and whatever excuse shall be attempted, it will not only be silenced, but turned into an argument against the criminal, and an aggravation of his guilt and condemnation.—In the meanwhile, it is very useful for us frequently to propose to ourselves this question, "Where art thou?" In a state of safety and peace? or in the broad road to destruction? In the path of duty, or in some devious course?—But alas! Adam's posterity have ever shewn a prevalent disposition to copy his example, not only in transgression, but also in making such excuses, as ultimately throw the blame upon God himself. Self-justification forms a prominent feature in the human character, discernible from tender infancy to hoary hairs; not only among the moral and virtuous, but even down to the murderer, the thief, and the prostitute! To this there is no exception.—It is indeed artfully concealed in some; suppressed in others by that proficieny in vice, which, glorying in what is shameful, like Satan attempts no excuse; and subdued in others by the grace of the gospel, and the humbling influences of the Holy Spirit.

V. 14—19.

We should accustom ourselves to consider all the sorrows and troubles of life, however varied, and by whatever second causes brought upon us, as part of the sentence of a righteous Judge pronounced against our sinful race. (Notes, Ps. xc. 3—11.) Even death itself should not be spoken of as the debt of nature, but as the execution of the law of God upon a criminal. "So teach us, O LORD, to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom!"—On the other hand, all our comforts are undeserved mercies: and this should teach us, not only patience and contentment, but lively gratitude; especially as they are connected with the promise of a Saviour, and the hope of eternal life. Even the troubles, to which we are here exposed, death itself not excepted, as things are now circumstanced, are of a salutary tendency, if duly prepared for: and the wearisome labour to which man, as a criminal, is sentenced, and against which all the slothful of every rank continually rebel, prevents far greater evils than it occasions.—This transaction, at first sight, makes it manifest that we are capable of ruining, but not of saving ourselves; and that the contrivance and proposal of salvation go before, not only our deservings and endeavours, but even our desires and expectations. Had not therefore the Judge of men been previously revealed, as the Saviour of sinners, we must all have stood self-convicted and trembling before him, to hear the awful sentence of everlasting condemnation, without the possibility of escape.

V. 20—24.

Notwithstanding the light of revelation, and the hope of eternal life, the world, ever since the fall, has been full of darkness, sin, and misery: what then would it have been, had the Lord finally withdrawn from his apostate creatures? And if temporal suffering causes such doleful lamentations, what will be "the second death," "the wrath to come?" The believer, however, is taught to consider the former as fatherly chastisements, tokens of love, "light afflictions, and but for a moment;" and is enabled to submit to them, and to death itself, with cheerfulness, in the hope of everlasting glory: but the latter is reserved as the portion of the enemies of God. Hoping in the merits of Christ, and the blood of the everlasting covenant of which he is the faithful Surety, let us prostrate ourselves before God, in humiliation for sin, and gratitude for salvation; let us labour and suffer patiently, manfully resist temptation, and obey his commands with cheerfulness: not only expecting that "he will bruise Satan under our feet shortly;" but that he will in due time crush the Serpent's head completely, and fill the earth with truth and righteousness.

NOTES.

CHAP. IV. V. 1, 2. The word, translated gotten, means acquired or possessed, and generally implies a high valuation of the acquisition; it is thus used in two remarkable texts:

20 ¶ And ^a Adam called his wife's name ^e Eve; because she was the mother ^b of all living.

21 Unto Adam also and to his wife did the LORD God ^c make coats of skins, and clothed them.

22 And the LORD God said, Behold, the man is become ^d as one of us, to know good and evil: and now lest he put forth his hand and take also of the ^e tree of life, and ^f eat, and live for ever;

23 Therefore the LORD God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to ^g till the ground from whence he was taken.

24 So he drove out the man: and he placed at the ^h east of the garden of Eden ⁱ Cherubims, and ^k a flaming sword which turned every way, ^l to keep the way of the tree of life.

a il. 20. 23. v. 29
xvi. 11. xxix. 32.
—35. xxxv. 18.
Ex. ii. 10. 1 Sam.
i. 20. Matt. i. 21.
23.
b Heb. Cherah.
c Acts xvii. 26.
d 5. i. 26. xi. 6. 7.
1s. xix. 12. xviii.
12. 13.

e il. 9. Prov. iii. 18.
Rev. ii. 7. xxii.
2.
f Ps. xxii. 26. John
vi. 48—58.
g ii. 5. iv. 2. 12. ix.
20. Ec. v. 9.
h iv. 8.
i Ex. xxv. 22.
1 Sam. iv. 4.
1 Kings vi. 25—
35. Ps. lxxx. 1.
xcix. 1. Ez. x. 2
&c.
k Num. xxii. 23.
Josh. v. 13. 1 Chr.
xxi. 16.
l John xiv. 6. Heb.
x. 18—22.

V. 20. Adam thankfully accepted the reprieve comprehended in the sentence, and looked forward to the increase of the human species with submissive satisfaction, notwithstanding its attendant miseries; because he by faith embraced the promise of that future "Seed of the woman, which should bruise the Serpent's head." And he called his wife Eve, which signifies Life, or Living; not only as she was to be the mother of the whole human race, but also of him especially who is the Author and Source of life eternal to all believers.

V. 21. Coats of skins.] Some conclude from this circumstance, that a considerable time had elapsed between the creation and the fall, and that the animals had already begun to increase, or none could have been spared to be slain: but this is mere conjecture; as are all other opinions on the subject, in which it has not pleased God to gratify our curiosity. It is extremely probable that some beasts, sacrificed by divine appointment, furnished the skins with which Adam and Eve were clothed: for, as they certainly had never slain any animals before the fall, and as we have no reason to suppose that any had died of themselves, it is hard to conceive in what other way these skins could be procured.—Innocent animals, slain in sacrifice, furnishing garments to fallen Adam and Eve, would very aptly typify the promised Seed, who suffered for our sins, that we might stand accepted before God in his righteousness: and the circumstance of the Lord God making these coats of skins, and clothing them, not only intimates the kind instruction and assistance which he afforded them, in accommodating themselves to their present situation; but represents to us, that the Saviour and salvation are of his providing; and that faith, which receives and puts on Christ, is his gift, and must be sought and received from him.

V. 22—24. The expression, "become as one of us," emphatically denotes the plurality of persons in the Deity. (Note, i. 26.)—The Lord was pleased to point out, in language, expressive both of pity and indignation, the sad change which had taken place, by thus alluding to the ambitious desire and vain expectation of being as gods, which had been excited in Adam and Eve, and to their woeful disappointment. As they had forfeited the blessing of immortality, it was very proper that they should be deprived of the sacramental pledge of it. But this by no means proves, that the fruit of the tree of life had any inherent efficacy of conferring immortality: it rather reflected upon their folly, who had been deluded to believe that the fruit of the tree of knowledge could of itself make them wise!—After this expulsion from Eden, some angelick guards, with a visible appearance, and the similitude of a flaming sword, forbad all entrance into it, or access to the tree of life. This intiated, that, according to the covenant sealed by the tree of life, the favour of God and eternal happiness were for ever unattainable by fallen man. (Marg. Ref.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—6.

In deducing practical instruction from this important part of Scripture, the only difficulty lies in selection; for every part of revealed religion is virtually comprised in it.—The subject calls upon us to lament and mourn; not so much for these primitive transgressors, as for ourselves, our children, and the whole human race, thus involved in one common ruin; but at the same time it reminds us to rejoice in God our Saviour, from whom come everlasting righteousness and felicity. It behoves us, however, "to rejoice with trembling," lest we be found among those who neglect this great salvation, through the deceitfulness of our hearts, and the snares of the world; and, above all, through the subtlety of our watchful, unwearied, and malicious enemies, the powers of darkness, and the agents in whom they lie concealed, who are still envious of our happiness, and covertly plotting our destruction. For, though the several steps be not always so discernible, there is the same concurrence and succession in all temptations, by which we are overcome, as there were in the case of Eve: and it contains a picture in miniature of all Satan's devices and victories in every age. Still he insinuates hard thoughts of God and his commandments; flatters men with hopes of impunity, in direct contradiction to the sacred oracles; enhances to the imagination the pleasure or advantage of sinful indulgence; pays court to pride and the sensual appetite: he still entangles men in error, seduces them into unbelief, hurries them on with precipitation, and prevails with them to "trust in their own hearts," and "lean to their own understandings," till he has effected his destructive purposes. Whenever therefore our pride is flattered, or discontent, ambition, affectation of independence, covetousness, or sensual lust is excited; when we are ready to promise ourselves impunity in sin, or advantage from it; when hard thoughts of God and his commandments, doubts about his veracity and faithfulness, or low apprehensions of the value of his favour and of spiritual blessings are suggested; and when we are urged forward in self-confidence, not brooking opposition, and not taking time for prayer, and consulting pious and prudent friends: then we may be sure the old Serpent is tempting us; then especially we are called to "watch and pray;" and our only safety consists in speedy flight, or vigorous resistance, being "stedfast in the faith."—We have also in Satan's conduct the first example of perjury, and a specimen of its horrible consequences: and

CHAP. IV.

Cain and Abel are born, 1, 2. Abel's offering is accepted, and Cain's rejected, 3—7. Cain murders Abel; is convicted, condemned, and banished: his subsequent behaviour, 8—17. His descendants to Lamech, the fifth in descent from him; with some particulars of Lamech and his children, 18—24. Serh is born, 25, 26.

AND Adam knew Eve his wife: and she conceived, and bare Cain, and said, ^{a 25. v. 29. 1 John iii. 12.} "I have gotten a man from the LORD."

perjurers would do well to contemplate, as in a glass, their own character, and learn whose children they are, and whose similitude they bear.—We should, however, not only be upon our guard against avowed enemies, or wicked people: we must also reject every temptation to unbelief or disobedience, though sent by the hands of the most lovely or beloved object on earth; recognizing the concealed tempter, and with indignation answering, "Get thee behind me, Satan; for it is written," &c. (Note, Matt. xvi. 21—23): for he still seduces us by those who possess our warmest affections; and he has in all ages employed men and women as tempters to each other, with immense success.—Transgressors can seldom be contented to sin alone; but they endeavour to draw others to imitate their own misconduct. Indeed, should our own senses or understandings seem to testify, that forbidden objects are good and desirable, we must reject that testimony, if we would be safe and happy. Nor let it be forgotten, that the desire of knowledge is as liable to exorbitancy, as the sensual appetites; and when not restricted by the word of God, it degenerates into bold curiosity, scepticism, and infidelity.

V. 7—13.

"The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God." "The knowledge which puffeth up," induces men to "profess themselves wise, till they become fools;" and either to say, "There is no God," or to speak and act as if there were none; or as if he were "altogether such an one as themselves."—The triumphs of successful wickedness are short, and often terminate in shame and anguish; and agreement in sin commonly produces bitter recriminations, and often implacable enmities.—When God shall "judge the world in righteousness," a summons even more dreadful, than that which called forth our affrighted progenitors, will constrain every impenitent sinner's attendance at his awful tribunal. Then "every mouth shall be stopped, and all the world will become guilty before God:" and whatever excuse shall be attempted, it will not only be silenced, but turned into an argument against the criminal, and an aggravation of his guilt and condemnation.—In the meanwhile, it is very useful for us frequently to propose to ourselves this question, "Where art thou?" In a state of safety and peace? or in the broad road to destruction? In the path of duty, or in some devious course?—But alas! Adam's posterity have ever shewn a prevalent disposition to copy his example, not only in transgression, but also in making such excuses, as ultimately throw the blame upon God himself. Self-justification forms a prominent feature in the human character, discernible from tender infancy to hoary hairs; not only among the moral and virtuous, but even down to the murderer, the thief, and the prostitute! To this there is no exception.—It is indeed artfully concealed in some; suppressed in others by that proficiency in vice, which, glorying in what is shameful, like Satan attempts no excuse; and subdued in others by the grace of the gospel, and the humbling influences of the Holy Spirit.

V. 14—19.

We should accustom ourselves to consider all the sorrows and troubles of life, however varied, and by whatever second causes brought upon us, as part of the sentence of a righteous Judge pronounced against our sinful race. (Notes, Ps. xc. 3—11.) Even death itself should not be spoken of as the debt of nature, but as the execution of the law of God upon a criminal. "So teach us, O LORD, to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom!"—On the other hand, all our comforts are undeserved mercies: and this should teach us, not only patience and contentment, but lively gratitude; especially as they are connected with the promise of a Saviour, and the hope of eternal life. Even the troubles, to which we are here exposed, death itself not excepted, as things are now circumstanced, are of a salutary tendency, if duly prepared for: and the wearisome labour to which man, as a criminal, is sentenced, and against which all the slothful of every rank continually rebel, prevents far greater evils than it occasions.—This transaction, at first sight, makes it manifest that we are capable of ruining, but not of saving ourselves; and that the contrivance and proposal of salvation go before, not only our deservings and endeavours, but even our desires and expectations. Had not therefore the Judge of men been previously revealed, as the Saviour of sinners, we must all have stood self-convicted and trembling before him, to hear the awful sentence of everlasting condemnation, without the possibility of escape.

V. 20—24.

Notwithstanding the light of revelation, and the hope of eternal life, the world, ever since the fall, has been full of darkness, sin, and misery: what then would it have been, had the Lord finally withdrawn from his apostate creatures? And if temporal suffering causes such doleful lamentations, what will be "the second death," "the wrath to come?" The believer, however, is taught to consider the former as fatherly chastisements, tokens of love, "light afflictions, and but for a moment;" and is enabled to submit to them, and to death itself, with cheerfulness, in the hope of everlasting glory: but the latter is reserved as the portion of the enemies of God. Hoping in the merits of Christ, and the blood of the everlasting covenant of which he is the faithful Surety, let us prostrate ourselves before God, in humiliation for sin, and gratitude for salvation; let us labour and suffer patiently, manfully resist temptation, and obey his commands with cheerfulness: not only expecting that "he will bruise Satan under our feet shortly;" but that he will in due time crush the Serpent's head completely, and fill the earth with truth and righteousness.

NOTES.

CHAP. IV. V. 1, 2. The word, translated gotten, means acquired or possessed, and generally implies a high valuation of the acquisition; it is thus used in two remarkable texts:

• Heb. Hebel.
 b xxx. 24-31.
 xvi. 32-34.
 xvi. 3. Ex. iii.
 1. Ps. lxxviii. 70
 -72. Am. vii. 15.
 † Heb. fedecr.
 c iii. 23. ix. 20.
 ‡ Heb. at the end of days. 1 Kings
 xvii. 7. Neh. xiii 6. Marg.
 d Lev. ii. 1-11.
 Num. xviii. 12.
 e Ex. xiii. 12. Num.
 xviii. 17. Prov.
 iii. 9. Heb. ix.
 22. 1 Pet. i. 19.
 20. Rev. xiii. 8.
 † Heb. sheep, or,
goats.
 f xv. 17. Lev. ix.
 24. Num. xvi.
 35. Judg. vi. 21.
 1 Kings xviii. 24.
 38. 1 Chr. xxi.
 26. 2 Chr. vii. 1.
 Ps. xx. 3. Marg.
 g Num. xvi. 15. h
 Heb. xi. 4.
 h xxxi. 2. 5. Job
 v. 2. Luke xv.
 28-30. Acts xiii. 45

2 And she again bare his brother
 • Abel. ^b And Abel was [†] a keeper of sheep, but Cain was a ^c tiller of the ground.

3 And [‡] in process of time it came to pass, that Cain brought of ^d the fruit of the ground an offering unto the Lord.

4 And Abel, he also brought of ^e the firstlings of his ^f flock, and of the fat thereof. And the Lord ^g had respect unto Abel, and to his offering :

5 But ^h unto Cain and to his offering he had not respect. And Cain was very wroth, and his countenance fell.

6 And the Lord said unto Cain,

Why art thou wroth? and why is thy countenance fallen?

7 If ^k thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted? and if thou doest not well, ^l sin lieth at the door. And ^m unto thee shall be his desire, and thou shalt rule over him.

8 And Cain ⁿ talked with Abel his brother: and it came to pass when they were in the field, that ^o Cain rose up against Abel his brother, and slew him.

9 ¶ And the Lord said unto Cain, Where is Abel thy brother? And he said, ^p I know not: Am I my brother's keeper?

1 Chr. xiii. 11-
 13. 1c. 1. 18. Jer.
 ii. 8. 31. Jon. iv.
 1-4. 8-11. Mic.
 vi. 9-11. Matt.
 xx. 15. Luke xv.
 31. 32.
 Ec. viii. 12. 13.
 1a. iii. 10. 11.
 Acts x. 35. Rom.
 ii. 7-10.
 Or, have the ex- cellency.
 1 8-13. Rom. vi.
 8, 9. Jam. i. 15.
 * Or, subject unto thee. iii. 16. Marg.
 m 2 Sam. iii. 27.
 xiii. 26-28. xx.
 9, 10. Nch. vi. 2.
 Ps. lv. 21. Prov.
 xxvi. 24-26.
 Luke xxii. 48.
 n 2 Sam. xiv. 6.
 Matt. xxiii. 35.
 Luke xi. 81.
 1 John iii. 12-
 15. Jude 11.
 o iii. 9-11.
 p xxxvii. 32. Job
 xxii. 13, 14. Ps.
 x. 13. 14. John
 viii. 44. Acts v. 4-9

Deut. xxxii. 6. Prov. viii. 22. Heb. Probably therefore Eve concluded that this was the promised Seed; and indeed some think the words may be rendered, "I have acquired a MAN, even JEHOVAH." If so, the subsequent events must have been a most distressing disappointment. On the other hand the name given to Abel (which signifies Vanity) seems to imply, that far inferior expectations were formed respecting him. And if Cain was early taught to consider himself, as entitled by his birth-right to the special favour and blessing of God, it might greatly tend to nourish in him that proud, malignant, and envious spirit, which produced the fatal consequences recorded in this chapter.

V. 3-5. This early use of sacrifices confirms the supposition, that the appointment of them formed a part of the gracious revelation, made to Adam after his transgression.—It is indeed exceedingly difficult, in any other way, to account for the use of altars and sacrifices, in appeasing the anger of the offended Deity; which has prevailed almost in all ages and nations, and which does not appear to have its origin from any deductions of human reason. But if God commanded Adam, after the fall, to shed the blood of innocent animals, and to consume part or the whole of their bodies by fire; representing the punishment merited by sin, in death and after death, and prefiguring the sufferings of Christ; then the whole is natural: the original tradition was remembered, and the method of expiation practised, long after the meaning of it was obscured or forgotten.—The apostle informs us that, "by faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain." (Note, Heb. xi. 4.) Now Cain evidently had some kind of faith in God, his Creator and providential Benefactor; and he brought an offering as an outward acknowledgment of his obligations, and expression of his gratitude: but he did not believe in the promised Saviour, nor come as a sinner to supplicate mercy through him; and therefore he did not bring the sacrifices which prefigured the atonement. Thus he manifested an impenitent and unbelieving heart, and virtually cleaved to the violated covenant of works; and therefore he and his offering were rejected. But Abel came in faith, as a sinner, according to the appointment of God; his offering was presented in sincerity, and was expressive of humility and believing obedience: and, as he sought the mercy of the new covenant, through the promised Seed, he was graciously accepted; and his sacrifice was distinguished by some manifest token of divine approbation. Probably, it was consumed by fire from heaven; which intimated, that deserved vengeance, consuming the sacrifice, made way for the exercise of mercy to the offender. (Marg. Ref. f.)

—In all ages there have been two such descriptions of worshippers; namely, proud despisers of salvation by faith in the blood of Christ, who have attempted to please God by their own devices; and humble believers, who have found acceptance in his appointed way, and patiently endured the envy, hatred, and persecution to which this exposed them. Cain however, instead of humbly enquiring the cause of his rejection, indulged desponding grief, and malignant resentment against Abel, and even rebellion and enmity against God himself; which tormenting passions were (as they are wont to be,) strongly marked on his sullen, downcast countenance.

V. 6, 7. Though Cain manifested a most rebellious spirit, yet the Lord condescended to expostulate with him, and shewed that he had no cause of dissatisfaction; that the hypocrisy of his heart, and the unwarranted method of his approach, had indeed deservedly excluded him from his gracious approbation; but that, if he came in another temper, and in the prescribed way, he too would be accepted. He further warned him, that "sin lay at the door," ready to burst in upon him; for impenitence and the indulgence of malignant passions would open the way to the commission of greater crimes, which would expose him to still deeper condemnation: or the guilt of his unpardoned, because unexpiated crimes, lay at the door ready to seize on him, as a lion on his prey. Neither had Cain any cause for discontent or resentment; seeing Abel still loved him, and was ready to obey him, as his elder brother, even as he had before done.—It is not said in what way the Lord spake to Cain: but it is probable, that it was by some mild and familiar appearance in human form, as in many subsequent instances it was undeniably the case: for had it been with a display of terrific glory, as some suppose, it can hardly be conceived, that he would have dared to answer as he afterwards did.

V. 8. Cain concealed his murderous hatred under the mask of cordial affection, and entered into familiar converse with his brother; till he had drawn him into a place of privacy, where he took the opportunity of slaying him.

V. 9. The Lord soon called the murderer to account for q iii. 13. Josh. vii. 19. Ps. i. 21. Heb. bloods. xviii. 20. Ex. iii. 7. Job xxxi. 35. 39. Ps. ix. 12. Is. v. 7. Heb. xii. 24. Jam. v. 4. Rev. vi. 10. iii. 14. Deut. xxvii. 24. xxviii. 15—20. xxxi. 19—21. Gal. iii. 10. Job xvi. 18. xxxi. 38—40. Is. xxvi. 21. Rev. xii. 16. iii. 17. 18. Lev. xxvi. 20. Deut. xxviii. 23, 24. xiv. Lev. xxvi. 36. Deut. xxviii. 65, 66. Ps. cix. 10. Jer. xx. 3, 4. Hos. ix. 17. Or, Mine iniquity is greater than y that it may be forgiven. y Rev. xvi. 9. 11. 21. z Prov. xiv. 32. Is. viii. 22. Hos. xiii. 3. a 16. Job xxi. 14. 15. Ps. li. 11—14. cxliiii. 7. Matt. xxv. 41. 45. 2 Thes. i. 9.

10 And he said, ^a What hast thou done? the voice of thy brother's ^b blood crieth unto me from the ground.

11 And now art thou ^c cursed from the earth, which hath ^d opened her mouth to receive thy brother's blood from thy hand.

12 When thou tillest the ground, ^e it shall not henceforth yield unto thee her strength. ^f A fugitive and a vagabond shalt thou be on the earth.

13 And Cain said unto the LORD, ^g My punishment is greater than I can bear.

14 Behold, thou hast ^h driven me out this day from the face of the earth: and ⁱ from thy face shall I be hid, and I shall be a fugitive and a vagabond in the earth, and it shall come to pass, ^b that every one that findeth me shall slay me.

15 And the LORD said unto him, ^c Therefore whosoever slayeth Cain, vengeance shall be taken on him ^d sevenfold. And the LORD set ^e a mark upon Cain, lest any finding him should kill him.

16 ¶ And Cain ^f went out from the presence of the LORD, and dwelt in the land of Nod, on the east of Eden.

17 And Cain knew his wife, and she conceived and bare ^g Enoch: ^h and he builded a city, and called ⁱ the name of the city after the name of his son Enoch.

his conduct, (as he had formerly done Adam and Eve;) enquiring of him, "Where his brother Abel was?" and his answer accorded to the idea before suggested of his pride and unbelief. He denied that he knew where Abel was, as if he could conceal his crime from God himself; and he insolently demanded, whether he was his brother's keeper! —I know not whether we are to consider this as a denial of the omniscience of God, as a rejection of his authority, or as a defiance of his omnipotence; but it plainly shews that sin had hardened Cain's heart and blinded his understanding.

V. 10—12. Thus God called upon Cain to reflect on the horrid nature and aggravated circumstances of his crime, and the vengeance due to him, in order to awaken his remorse and alarm his fears.—Undeserved hatred and proud revenge producing premeditated murder, while men were comparatively few in number, and probably none had yet died; the murder of a brother, in cruel disregard to their common parents, for no other cause than the excellency of his character, and the envy excited by the favour which God had shown him; a malignant hatred of holiness, daring contempt of the Lord himself, and determined enmity to him; were united in this one crime. (Note, 1 John iii. 11, 12.)—The justice and holiness of the great Governor of the universe, render it so proper for him to punish offenders, that they who suffer flagrant wrong, are often spoken of in Scripture, as loudly calling upon him to execute vengeance on their injurers. And, as he witnesses the secret crimes which elude human justice; so those crimes themselves are represented, as demanding the punishment of the offenders from the Judge of all, "to whom vengeance belongs." Thus Abel's blood called, as with a loud voice, to the Lord to punish the murderer: and Cain's enormous crime exposed him to so awful and deserved a curse, that the very elements were ready to rise up in arms against him, as the Creator's instruments of vengeance; and the earth would withhold her wonted increase, because he had forced her to drink the blood of righteous Abel.—There is peculiar majesty and energy in thus personifying the inanimate creatures, and representing them as uniting against Cain.—In consequence of his crime, he would also be dreaded and detested, and the sight of him would become hateful even to his parents, Adam and Eve: so that he would be compelled to leave their society, and to wander as a vagabond in distant parts, filled with anguish and made a terror to himself. (ΣΤΕΝΩΝ ΚΑΙ ΤΡΕΜΩΝ. Groaning and trembling. Sept.)

Cursed from the earth, &c. (11) Or, "more cursed than the ground," &c.

V. 13—15. Either Cain proudly complained of the severity, with which he was to be punished; or, as the words more naturally signify, he stated that his crime was too great to be pardoned. Thus he still manifested an unhumiliated, impenitent, unbelieving heart. He considered himself as an out-law, about to be left destitute of God's providential protection, and driven to a distance from his worshippers and ordinances, to spend his days in groans and terrors, till some person should meet with him and kill him. 'Behold here a finished picture of impenitent misery; what a contrast to the fifty-first Psalm!' Fuller.—But the Lord determined that Cain should live, a monument and evidence of his abhorrence of murder; so that he would severely punish any one who should slay him.—It is in vain to enquire about the mark set upon Cain: it was doubtless an indelible brand of infamy, which would make him known to all who saw him.—Adam and Eve had very many more children than are mentioned in this brief narrative; which was principally intended to record a few important particulars, and to trace the history, from the beginning to the time of Moses. And if, as it is generally thought, Abel was murdered but a short time before the birth of Seth: the human race might be exceedingly increased in the space of a hundred and thirty years.

V. 16, 17. Cain seems entirely to have left the ordinances of God, the society of his worshippers, and the places especially favoured with the tokens of his presence. This might be at first by compulsion, in consequence of the curse denounced on him; but, continuing impenitent, he probably soon became openly irreligious, or perhaps an idolater. Nod signifies a vagabond, or wanderer: the land of the vagabonds.—The wife of Cain is the first woman mentioned in this history, Eve only excepted. The sons and daughters of Adam and Eve must have intermarried. It is probable that Cain had been married, and had children, long before these events; and that his descendants principally helped him to build a city, and formed the majority of its inhabitants.—Thus he attempted to divert his mind from serious reflections and remorse of conscience; or to attach to himself adherents, 18 And unto Enoch was born Irad: and Irad begat Mehujael: and Mehujael begat Methusael: and Methusael begat Lamech.

19 And Lamech took unto him two wives: the name of the one was Adah, and the name of the other Zillah.

20 And Adah bare Jabal: he was the father of such as dwell in tents, and of such as have cattle.

21 And his brother's name was Jubal: he was the father of all such as handle the harp and organ.

22 And Zillah, she also bare Tubalcain, an instructor of every artificer in brass and iron: and the sister of Tubalcain was Naamah.

23 ¶ And Lamech said unto his wives, Adah and Zillah, Hear my voice, ye wives of Lamech, hearken unto my speech: for I have slain a man to my wounding, and a young man to my hurt.

24 If Cain shall be avenged seven-fold, truly Lamech seventy and seven-fold.

25 ¶ And Adam knew his wife again, and she bare a son, and called his name Seth: For God, said she, hath appointed me another seed instead of Abel, whom Cain slew.

26 And to Seth, to him also there was born a son; and he called his name Enos: then began men to call upon the name of the Lord.

• Heb. Lemech
i ii. 24. Matt. xix. 4-6. 8.

k 21. 1 Chr. ii. 50
-52. iv. 4, 5.
Rom. iv. 11, 12.
1 2. xxv. 27. Jer.
xxxv. 9, 10. Heb.
xi 9.

zu xxxi. 27. Job
xxi. 12. Is. v. 12.
Am. vi. 5.

† Heb. whether.
n Ex. xxv. 3. Num.
xxxii. 22. Deut.
viii. 9. xxxiii. 25.
2 Chr. ii. 7.

o Num. xxiii. 18.
Judg. ix. 7.

Or, I would slay a man in my wound, &c.
Or, in my hurt.

p 15. Matt. xviii. 22.

q v. 3, 4. 1 Chr. i.

1. Luke iii. 38.

r Heb. Sheth.

r 1-3. 8. 10, 11.

B. C. 3769.

u v. 6-8.

† Heb. Enosh.

† Or, call themselves by the name of the LORD.

xxvi. 17, 18. Is.

xlii. 5. xlviii. 1.

lxiii. 19. Jer.

xxiii. 16. Zeph.

iii. 9. Acts xi.

26. Eph. iii. 14.

15.

and to get a name in one way, as he had forfeited his reputation in another.

V. 18—22. The sacred historian cursorily mentions a few of Cain's descendants; but not in that particular manner, in which he afterwards gives a genealogy of the line of Seth to Noah.—Lamech is the first on record, who deviated from the original institution of marriage, by taking more than one wife: and this did not occur till the earth was considerably replenished with inhabitants. Some of his sons became remarkable, as the inventors of useful and ingenious arts: but no intimation is given that any of them were pious persons. (Marg. Ref.)

Brass and iron.] This early use of metals, seems to imply, that some instructions in this respect had been given to Adam from God.

V. 23, 24. Lamech appears to have been either suspicious of his wives, or desirous of obviating their apprehensions for his safety. It seems plain that he was conscious of having many enemies, whose resentment he had provoked by injuries of one kind or other: whether therefore he spake affirmatively, and acknowledged that he had killed a man, though not his own brother; or interrogatively, "Have I killed a man to my hurt?" he evidently drew a comparison betwixt himself and his ancestor Cain, and flattered himself that he was much less criminal: while he seems to have abused the patience of God, in sparing Cain, into an encouragement to himself to expect impunity in sin, and to defy the vengeance of his adversaries.

V. 25. Perhaps Eve had some intimation, that this son was to be the progenitor of the promised Seed. The mention of Abel, in this connexion, was an indication of her piety, as valuing pious Abel above all her children.

V. 26. To call upon, &c.] Or, "to call themselves by the name of the Lord:" (Marg.) that is, some persons, by an open profession of true religion, began to protest against the prevailing impiety and wickedness of the world around them; to separate from the society of idolaters and irreligious persons; and to call on the Lord as his worshippers.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—7.

The promises of God will surely be accomplished; but the appointed season must be waited for, and hasty expectations often end in bitter disappointments. An instance of worship accepted by our holy God, from any of our fallen race, should be a joyful and welcome sight to sinners: but his acceptance can only be obtained, in the way of his appointment; and unbelief, pride, and hypocrisy, are as ruinous as open ungodliness.—When we fail of success in our undertakings, or comfort in religious exercises; instead of yielding to discontent and envy, we should diligently search out and remove the sinful cause; for thus we may afterwards succeed: but if we "give place to the devil," by harbouring envy and resentment, we know not whither we may be hurried.—What fatal effects do we here behold of Adam's transgression! What can we discern in Cain of the divine image? Was he "very good?" On the contrary do not pride, anger, envy, lies, malice, murder, enmity against God, and final apostasy, the very image of Satan, mark his whole character? for as divine truth, embraced in faith, is the appointed means of our recovering, "from glory to glory," the image of God; so Satan's lies, when believed, produce his diabolical nature in the soul.

V. 8—26.

What varied anguish must have tortured the hearts of our first parents at the events here recorded! But, "Abel being dead, yet speaketh:" not only proclaiming the heinousness of murder, and warning us resolutely to suppress the first emotions of wrath; but also teaching us, that the believer's happiness is not in this world; that persecution must be expected by the righteous, and that there is a future state and an eternal recompence to be enjoyed by them, through faith in Christ and his atoning sacrifice.—When "Cain, who was of that wicked one, slew his brother, because his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous;" then, in consequence of the enmity put betwixt the Seed of the woman and the seed of the serpent, the war broke out, which, in one way or another, hath been waged ever since: and Cain may be considered as the father, the patron, and the archetype of proud infidels, Pharisees, formal worshippers, and bloody persecutors, of every age and nation, from the beginning to the end of the world. In this war we are all concerned: for our Captain hath de-

CHAP. V.

A repeated account of Adam's creation, 1, 2. The birth of Seth, 3. The age and death of Adam, 4, 5; Seth, 6—8; Enos, 9—11; Cainan, 12—14; Mahalaleel, 15—17; and Jared, 18—20. Enoch walks with God, and is translated, 21—24. The age and death of Methuselah, 25—27; and of Lamech, 28—31. An account of Noah, and his sons, 32.

a il. 4. Matt. i. 1. Luke iii. 36—38.

b l. 26, 27. Eph. iv. 24. Col. iii. 10.

c ii. 15. Marg. Acts xvii. 26.

d Job xiv. 4. xv. 14—16. xxv. 4. Ps. li. 5. Luke i. 35. John iii. 6. Rom. v. 12. Eph. ii. 3. e iv. 25. f i Chr. i. 1—3. Luke iii. 37, 38.

g 7, 10, 13, 19, 22, 25, 30, 1. 23. ix. 7.

THIS is the ^abook of the generations of Adam: in the day that God created man, ^bin the likeness of God made he him:

2 Male and female created he them; and blessed them, and called ^ctheir name Adam, in the day when they were created.

3 And Adam lived an hundred and thirty years, and begat ^da son ^ein his own likeness, after his image; and ^fcalled his name Seth.

4 And ^fthe days of Adam after he had begotten Seth were eight hundred years: and ^ghe begat sons and daughters:

5 And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years: ^hand he died.

h iii. 19. Heb. ix. 27. B. C. 3074.

6 And Seth lived an hundred and five years, and begat Enos:

7 And Seth lived after he begat Enos eight hundred and seven years, and begat sons and daughters:

8 And all the days of Seth were nine hundred and twelve years: and he died.

B. C. 2962.

9 And Enos lived ninety years, and begat ⁱCainan:

ⁱ Heb. Kenan. B. C. 3079.

10 And Enos lived after he begat Cainan eight hundred and fifteen years, and begat sons and daughters:

11 And all the days of Enos were nine hundred and five years: and he died.

B. C. 2854.

12 And Cainan lived seventy years, and begat Mahalaleel.

B. C. 3009.

13 And Cainan lived after he begat Mahalaleel eight hundred and forty years, and begat sons and daughters:

14 And all the days of Cainan were nine hundred and ten years: and he died.

B. C. 2769.

clared, "He that is not with me, is against me." Under his banners therefore let us enlist, and not be fearful and unbelieving, but take up our cross and follow him; and let us earnestly and decidedly, yet meekly, support the cause of truth and righteousness against Satan and his servants: and should we meet with persecution even unto death, he will certainly give us the crown of everlasting life. (Rev. iii. 21.) These are "the better things," which the blood of Jesus speaketh, than did that of Abel, who was a type of him, both in the righteousness of his life and in the manner of his death: but Abel's blood called for vengeance on him who shed it; while the blood of Christ pleads, before the throne, for pardon and peace, grace and glory, to those whose sins procured his death.—But what will it avail the sinner, to deny or excuse his crimes? to impeach or blaspheme the justice of his Maker? or impiously to spend the space of his long-suffering in worldly projects, or in making himself eminent among his fellow-creatures, or terrible to them? For "the wrath of God abideth on him:" this will poison all his enjoyments; and heaven, earth, and hell, will speedily combine, as it were, in effecting his everlasting destruction. Indeed, worldly employments often help men to forget their danger and misery: and, as the first city, that is mentioned in history, was built by Cain, and his posterity were the inventors of many useful arts; so ungodly men still frequently excel, in natural ingenuity and skill, those who attend to "the one thing needful;" who, however, "choose the good part, which shall never be taken from them."

NOTES.

CHAP. V. V. 1, 2. This chapter is a brief history of the posterity of Adam, in that line from which all the human race since the flood is descended: and of them alone; for the immense numbers, which sprang from the other branches of the families, in each generation, are barely mentioned. The former chapters seem also referred to, as the authentick records of the original of the world, and of the human race.—ADAM was the name not only of the first man, but also of the species: it is supposed to have been derived from the red colour of the earth, out of which his body was formed.

V. 3. The distinction between Adam "created in the likeness of God," and Seth begotten in the likeness of Adam after the fall, is very remarkable.—It is generally allowed that Adam and Eve were personally pardoned, and recovered to holiness: but Adam was no longer the representative of his posterity, as he was when he transgressed the covenant; thus he communicated to them that nature which he had as a sinner, not the new nature which he had as a believer.—Seth also seems to have been a godly person; not as begotten by Adam, but as "born of the Spirit:" and this seems to have been noted in respect of him, lest Cain's wickedness should be ascribed to other causes, and Abel's righteousness to the goodness of his natural disposition, and not to the grace of God. But indeed the character and conduct of all Seth's posterity, (Christ alone excepted,) plainly testify what that image was in which he was begotten.

V. 4—20. The Greek translation of the Bible, called the Septuagint, varies from our version, (which was made from the Hebrew,) both in this genealogy, and in that which follows. (xi. 10—26.) In particular, by the addition of a hundred years to the age of Adam, and of six of these Patriarchs, before their sons here mentioned were born, and deducting them from the subsequent part of their lives, making the sum total the same. Thus the space between the creation and the deluge is made seven hundred years more than in our account: and by a similar addition, with 15 And Mahalaleel lived sixty and five years, and begat Jared:

C. 3541

Heb. Jered

16 And Mahalaleel lived after he begat * Jared eight hundred and thirty years, and begat sons and daughters:

17 And all the days of Mahalaleel were eight hundred ninety and five years: and he died.

B. C. 2714.

B. C. 3382

i iv. 17. I Chr. i. 3. Enoch. Luke iii. 37.

B. C. 2582

B. C. 3317.

k vi 9. xvii 1. xxiv. 40. xlviii. 15. Lev. xxvi. 12. Deut. xlii. 4. Ps. cxvi. 9. Cant. i. 4. Am. iii. 3. Mic. iv. 5. vi. 8. Mal. ii. 6. Luke i. 6. Acts ix. 31. 2 Cor. vi. 16. Col. i. 10. I The. ii. 12. I John i. 7.

18 And Jared lived an hundred sixty and two years, and he begat ¹ Enoch.

19 And Jared lived after he begat Enoch eight hundred years, and begat sons and daughters.

20 And all the days of Jared were nine hundred sixty and two years: and he died.

21 And Enoch lived sixty and five years, and begat Methuselah.

22 And Enoch ^k walked with God after he begat Methuselah three hundred years, and begat sons and daughters.

23 And all the days of Enoch were three hundred sixty and five years.

24 And Enoch walked with God, and he was not: ¹ for God took him.

1 2 Kings ii. 11. Heb. xi. 5, 6 Jude 14, 15.

25 And Methuselah lived an hundred eighty and seven years, and begat [†] Lamech.

† Heb. Lamech. lv. 18. marg.

26 And Methuselah lived after he begat Lamech seven hundred eighty and two years, and begat sons and daughters.

27 And all the days of Methuselah were nine hundred sixty and nine years: and he died.

B. C. 2348.

28 And Lamech lived an hundred eighty and two years, and begat a son.

other variations, the space between the deluge and the birth of Abraham, is made almost nine hundred years more. But the original Hebrew is best entitled to our confidence: and the difference may be ascribed to some mistakes in the numeral letters; or rather, perhaps, to a vanity in the translators, which has been common in many nations, of ascribing a very remote antiquity to the commencement of their history.—The individuals here mentioned might not be the first-born, as Seth was not the eldest son of Adam; but the genealogy was continued through them, not only from Adam to Noah, but afterwards even to Christ, “the second Adam, the Lord from heaven.”

V. 21—24. “Walking with God,” is a figurative description of the intimate communion, which subsists between a merciful God and true believers. “Can two walk together except they be agreed?” Amos iii. 3. Without coincidence in sentiment, judgment, and disposition, there can be no cordial union nor harmony. But man is naturally prone to those things which God abhors and forbids, and averse from those which he loves and commands. Man’s understanding is darkened, his judgment perverted, his affections depraved, and his taste vitiated by sin; so that, in almost every thing, his views, his choice, his desires, and pursuits, are the reverse of those which the Scripture requires. Thus he is induced to walk contrary to God, to contract guilt, and merit condemnation. A sinner’s walk with God, therefore, commences with the change of his judgment and disposition by divine grace. Then he begins to repent of his sins, to despise the world in comparison of the favour of God, to “hunger and thirst after righteousness,” to seek forgiveness and acceptance in the way of God’s appointment, and to devote himself to his love and service, and the pursuit of holiness. Having been thus reconciled to God, he walks with him by habitual repentance, and “faith in our Lord Jesus Christ;” in a realizing regard to the presence of God in his whole conduct; a daily dependence on the promise, providence, and grace of God, for all things needful for soul and body; and a continual attention to his word, that from thence he may learn his truth and will, and derive the peace and comfort of his salvation; by pouring out his heart before the Lord in fervent prayer and grateful praise; by a believing, reverential, and delightful attendance on all the ordinances of his worship, and an open profession of his faith and love; by a conscientious obedience to all his commandments, without regarding the praise or censure of men; by submission to his providential appointments; and finally, by attention to every relative obligation, a careful improvement of every talent, a circumspect conversation, and endeavouring to “adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things,” and to recommend religion to all around him.—The Lord, on his part, answers the expectations of those who walk with him. He supplies their wants, interposes in their emergencies, and evidences his care of them: he meets them in his ordinances, teaches them from his word, answers their prayers, accepts their services: he communicates by his Spirit, wisdom, strength, and consolation to their souls, and is indeed their Guide, Companion, and Counsellor through life: and at length he meets them at death, and takes them into “his presence, where is fulness of joy.” Thus ends the walk of faith; for thenceforth they walk by sight, and see him as he is; being for ever with him, and like him in holiness and felicity.—But “Enoch was translated, that he should not see death.” Heb. xi. 5, 6. In the prime of life, according to those times, he was taken from earth to heaven, in the body, without feeling the pangs of death, “having received ‘this testimony, that he pleased God.’” Therefore “he was not” on earth: neither his friends nor his persecutors could find him. He was a preacher of righteousness; and, if we may judge by the specimen left on record, (Jude 14, 15.) his plain and alarming address could not fail greatly to engage the daring sinners, among whom he lived. But God effectually rescued him from their malice, testified his approbation of his conduct, and gave a convincing proof of the existence of the invisible world, and of the future state of recompence. ‘It is possible also that the translation of ‘this holy man might be conferred, in order to shew what should have been common to all, had man persisted in his obedience: a translation from the earthly to the heavenly paradise.’ Fuller.

^m vi. 8, 9. vii. 23. ix. 24. Is. li. 9. Ez. xiv. 14. 20. —Matt. xxiv. 37. Luke iii. 36. xvii. 26, 27. ^voe. Heb. xi. 7. 1 Pet. iii. 20. 2 Pet. ii. 5. n iii. 17. 19. iv. 12.

29 And ^m he called his name Noah, saying, This same shall comfort us, concerning our work and toil of our hands, ⁿ because of the ground which the LORD hath cursed.

30 And Lamech lived after he begat Noah five hundred ninety and five years, and begat sons and daughters.

31 And all the days of Lamech were seven hundred seventy and seven years: and he died.

B. C. 2358.

32 And Noah was five hundred years old: and Noah begat ^o Shem, Ham, and Japheth.

D. C. 2448.
^e vi. 10. vii. 13. ix. 18. 19. 22—27. x. 1. 32. 1 Chr. iii. 4—28. Luke iii. 36

V. 29. Noah signifies rest, or, refreshing.—Perhaps Lamech had respect to the promise, (iii. 15,) and might hope he had obtained the promised Seed: but it is more likely that he spake by the Spirit of prophecy, which revealed to him that Noah would be an extraordinary person; and not only a great comfort to his parents and relatives amidst their toils and sorrows, but likewise a great blessing to mankind; with special reference to the preservation of the human species with him in the ark, which typified the salvation of sinners by Jesus Christ. He was also thus marked out as the progenitor of the promised Seed.—It is generally thought that Noah greatly improved the art of husbandry, and so lessened the labour before required in cultivating the earth. (ix. 20.)

V. 32. Note, x. 1.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—20.

This chapter contains nearly all the history, that God hath pleased to transmit to us, of the antediluvian world which subsisted for the space of 1656 years. Considering how long men lived and had children before the flood, we may well suppose that the earth was filled with inhabitants; and conjecture, with apparent probability, that there were many flourishing kingdoms, many revolutions in states, many mighty achievements and renowned characters, which are all now buried in oblivion: while nothing is recorded but what relates to the holy seed, among whom true religion was maintained, and who doubtless were despised and hated in their generation. In the judgment of God, the saints are the only excellent and eminent persons, and true religion the grand concern, on earth; compared with which, all things else are scarcely worth mentioning.—The power of God alone, “in whom we live, and move, and have our being,” could preserve the curious fabrick of the human body for the few years, now allotted to us; and the same power would suffice to preserve it to the age of Methuselah, or for ever. Man lives as long as his Creator pleases, and no longer: which should warn us not to provoke him, but to be prepared for and expecting our summons. Nor have we any cause to regret the shortness of our present lives: Abel and Enoch, the two most favoured characters before the flood, were removed at an earlier period than any others whose history is recorded. Were the world less miserable, it could be no loss to die and go to heaven: nor can it ever

CHAP. VI.

The worshippers of God intermarry with the ungodly; wickedness rapidly increases; and the Lord in anger determines to destroy the earth, 1—7. Noah is accepted by God; warned of an approaching deluge; and instructed to prepare an ark, 8—21. He implicitly obeys, 22.

AND it came to pass, when men began ^a to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them,

2 That ^b the sons of God saw the daughters of men, ^c that they were fair; ^d and they took them wives of all which they chose.

a i. 28. b iv. 26. Ex. iv. 22. 23. Deut. xiv. 1. Ps. lxxxii. 6, 7. Is. lxiii. 16. Mal. ii. 11. John viii. 41, 42. Rom. ix. 7, 8. 2 Cor. vi. 18. c iii. 6. xxxix. 6, 7. 2 Sam. xi. 2. Job xxxi. 1. 1 John ii. 16. d xxiv. 3. xxvii. 46. Ex. xxxiv. 16. Deut. vii. 3, 4. Josh. xxiii. 12, 13. Ezra ix. 1, 2. 12. Neh. xiii. 1. Mal. i. 24—27. vii. 33. 2 Cor. vi. 14—16.

be gain to live and treasure up wrath by sin: and as the long lives of the antediluvians might encourage procastination and increase presumption; so the shortness of our days may warn us without delay, to hearken to the voice of God in the gospel.

V. 21—32.

Man, in his best estate, is altogether vanity.—He is born, raises up a family, and dies! These are his memoirs: all else is a cypher, or a blot, except he WALKS WITH GOD.—The page of history records the splendid actions of the great and illustrious: the report of the day proclaims the wealth which some have accumulated and left behind, and of which they are gone to render an account: the monuments of the dead are often inscribed with pompous titles and flattering commendations:—but may it, with truth, be engraven on my tomb-stone, or whispered in the obscurest corner, “He walked with God, and was not, for God took him!” and so far from envying their distinctions, not even Enoch’s privilege shall be anxiously desired; but, as one expresses it,

‘I’ll hail the sharpest pangs of death,
 ‘Which break my way to God.’ Doddridge.

We may also observe that they, who begin young to walk with God, may expect to walk with him long, comfortably, and usefully: and the true Christian’s perseverance in holiness, through many a year, till God takes him, will best evince and illustrate that doctrine, which many oppose, and others pervert.—But walking with God requires no monkish celibacy and solitude: it well consists with the cares and comforts, and much consists in the conscientious performance of the duties, of social and relative life.—As, however, we need better comforters under our toil and sorrow, than the dearest relations and most promising offspring, may we seek and find the comforts of faith in Christ, and of joy in the Holy Ghost!

NOTES.

CHAP. VI. V. 1, 2. The spiritual worshippers of God are his children; and this honourable title is sometimes conferred on all who profess the true religion. These seem to have kept themselves for a long time distinct from such as were openly irreligious, or idolatrous; the former uniting with Seth’s descendants, the latter with Cain’s. But at length, when the human race had greatly increased, and numbers of very beautiful women were observed among the ^e Num. xi. 17. ^f John iii. 6. Rom. viii. 1—13. Gal. v. 16—24. ^g Num. xiii. 33. Deut. ii. 20, 21. iii. 11. 1 Sam. xvii. 4. 2 Sam. xxi. 15—22. ^h xi. 4. Num. xvi. 2. i xiii. 13. xviii. 20. 21. Ps. xiv. 1—4. Rom. i. 28—31. iii. 10—19. ⁱ Heb. the whole imagination, with the purposes and desires of the heart. viii. 21. Job xv. 16. Ec. vii. 29. ix. 3. Jer. xvii. 9. Mark vii. 21—23. Eph. ii. 1—3. Tit. iii. 3. 1 Jer. iv. 14. † Heb. every day.

3 And the LORD said, "My spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh: yet his days shall be an hundred and twenty years."

4 There were ^ggiants in the earth in those days; and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them; the same became mighty men, which were of old, ^hmen of renown.

5 And ⁱGod saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that ^jevery ^kimagination of the ^lthoughts of his heart was only evil [†]continually.

^m Num. xxxiii. 19. ⁿ Deut. xxxii. 36. ^o 1 Sam. xv. 11. ^p 2 Sam. xxiv. 16. ^q 1 Pet. i. 19. ^r cx. 4. Jer. xviii. 8—10. Hos. xi. 8. Jon. iii. 10. Mal. iii. 6. Rom. xii. 2. Heb. vi. 17. 18. Jam. i. 17. ^s Deut. v. 29. xxxvii. 40. lxxxvi. 13. xcv. 10. Is. xlviii. 18. Luke xix. 41, 42. Eph. iv. 30. ^t Heb. from man unto beast. oxi. 19. Ec. xxxiii. 12—17. Prov. iii. 4. viii. 35. xii. 2. Jer. xxxi. 2. Luke i. 30. Acts vii. 46. 2 Tim. i. 18. ^u ii. 4. v. 1. ^v Job xii. 4. Prov. iv. 18. Ec. vii. 20. Hab. ii. 4. Luke ii. 25. xxxii. 50. Acts x. 22. Gal. iii. 11. Heb. xi. 7. ^w Or, upright. 2 Chr. xv. 17. xxv. 2. Job i. 1. 8. Ps. xxxvii. 37. Luke i. 6. Phil. iii. 9—15.

6 And it ^mrepented the LORD that he had made man on the earth, and ⁿit grieved him at his heart.

7 And the LORD said, I will destroy man whom I have created, from the face of the earth, ^oboth man and beast, and the creeping thing, and the fowls of the air: for it repenteth me that I have made them.

8 But Noah ^pfound grace in the eyes of the LORD.

9 These are ^qthe generations of Noah: Noah was a ^rjust man and ^sperfect.

irreligious or idolatrous party; the worshippers of God were induced by unworthy motives, unreservedly to contract marriages with them, which made way for a rapid increase of wickedness, and an almost universal apostasy. (Marg. Ref.) These women are called "the daughters of men," or rather of Adam; as inheriting his fallen nature, and imitating his sin, but not his repentance.

V. 3. The Spirit of God strove with men, by inspiring Enoch, Noah, and perhaps others, to preach to them; as bearing with them, and waiting to be gracious, notwithstanding their rebellions; and as exciting convictions in their consciences. But the Lord on this occasion declared, probably by Noah, that his Spirit should not thus strive with them perpetually; but that, provoked by their obstinate resistance, not only to the warning of his prophets, but even to that of their own consciences, he would finally leave them to be hardened in sin, and ripened for destruction. This he determined on, because, "man was flesh:" not only frail and feeble, but carnal and depraved; having prostituted the noble powers of his rational soul, and every higher consideration, to make provision for the gratification of his corrupt inclinations. And now, by the defection of those who had been distinguished as "the sons of God," this was become almost the universal character of the human race; so that man was become altogether incapable of answering the great end of his creation. Yet the Lord was pleased to declare, that he would wait a hundred and twenty years, before he executed his purposed vengeance; that men might have space to repent, and to use proper methods of averting his terrible indignation.

V. 4. Giants.] These giants perhaps were men of great stature and strength, but more certainly men of enormous wickedness. And the children, which sprang from the intermarriages abovementioned, were of the same character. Thus they became, in those ancient times, "mighty men, . . . men of renown," as heroes, conquerors, and chieftains: but they were apostates from God, and cruel destroyers and oppressors of mankind.

The Hebrew word (גִּיָּמִים), rendered giants, appears to be derived from a root which signifies to fall (פָּלָא): either, Men who had fallen from God; or Men, who by force and power caused others to fall, that is, cast them down.

V. 5. The words of this verse are peculiarly expressive:—"God saw that the wickedness of man was great on the earth." He, who could not mistake, or form a false estimate, saw that man's wickedness was great; open, daring, and atrocious; and that among all men, throughout the earth. Yet he saw the heart still worse: "Every imagination of the thoughts of the heart were only evil continually:" that is, the workings of the fancy, the contrivances of the understanding, the purposes, desires, and affections of the whole soul, were every one of them evil, only evil, without any intermixture of good; only evil, every day, continually, without interruption or cessation!

V. 6, 7. It repented . . . it grieved.] Such expressions as these are made use of by the Holy Spirit, in a gracious condescension to our apprehensions; and to accommodate heavenly things, as far as their nature will admit of it, to the similitude of earthly things: just as we speak to children in their language, and in accommodation to their capacities, that we may the better convey our meaning to their minds.—Metaphysical truth is too refined and subtle for mankind in general, and only fitted for the amusement of speculative men: but the Scriptures were written to make even the poor and illiterate wise unto salvation. To speak to them of the cause, from its sensible and visible effects, more readily informs and more deeply interests them: while other passages sufficiently guard the sober enquirer from misapprehension.—Should an artist, after bestowing much pains, and manifesting great skill, about some curious piece of mechanism, dash it to pieces; we should conclude from this effect, that he repented having made it. Or should a parent, after conferring great favours on his child, be provoked by his misconduct finally to disinherit him; we should thence infer, that he was "grieved at his heart" that he had bestowed so much upon him. Thus the Creator, having formed the earth, and men upon it; having displayed his wisdom, power, and goodness in his works, and in the riches which he had conferred on man, in whom especially his glory had shone; after the earth was filled with inhabitants, was provoked by their wickedness to destroy them all with a flood. This was an effect which seemed to flow from his repenting that he had made man, and to indicate that he was "grieved at his heart."—It is indeed impossible that God should really be sorry, or repent of any thing that he has said or done; or really wish he had never said or done it: but his change of conduct was such as in men springs from these causes; and the expression most emphatically denotes extreme abhorrence of the crimes of men, and of their desperate depravity.

V. 8, 9. Noah is the first person, who is called righteous, fect in his generations, and ^r Noah walked with God.

^a See on v. 22

^a v. 32.

10 And Noah begat three sons, ^r Shem, ^r Ham, and Japheth.

^t Is. ix. 18. Ez. viii. 17. xxviii. 16. Hos. iv. 1, 2. Hab. ii. 8. 17.

11 The earth also was corrupt before God; and the earth was ^l filled with violence.

^u 8. Job xxxiii. 27. Ps. xxxiii. 13, 14. lili 2. Prov. xv. 3.

12 And God ^u looked upon the earth, and behold, it was corrupt: for ^r all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth.

^x 5. vii. 1. 21. ix. 12, 16, 17. Luke iii. 6. ^y Jer. li. 13. Ez. vii. 2-6. Amos viii 2. 1 Pet. iv. 7.

13 ¶ And God said unto Noah, ^r The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them: and behold, I will destroy them ^r with ^r the earth.

^{*} Or, from the earth vii. 23. ^z Jer. iv. 23-28. 2 Pet. iii. 6, 7. 10-12. ^a Matt. xxiv. 38. Luke xvii. 27. 1 Pet. iii. 20. [†] Heb. nests. ^b Ex. ii. 3.

14 ^a Make thee an ark of gopher-wood: [†] rooms shalt thou make in the ark, and shalt ^b pitch it within and without with pitch.

^c vii. 20. Deut. iii. 11

15 And this is the fashion which thou shalt make it of: the length of the ark shall be three hundred ^c cubits, the or just; that is, he was so by the "righteousness of faith." (Marg. Ref.—Note, Heb. xi. 7.) He was a true believer, "he found grace," and was the object of the Lord's special favour: being sincerely and unreservedly religious; and one who dared to be singular in that corrupt generation.

V. 11, 12. The earth was not only full of daring impiety, and probably idolatry, before God, and, as it were, in defiance of him; but also of oppression, cruelty, and murder: so that men in general had corrupted their way all over the world.

V. 13. The Lord revealed to Noah, that he would destroy guilty man from the earth, with all the animal tribes and all the vegetable riches, with which it was replenished; and also all the works of men; and so change the state of it, as to render the whole one universal desolation. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 14—16. The word here rendered an ark, is only used for Noah's ark, and that ark of bulrushes in which the child Moses was preserved. It seems to have been built, in some respects, like the hulk of a ship; except that it was flat-bottomed, square at each end, and roofed as a house; so that it terminated at the top in the breadth of a cubit. It is not agreed what kind of timber is meant by Gopher-wood; perhaps that of the Cypress-tree. The ark was made with three decks, and divided into many little cabins; it was pitched within and without to keep it tight and sweet; and lighted from the upper part, probably by one window reaching from end to end. A cubit was something more than half a yard; so that this enormous vessel was about a hundred and sixty yards in length, twenty-seven in breadth, and sixteen in height; and thus vastly larger than our greatest ships. Learned men have shewn, that these dimensions were far more than were necessary to contain all the animals to be preserved, and sufficient provision for them. But it must at first sight be evident that so great a vessel, thus constructed, and with so few persons on board, was utterly breadth of it fifty cubits, and the height of it thirty cubits.

16 A ^d window shalt thou make to the ark, and in a cubit shalt thou finish it above: and ^e the door of the ark shalt thou set in the side thereof: ^f with lower, second, and third stories shalt thou make it.

^d viii. 6. 2 Sam. vi. 16. 2 Kings ix. 30.

^e vii. 16. Luke xiii. 25. ^f Ez. xli. 16. xlii. 3.

17 And ^g behold, I, even I, do ^h bring a flood of waters upon the earth to destroy all flesh, wherein is ^l the breath of life, from under heaven; and every thing that is in the earth ^k shall die.

^g ix. 9. Ex. xiv. 17. Lev. xxvi. 28. Deut. xxxii. 39. Is. li. 12. Ez. v. 8. vi. 3. xxxiv. 11. 20. Hos. v. 14.

18 But with thee will I ^l establish my covenant: and thou shalt ^m come into the ark; thou, and thy sons, and thy wife, and thy sons' wives with thee.

^h vii. 4. 17. 23. Ps. xxix. 10. xciii. 3, 4. Amos ix. 6 i. ii. 7. vii. 15. k Rom. v. 12-14. 21. vi. 23. viii. 20-22.

19 And of every living thing of all flesh, ⁿ two of every sort shalt thou bring into the ark to keep them alive with thee: they shall be male and female.

^l Ex. 9. 11. xvii. 4. m vii. 21. 13. Is. xxvii. 20. 1 Pet. iii. 20. 2 Pet. ii. 5.

20 Of fowls ^o after their kind, and of ⁿ vii. 2. 3. viii. 17.

^o i. 20-22.

unsuitable to weather out the deluge; except as it was under the immediate guidance and protection of the Almighty.

V. 17. These were "things not seen as yet," concerning which Noah was warned; and many have since ventured to deny, and it is not improbable that some would then argue against, the possibility of such a deluge: but the almighty God, with a most emphatical repetition, declared that he would effect it; and Noah simply credited this word. He neither hesitated to expect the unprecedented catastrophe; nor argued against the justice or goodness of God in the awful sentence; nor declined the immense labour and expence imposed on him, or the reproach and ridicule to which it might expose him; nor made any objection to this mode of preservation. But, being "moved with fear," and reverencing the divine revelation, he prepared the ark; became a preacher of righteousness; and, taking the warning given him for his subject, and shewing his faith by his works, he called on mankind to repent of their sins. Had they duly regarded the warning, all the inhabitants of the earth might have heard it, before the expiration of the hundred and twenty years of God's long-suffering: and if a general repentance had taken place, perhaps a respite would have been granted; as there was afterwards, in like circumstances, to Nineveh. (Notes, Jon. iii.) If individuals had repented, and by faith sought admission into the ark, doubtless it would have been opened to as many as it could contain: and, for any thing that appears to the contrary, if others had in humble, penitent faith prepared arks, they also might have been preserved.

V. 18. This is the first place in which the word covenant occurs; and it seems to relate to the gracious assurance, which God gave Noah, that the earth should not be destroyed by a second deluge. (Marg. Ref.)—Sons.] None of Noah's sons were born a hundred years before the flood; but the command might be given prophetically in this respect as well as in others. It is however probable, that the first cattle after their kind, of every creeping thing of the earth after his kind: ^ptwo of every sort shall come unto thee, to keep them alive.

o vii. 8-16

q l. 29. 30. Job xxxviii. 41. xl. 20. Ps. xxxvi. 6. civ. 27. 28. cxxxvi. 25. cxlv. 16. cxlviii. 9. Matt vi. 26. vii. 5. xvii. 23. Ex. xl. 16. 21. 23. 27. 32. Matt. vii. 24-27. John ii. 4. xv. 14 Heb. xi. 7. 8 John v. 3.

21 And take thou unto thee of ^rall food that is eaten, and thou shalt gather it to thee, and it shall be for food for thee, and for them.

22 Thus did Noah; ^raccording to all that God commanded him, so did he.

intimations of the approaching deluge were given some years, before the command for building the ark: yet this was a work of so great labour, that much time must have been employed about it.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS

V. 1-7.

There is scarcely a more lamentable proof of a decay in vital godliness, or a more effectual means of hastening it, than intermarriages betwixt professors of true religion and its avowed enemies. In all ages there seems to have been a peculiar curse of God on them; the evil example of the ungodly party generally corrupts the other; family-religion is put an end to; and the children, almost universally, are trained up according to the maxims of the ungodly parent. If we profess ourselves to be "the sons and daughters of the Lord almighty," we must not marry in opposition to his will: and he will not allow us to prefer beauty, wit, wealth, or honourable alliances, to piety.—Though "the Lord is slow to anger and of great kindness," yet his "Spirit will not always strive with men;" and when they persist in sin, in defiance of his word, and the convictions of their own consciences, he will at length totally withdraw from them, and permit them to be hardened to their ruin.—If he is so grieved by our sin, as to destroy the work of his own hands, how reasonable is it that we should mourn for it, and that we should show our repentance by seeking its destruction!—They whom the world admires as "men of renown," are often, in the judgment of God, and even of common sense, no better than cruel tyrants and oppressors: let us then desire that "honour which cometh from God" on those who do good; not that which comes from man upon those who do mischief.—But, what is now become of "the image and likeness of God?" Doth man now merit to be pronounced VERY GOOD by the LORD himself? Alas! the old serpent, that proud ambitious apostate, rebel, liar, and murderer, hath filled the earth with his detestable progeny! Yet, how few are aware that the description here given of human depravity suits them, while unregenerate! Inattention, ignorance of the divine law, and self-flattery, hide this humiliating truth from men's minds; yea, strongly prejudice them against it: but a deep conviction of it, with application to our own state and character, is essential to a due valuation of the salvation proposed in the gospel.

V. 8-22.

In the worst of times, God hath "a remnant according to the election of grace:" and they who would please him must dare to be singular. These believe his truth, and obey his commandments; they hear his warnings, and fear, but do not despair; they embrace his promises, and hope,

CHAP. VII.

At God's command Noah enters the ark, with his family, and the living creatures; and the flood begins, 1-16. Its increase for forty days, 17-20. All flesh is destroyed by it, 21-23. Its duration, 24.

a Job v. 19-24. Ps. xci. 1-10. Prov. xiv. 26. xviii. 10. Is. xxvi. 20. 21. Ez. ix. 4. —8. Zeph. ii. 3. Matt. xxiv. 37-39. b See on vi. 9. Ps. xxxiii. 18, 19. Prov. xi. 4-8. Is. iii. 10, 11. 2 Pet. ii. 5-9. c viii. 20. Lev. xl. Deut. xiv. 1-21. Acts x. 11-16.

AND the LORD said unto Noah, "Come thou, and all thy house, into the ark: for ^bthee have I seen righteous before me in this generation.

2 Of every ^cclean beast thou shalt but do not presume; they stand in awe, and do not find fault; they expect safety upon the warrant of his word; and they refuse no obedience, however burdensome, expensive, or self-denying.—But in the warning to Noah, there is one more solemn given to us, "to flee from the wrath to come," which, with tremendous efficacy, will sweep all unbelievers into the pit of destruction. Christ (the true "Noah, which same shall comfort us,") hath, at infinite expense, already prepared the ark, and kindly invites us to enter in. Whilst the day of his patience continues, let us obediently hear his voice, and thankfully sue for admission, which will then be readily vouchsafed us.—But let it be observed, that they who "go about to establish their own "righteousness," act as Noah would have done, had he substituted a high tower on a mountain, according to his own wisdom, for his place of security, instead of the ark which God had appointed.

NOTES.

CHAP. VII. V. 1. At the appointed time, when all needful preparations had been made, Noah was directed to enter with his family into the ark; because the Lord had "seen him righteous before him in that generation." The apostle says, that he "became heir of the righteousness which is "by faith." (Notes, vi. 8, 9. Heb. xi. 7.) The same principle which mauced him to believe, on the testimony of God, and contrary to all human probability, that the deluge would come at the appointed season, would move him "to flee "from the wrath to come:" and as he believed, that in the ark alone he could be safe from the approaching deluge; so he doubtless believed the revelation of a Saviour, and sought and expected salvation through him alone. Thus he was "justified by faith:" and being likewise a partaker of that Spirit, whose "fruit is in all goodness, and righteousness, "and truth;" he was righteous in his character and conduct; that is, devoted to God, and "walking before him in "all his ordinances and commandments, blameless."

V. 2, 3. It is probable, that the clean beasts signify such as were not rapacious, and which were exclusively offered in sacrifice by the express appointment of God. They were also such as were most serviceable to man. The grant of animal food seems not to have been explicitly made before the flood; the distinction of meats could not therefore have been appointed. Seven couple of the clean beasts seem to have been preserved. Some indeed suppose that only three couple, and the seventh animal for sacrifice, were meant. (viii. 20.)—There must have been a very extraordinary miracle wrought, perhaps by the ministration of angels, in bringing two of every species to Noah, and rendering them submissive to him, and peaceable with each other: yet it

• Heb. seven, take to thee by *sevens, the male and his female: and of beasts that are^d not clean by two, the male and his female.

3 Of fowls also of the air by sevens, the male and the female; to keep seed alive upon the face of all the earth.

4 For °yet seven days, and I will cause it to rain upon the earth^f forty days and forty nights: °and every living substance that I have made, will I[†] destroy from off the face of the earth.

5 And Noah did according unto^h all that the LORD commanded him.

6 And Noah *was*ⁱ six hundred years old, when the flood of waters was upon the earth.

7 And^k Noah went in, and his sons, and his wife, and his sons' wives with him, into the ark, because of the waters of the flood.

8 Of clean beasts, and of beasts that are not clean, and of fowls, and of every thing that creepeth upon the earth,

9 There^l went in two and two unto Noah into the ark, the male and the female, as God had commanded Noah.

10 ¶ And it came to pass^o after seven days, that the waters of the flood were upon the earth.

11 In the six hundredth year of Noah's life, in the second month, the seventeenth day of the month, the same day were^m all the fountains of the great deep broken up, and the 'windows of heaven were opened.

12 And the rain was upon the earthⁿ forty days and forty nights.

13 In the self-same day entered Noah, °and Shem, and Ham, and Japheth, the sons of Noah, and Noah's wife, and the three wives of his sons with them, into the ark:

14 They, and every beast after his kind, and all the cattle after their kind, and every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind, and every fowl after his kind, every bird of every^o sort.

15 And they went in unto Noah into the ark, two and two of all flesh, wherein is the breath of life.

16 And they that went in, went in male and female of all flesh, as God^p had commanded him: and^q the LORD shut him in.

e 10. vi. 3. viii. 10. 12 xxix. 27, 28. f 12. 17.

g 21—23 vi. 17.

† Heb. blot out. Ex. xxxiii. 32, 33. Ps. lxxix. 28. Rev. iii. 5.

h vi. 22. Ex. xxxix. 42, 43. Ps. cxix. 6. Matt. iii. 15. Luke viii. 21. John ii. 5. xiii. 17.

i v. 32. viii. 13.

k 1. vi. 18. Prov. xxii. 3. Heb. vi. 18.

l ii. 19. Is. xi. 6—9. lxxv. 25. Gal. iii. 28. Col. iii. 11.

o Or, on the seventh day, 4.

m i. 7. vi. 17. viii. 2. Job xxxviii. 8—11. Ps. xxxiii. 7. Prov. viii. 28, 29. Jer. v. 22. li. 16. Ez. xxvi. 19. Am. ix. 5, 6. n Or, flood-gates. 2 Kings vii. 2. 19. Ps. lxxviii. 23, 24. Mal. iii. 10. Ex. xxiv. 18. Deut. ix. 9. 18. x. 10. 1 Kings xix. 8. Matt. iv. 2. o v. 32. vi. 10. ix. 18, 19. x. 1, 2. 6. 21. 1 Chr. i. 4—23.

q Heb. wing.

p Ps. xci. 1—10. Matt. xxv. 10. Luke xiii. 25. John x. 27—30. 1 Pet. i. 5.

seems not to have made any impression on the hardened spectators!—The suspension of the ferocity of the savage beasts, during their continuance in the ark, is generally considered as an apt figure of the change, which takes place in the disposition of sinners, when they enter the true church of Christ; (Note, Is. xi. 6—9:) but it may also remind us of the hypocrite's external good behaviour, though his nature is not changed.

V. 7. Sons' wives.] Though each of Noah's three sons was at this time nearly a hundred years old, and none of them had any children living; and the whole earth was about to be desolated: yet no exception, even on this extraordinary occasion, was made to the original constitution of marriage, "they twain shall be one flesh:" a decisive proof that polygamy is contrary to the original institution of marriage, and not at all needful for the increase of the human species, or even conducive to it.

V. 10—12. "The long-suffering of God had waited" a hundred and twenty years; and, as many think, seven days more; but at length the days of vengeance arrived.—"Behold, I, even I, do bring a flood of waters on the earth," saith the LORD. Thus speaks the Almighty, and it is absurd to question whether Omnipotence could effect the deluge. Every attempt to explain the manner, in which the earth was overflowed, too much resembles the presumption of those who enquired, "How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?" It is no more incredible that God should drown the world, than that he should raise the dead: and, by his almighty power, he caused "the "waters from above the firmament, and the waters under the firmament," which he had before separated, to meet together for that purpose. (Note, i. 9.) "The fountains of the great deep were broken up;" and, by some vast convulsions, the waters from the bowels of the earth and from the depths of the ocean, were forced upwards; while the windows or flood-gates of heaven "were opened," and rain poured out impetuously in cataracts, or water-spouts, without intermission, for forty days and nights, in every part of the globe, till a universal deluge was effected.—Probably this commenced about the beginning of November; for the patriarchal year began in September.

V. 16. Shut him in.] No doubt this was done by the ministration of angels, and as an evident miracle in the view of all the spectators, of whom numbers, from different motives, might be collected.—Probably, the door of this vast structure was too massy, to be securely closed by the few persons within the ark. Thus the Lord gave Noah a pledge of his acceptance and his care of him; and by the same token he shut out all the rest of mankind, and sealed their condemnation.—But had Noah's preaching no effect? Were there no other believers upon the whole earth? We may probably suppose, that many had been previously taken away from the evil to come; for Methuselah is computed to have died the year before the flood, or in that very year. But it seems evident, that there were no godly persons among the survivors, however some might have been alarmed, affected, or convinced: for there was room enough in the ark; and it does not appear that any were refused admit-

17 ¶ And the flood was forty days upon the earth: and the waters increased, and bare up the ark; and it was lifted up above the earth.

18 And the waters prevailed, and were increased greatly upon the earth: and the ark went upon the face of the waters.

19 And the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth; and ^qall the high hills, that were under the whole heaven, were covered.

q Job xii. 15. Ps. xli. 2, 3. civ. 6—9.

20 Fifteen cubits upward did the waters prevail; and the mountains were covered.

r 4. vi. 6, 7. 2 Pet. iii. 6.

21 And ^rall flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man.

22 All in whose nostrils was ^sthe Heb. the breath of the spirit of life. ii. 7. vi. 17. breath of life, of all that was in the dry land, died.

23 And ^severy living substance was destroyed which was upon the face of the ground, both man, and cattle, and the creeping things, and the fowl of the heaven; and they were destroyed from the earth; ^tand Noah only remained Job xxii. 15—17. Is. xxiv. 1—8. Matt. xxiv. 37—39. Luke xvii. 26, 27. 1 Pet. iii. 20. 2 Pet. ii. 5. alive, and they that were with him in the ark.

Ex. xiv. 28—30. Ez. xiv. 14, 20. Mal. iii. 18. Matt. xxv. 46.

24 And the waters prevailed upon the earth ^uan hundred and fifty days. u viii. 3, 4.

tance.—Indeed, our Lord has informed us of the real state of the case: “They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and the flood came and destroyed them all.” Luke xvii. 27. Thus they encouraged one another in contemptuous disobedience; and if any were at all disposed to pay regard to the divine warning, they either procrastinated, or were afraid of being singular. But what must have been their feelings, when, at the appointed time, it began to rain in so extraordinary a manner, and continued to do so from week to week incessantly; the waters still rising, and following them to the eminences on which they ascended! How much soever they had before despised Noah’s madness, or pitied his weakness; they would now remember his warnings, admire his wisdom, and envy his happiness; while they cursed their own folly and impenitence.

V. 17—19. At the end of forty days the waters were so raised, that the ark was afloat: but they increased exceedingly afterwards, by the continuance of the same causes, though perhaps with some intermission. Thus the deluge prevailed till “all the high hills under the whole heaven were covered.” This decidedly proves the deluge to have been strictly universal; though some learned men have argued against this: but indeed traces of the deluge are found in all parts of the earth, and some confused tradition of it every where prevails.

V. 20—23. The waters at length arose to be above eight yards deep on the top of the highest mountains: so that every project for security was frustrated; every advantage of situation was unavailing. Some might escape longer than others; but, first or last, all men, except those in the ark, perished. And with the human species most of the animals perished also. (Is. xxxiv. 1—6.) Indeed, the faithful and powerful protection of God was Noah’s only security, in this wild tumult of the elements: and the presence of God was his only comfort in this dreary confinement, and in witnessing the dire devastation of the earth and its inhabitants, and especially of the human species; of his companions, his neighbours, his relatives; of those, to whom he had preached, for whom he had prayed, and over whom he had wept, many of whom had even helped to build the ark. (2 Pet. ii. 5.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—16.

Numbers in every age “despise the riches of the goodness, and forbearance, and long-suffering of God, not knowing that his goodness leads to repentance: but after their hardness and impenitent heart they treasure up wrath against the day of wrath;” till judgment come upon them to the uttermost. But in all this the Lord’s purposes are effected, his predictions accomplished, and his justice displayed.—Our short span of life will speedily come to a close, even though we should linger out our threescore years and ten. Yes, the last week, the last day, the last hour, will soon surprise us, if we be not always watching and ready; and with no less tremendous consternation and terrible destruction, than the deluge did those in the days of Noah. If when “the Master of the house has risen up, and “shut to the door,” we be found without, it will then be too late to knock for admittance. For the threatenings of the Lord, however now neglected or despised, will as certainly be fulfilled as his promises: and there is a time coming, when they, who have most affected to pity or deride the godly, will admire or envy them.

V. 17—24.

What a triumph was here of death, even “over those who had not sinned after the similitude of Adam’s transgression!” and how did the whole creation groan under man’s sin! But, though we may indulge the hope that the multitude of infants, who died without their own actual sin, through the first Adam’s transgression, obtained life without their own actual faith, through the second Adam’s obedience; yet we are constrained to admit, that the same deluge, which swept the rest of that generation from the earth, swept their souls into the prison of hell. How tremendous then will be “the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men!” and what will be the feelings of those, who, in contempt of the divine testimony, treat the “things not seen as yet” as unreal, though revealed by the infallible testimony of God; when they shall at length be seen, but seen too late! Happy they, who are part of Christ’s family, and safe with him in the ark! they may look forward without dismay, and rejoice in the assurance, that they shall triumph, when a deluge of fire shall encircle the visible

MOUNT ARARAT.

GENESIS VIII. 4.

CHAP. VIII.

God remembers Noah, and assuages the waters, 1—3. The ark rests on the mountains of Ararat, 4, 5. Noah sends forth a raven, and then a dove, to gain intelligence, 6—12. He leaves the ark, offers sacrifices, and is accepted and encouraged, 13—22.

AND ^a God remembered Noah, and every living thing, and all ^b the cattle that was with him in the ark: and God made ^c a wind to pass over the earth, and the waters assuaged.

2 The ^d fountains also of the deep, and the windows of heaven were stopped, and ^e the rain from heaven was restrained.

3 And the waters returned from off the earth ^f continually: and after the end of the ^g hundred and fifty days the waters were abated.

4 And ^h the ark rested in the seventh month, on the seventeenth day of the month, upon the mountains of ⁱ Ararat.

5 And the waters ^j decreased continually until ^k the tenth month: in the tenth month, on the first day of the month were the tops of the mountains seen.

6 ¶ And it came to pass at the end of forty days, that Noah opened ^l the window of the ark which he had made.

^a xix. 29. xxx. 22. Ex. ii. 24. 1 Sam. i. 19. Neh. xiii. 14. 22. 29. 31. Job xiv. 13. Ps. cvii. 4. cxxxii. j. cxxxvi. 23. cxxxvii. 7. Am. viii. 7. Rev. xvi. 19. xviii. 5. ^b Num. xxii. 32. Ps. xxxvi. 6. Jon. iv. 11. ^c Ex. xiv. 21. ^d vii. 11. Prov. viii. 28. Jon. ii. 3. ^e Job xxxvii. 11—13. xxxviii. 37. Matt. viii. 26, 27. ^f Heb. in going and returning ^g vii. 24. ^h Jer. li. 27. ⁱ Heb. were ^m going and decreasing. ^j vii. 21. ^k vi. 16.

7 And he sent forth ¹ a raven, which went forth ² to and fro, until the waters were dried up from off the earth.

8 Also he sent forth ^m a dove from him, to see if the waters were abated from off the face of the ground.

9 But the dove ⁿ found no rest for the sole of her foot, ^o and she returned unto him into the ark: for the waters were on the face of the whole earth. Then he put forth his hand, and took her, and ^p pulled her in unto him into the ark.

10 And he ^p stayed yet other ^q seven days, and again he sent forth the dove out of the ark.

11 And the dove came in to him in the evening, and lo, in her mouth was ^r an olive-leaf plucked off. So Noah knew that the waters were abated from off the earth.

12 And ^s he stayed yet other ^t seven days, and sent forth the dove; which returned not again unto him any more.

13 And it came to pass in the ^u six hundredth and first year, in the first month, the first day of the month, the waters were dried up from off the earth: and Noah removed the covering of the ark; and looked, and behold, the face of the ground was dry.

14 And in the second month, on the

1 Lev. xi. 15
1 Kings xvii. 6. Job xxxvii. 41
2 Heb. in going forth and returning.
3 Cant. i. 15. ii. 11, 12. 14. Matt. x. 16.
4 Deut. xxviii. 65. Ezek. vii. 16. Matt. xi. 28. John xvi. 33. Ps. cxvi. 7. 1s. lx. 8.
5 Heb. caused her to come.
6 Ps. xl. i. 1s. viii. 17. Rom. viii. 25.
7 12 vii. 4, 10.
8 Ps. xxvii. 14. cxxx. 5, 6. 1s. xxv. 9. xxvi. 8. Hab. ii. 3. Jam. v. 7, 8.
9 10. ii. 2, 3.
10 vii. 11.

creation. But, unless we dare to be singular, and renounce the favour, and venture the scorn and hatred of the world; unless we are willing to exercise self-denial and diligence; we can find no admission into this ark. And, even in the ark, while in this world, we shall need faith and patience, and have much to try them.—Though we should lament, we need not wonder at, the prevalence of impiety; nor should faithful ministers despond, if their success be not so large as their expectations; for the most eminent and favoured servants of God have experienced the same disappointments.—Ungodly children often receive temporal mercies for their parents' sake; but unless they themselves are made partakers of faith and holiness, they will not escape eternal destruction.—Finally, though there is great difference of character among men, and we are apt to imagine some favourable distinctions in our own ease: yet, if we neglect, refuse, or abuse the salvation of Christ, we shall, notwithstanding such imaginary advantages, be overwhelmed in the common destruction of an unbelieving world.

NOTES.

CHAP. VIII. V. 1—3. The flood continued a considerable time after the inhabitants of the earth were destroyed; and Noah might be tempted to be weary of his confinement, and almost to question whether “the LORD had not forgotten to be gracious:” but at length “God remembered” him, by hearing his prayers, and preparing for the release of him and his family; and also of the animals which were with him in the ark, which is specially noted.—By a strong, dry wind the clouds were dispersed, and so the rain ceased; and the miraculous interposition being withdrawn, things reverted to their former course. Thus the waters, in going and returning, were in part evaporated, and in part ran off into the lower countries and the bed of the ocean, or sunk into caverns in the bowels of the earth.

V. 4, 5. On the seventeenth day of the seventh month of the year, (as it is most probable,) just five months, or a hundred and fifty days from the beginning of the flood, the waters were so far abated, that the ark rested on one of the summits of mount Ararat. This is supposed to mean a ridge of mountains, extending from Armenia eastward to a great distance. The word Ararat is elsewhere translated Armenia, but it is not agreed whether the ark rested in Armenia, or more towards the east. It was, however, no doubt on some lofty summit; as it was almost three months longer before the tops of the mountains were seen. (Marg. Ref.) ‘If we had been a long and dangerous voyage at sea, we should be better able to conceive of the joy which this sight must have occasioned.’ Fuller.

V. 6—14. Forty days after the tops of the mountains became visible, Noah sent out a raven, in order that he might learn the state of the earth: but, as this bird was used to seven and twentieth day of the month, was the earth dried.

15 ¶ And God spake unto Noah, saying,

16 *Go forth of the ark, thou, and thy wife, and thy sons, and thy sons' wives with thee.

17 †Bring forth with thee every living thing that is with thee, of all flesh, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth; that they may †breed abundantly in the earth, and be fruitful and multiply upon the earth.

18 And Noah went forth, and his sons, and his wife, and his sons' wives with him:

19 Every beast, every creeping thing, and every fowl, and whatsoever creepeth upon the earth after their *kinds, went forth out of the ark.

20 And Noah †built an altar unto the LORD, and took of every †clean beast, and of every clean fowl, and offered †burnt-offerings on the altar.

21 And the LORD †smelled a †sweet savour; and the LORD said in his heart, I will not again †curse the ground any more for man's sake; †for †the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth: †neither will I again smite any more every thing living, †as I have done.

22 †While the earth remaineth, †seed-time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and †day and night, shall not cease.

* Heb. families. a iv. 4. xii. 7, 8. xiii. 4. xxi. 9. xxvi. 25. xxxiii. 20. xxxv. 1. 7. Ex. xx. 24. 25. xxiv. 4-8. Heb. xiii. 10. 15. 16. b vii. 2. Lev. xi. c Lev. i. d Lev. i. 9. 17. xxvi. 31. Ez. xx. 41. Amos v. 21. 22. 2 Cor. ii. 15. Eph. v. 2. Phil. iv. 18. † Heb. savour of rest. e iii. 17. iv. 12. v. 29. vi. 17. f Or, though. g vi. 5. Job xiv. 4. xv. 14-16. 19. li. 5. Is. x'vii. 12. 15. xlviii. 8. John iii. 6. Rom. i. 21. viii. 7, 8. Eph. ii. 1-3. h ix. 11-15. 16. liv. 9, 10. i 2 Pet. iii. 6, 7. j Heb. As yet all the days of the earth. k xlv. 6. Ex. xxxv. 21. Jer. v. 24. Jam. v. 7. l Jer. xxxiii. 20 -25.

x vii. 1. 7. 13. Josh. iii. 17. iv. 10. 16-18. Ps. cxxi. 8. Dan. iii. 25, 26. Zech. ix. 11. Acts xvi. 27. 28. 37-39. y vii. 14, 15.

z i. 22. ix. 7. Ps. cvii. 38. cxliv. 18, 14. Jer. xxxi. 27, 28.

feed on flesh, it either returned no more; or, as some think, it continued to come back to the ark, and again to leave it, without being received into it, till the waters were dried up. After seven days therefore, as the subsequent language implies, (10,) he sent forth a dove which soon returned, and was taken into the ark; and on a second trial she brought an olive-branch in her mouth. This was a token that some of the fruitful plains were dried, and the vegetables preserved. On the third trial the dove returned no more.—The repeated mention of seven days seems an intimation of the observance of the sabbath in the ark; after the ordinances of which, the dove was sent out.—The olive-branch, probably from some obscure tradition of this event, has generally been the emblem of peace. Thus also the Holy Spirit, whose emblem is a dove, by his consolations brings to the broken-hearted believer the olive-branch of peace and reconciliation with God.—According to the computation of time used in Scripture, Noah and his company continued in the ark a year and ten days. (vii. 11.)

V. 15—19. Noah had made observations on the state of the earth, and preparations for leaving the ark; but he waited God's command before he actually quitted it.—It seems that, by a peculiar providential interposition, no animal of any sort had died, though they had been shut up in the ark above a year! and it does not appear, that there had been any increase of them during that time.

V. 20—22. This is the first time that an altar is mentioned; and the word rendered burnt-offerings here first occurs: yet Abel's offering seems to have been of the same nature, and was probably laid on some kind of altar. By these burnt-offerings, Noah, in faith, ascribed his preservation to the mercy of God through the promised Saviour; he rendered to him a tribute of fervent gratitude and adoration; he devoted himself and family to his service; and he sought further protection and blessing amidst the desolations which surrounded him.—The smell of burning flesh could in itself be no more pleasing to God, than "the blood of bulls or of goats:" but as it typified the sacrifice of Christ, and expressed Noah's obedient faith and grateful love, the Lord graciously accepted it, and promised that he would no more curse the earth; that is, after the manner of the flood: for the original curse was not removed, nor is it clear that it was mitigated. He added, "for," or though, (Marg.) "the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth." The flood washed away that generation of wicked men, but it did not remove depravity from man's nature; who, being conceived and born in sin, thinks, devises, and loves wickedness, even from his youth; and that as much since the flood as before. Other methods indeed would be used to repress wickedness, but a universal deluge should no more be employed for that purpose; nor should any other year, like the past, occur to the end of the world, in which there was neither sowing nor reaping.—Partial failures of seed-time and harvest, or other irregularities, are not inconsistent with this gracious assurance; according to which the heavenly bodies have ever since preserved their courses, the seasons their successions, and the earth hath produced its increase for the use of man, notwithstanding his ingratitude. And on this word we depend, that thus it shall be "till the mystery of God is finished."

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The Lord "knoweth how to reserve the wicked unto the day of judgment to be punished," however numerous, powerful, and haughty they may be; and also "to deliver the godly out of temptation" in the best time and manner, though few, despised, and helpless. (2 Pet. ii. 9.) For a season he seems to forget his afflicted children, and they are prone to judge according to appearances; but in due season he will manifest his kind and careful remembrance of them.—The devoted servant of God will make haste to keep his commandments; and patiently wait his time for deliverance and promised blessings.—The faithfulness of God is the best security; and it is given to all them that trust in him: for his glory is engaged for their salvation, as much as for Noah's preservation.—Alas! how many are there in the visible church, who resemble the raven more than the dove! who retain a relish for worldly things under a religious appearance; and who, "in time of temptation fall away!" But the true Christian, partaking of the

CHAP. IX.

The Lord blesses Noah and his family ; grants them additionally flesh for food ; prohibits them from eating blood ; and requires that murderers should be punished with death, 1—7. His covenant with Noah and his posterity, of which the rainbow was constituted a pledge, 8—17. Noah's family and employment, 18—20. His drunkenness, and the different behaviour of his sons ; with his prophecy, age, and death, 21—29.

a i. 28. xxiv. 60. 1s. li. 2. b 7. 19. viii. 17. x. 32. c i. 28. Lev. xxvi. 6. 22. Job v. 22. 23 1s. viii. 4—8. civ. 20—23. Hos. ii. 18. Jam. iii. 7.

AND God ^a blessed Noah and his sons, and said unto them, ^b Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth.

2 And ^c the fear of you, and the dread of you, shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon every fowl of the air, upon all that moveth upon the earth, and upon all the fishes of the sea ; into your hand are they delivered.

3 ^d Every moving thing that liveth shall be meat for you ; even ^e as the green herb have I given you all things.

4 But flesh with ^f the life thereof, ^g which is the blood thereof, shall ye not eat.

5 And surely your blood of your lives will I require : at the hand of ^h every beast will I require it, and ⁱ at the hand of man ; at the hand of every man's ^j brother will I require the life of man.

6 Whoso sheddeth man's blood, ^k by man shall his blood be shed : for ^l in the image of God made he man.

d Lev. xi. xxi. 8. Deut. xii. 16. x. 12—15. 1 Tim. iv. 3—5. Rom. xiv. 3. 14. 17. 1 Cor. x. 25. 31. Col. ii. 16. 21. 22. Lev. iii. 17. xvii. 10—14. xix. 26. Deut. xii. 16. 23. xiv. 21. xv. 23. Acts xv. 20. 29. 1 Tim. iv. 4. Ex. xxi. 28. 29. li. 9. 10. Num. xxxv. 31—33. Deut. xxi. 1—9. Ps. ix. 12. i Acts xvii. 26. Ex. xxi. 12—14. Lev. xxiv. 17. 1 Kings ii. 5. 6. 23—34. Matt. xxvi. 52. Rom. xiii. 4. Rev. xiii. 10. i. 26. 27 v. 1. Ps. li. 4. Jam. iii. 9.

Spirit of Christ, may indeed, through temptation, for a season quit the ark and go to the world ; but, like the dove, he can find no rest till he returns to the Lord.—They who are saved from destruction, must on earth witness the desolations which sin makes, with aching hearts and weeping eyes ; and in many things share in them. But the consolations of God will counterbalance these sorrows : and in heaven all tears shall be wiped away ; so that even the destruction of the wicked will in no wise abate the perfect felicity of the righteous.—The mercy of God, the sacrifice of Christ, and the grace of the Holy Spirit, cause the difference between those who are saved, and those who perish : and the first use which we should make of deliverances from trouble, is to return thanks to God for his mercy, solemnly to devote ourselves to him and his service, and to seek anew his providential protection and gracious blessing. Nor can that be wasted, whether of our valued property or more valuable time, which is expended in the service of God, according to his appointment. Finally, the divine authority of the Scripture, as well as the faithfulness of God, is demonstrated in the regular course of the seasons of the year. May we therefore admire the goodness of the Lord, trust his providence, receive all from his love, and use all to his glory.

NOTES.

CHAP. IX. V. 1, 2. It is not said, in what manner the Lord revealed himself to Noah and his sons : but he renewed to them the blessing pronounced originally on our first parents, because they were the appointed progenitors of a new race of men (Note i. 28) ; and he added several things, both for warning and encouragement, adapted to their situation. The dominion over the animal creation, which had been forfeited by sin, was again conceded ; yet with some variation from the original grant. It is probable, that the subjection of the animals before the fall, was voluntary, and that by instinct they regarded man as a friend : but since that event, it hath been more the result of fear ; most of them dreading him as a powerful enemy, whom they must either submit to or flee from. We continually witness the fulfilment of this promise, among creatures of all sorts. The ease with which horses are managed, notwithstanding their strength and spirit, and the severity with which they are treated ; and the safety with which large droves of oxen are goaded forward, frequently by a single youth, who, conscious of his superiority, fears not them whilst they stand in awe of him ; are circumstances which would be deemed very wonderful, were they not so common : but they are seldom considered as effected by the power, and as proving the faithfulness and goodness, of God. Even the most savage of the wild beasts have been, and are, tamed or subdued by man, and have an instinctive dread of him ; shunning populous places, and retreating into forests and deserts ; lying still all the day while man is abroad, roaming forth when he retires to rest ; and seldom injuring him unless pinched by hunger, or provoked by opposition. (Note, Ps. civ. 20—23.) Were this instinctive fear removed, and should the animals, conscious of their force, rise in general rebellion, what confusion and devastation must ensue !

V. 3, 4. Perhaps, before the flood men had taken the liberty of eating flesh ; but it seems not to have been explicitly allowed : the grant however, here given, fully warrants our use of the animals for food, but not the abuse of them by intemperance or cruelty. This is not here limited to any kind of animals ; so that the distinction of clean and unclean must relate to the use of them in sacrifice : and the eating of blood seems principally to have been prohibited, because blood typified the great atonement. (Notes, Acts xv. 19—29. Marg. Ref. f.) Yet this restriction might be intended as a check to cruelty ; lest men, inured to shed and feed upon the blood of animals, should grow unfeeling, and be the less shocked at the idea of shedding human blood.

V. 5, 6. From this energetic declaration it certainly follows, that wilful murder ought invariably in all communities to be punished with death ; whatever form it assumes, or however it may, by specious pretences, be extenuated : and that God will himself require it of those, who suffer the murderer to escape ; so that the punishment due to murder will, in some way, be inflicted on them, as accessaries to the crime. This implies, that magistrates should be appointed, who might punish murderers with death ; though in the case of Cain the Lord had been pleased to prohibit all men from slaying him. (Notes, iv. 13—15. 2 Sam. xii. 13.) Perhaps the impious inhabitants of the old world had been emboldened by the example of Cain : and no intima-

7 And you, be ye fruitful, and multiply, bring forth abundantly in the earth, and multiply therein.

8 ¶ And God spake unto Noah, and to his sons with him, saying,

9 And I, behold I, ^lestablish my covenant with you, and with your seed after you;

10 And ^mwith every living creature that is with you, of the fowl, of the cattle, and of every beast of the earth with you, from all that go out of the ark, to every beast of the earth.

11 And I will establish my covenant with you; ⁿneither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood: neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth.

12 And God said, This is ^othe token of the covenant which I make between me and you, and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations:

13 I do set ^pmy bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth.

14 And it shall come to pass, when I bring a cloud over the earth, that the bow shall be seen in the cloud:

15 And I will ^qremember my covenant which is between me and you, and every living creature of all flesh; and l Il. 17. vi. 18. xvii. 7, 8. Is. liv. 9, 10.

m viii. 1. Ps. cxlv. 9. Jon. iv. 11.

n vii. 21—23. viii. 21, 22. 2 Pet. iii. 11.

o xvii. 11. Ex. xii. 13. xiii. 16. Josh. ii. 12. Matt. xxvi. 26—28. 1 Cor. xi. 23—25.

p Ez. i. 28. Rev. iv. 3. x. 1.

q Ex. xxviii. 12. Lev. xxvi. 42—45. Ps. cvi. 45. Jer. xiv. 21. Ez. xvi. 60. Luke i. 72.

^rthe waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh.

16 And the bow shall be in the cloud; and I will look upon it, that I may remember the ^severlasting covenant, between God and every living creature of all flesh, that is upon the earth.

17 And God said unto Noah, This is the token of the covenant, which I have established between me and all flesh that is upon the earth.

18 ¶ And the sons of Noah, that went forth of the ark, ^twere Shem, and Ham, and Japheth: and ^uHam is the father of ^vCanaan.

19 These are the three sons of Noah: and ^xof them was the whole earth overspread.

20 ¶ And Noah began to be ^yan husbandman, and he planted a vineyard.

21 And he drank of the wine, and ^zwas drunken, ^aand he was uncovered within his tent.

22 And ^bHam the father of Canaan saw the nakedness of his father, and ^ctold his two brethren without.

23 And Shem and Japheth took a garment, and laid it upon both their shoulders, ^dand went backward, and covered the nakedness of their father; and their faces were backward, and they saw not their father's nakedness.

s xvii. 13. 19. 2 Sam. xxiii. 5. Is. lv. 3. Jer. xxxii. 40. Heb. xiii. 20.

t v. 32. x. 1. u x. 6. * Heb. Chanaan.

x viii. 17. x. 2—32. 1 Chr. i. 4—28.

y iii. 18, 19. 23. iv. 2. v. 29. Prov. xii. 11. Ec. v. 9

z vi. 9. xix. 32—36. Prov. xx. 1. xxxiii. 31, 32. Ec. vii. 20. Luke xxi. 34. Rom. xiii. 13. Gal. v. 21.

a Hab. ii. 16. Rev. iii. 18.

b 25. x. 6. 15—19. 1 Chr. i. 8. 13—16.

c 2 Sam. i. 19, 20. Ps. xxxv. 21. Prov. xxx. 17. Ob. 12, 13. 1 Cor. xiii. 6.

d Ex. xx. 12. Lev. xix. 32. Rom. xiii. 7. Gal. vi. 1. 1 Tim. v. 17. 19. 1 Pet. ii. 17. iv. 8.

tion is given, that any murderer was punished with death during all that period of violence. To impress the greater horror of destroying man's life, it was enjoined that even the beast which killed a man should be put to death. (Note, Ex. xxi. 28—32.)—It is a subject for serious enquiry, to all who are cordially affected to the welfare of these nations, how far national guilt is contracted, when so many are suffered to elude justice, who commit wilful, deliberate murder in duels; whilst many thieves are put to death, a punishment which God never commanded to be inflicted on them, and perhaps does not approve. The connivance also of British rulers in India at the murders committed by the inhabitants, in their idolatry and idolatrous customs, should not be forgotten. (Num. xxxv. 33. 2 Kings xxi. 16. xxiv. 4.) Though the moral image of God, in which man was at first created, is defaced, yet the natural image remains: and it is the most daring act of rebellion against God to assault his visible image on earth, and destroy the life which he communicated.—It is observable that the reason, given for the punishment of the murderer with death, is taken from the affront which he offers to God, not from the injury which he does to man.

V. 9—17. The word, rendered covenant, sometimes means a reciprocal agreement between two or more parties; and at other times a positive engagement made by one party, without any stipulation being required of the other: that established with Noah was of the latter sort. To obviate the fears of him and his posterity, the Lord engaged, that he would drown the earth no more, notwithstanding man's wickedness.—Probably, the rainbow had appeared before the flood, being the effect of natural causes: but it was now appointed to a new use, and made a seal and pledge of a particular engagement. This was confirmed by an everlasting covenant, or one which shall never be abolished. (Note, xvii. 7, 8.) Without revelation this gracious assurance could not be known; and without faith it can be of no use to us: and thus it is in respect of a still greater and more imminent danger, to which all are exposed; and to the new covenant, with its blessings and securities, which in these events was prefigured. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 19. Of them, &c.] This precludes the conjecture, that Noah himself had other children, though he lived above three hundred years after the flood.

V. 20—23. When Noah, after the deluge, began again to cultivate the earth, he planted a vineyard, made wine, and was betrayed into excess. Some have thought that wine was now first made of grapes, and that Noah, not aware of its effects, was surprised into drunkenness.—But this is highly improbable; for even in the most savage tribes, the

^c 22. iii. 14. iv. 11. ¹ And Noah awoke from his wine, and knew what his younger son had done unto him.
¹ xv. 7. Deut. xxvii. 16. xxviii. 18. Matt. xxv. 41.
^f Josh. ix. 23. 27. ² And he said, ^o Cursed be Canaan; ^r a servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren.
^g Judg. i. 28—30. ^h 1 Kings ix. 20. ⁱ 2 Chr. viii. 7. 8.
^h Deut. xxxiii. 26. ² And he said, ^s Blessed be ^h the LORD God of Shem; and Canaan shall be ^{*} his servant.
ⁱ Ps. cxliv. 15. ^k Or, servant to them. xxvii. 37. 40.
^j xi. 10—26. xii. 1—3.—Luke iii. 23—36. Sem. Heb. xi. 16.

²⁷ God shall [†] enlarge Japheth, and he shall ¹ dwell in the tents of Shem; and Canaan shall be his servant.
[†] Or, persuade.
¹ Mal. i. 11. Eph. ii. 14. 19. iii. 6.

²⁸ ¶ And Noah lived after the flood three hundred and fifty years.

²⁹ And all the days of Noah were ^k nine hundred and fifty years: and he died.
^k v. 5. 20. 27. 32. xi. 11—25.

art of making intoxicating liquors is known: and though a man might plant two or three vines, for the sake of the grapes; who ever “planted a vineyard,” except for the sake of wine? Indeed, the fact seems recorded by the inspired historian, with that perfect impartiality, which is peculiar to the Scripture, as an instance and evidence of human frailty and imperfection. Ham appears to have been a man of bad character: and probably he rejoiced to find his father in so unbecoming a situation; that, by exposing him, he might retaliate for the reproofs, which he had received from his parental authority: and perhaps Canaan first discovered Noah’s situation, and told it to Ham. In that case, the event must have occurred several years after the flood; for there were but eight persons in the ark, and consequently Ham had no children at that time.—The conduct of Ham in exposing his father to his brethren, and their behaviour in turning away from the sight of his disgrace, form a striking contrast. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 24, 25. This portion of Scripture, though attended with some difficulties, evidently contains a remarkable prophecy, which was recorded for the encouragement of the Israelites, in warring against the devoted Canaanites.—There is no authority for altering the text, and reading as some do, “Cursed be Ham the father of Canaan:” yet the frequent mention of Ham, as the father of Canaan, suggests the thought, that the latter was also criminal. Ham is thought to have been the second, and not the youngest, son of Noah: (Note, x. 1:) and if so, the words, “knew what his younger son had done,” refer to Canaan his grandson.—Ham must have felt it a very mortifying rebuke, when his own father was inspired on this occasion, to predict the durable oppression and slavery of his posterity: Canaan also was rebuked, by learning that the curse would especially rest on that branch of the family, which should descend from him: for his posterity were no doubt principally, though not exclusively intended. The devoted nations, which God destroyed before Israel, were descended from Canaan: and so were the Phenicians and the Carthaginians, who were at length subjugated with dreadful destruction by the Greeks and Romans. ‘The whole continent of Africa was peopled principally by the descendants of Ham: and for how many ages have the better parts of that country lain under the dominion of the Romans, and then of the Saracens, and now of the Turks. In what wickedness, ignorance, barbarity, slavery, misery live most of the inhabitants! and of the poor negroes, how many hundreds every year are sold and bought, like beasts in the market; and conveyed from one quarter of the world, to do the work of beasts in another!’ Bp. Newton. This, however, in no measure vindicates the covetous and barbarous oppression of those, who thus enrich themselves with the products of their sweat and blood. God has not commanded us to enslave negroes, as he did Israel to extirpate the Canaanites; and therefore, without doubt, he will severely punish this cruel injustice.—True religion has hitherto flourished very little among Ham’s descendants; they remain to this day almost entire strangers to Christianity; and their condition in every age has remarkably coincided with this prediction. (Notes, Ez. xxvi.—xxxii.) ‘There never has been a son of Ham, who has shaken a sceptre over the head of Japheth. Shem hath subdued Japheth, and Japheth subdued Shem: but Ham never subdued either.’ Mede. This must be understood, with some exceptions in the first ages of the world: for the Egyptians enslaved Israel, and it is recorded that they made extensive conquests in Asia. (2 Chr. xii. 2—4.) Nimrod, it also seems probable, subjugated and tyrannized over the descendants of Shem, when he “went to Ashur and built Nineveh.” (Note, x. 8—12.)

V. 26. The descendants of Shem, in the line of Arphaxad, Eber, and Peleg, included all the posterity of Abraham; and the Lord Jesus, “in whom all the nations of the earth are blessed,” sprang from him.—Thus JEHOVAH was especially “the God of Shem.” His descendants comprised a vast majority of the worshippers of the true God, till the coming of Christ; and afterwards they were the first and principal instruments, of bringing other nations to share the blessings of his salvation; so that the descendants of the other sons of Noah, when converted to Christianity, are taught to worship and “bless JEHOVAH the God of Shem.” (Note, Zech. viii. 20—23.)—The posterity of Abraham also subjugated or destroyed the posterity of Canaan; and the nations, which sprang from Shem by his other sons, have prospered greatly, enjoyed fruitful countries, and been far more civilized than the race of Ham.

V. 27. Japheth seems to have been the progenitor of above half the human race: and the principal success of the gospel, in the calling of the Gentiles, has hitherto been among his descendants. (Notes, x. 1—5.) Thus God has enlarged Japheth, and persuaded him, (as some render the word, marg.) “to dwell in the tents of Shem,” by receiving the Gospel from preachers of Abraham’s race, who descended from Shem; and so obtaining admission into the church.—The descendants of Japheth have also obtained that dominion, under the Grecian and Roman Empires, and in subsequent ages, which was for a long time chiefly possessed by the posterity of Shem. Indeed, even a general knowledge of the outlines of history will suffice to satisfy the serious enquirer, that the descendants of Canaan have been subjected to those of Shem and Japheth, through many generations: and the extraordinary accomplishment of this prediction, which contains almost a prophetick history of the world, vindicates Noah from the suspicion of CHAP. X.

The posterity of Noah, by Japheth, 1—5 ; by Ham, with some particulars concerning Nimrod, and the descendants of Canaan, 6—20 ; by Shem, 21—32.

a h. 4. v. 1. vi. 9.
b 21 1 Chr. i. 5—
7. 1s. lxvi. 19
Ez xxvii. 7 12
—14. 19. xxxviii.
2. 6 xxxix. 1.
Rev. xx. 8.

NOW these ^aare the generations of the sons of Noah ; Shem, Ham, and Japheth : and unto them were sons born after the flood.

2 ¶ The ^bsons of Japheth ; Gomer, and Magog, and Madai, and Javan, and Tubal, and Meshech, and Tiras.

3 And the sons of Gomer ; Ashkenaz, and Riphath, and Togarmah.

4 And the sons of Javan ; Elishah, and Tarshish, ^cKittim, and ^dDodanim.

5 By these were the ^disles of the Gentiles divided in their lands ; every one ^eafter his tongue, after their families, in their nations.

c Num. xxiv. 24
1s. xliii. 1. 12.
Dan. xi. 50.
Chittim.
d Or, Rodanim.
d 25. Ps. lxxii. 10
1s. xxiv. 15. xl
15. xli. 5. xlii. 4.
10. xlix. 1. li. 5.
Jer. ii. 10. xxv.
22. Zeph. ii. 11.
e 20. xi. 1—9

having uttered it from personal resentment ; and fully proves that the Spirit of God took occasion, from Ham's misconduct, to reveal his secret purposes, for a very important benefit to posterity even to this day. (Notes, xlvi. xlix.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS

V. 1—23.

The blessing of God is the real cause of prosperity, personal, relative, and national.—With what thankfulness should we receive that immense advantage, ease, and pleasure, which result from the labour of the domestick animals, and which the flesh of so many creatures affords us ; and the security that we enjoy from the assaults of the noxious and ferocious, through the fear and dread of man which God hath impressed upon them !—But, though God has constituted us masters, he will call us to an awful account if we act as tyrants ; and avenge the cause of his oppressed creatures upon their oppressors.—How greatly then should we dread murder, and all those passions which produce that enormous crime ! Though the murderer may escape, or bribe, or outbrave, human justice ; yet, except he repent, he shall never escape the vengeance of God.—The Lord takes care to obviate the fears and anxieties of his people ; and we should copy the example of his kindness in this and in every other instance.—But what is man in his best estate ! “ Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall : ” and let not him, who has triumphed over great temptations, be secure even in respect of such as are less ; for they who have behaved well in the worst of company, and amidst the worst examples, are not safe even in solitude. Let us then watch and pray, and not be high-minded ; but fear ; and remember that drunkenness is a sin especially to be shunned, as it both exposes men to shame, and is an occasion of further wickedness, of various kinds, in themselves and others.—But, though the righteous fall, he shall not be utterly cast down ; nor is a single act of sin, inadvertently committed, to be looked upon in the same light, as allowed and habitual transgression : the former may be the blemish of the saint, the latter is the brand of the hypocrite.—In honouring parents, magistrates, seniors, and other honourable characters, we ought to imitate the example of Shem and Japheth ; not only respecting their wisdom and goodness, but covering their incidental blemishes and failures : for a peculiar blessing belongs to those who act in this manner ; but an awful curse awaits such as copy the pattern of Canaan or Ham, in their conduct towards those whom God has commanded them to honour.

V. 24—29.

We should carefully observe, and continually keep in mind, how fully these prophecies, so evidently fulfilling in all nations and ages, demonstrate the divine original of the Bible ; that we may receive the instructions and commands of God, with more implicit faith and obedience. Thus we shall learn our guilt and danger ; and, fleeing from the wrath and curse which is coming on the impenitent and unbelieving, we shall embrace the invitations of the gospel, accept of its precious salvation, rely on the security of the new Covenant, and patiently wait for the blessings, which will assuredly be conferred on all believers. Then we shall be safe in those wasting calamities, which sweep others into destruction : and, though what we witness or experience may give us great pain, and may even afford lamentable proof of our weakness and depravity ; yet we shall be carried through all trials and temptations, and overcome all our enemies ; we shall be made instruments of good to others ; and at length find, that all the promises of the Scripture have been fulfilled to us, and all our prayers that were grounded on them have been completely answered. “ O LORD God of hosts, blessed is the man that putteth “ his trust in thee ! ”

NOTES.

CHAP. X. V. 1. Shem, the progenitor of Abraham, and of the Messiah, is constantly placed first, when the sons of Noah are enumerated ; and Japheth last : yet it is generally supposed that Japheth was the eldest son of Noah, and Shem the youngest. (21.) Accordingly, in this chapter, the posterity of Japheth are first mentioned.—After the flood.] This confirms the supposition, that Noah's sons had no children till after the flood.

V. 2—5. The sacred writer was about to enter upon the history of Abraham and his family, to which his narrative would afterwards be principally confined : but before he did this, he was led to give a general account of the several branches of Noah's family, from which the original of many nations may be distinctly traced. And, in like manner, before he enters on the history of Isaac, he gives a brief account of the descendants of Ishmael, and of Abraham's sons by Keturah ; and before he confines his narrative to Jacob's family, he states some particulars concerning Esau's posterity. (xxv. 1—18. xxxvi.)—This chapter, as a kind of introduction to universal history, implies many things afterwards related. It is supposed by many learned men, and shewn at least by probable arguments, that the descendants of Gomer, Japheth's eldest son, settled in the northern parts of Asia Minor, and then spread into the Cimmerian Bosphorus, and the adjacent regions : and that from them the numerous tribes of the Gauls, Germans, Celts, and Cimbrians descended. The Scythians, Tartars, and other

6 ¶ And ^f the sons of Ham; ^e Cush, and Mizraim, and ^h Phut, and Canaan.

7 And the sons of Cush; Seba, and ^g Havilah, and Sabtah, and Raamah, and Sabtecha: and the sons of Raamah; ^k Sheba, and ^l Dedan.

8 And Cush begat ^m Nimrod: he began to be a mighty one in the earth.

9 He was a ⁿ mighty hunter ^o before the LORD: wherefore it is said, ^p Even as Nimrod the mighty hunter before the LORD.

10 And the beginning of his kingdom was ^q Babel, and Erech, and Aecad, and ^r Calneh, in the land of ^s Shinar.

11 Out of that land ^t went forth ^u Asshur, and builded ^v Nineveh, and ^w the city Rehoboth, and Calah, 12 And Resen between Nineveh and Calah: the same is a great city.

13 And Mizraim begat ^x Ludim, and Ananim, and Lehabim, and Naphtuhim.

14 And ^y Pathrusim, and Casluhim, (out of whom came ^z Philistim,) and ^{aa} Caphtorim.

15 And Canaan begat ^a Sidon his first-born, and ^b Heth,

16 And the ^b Jebusite, and the Emorite, and the Girgasite,

17 And the ^c Hivite, and the Arkite, and the Sinite,

18 And the ^d Arvadite, and the ^e Zemarite, and the ^f Hamathite: and afterward were the families of the Canaanites spread abroad.

19 And ^g the border of the Canaanites was from Sidon, ^h as thou comest to ⁱ Gerar, unto ^j Gaza: as thou goest unto ^k Sodom, and Gomorrah, and Admah, and Zeboim, even unto Lasha.

20 These are the sons of ^l Ham, after their families, after their tongues, in their countries, and in their nations.

21 ¶ Unto Shem also, ^m the father of all the children of Eber, ⁿ the brother of Japheth the elder, even to him were children born.

22 The ^o children of Shem; ^p Elam, and Asshur, and ^q Arphaxad, and ^r Lud, and ^s Aram.

northern nations, are supposed to be descendants of Magog, Meshech, and Tubal; the Medes, of Madai; the Ionians, and indeed all the Greeks, of Javan; and the Thracians of Tiras. Nearly all the inhabitants of Europe, and probably of America, descended from Japheth, besides those of the northern regions of Asia.—“The isles of the “Gentiles” generally mean the parts of Europe, most known to the ancient inhabitants of Asia. The inhabitants of Britain are in general descended from Japheth, and especially concerned in “the isles of the Gentiles.”—The reader, by examining carefully the marginal references, may perceive, in several particulars, some of the grounds on which these conclusions rest: but it would be improper, in this place, to enter on so complicated a subject.

V. 6, 7. From Cush, the son of Ham, the Ethiopians in Africa, and many tribes in Asia, (inhabiting part of Arabia, and often improperly called Ethiopians,) were evidently descended. Mizraim was the ancestor of the Egyptians, Cyrenians, and Lybians; or (the word being plural) it may be the general name of the family or tribe, whence they sprang; and Phut of the Mauritians.—In short, all Africa is supposed to have been peopled by Ham’s posterity: besides the Philistines, Canaanites, and Phœnicians.

V. 8—12. Nimrod seems at first to have exceedingly distinguished himself by hunting, which was then not so much a diversion, as a useful method of preventing the hurtful increase of wild beasts. This employment required great courage and address, and exposed a man to much danger and hardship; and thus afforded a field for ambition to aspire after pre-eminence, and gradually attached a number of valiant men to one leader. From such a beginning, it is likely, that Nimrod began to claim authority, and enforce subjection. In fact, he is the first king, of whom we read in authentick history; and afterward he took occasion to wage war to extend his conquests, and to enlarge his acquisitions by violence and blood. Thus, in a daring manner casting off the fear of God, and acting in defiance of his late prohibition of shedding human blood, Nimrod rendered himself notorious, and his name became a proverb. When he had erected a kingdom at Babel, “he went forth “out of that land to Asshur, and builded Nineveh.” Thus the words may be rendered, (marg.) and this appears to be the true meaning of them; for the descendants of Ham are spoken of; not those of Shem, who had a son called Asshur. (22.) Nimrod seems to have been the principal person concerned, in building both Babylon and Nineveh.—The words translated, the city Rehoboth, are more properly rendered in the margin the streets of the city. Little interesting to us is known concerning the other cities here mentioned.

The Septuagint render the words translated “a mighty hunter,” γίγας κυνηγός, a hunting giant.

V. 13, 14. The names, being plural, seem to be those of families, not individuals.

V. 15—19. Several of these tribes are not mentioned among the people, whom the Lord destroyed before Israel. Some of them inhabited a country further northward than the promised land; and various changes would take place, during a course of ages, in respect of names, especially by uniting two or more families into one. The boundaries of the Canaanites are nearly the same, as those assigned to the Israelites west of Jordan, including also the country of Sodom and Gomorrah. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 21. Of Eber.] Of all the Hebrews, and of many other nations, who were descended from Shem by this branch.

V. 22—30. Besides the descendants of Shem by Ar-

^a Job i. 1. Jer xxv. 20. 23 And the children of Aram; ^a Uz, and Hul, and Gether, and Mash.

^a Heb. Shelah. 24 And Arphaxad begat ^a Salah; and ^a Salah begat Eber.

^a xi. 16—19. Luke iii. 35, 36. ^x 32. Deut. xxxii. 8. Acts xvii. 26. 25 And unto Eber were born two sons; ^a the name of one was Peleg, for ^a in his days was the earth divided; and his brother's name was Joktan.

^a Chr. i. 20—23. 26 And ^a Joktan begat Almodad, and Sheleph, and Hazarmaveth, and Jerah, 27 And Hadoram, and Uzal, and Diklah, 28 And Obal, and Abimael, and Sheba,

^a xxv. 3. 1 Kings x. 1. ^a 1 Kings ix. 28. xxii. 48. 2 Chr. viii. 18. ix. 10. Job. xxii. 24. xxviii. 16. 29. xiv. 9. 1s. xiii. 12. ^b ii. 11. xxv. 18. 1 Sam. xv. 7. 29 And ^a Ophir, and ^b Havilah, and Jobab: all these were the sons of Joktan.

30 And their dwelling was from Mesha, as thou goest unto Sephar, a mount of the east.

31 These are the sons of Shem, ^c after their families, after their tongues, in their lands, after their nations.

^d v. 29—31. 32 These ^d are the families of the sons of Noah, after their generations, in their nations: and by these were the ^e nations divided in the earth after the flood.

^e 5. 20.

^e 25.

phaxad, the Persians are supposed to be the posterity of Elam; the Assyrians and Chaldeans, of Asshur: and the Syrians, Armenians, and many tribes inhabiting Mesopotamia, of Aram: and the immensely numerous inhabitants of the East Indies, China, and Japan, may perhaps be considered as the descendants of Joktan, the son of Eber. Indeed, many learned men suppose that they find all Joktan's descendants in the large peninsula between the Red-Sea and the Persian Gulph; and appear to derive the Arabians in general from him. But the mention of a mountain in the East, warrants us to look for his posterity more to the East: at least if they settled in Arabia at first, some of them seem afterwards to have migrated to a greater distance. Indeed, this appears to be the most accurate account of the peopling of the regions in the eastern parts of Asia, south of Tartary. It is likewise certain, that many of the Arabians trace back their original to Ishmael and Keturah.—Peleg signifies division: and had not the division spoken of been appointed about the time of his birth, it does not appear why that name might not as properly have been given to any of his contemporaries, as to him.

V. 31. Tongues.] (Note, xi. 1, 2.) The division, mentioned before (25), seems to have been made by divine appointment (Marg. Ref.): but it was not complied with, till after the confusion of tongues; and the historian here refers to the consequences in later ages.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

As all mankind are of one family, and nearly related in Adam and Noah, how reasonable is it that we should love, and do good to, each other! Whenever we behold a human being, whatever be his language and garb, or wherever he

CHAP. XI.

Only one language in the world, ∴ The building of Babel interrupted by the confusion of tongues, and the builders dispersed, 2—9. A genealogy from Shem to Abram, 10—27. Some account of Abram and his family, and of his removal from his native country, 28—32.

AND the whole earth ^a was of one ^a language, and of one ^a speech.

2 And it came to pass, as they journeyed ^a from the east, that they found a plain in the land of ^b Shinar; and they dwelt there.

3 And ^a they said one to another, ^c Go to, let us make brick, and ^b burn them throughly. And they had ^d brick for stone, and ^e slime had they for mortar.

4 And they said, Go to, let us build us a city and a tower, ^f whose top may reach unto heaven, ^g and let us make us a name, ^h lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth.

5 And the LORD ⁱ came down to see the city and the tower, which the children of men builded.

^a Is. xix. 18. Zeph. iii. 9. Acts ii. 6. ^b Heb. lip. ^c Heb. words.

^d Or, eastward. xliii. 11. Heb. ^e See on x. 10.

^f Heb. a man said to his neighbour. ^g 4. 7. Eccl. ii. 1. 1s. v. 5. Jam. iv. 13. v. 1. ^h Heb. burn them to a burning. ⁱ Ex. i. 14. v. 7—18. 2 Sam. xii. 31. 1s. ix. 10. Ixv. 3. Nah. iii. 14. ^j Ex. xiv. 10. Ex. ii. 2. ^k Deut. i. 28. ix. 1. Dan. iv. 11. 22. ^l 2 Sam. viii. 13. Prov. x. 7. Dan. iv. 30. John v. 44. ^m 8. Ps. xcii. 9. Luke i. 51. ⁿ xviii. 21. Ex. xix. 11. John ii. 13.

was born, we should recognize a relation, and behave to him accordingly. In this view, how unnatural and absurd is that prejudice against foreigners, and that contempt of them, which generally prevail! And how can it consist with love to our neighbours; our brethren, “bone of our bone, and flesh of our flesh,” to treat them with rigour, or hold them in slavery?—But “whence then come wars and fightings amongst us?” From that first murderer, who so early stirred up in fallen man the vile lusts of ambition, covetousness, revenge; and cruelty, and armed brethren against each other in horrid war; and who hath in all ages filled the earth with slaughter and devastation, which, it might previously have been supposed, could gratify none but himself. But the very existence of war, and the necessity of always being ready for it, and of sometimes waging it, too plainly prove man's depravity, as well as Satan's influence. Blessed be God, the days are coming, when all the “nations shall beat their swords into plow-shares, and their spears into pruning-hooks, and they shall learn war no more:” and then ambitious or rapacious conquerors will no longer be adjudged illustrious characters, as in man's partial histories; but they will be branded with infamy, as in the impartial records of the Bible.

NOTES.

CHAP. XI. V. 1, 2. Many learned men are of opinion, that the events here recorded occurred about the time of Peleg's birth, or a hundred and one years after the deluge: but their arguments are by no means conclusive: and the idea impressed on the mind in reading the chapter, of the numbers, to which the family of Noah was already increased, favours the opinion that a longer term of years had elapsed.

London: Published for the Proprietors of Scott's Atlas, by Weyman, Macintosh & Hoyle, 24 Beccles Street, Covent Garden Square.

k iii. 22. Judg. x.
14. 1 Kings xviii.
27. Ec. xi. 9
1. i. ix. 19. Acts
xvii. 26.
m vi. 5. xiii. 21. Ps.
ii. 1—4. Luke i.
51.
n 5. i. 26. iii 22.
ls. vi. 8.
o Job v. 12. 13.
xii. 20. Ps. xxxiii.
10. Acts ii. 4—11. p x. 5. 20. 32. xlii.
23. Deut. xxviii.
49. Ps. iv. 9. Jer.
v. 15. 1 Cor. xiv. 2—11.

6 And the LORD said, ^k Behold, ^l the people is one, and they have all one language; and this they begin to do: and now nothing will be restrained from them which they have ^m imagined to do.

7 Go to, ⁿ let us go down, and there ^o confound their language, that they ^p may not understand one another's speech.

8 So the ^q LORD scattered them abroad ^r from thence upon the face of all the earth: and they left off to build the city.

9 Therefore is the name of it called ^s Babel, because the LORD did there confound the language of all the earth: and from thence did the LORD scatter them abroad upon ^t the face of all the earth.

q 4. xlix. 7. Luke
i. 51.
r x. 25. 32. Acts
xvii. 26.
s * That is, Confusion. x. 10. In xiii. xiv. Jer. i.
li.
t

Probably the division of the earth before mentioned, was a distinct transaction from the dispersion, which took place on this occasion. It was the purpose of God, declared in the blessing pronounced on the sons of Noah, that they should “replenish the earth.” (ix. 1.) This implied that they should be divided into distinct nations, under separate governments, inhabiting different countries, till the whole earth was re-peopled. But, as they all spake one language, and, with but few exceptions, had cast off the fear of God; they formed a project which tended to counteract his purpose.—Some regular division of the earth seems to have taken place at the time that Peleg was born, probably by divine appointment, under the direction of Noah and his sons. (Marg. Ref.—Note, x. 22—30.)—But the several families, to which the different regions were assigned, had not yet separated, and were unwilling to separate.—The expression, “as they journeyed from the East,” may refer to some of the expeditions headed by Nimrod, who, having united the whole company under his government, perhaps led them to combine in this undertaking: (Note, x. 8—12:) though some think that Noah had settled to the East of Shinar, when he left the ark, and that his descendants were now removing towards the West.

V. 3, 4. The company, or their leaders, consulted together, and excited and animated each other in encountering difficulties. The plain which they had chosen, contained no quarries of stone; but it yielded quantities of bitumen, which formed a natural cement: and, having thus obtained mortar, their ingenuity and resolution suggested a method of surmounting the other impediment to their design, (which was, to erect both a city, and an exceedingly high tower;) by burning clay into bricks. If they had planned this enormous building to secure themselves against a future deluge, as forgetting or distrusting the promise of God, or defying his vengeance; they would probably have chosen for the purpose some high mountain, and not a plain: but they proposed to themselves the acquisition of renown; they wanted to do something in order to be admired and celebrated; and they sought their own glory among posterity. Yet it is remarkable that no history records so much as the name of one of these Babel-builders, except that obscure intimation respecting Nimrod before referred to.—It appears likewise, that they meant this tower to be a centre of union, that they might not be divided, and “scattered abroad upon “the face of the whole earth.” And probably their chieftains, Nimrod especially, intended it to be the metropolis of that universal dominion of which they seem to have been ambitious.—It does not appear that they built the tower for an idolatrous temple expressly; but idolatry was early introduced, and this became one of its chief residences.

V. 5. The Lord took particular notice of this daring enterprise; and men, who take such notice, come to the spot to examine for themselves. (Note, vi. 6, 7.)—The distinction between “the children of men,” or the openly profane, and “the children of God,” or professors of true religion, still subsisted. We may be sure, that Noah, Shem, Eber, and other pious persons, had no concern in this ambitious rebellious project.

V. 6—9. Ever since Adam broke through the fence of the divine prohibition, by eating the forbidden fruit, men have not been restrained from any thing on which they set their hearts, unless by a strong hand. The remarkable language here used, not only implies counsel and determination, and an indignant contempt of the presumptuous project formed by the builders; but is likewise a clear intimation of the plurality of persons in the Deity, and can admit of no other consistent interpretation. (Note, i. 26, 27.)—The power of that God, who first gave man the gift of speech, was exerted in confounding the language of this rebellious company; and nothing could be more suited to break their wicked combination. Some indeed have thought, that no more is meant, than dividing their counsels, by leaving them to their violent passions, till they quarrelled and separated; and several other interpretations have been given: but the variety of languages, which has ever since prevailed on earth, proves that their language was confounded, and that they could not understand each other. By an extraordinary miracle, their minds were strangely confused, as to the meaning of the terms in which they had before conversed; and led to form other words and expressions. Thus new languages were produced; and, probably, these were as numerous as the principal families in the company, who could understand one another but could not converse with their former associates. Thus the very plan which they had formed to prevent their dispersion made way for it; and in consequence the several tribes removed to the regions allotted to them. In some respects this was a severe rebuke, and led to the more entire separation of most of them from the worshippers of God: but it tended to accomplish his purpose in replenishing the earth with the human species.—‘There is scarcely a great nation in the world, but what has ‘its own language. The dividing of languages was therefore the dividing of nations; and so a bar to the whole ‘world being under one government.’ Fuller.—Noah, and other pious persons, chiefly the descendants of Shem in the line of Eber, not being concerned in this project, retained the original language. Now, if this was, as it is highly probable, the Hebrew, we may conclude it was thus called from Eber, to whose descendants it was peculiar: and perhaps this is the most satisfactory reason that can be assigned, why Abraham is called the Hebrew, and his posterity the Hebrews. This name, however, seems to have been at first general to all the race of Eber.—Babel signifies confusion; (Bp. Patrick: Leigh;) and the city was afterwards called 27. x. 21. 22. 1 Chr. i. 17-27. Luke iii. 34-36. 10 ¶ These are ^athe generations of Shem: Shem was an hundred years old, and begat Arphaxad two years after the flood.

t v. 4. &c. B. C. 1846. 11 And ^aShem lived after he begat Arphaxad five hundred years, and begat sons and daughters.

B. C. 2311. 12 And Arphaxad lived five and thirty years, and begat Salah.

B. C. 1908. 13 And Arphaxad lived after he begat Salah four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.

B. C. 2281. 14 And Salah lived thirty years, and begat Eber.

B. C. 1878. 15 And Salah lived after he begat Eber four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.

u x. 21. 25. 1 Chr. i. 19. B. C. 2247. * Luke iii. 35. 16 And ^aEber lived four and thirty years, and begat ^aPeleg.

17 And Eber lived after he begat Peleg four hundred and thirty years, and begat sons and daughters.

f Luke iii. 35. † Luke iii. 35. † Luke iii. 35. † Luke iii. 35. 18 And Peleg lived thirty years, and begat ^aReu.

B. C. 2008. 19 And Peleg lived after he begat Reu two hundred and nine years, and begat sons and daughters.

1 Luke iii. 35. † Luke iii. 35. † Luke iii. 35. † Luke iii. 35. 20 And Reu lived two and thirty years, and begat ^aSerug.

B. C. 1976. 21 And Reu lived after he begat Serug two hundred and seven years, and begat sons and daughters.

B. C. 2155. 22 And Serug lived thirty years, and begat Nahor.

23 And Serug lived after he begat Nahor two hundred years, and begat sons and daughters. B. C. 1955.

24 And Nahor lived nine and twenty years, and begat ^aTerah. † Luke iii. 34. † Luke iii. 34. † Luke iii. 34. † Luke iii. 34.

25 And Nahor lived after he begat Terah an hundred and nineteen years, and begat sons and daughters. B. C. 2126. B. C. 2007.

26 ¶ And Terah lived seventy years, and begat ^aAbram, Nahor, and Haran. x xii. 4. 5. xxii. 20. —24. Josh. xxiv. 2. 1 Chr. i. 26, 27.

27 Now these are the generations of Terah: Terah begat Abram, Nahor, and Haran; and Haran begat ^aLot. y 31. xii. 4. xiii. 1. —11. xiv. 12. xix. 1—29. 2 Pet. ii. 7.

28 And Haran died before his father Terah, in the land of his nativity, in ^aUr of the Chaldees. z xv. 7. Neh. ix. 7. Acts vii. 4.

29 And Abram and Nahor took them wives: the name of Abram's wife was ^aSarai; and the name of Nahor's wife, ^bMilcah, the daughter of Haran, the father of Milcah, and the father of Iscah. a xvii. 15. xx. 12. b xxii. 20. xxiv. 15.

30 But Sarai was ^cbarren; she had no child. c xv. 2. 3. xvi. 1. 2. xviii. 11. 12. xxv. 21. xxix. 31. xxx. 1. 2. Judg. xiii. 2. 1 Sam. i. 2. Luke i. 7. 36. d 26. 27. xii. 1.

31 And Terah ^dtook Abram his son, and Lot the son of Haran his son's son, and Sarai his daughter-in-law, his son Abram's wife; and ^ethey went forth with them from Ur of the Chaldees, to go into the land of Canaan; and they came unto ^fHaran, and dwelt there. e 28. Heb. xi. 8. f 32. xii. 4. xxvii. 43. xxix. 4. 5. — Acts vii. 4. Charan.

32 And the days of Terah were two hundred and five years: and Terah died in Haran.

Babylon, and continued, for many ages, the head-quarters of idolatry, and the type of the mystical Babylon, "the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth;" which likewise is, and will be, confusion.

V. 10—25. The sacred writer, having given a general account of the tribes and nations descended from the three sons of Noah; before he proceeded to trace the line of Shem to Abram, introduced the building of Babel and the confusion of tongues, as in a parenthesis. The Septuagint read, "Arphaxad lived one hundred and thirty-five years, and begat Cainan. . . . And Cainan lived one hundred and thirty years, and begat Sala." And St. Luke refers to the genealogy, with this additional link in it. (Luke iii. 36.)—According to the Hebrew text, followed by our version, we may by computation find, that the original revelation made to Adam, might be transmitted to Abram, at above two thousand years' distance, through only two intermediate persons. Adam lived till Methusaleh was two hundred and forty-three years old; and Methusaleh died when Shem was about one hundred, who lived almost as long as Abraham.—The Septuagint, indeed, add one hundred years to all, beginning at Arphaxad; and take them away from the subsequent life of some of them. (Note, v. 4—20.)—It is remarkable in how gradual a manner the life of man was shortened after the deluge, till it was confined within its present limits.

V. 26, 27. Terah seems to have lived seventy years before he had any children, and in process of time to have had Abram, Nahor, and Haran, and perhaps others. But, though Abram was mentioned first, as the most honourable character; it is probable that he was Terah's youngest son, and not born till his father was a hundred and thirty years of age. For Terah lived two hundred and five years: and Abram, who did not leave Haran till after his death, was only seventy-five when he departed thence. (xii. 5.)

V. 28—32. Sarai is supposed by some to have been the daughter of Haran, and the same as Iscah.—She is called the daughter-in-law of Terah (31), as being Abram's wife; yet Abram afterwards said, "she is the daughter of my father, but not the daughter of my mother." (xx. 12.) Probably Haran was the eldest son of Terah, and Abram his youngest by another wife: and thus, Sarai was the daughter, or grand-daughter, of Terah, Abram's father, but not of his mother.—It seems that Terah left his country

CHAP. XII.

God calls Abram and blesses him, 1—3. He, with Lot, leaves Haran and comes to Canaan, 4, 5. The Lord appears to him, and Abram worships, 6—9. Abram in a famine goes down to Egypt, and feigns his wife to be his sister, 10—13. She is taken into Pharaoh's house, who by plagues is compelled to restore her, 14—17. He reproveth Abram, and sends him away, 18—20.

^a xl. 31, 32. Is. xli. 9. 1. 2. Ez. xxxiii. 24.
^b Josh. xxiv. 2, 3. Ps. xlv. 10, 11. Luke xiv. 26—33. Acts vii. 2—6. Heb. xi. 8.

NOW the LORD ^a had said unto Abram, ^b Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee.

2 And ^c I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and ^d thou shalt be a blessing.

3 And ^e I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and ^f in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed.

^c xlii. 16. xvii. 6. xviii. 18. xli. 3. Ex. xxxii. 10. Num. xiv. 12. Deut. xxvi. 5. 2 Sam. vii. 9. 1 Kings iii. 8, 9. d. xiv. 14—16. xviii. 18. xix. 29. xxviii. 4. 1 Kings i. 47. Gal. iii. 14. e. xxvii. 29. Ex. xxxiii. 22. Num. xxiv. 9. Matt. xxv. 40, 45. cviii. 18. xxii. 18. xxvi. 4. xxviii. 14. xxx. 27, 30. xxxix. 5. Ps. lxxii. 17. Acts iii. 25, 26. Gal. iii. 8.

on a divine monition made to Abram. (xii. 1. Acts vii. 2, 3.)—Idolatry must have become very general at this early period; for both Terah and his family had served other gods before this call; which was doubtless one reason of the command to Abram finally to leave his native country. Terah appears to have been very ready to obey the call, and even active in removing from Ur: and he reached a place called Haran or Charran, (well known in history, and perhaps thus named from Terah's deceased son;) but here he stopped, probably through sickness and infirmity; and Abram, having attended him till he died, afterwards proceeded on his journey towards Canaan. The other branches of the family seem afterwards to have left Ur, and to have settled at Haran.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

How soon do men forget the most tremendous judgments, and return to their former crimes! The increase of wickedness kept pace with that of the human species; though the desolations of the deluge were before their eyes, though they sprang from the stock of righteous Noah, and though that patriarch was still living! So ineffectual is every thing, except the sanctifying grace of the Holy Spirit, to rectify the obliquity of the human will, and subdue the depravity of the human heart!—Arduous undertakings can be accomplished only by counsel, harmony, and mutual encouragement; which we often find in the enterprises of daring sinners against the cause of God, and which are too often wanting in the endeavours of his servants to promote his glory. There is, however, no counsel or wisdom against the Lord. While men on earth are plotting to defeat his purposes, “he sitteth in heaven, and laugheth them to scorn;” and all the efforts of sinners to honour themselves will at last terminate in shame and confusion.—In the difficulty with which our intercourse with foreign nations is carried on, and the labour with which learning is acquired, we experience the effects of the transaction at Babel. Indeed, one great hindrance to the promulgation of true religion, both in former and latter ages, has arisen from this source. Yet, “righteous art thou in all thy judgments, O LORD!”

Then it was thy sovereign purpose to spread the Gospel among the nations which thou hadst dispersed, how easily didst thou by the gift of tongues remove this impediment!—Oh! remove all other impediments, and fill the earth with truth and righteousness.

NOTES.

CHAP. XII. V. 1—3. To prevent the universal prevalence of idolatry, and to reserve a remnant, to whom his oracles might be delivered, and among whom his ordinances might be established, till the coming of Christ; the Lord, as a Sovereign, chose Abram, from among his associates in idolatry. “Thus the God of glory appeared to him,” probably by a visible manifestation; and, having made himself known unto him, and satisfied him that this was a divine revelation, he commanded him to leave his native country.—It is not certain that idolatry was more prevalent there than in Canaan; but Abram might more easily avoid it among strangers, than among his former associates: he was therefore likewise required to leave all his kindred, that is, all who would not accompany him.—“The LORD had said,” &c. That is, when he was in Ur of the Chaldees: and perhaps he repeated the call after Terah's death. To engage Abram's prompt obedience, God promised to bless him personally, in things temporal, spiritual, and eternal; and relatively in his posterity, by “making of him a great nation.”—God would also “make his name great.”—Abram was not renowned, either as a conqueror, a lawgiver, or an inventor of useful and ingenious arts: he was not a monarch, a genius, a philosopher, or so much as an author; but a plain man, dwelling in tents, and feeding cattle all his days: yet perhaps no mere man has been so widely and permanently honoured. The Jews, and many tribes of the Saracens and Arabians, justly own and revere him as their progenitor: many nations in the East exceedingly honour his memory at this day, and glory in their real or pretended relation to him. Throughout the visible church he has always been highly venerated; and at this day, Jews, Mohammedans, and many Gentiles, vie with each other and with Christians, who should most honour this ancient patriarch! Nothing could be more improbable at the time, than this event; yet the prediction has been fulfilling, most exactly and minutely, during the course of almost four thousand years! Need we any other proof, that the historian wrote as “he was moved by the Holy Ghost?”—The Lord also promised Abram that “he should be a blessing.” To the latest ages important blessings would for his sake be vouchsafed to his posterity; he should be an instrument of great good, while he lived, to his relations, domesticks, and neighbours; and his example would be eminently useful till the end of time. ‘All the true blessedness the world is now, or ever shall be, possessed of, is owing to Abram and his posterity. Through them we have a Bible, a Saviour, and a gospel. They are the stock on which the Christian church is grafted. Their very dispersions have proved the riches of the world.’ Fuller.—The Lord would also have the same friends and enemies with his chosen servant, rewarding the kindness, and punishing the injuries,

4 So Abram departed as the LORD had spoken unto him; ⁸ and Lot went with him: and Abram was seventy and five years old when he departed out of Haran.

5 And Abram took Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their substance that they had gathered, and ^h the souls that they had gotten ¹ in Haran; and they went forth to go into the land of Canaan, and ^k into the land of Canaan they came.

6 And Abram passed through the land into the place of ¹ Sichern, unto the plain of ^m Moreh. And the ⁿ Canaanite was then in the land.

7 And the LORD ^o appeared unto Abram, and said, ^p Unto thy seed will I give this land: and there ^q builded he h xiv 14.21. marg. xlv. 5-26

i xi. 31.
k Acts vii. 4. Heb. xi. 8, 9.
l xxxiii. 18. xxxiv. 2. xxxv. 4. Josh. xx. 7. xxiv. 32.
m Judg. ix. 1. 1 Kings xii. 1. Sichern. John iv. 6. Sychar. Acts vii. 16. Sichern.
n Deut. xi. 30. Judg. vii. 1. u. x. 15. 19. xiii. 7. xv. 18-21.
o xvii. 1. xviii. 1. xxxii. 20.
p xiii. 15. xvii. 3. xxvi. 3. xxxviii. 13. Ps. cv. 9-12. q 8. viii. 20. xiii. 4. 18. xvi. 25. xxxiii. 20.

an altar unto the LORD, who appeared unto him.

8 And he removed from thence unto a mountain on the east of ^r Beth-el, and pitched his tent, having Beth-el on the west, and ^s Hai on the east: and there he builded an altar unto the LORD, and ^t called upon the name of the LORD.

9 And Abram journeyed, ^u going on still toward the south.

10 ¶ And there was ^v a famine in the land: and Abram ^x went down into Egypt to sojourn there; for the famine was grievous in the land.

11 And it came to pass, when he was come near to enter into Egypt, that he said unto Sarai his wife, Behold now I know that thou art ^y a fair woman to look upon.

r xxviii 10. xxx. 3. 15, 16.
s Josh. vii. 2 viii. 3. At. Neh. xi. 31. Aja.
t iv. 26. xiii. 4. xxi. 33. Pa. cxi. 4. Joel ii. 32. Act. ii. 21. Rom. x. 12-14. i Cor. i. 2.
u Heb. in. going and journeying. xiii. 3.
v xxvi. 1. xlii. 5. xliii. 1. xlvii. 13. Ruth i. 1. 2 Sam. xxi. 1. 1 Kings xvii. xviii. 2 Kings iv. 38. vi. 25. vii. Pa. cvii. 34. Jer. xiv. 1. Acts vii. 11. xxxvi. 2. 3. xlvii. 3. 4. 2 Kings viii. 1, 2.
y xxvi. 7. xxx. 17. xxxix. 6. 2 Sam. xi. 2. Prov. xxxi. 30.

done to him, as if done to himself. In him, and in One descended from him, all blessings centre; and through and from him they have been communicated to unnumbered millions, and shall continue to be so, till all nations shall be made happy in him, and by faith in Jesus become "Abram's seed, and heirs according to the promise." (Notes, Acts iii. 24-26. Rom. iv. Gal. iii.)

V. 4, 5. "By faith Abram obeyed, and he went out "not knowing whither he went." He was fully satisfied that the call, promise, and command, were from the living God. He believed that his testimony was true, and his promise faithful, and that he was able to fulfil it. He was assured, that the blessing of the Almighty was sufficient to compensate for all that he could lose or leave behind, to countervail all trials, to supply all wants, and to answer and exceed all his desires and expectations. His natural reluctance might be strong; and many would deride him as a visionary, for leaving all, without so much as being able to inform his enquiring neighbours, or expostulating relatives, whither he was going. For it seems that Canaan was almost entirely unknown to him; being at least three hundred miles distant from Haran, and separated by great rivers, and an extensive and perilous desert.—Lot also, with his family, went with him, having become, probably by his means, a believer: and they took such of their possessions as could be removed, with the servants who were their property, and perhaps many of them proselytes to their religion. Thus with steady perseverance they went forward, and by the Lord's guidance and protection safely arrived in Canaan.

V. 6, 7. The Lord appeared to Abram on his arrival in Canaan, to testify his acceptance of his faith and obedience, and to encourage him; at the same time that he welcomed him to the promised land, which he assured him should be the possession of his posterity: yet he then had no child, the Canaanites dwelt in it, and he could only sojourn there as a stranger upon sufferance. Accordingly Abram "builded an altar, unto JEHOVAH, who "appeared to him." He made an open profession of his religion; maintained the publick worship of JEHOVAH; avowed his faith in the promised Seed, in prefiguration of whose atonement sacrifices were instituted; and probably, both with his family and such of his neighbours as were induced to join him, he observed the sabbaths with sacred solemnity. Thus, in faith, he seemed to take possession of the promised land, in the name of JEHOVAH, as the land which in future ages would be the principal seat of true religion.—Sichern is afterwards spelt Shechem, which best accords with the original.—The word rendered plain, is generally supposed to mean an oak, or grove of oaks.—The clause, "The Canaanite was then in the land," might be added afterwards as an explanatory note, perhaps by Ezra: yet some think, that the branch of the devoted nations, which were called Canaanites, then inhabited this district; but, before the times when Moses wrote, had been possessed by some other tribe.

V. 8. Beth-el.] Many of these names were given afterwards; but Moses spake of the several places as they were known in his time.—"Calling on the name of the LORD," seems to signify the publick worship which accompanied Abram's sacrifices. Some render it, 'he preached concerning the name of the LORD;' as intimating that he joined instructions to his devotions. (xviii. 19.)

V. 10. Abram, when pressed by famine, did not return to Mesopotamia, as weary of his pilgrimage, or as despising the promised land; but he retired for a season into Egypt.

V. 11-16. It is supposed that Sarai's complexion, being fair, (as the Egyptians were sallow,) might render her more beautiful in the eyes of Pharaoh; though she was at this time sixty-five years of age.—The impartiality of the historian is here worthy of admiration: but the conduct of Abram was exceedingly culpable, and inconsistent with the character of 'the father of the faithful,' and "the friend of God." His counsel to Sarai could arise from nothing but distrust and unbelief: for a numerous posterity had been just before promised him; and would the Lord suffer him to be slain when childless? The words which he suggested to Sarai were at best an equivocation, intended for the purpose of deceiving. He tempted her to join in his sin, and thus to expose her own chastity to imminent danger! And his language implied a strong dependence on the 12 Therefore it shall come to pass, when the Egyptians shall see thee, that they shall say, This is his wife: and they will kill me, but they will save thee alive.

^a xx. 11. xxvi. 7.
1 Sam. xxvii. 1.
Prov. xxix. 25.
1 John 1. 8-10
^a xi. 29. xx. 2. 12.
1 John 7. 15. lviii.
xxvi. 7.
11. Matt. xxvi.
69-75 Gal. ii.
12, 13.
^b Ps. cxlvi. 3-5.
Jer. xvii. 5-8.

13 Say, I pray thee, ^a thou art my sister: that it may be well with me for thy sake; ^b and my soul shall live because of thee.

14 And it came to pass that when Abram was come into Egypt, the Egyptians ^c beheld the woman, that she was very fair.

^c llii. 6. vi. 2. xxxix.
7. Matt. v. 28.

15 The ^d princes also of Pharaoh saw her, and commended her before ^e Pharaoh: and the woman was ^f taken into Pharaoh's house.

^d Est. ii. 2-16.
Prov. xxix. 12.
^e xl. 2. xli. 1. Ex.
ii. 5. 1 Kings iii.
1. Jer. xxv. 19.
Ez. xxxii. 2.
^f xx. 2.
g xlii. 2. xx. 14.

16 And he ^g entreated Abram well for success of his carnal policy; and a disposition, if it succeeded, to give Sarai the credit of preserving his life, instead of ascribing his safety to the Lord. The temptation also, thrown in the way of Pharaoh and his princes, was suited to ensnare them in guilt, and even to prejudice them against Abram's religion.—Pharaoh, (whose name was for many ages common to the kings of Egypt,) was disposed to add to the number of his wives, (for probably he had some before;) and his courtiers were willing to assist him: but they did not shew any tokens of so atrocious wickedness, as to take Abram's wife from him, or to murder him on her account.

V. 17. God inflicted on Pharaoh and his family some grievous disorders, which made them sensible for what cause they were plagued: and thus he preserved Sarah. And probably she, being further questioned, declared the real state of the case.

V. 18—20. Pharaoh's conduct on this occasion was equitable and honourable; and his rebuke and expostulation could admit of no answer.—To tempt others to sin is the greatest of injuries.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—9.

In the call of Abram, the chosen repository of the promises, and the exemplar of believers through all future ages, we have a representation of the life of faith, and the walk with God. This commences when the Lord graciously makes himself known to a sinner, by his word and Spirit; thus calling him to forsake his sinful and worldly pursuits and connexions, to deny himself, and to become his spiritual worshipper and devoted servant: while allured by "exceedingly great and precious promises," drawn by strong desires and expectations, and convinced of the ruin which attends disobedience, the sinner 'through grace obeys the calling.'—He who indeed believes the word of God, and values duly the promised blessings, will yield a prompt and unreserved obedience to the command, however nature may revolt at it, or shrink from it: and nothing but true faith will produce this self-denying obedience. Believers, "being justified by faith, have peace with God:" they are blessed her sake: and ^b he had sheep, and oxen, and he-asses, and men-servants, and maid-servants, and she-asses, and camels.

^h xxiv. 25. xxvi.
14. xxxii. 5. 13-
15. Job i. 3. xlii.
12.

17 And the LORD ⁱ plagued Pharaoh and his house with great plagues, because of Sarai, Abram's wife.

ⁱ xx. 18. Job xxxiv.
19. Ps. cv. 14, 15.
Heb. xiii. 4.

18 And Pharaoh called Abram, and said, ^k What is this that thou hast done unto me? why didst thou not tell me that she was thy wife?

^k xx. 9, 10. xxvi.
9-11. Ex. xxxii.
21. Prov. xxi. 1.

19 Why saidst thou she is my sister? so I might have taken her to me to wife: now therefore, behold thy wife, take her and go thy way.

20 And Pharaoh commanded his men concerning him; ^l and they sent him away, and his wife, and all that he had.

^l 1 Sam. xxix. 6-11.

themselves, and blessings to others, to relatives, to friends, to neighbours, to their country, to the church of God, and to posterity; by their example, influence, and prayers, living and dying: and their words and actions are often long after remembered with great profit, by many. As their friends will be rewarded, so their enemies will be punished; though their name may not be great on earth, it shall be great in heaven; and some, who have lived long in sin, have become afterwards very eminent in faith and holiness.—We must not neglect the call of God, to oblige our nearest relations; but we should endeavour to prevail on them to associate with us in his service; and we shall not in general be altogether unsuccessful. Wherever we go, "the LORD is there;" and, professing his truth, attending on his worship, and enjoying communion with him, we cannot but be safe, respectable, and happy. Whatever difficulties and dangers we meet with, we must never think of turning back; but must press forward, aiming at still more intimate communion with God, and more entire conformity to him.

V. 10—20.

No state on earth is free from trials; no character from blemishes: famine was known in Canaan, the glory of all lands; and unbelief, with its consequent evils, was clearly discernible in Abram "the father of the faithful!" In heaven alone can perfect felicity and purity be found.—Those external accomplishments which are most coveted and admired, frequently prove sources of danger and temptation to the possessor, and to others.—"The fear of man bringeth a snare;" and nothing but lively and vigorous faith can keep us stedfast in obedience, amidst perils and temptations.—Our attachments to endeared relatives, and our expectations from them, are frequently idolatrous, and inconsistent with simplicity of dependence on the Lord.—Strict sincerity, remote from the least appearance of evasion or duplicity, is not only most honourable, but in the event safest and most advantageous: for "a lying lip is but for a moment," and disgrace is sure to follow.—Magistrates are exalted in Providence to be "a terror to evil doers, and a praise to them that do well;" but too often they are slaves to their own lusts, and sacrifice every nobler consi-

CHAP. XIII.

Abram and Lot return with great riches from Egypt, 1—5. Strife arises between Abram's herdsmen and those of Lot, 6, 7. Abram meekly refers it to Lot, to choose his part in the country, 8, 9; and he goes to Sodom, 10—13. God renews his promises to Abram, 14—17; who goes to Hebron and builds an altar, 18.

AND Abram went up out of Egypt, he, and his wife, and all that he had, and Lot with him, into ^a the south.

2 And Abram was very ^b rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold.

3 And he went on his journeys from the south, even to Beth-el, unto the place where his tent had been at the beginning, between Beth-el and Hai;

4 Unto ^c the place of the altar, which he had made there at the first: and there Abram ^d called on the name of the LORD.

5 And Lot also, which went with Abram; had flocks, and herds, and ^e tents.

6 And the land was not able to ^f bear them, that they might dwell together: for their substance was great, so that they could not dwell together.

7 And there was ^g a strife between the herdmen of Abram's cattle and the herdmen of Lot's cattle: and the ^h Canaanite and the Perizzite dwelled there in the land.

8 And Abram said unto Lot, ⁱ Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen: for we ^k be brethren.

9 ^l Is not the whole land before thee? Separate thyself, I pray thee, from me: ^m if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand, then I will go to the left.

10 And Lot lifted up his eyes, ⁿ and beheld all ^o the plain of Jordan, that it was well watered every where, before the LORD destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, even as ^p the garden of the LORD, like the land of Egypt, as thou comest unto ^q Zoar.

11 Then Lot chose him all the plain of Jordan; and Lot journeyed east: and ^r they separated themselves the one from the other.

12 Abram dwelled in the land of Canaan, and Lot ^s dwelled in the cities of the plain, and ^t pitched his tent toward Sodom.

a xlii. 9 Josh. x. 40. xviii. 5. 1 Sam. xxvii. 10. 2 Sam. xxiv. 7.
b xxiv. 35. xxvi. 12. 18. Deut. viii. 18. 1 Sam. ii. 7. Job i. 10. Ps. cxli. 1—3. Prov. iii. 9, 10. x. 22. Matt. vi. 33.

c 18. xii. 7, 8. xxxv. 1—3. Ps. xxvi. 8. xliii. 2. hccxiv. 1, 2, 10. d Ps. cxvi. 2. 17. Jer. xxix. 12. Zeph. iii. 9. 1 Cor. i. 2.

e iv. 20. xxv. 27. Jer. xlix. 29. f xxxvi. 6, 7. Ec. v. 10, 11. Luke xii. 17, 18.

g xxvi. 20. Ex. ii. 17. 1 Cor. iii. 3. Gal. v. 20.

h xii. 6 xxxiv. 80. Neh. v. 9. Phil. ii. 14, 15. Co. iv. 5. 1 Thea. iv. 12. 1 Pet. ii. 12.

i Prov. xv. 1. Matt. v. 9. 1 Cor. vi. 6, 7. Heb. xii. 14.

k Heb. men, brethren. xi. 27—31. xiv. 24. Ps. cxxxiii. Acts vii. 26. Rom. xii. 10. Eph. iv. 2, 3. 1 Thea. iv. 9. Heb. xiii. 1. 1 Pet. i. 22. ii. 17. iii. 8. iv. 8. 2 Pet. i. 7. 1 John ii. 9. —11. iii. 14—19. iv. 7, 20, 21. k xx. 15. xxxiv. 10.

l Rom. xli. 18. Jam. iii. 13—18. 1 Pet. iii. 10, 11. m iii. 6. vi. 2. Num. xxxii. 1, &c. 1 John ii. 15, 16. n xix. 17. 25. 1 Kings vii. 46. o ii. 9. Is. li. 3. Ez. xxviii. 18. xxxi. 8. Joel ii. 3. p xiv. 2. 8. xix. 20. —22. 30. Deut. xxxiv. 3. Is. xv. 5. Jer. xlviii. 34.

q 9. 14. Ps. xvi. 3. cxix. 63. Prov. xxvii. 10. Heb. x. 25.

r xix. 29. s xiv. 12. xix. 1. Ps. xxvi. 5. 1 Cor. xv. 33. 2 Pet. ii. 7, 8.

deration to "make provision for the flesh:" but they must give an account of their conduct to God. And when courtiers degrade themselves, by becoming caterers to the lusts of their superiors, they forfeit the honourable appellation of princes, and merit the most opprobrious epithets. Yet, even in the worst of times and places, we meet with more honour and conscience, than we perhaps expected, and find our unbelieving fears were groundless.—God protects his people notwithstanding their infirmities; takes better care of them than they do of themselves; and over-rules all things for their good: yet they shall not escape rebuke, even from those who are in other respects their inferiors, when they act inconsistently with their character and profession.

NOTES.

CHAP. XIII. V. 1. South.] The southern part of Canaan, lay north-cast of Egypt.

V. 2. Abram's riches had been increased by his journey to Egypt, nay, by means of his misconduct! God so overruling it, entirely beside Abram's intention.

V. 4. Place of the altar.] In preference to any other place, as remembering with pleasure, the worship which he had there performed.

V. 6. The former inhabitants doubtless occupied much of the best land; and the unoccupied part could not, in one district, support so large flocks and herds.

V. 7. The Canaanite and Perizzite, being estranged from true religion, would strictly scrutinize, and severely animadvert upon, the conduct of those, who openly professed themselves the servants and worshippers of JEHOVAH.—The Canaanite, &c.] Note, xii. 6, 7.

V. 8, 9. Abram was the elder man, the superior relation, and the more eminent servant of God: yet, for the sake of peace, and for the credit of religion, he gave up every personal consideration, and with great temper and prudence supplicated his nephew, and allowed him his choice.—'The best, the wisest, and men of the greatest experience in the world, are most inclined to peace, and most yielding in order to it.' Bp. Patrick.

V. 10—12. Lot seems to have expressed no great reluctance at leaving Abram's family, and losing the benefit of his conversation, counsel, example, worship, and instructions; nor so much as to have remitted to him the privilege of the first choice! But if this was faulty, it was still worse to choose, merely from "the lust of the eye," a well-watered, fruitful land, without any higher motive, than the hope that his substance, already too large, would there become much greater.—Before the destruction of Sodom, this region appeared to those who approached it by the way of Zoar, which lay on its borders, like a most beautiful garden. The garden of Eden seems referred to. (Marg. Ref. o.) The flat country, watered abundantly by the streams of Jordan, resembled Egypt in appearance and fertility. Thither Lot resorted: and Abram continued to dwell in a part of that 13 But 'the men of Sodom were wicket, and sinners "before the LORD exceedingly.

14 ¶ And the Lord said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, x Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, y north-ward, and south-ward, and east-ward, and west-ward.

15 For all the land which thou seest, z to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever.

xv. 16, xviii. 20. xix. 4, &c. Is. i. 9. iii. 9. Ezek. xvi. 46-50. Matt. xi. 23, 24. u vi. 11. x. 9. xxxviii. 7. 2 Kings xxi. 6. Is. iii. 8. x 10. Is. xlix. 18. ix. 4. y xxviii. 14. Deut. iii. 27. z xvii. 7. xv. 18. xvii. 8. xviii. 18. xxix. 7. xxvii. 3. xxviii. 13. Num. xxxiv. 2, &c. Deut. xxvi. 2-4. 2 Chr. xx. 7. Neh. ix. 7, 8. Ps. cv. 9-12. cxlii. 1, 2. Acts vii. 5.

16 And *I will make thy seed as a the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered.

17 Arise, walk through the land, in the length of it, and in the breadth of it: for I will give it unto thee.

18 Then Abram removed his tent, and came and dwelt in the * plain of b Mamre which is in c Hebron, and built there d an altar unto the LORD.

xv. 5. xxii. 17. xxvi. 4. xxviii. 3. 14. xxxii. 12. Ex. xxxiii. 18. Num. xxxiii. 10. Deut. i. 10. 1 Kings iii. 8. iv. 20. 1 Chr. xxvii. 28. Is. xlvi. 18, 19. Jer xxxiii. 22. Rom iv. 16-18. Heb. xi. 12. * Heb. plains. b xiv. 13. xvii. 1. c xviii. 2. Num. xlii. 22. Josh. xiv. 13. d viii. 20. xii. 7, 8.

country, which was afterwards inherited by his posterity.— It is not said that Lot built an altar to the LORD.

V. 13. Sinners, &c.] The men of Sodom were notorious and daring transgressors; despising God, and openly defying him; and they were especially marked by him for vengeance.

V. 14. "Lot lifted up his eyes, &c." (10);—and God saith to Abram, "Lift up thine eyes, &c."—^c Thus he who 'sought this world lost it; and he who was willing to give 'up any thing for the honour of God and religion, found 'it.' Fuller.

V. 15. For ever.] This expression, in some instances, means, for ages to come. (Note, xvii. 7, 8.)

V. 16. As the dust.] This promise must have put Abram's faith to a sharp trial: for as yet he had no child; though he was far advanced in life, and had been long married.—Had an innumerable posterity been promised to one of Noah's sons, or grandsons, it would not have been extraordinary; but about four hundred and thirty years had now elapsed since the deluge; the earth was greatly replenished, and considerable nations were already founded: yet Abram's descendants have been so numerous, as almost to rank with those of some of Noah's grandsons; and none of his contemporaries can, in this respect, be at all put in competition with him. When Moses wrote the history, these predictions had, in some measure, been fulfilled: but what proportion did the increase of Abram's seed at that time bear, to the incalculable multitudes which have since sprung from him? Besides the nations of Judah and Israel, his descendants by Esau, and Ishmael, and the sons of Keturah have been astonishingly numerous. What human foresight could have perceived, that the nations descended from Abram would be preserved so distinct, during such a lapse of ages, as to afford mankind any satisfaction in enquiring into the number of his descendants? What other nations have been kept separate from the people, in the midst of whom they lived, as the Israelites, Ishmaelites, and Arabians have been? What other people can trace back their origin to one illustrious progenitor, without involving the whole in fable and uncertainty?—Even should any one doubt, against the express testimony of Christ and his apostles, whether Moses wrote these books; it is unquestionable that they are very ancient; and that these prophecies have received their most illustrious accomplishment, since the time when we may certainly know that they were extant.

V. 17. Arise, &c.] 'Go and survey the inheritance allotted to thy posterity.'

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

We may sometimes be driven into places of temptation, but we must not continue in them when the necessity ceases.—The possession of riches, though dangerous, is not absolutely incompatible with the life of faith and walk with God. When they are neither anxiously coveted, nor eagerly pursued, nor improperly confided in, nor inordinately loved;—when they come by the blessing of God, are thankfully received, moderately enjoyed, and carefully improved;—they may then be ornaments of godliness, and means of usefulness. Yet they are generally encumbrances to the possessor, and sources of contention or separation between brethren; and frequently they exclude men from comfortable society, and many spiritual advantages. When they "are increased, "those are increased that eat them;" which commonly creates uneasiness, and renders the possession of the blessing of peace more precarious. Let the poor then learn contentment, and the wealthy caution and moderation, from the example of Abram and Lot.—As we, who profess to be brethren in Christ, are surrounded with enemies and spies, we should be careful to preserve union, and to "avoid all "appearance of evil," lest we should prejudice their minds, or open their mouths against us: and we ought to renounce every personal interest, and to make every concession, for the sake of peace.—If the real servants of God so lose themselves, as to leave, for temporal advantages, the society of the faithful, and to estrange themselves from sacred ordinances, by removing to dark and wicked places, they will be severely corrected: while the Lord will compensate, perhaps in outward blessings, certainly in spiritual consolations, pledges of his love, and earnest of glory, those who give up secular advantages for his sake, and for the cause and honour of the Gospel.—In outward difficulties it is very profitable for the believer to meditate, frequently and intensely, on the glorious inheritance which the Lord hath in reserve for him at the last. And as it is impossible to conceive, that the promises and predictions of this ancient book could have been so minutely and circumstantially fulfilled, during a course of so many centuries, unless they had been written "by inspiration of God;" let every reader remember our Lord's words: "If they believe not Moses and the prophets, "neither would they be persuaded though one rose from "the dead."

CHAP. XIV.

War is waged by four kings against the king of Sodom and his allies, who are conquered and plundered, 1—11. Lot is taken prisoner, but is rescued by Abram, 12—16. Abram returns, and is met by Melchizedek king of Salem; and by the king of Sodom, to whom he restores the spoil, except the portion of his own confederates, 17—24.

AND it came to pass in the days of Amraphel king of ^aShinar, Arioch king of ^bEllasar, Chedorlaomer king of ^cElam, and Tidal king of nations;

2 That these made war with Bera king of ^dSodom, and with Birsha king of Gomorrah, Shinab king of ^eAdmah, and Shemeber king of Zeboiim, and the king of Bela, which is ^fZoar.

3 All these were joined together in the vale of Siddim, which is the ^gsalt-sea.

4 Twelve years ^hthey served Chedorlaomer, and in the thirteenth year they rebelled.

5 And in the fourteenth year came Chedorlaomer, and the kings that were with him, and smote the ⁱRephaims in ^kAshteroth-Karnaim, and the ^lZuzims in Ham, and the ^mEmims in ⁿShaveh Kiriathaim,

6 And the ^oHorites in their mount Seir, unto ^rEl-paran, which is by the wilderness.

7 And they returned and came to Enmishpat, which is ^oKadesh, and smote all the country of the ^pAmalekites, and also the Amorites, that dwelt in ^qHa-zeczon-tamar.

8 And there went out the king of Sodom, and the king of Gomorrah, and the king of Admah, and the king of Zeboiim, and the king of Bela, (the same is Zoar;) and they joined battle with them in the vale of Siddim;

9 With Chedorlaomer the king of Elam, and with Tidal king of nations, and Amraphel king of Shinar, and Arioch king of Ellasar: four kings with five.

10 And the vale of Siddim was full of ^rslime-pits: and the kings of Sodom and Gomorrah fled, and fell there: and they that remained fled to ^sthe mountain.

11 And they took all the goods of Sodom and Gomorrah, and all their victuals, and went their way.

12 And they took ^tLot, Abram's brother's son, (who dwelt in Sodom,) and his goods, and departed.

13 And there came ^xone that had escaped, and told Abram ^ythe Hebrew; for he ^zdwelt in the plain of ^aMamre the ^bAmorite, brother of Eshol, and brother of Aner: and these were confederate with Abram.

14 And when Abram heard that ^chis brother was taken captive, he ^darmed a x. 10. xi. 2. 1s. xi. 11. Dan. i. 2. Zech. v. 11.

b Is. xxxvii. 12.
c x. 22. Is. xxi. 2. Jer. xxxv. 25. xlix. 34—39.
d x. 19. xiii. 10. Is. i. 9, 10.
e Deut. xxix. 23. Hos. xi. 8.
f xix. 20—30.
g Num. xxxiv. 12. Deut. iii. 17. Josh. iii. 16. Ps. cvii. 34. marg. h ix. 25, 26.

i xv. 20. 2 Sam. v. 18. xxiii. 13. 1 Chr. xi. 15. xiv. 9. Is. xvii. 5. k Josh. xii. 4. xiii. 12.
l Deut. ii. 20—23. m Deut. ii. 10, 11.
n Or, the plain of Kiriathaim. Jer. xviii. 1. 23. o xxxvi. 8. 20—30. Deut. ii. 12, 22. 1 Chr. i. 38—42.
p Or, the plain of Paran. xxi. 21. Num. xii. 16. xiii. 3.

o Num. xx. 1. Deut. i. 19. 46. xxxvi. 16. Ex. xvii. 8—16. Num. xiv. 43. 46. xxiv. 20. 1 Sam. xv. xxx.
q 2 Chr. xx. 2.

r xi. 3.
s ix. 17. 30.

t xi. 27. xii. 5.
u xiii. 12, 13. Num. xvi. 26. Job ix. 23. Jer. ii. 17—19. 1 Tim. vi. 9 —11. Rev. iii. 19. x 1 Sam. iv. 12. y xxxix. 14. xl. 15. xii. 12. xliii. 32. Ex. ii. 6. 11. 2 Cor. xi. 22. Phil. iii. 5. z xiii. 18. a 24. b x. 16. Num. xxi. 21. c xiii. 8. Prov. xvii. 17. xxiv. 11, 12. Gal. vi. 1. 2. 1 John iii. 18. d Or, led forth.

NOTES.

CHAP. XIV. V. 1—3. This is the most ancient war recorded in authentic history; and doubtless it would have been passed over in silence and buried in oblivion, had not Abram and Lot been concerned in it: edification, not the gratifying of curiosity, being the object of the inspired historians.—The fruitful valley of Siddim, by the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, became a large lake, called the Salt Sea, or the Dead Sea.—Some of these assailants came from Mesopotamia, and others from beyond the Tigris. Amraphel was king of the country in which Babel stood. (Marg. Ref. a.)

V. 4. After having submitted for twelve years, these kings formed an alliance to shake off the yoke of this foreign prince.

V. 5—7. This ancient conqueror, having subdued all the neighbouring petty princes, and ravaged their territories, came with his victorious army to subjugate the king of Sodom and his allies.—The word Rephaim is often translated giants. (Marg. Ref. i.) For, “all the country of the Amalekites,” the Septuagint read, ‘All the rulers of Amalek.’ (Note, xxxvi. 12.)

V. 12. From avaricious motives, Lot had chosen the fruitful plain of Sodom, and at length had gone to dwell in that wicked city, the inhabitants of which were ripe for vengeance; but their wealth soon tempted plunderers, and he was stripped of all his property and carried captive. Had not Lot been taken, the conquerors might have gone off with their booty; but he was the servant of God, though he had offended: he needed a rebuke, but he must not be reduced to slavery; especially as he was brother's son to Abram the blessed, who was “a blessing” to all related to him.

V. 13. Abram is called the Hebrew, probably from the name of Eber his ancestor, and not, as some think, from his having passed the Euphrates, the word signifying a passage. (Note, xi. 6—9.)—He had prudently formed an alliance with these chiefs for mutual defence, amidst all this violence and depredation. Perhaps they were proselyted to his religion.—Mamre is the name of a man, from whom the plain was called.

V. 14—16. Abram might have found many plausible reasons, to excuse himself from this dangerous enterprise; and especially he might have pleaded the impropriety of Lot's conduct. But he forgot all; he disregarded difficulty and danger; he feared not the numerous and victorious forces of the combined kings: and having so good a cause

THE SALT OR DEAD SEA.

GEN. XIV. 3; SIX. 28. DEUT. III. 17.

* Or, instructed. his * trained servants, ^d born in his own house, three hundred and eighteen, and pursued them unto ^e Dan.

15 And he divided himself against them, he and his servants by night, ^f and smote them, and pursued them unto Hobah, which is on the left hand of ^g Damascus.

16 And ^h he brought back all the goods, and also brought again his brother Lot, and his goods, and the women also, and the people.

17 ¶ And the king of Sodom went out ⁱ to meet him (^k after his return from the slaughter of Chedorlaomer, and of the kings that were with him,) at the valley of Shaveh, which is the ^l king's dale.

18 And Melchizedek, ^m king of Salem, brought forth ⁿ bread and wine: and he was ^o the priest of the most high God.

19 And he ^p blessed him, and said,

^q Blessed be Abram of the ^r most high God, ^s possessor of heaven and earth:

20 And ^t blessed be the most high God, ^u which hath delivered thine enemies into thy hand. And he gave him ^v tithes of all.

21 And the king of Sodom said unto Abram, Give me the ^w persons, and take ^x the goods to thyself.

22 And Abram said to the king of Sodom, I have ^y lifted up mine hand ^z unto the LORD, ^a the most high God, the possessor of heaven and earth:

23 That ^b I will not take from a thread even to a shoe-latchet, and that I will not take any thing that is thine, ^c lest thou shouldest say, I have made Abram rich:

24 Save only that which the young men have eaten, and the portion of the men which went with me, ^d Aner, Eshcol, and Mamre; ^e let them take their portion.

as the relief of a brother in distress, depending on God, he boldly pursued them with his small company.—Though averse from war, in which we do not find he ever engaged before or after; he had yet trained his domesticks for it, and put himself in a posture of defence. Some indeed understand it, that he trained up his servants in the faith and fear of God, which would render them the best soldiers for such an expedition. In company, however, with his confederates, Abram followed the victors to the northern borders of Canaan. He, employing both courage and policy, attacked the enemy in the night by surprise; and, God so ordering it, he totally intimidated and subdued them, slaying some, and dispersing the rest. Thus he recovered all, and took a great booty.—Some think that the place called Dan, was so named from its situation near the springs of the river Jordan: others that this name, being given to a city built long after by the Danites, was inserted by Ezra, instead of Laish, the ancient name, to render the passage more intelligible. (Marg. Ref. e.)

V. 18—20. Various have been the opinions of expositors respecting Melchizedek. Some have conjectured that it was Shem, who, as Abram's venerable progenitor, was entitled to peculiar respect. But Shem's genealogy was well known; and Levi was descended from him as well as from Abram, which is irreconcilable with the apostle's reasoning on the subject. (Notes, Heb. vii. 1—10.)—Others therefore have thought that it was the Son of God himself; being unwilling to allow that any mere man was superior to Abram. But surely the apostle in this case would never have said, that Melchizedek was "made like to the Son of God;" or that Christ was constituted "a Priest after the order of Melchizedek;" or that he was a type of himself! Melchizedek is stated to have been the king of Salem; (probably the city afterwards called Jerusalem, and distinguished in Pagan writers by the name Solyma;) but we may be sure that Christ did not then reign over any particular city as a temporal prince. It is indeed very evident that Melchizedek was a mere man: but the Lord has not seen good to inform us from which of Noah's sons he sprang; or who were his immediate parents, predecessors, or successors: indeed, he seems intentionally to have concealed them. We may, however, reasonably determine, that he was an aged person, venerable for sanctity, who ruled over his subjects in righteousness, while they lived under him in peace; which, when oppression and violence prevailed among their neighbours, perhaps gave the name both to him and to his city.—He also kept up the worship of the true God; and, though a king, he officiated as his priest.—In these things, and many others, he was a remarkable type of Christ; (Notes, Ps. cx. 4. Heb. vii.:) and, in reverence to his age, rank, piety, and priestly character, Abram shewed him great honour, received his benediction, and gave him tithes of all his spoils: being influenced to this by some secret divine monition; perhaps being led to see in this typical character his future Lord and Saviour. At least the Spirit of God intended to instruct Abram's descendants by this action, "that a better priest should arise," than those of the family of Aaron.—We cannot determine from the silence of the sacred historian, that this was the only interview between Melchizedek and Abram: for, as Shem lived almost as long as Abram, it is probable they met together, though we are not informed that they did.—Bread and wine constituted a suitable refreshment of Abram's weary followers: and it is remarkable that Christ hath appointed the same, as the memorials of his body and blood, which are "meat indeed" and "drink indeed." Melchizedek is the only person expressly spoken of, as the priest of the true God, before the institution of the Aaronick priesthood. In this he had no predecessor, or successor, but was appointed for special purposes by God himself. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 21. Give me, &c.] 'Release the prisoners and take the spoil, not only of the kings, but of Sodom too, as the reward of thy victory.'

V. 22—24. Probably Abram solemnly vowed, before he

* Or, instructed. d xii. 5. 16. xv. 3. xvii. 12. 27. xviii. 18. e Deut. xxxiv. 1. Judg. xviii. 29. xx. 1. f Is. xli. 2, 3. g xv. 2. 1 Kings xv. 18. Acts ix. 2. h 11, 12. xii. 2. 1 Sam. xxx. 18, 19. i 1 Sam. xviii. 6. Prov. xiv. 29. xix. 4. k Heb. vii. 1. l 2 Sam. xviii. 18. m Ps. lxxvi. 2. Heb. vii. 1, 2. n Matt. xxvi. 26—29. o Ps. cx. 4. Heb. v. 6, 10, vi. 20. vii. 10—22. p xxvii. 4. 25—29. xviii. 7, 10. xlviii. 9—16. xlix. 28. Num. vi. 23—27. Mark x. 16. Heb. vii. 6, 7.

q Ruth iii. 10. 2 Sam. ii. 5. r Mic. vi. 6. Ac. xvi. 17. s Ps. cxv. 16. Matt. xi. 25. Luke x. 21. t xxiv. 27. Ps. lxxii. 17—19. Eph. i. 3. 1 Pet. i. 3, 4. u Josi. x. 42. x Lev. xxvii. 30—32. Heb. vii. 5—10. + Heb. soule. y Deut. xxxii. 40. Dan. xii. 7. Rev. x. 5, 6. z xxi. 23—31. Judg. xi. 35. a 20. xvii. 1. Ps. xxiv. 1. Hag. ii. 8. b 1 Kings xiii. 8. 2 Kings v. 16. Esth. ix. 15, 16. 2 Cor. xi. 9—11. xii. 14. c 2 Cor. xi. 12. d 13. e 1 Cor. ix. 14, 15.

CHAP. XV.

The Lord encourages Abram; who complains that he continues childless, but is assured of a numerous posterity, 1—5. He is justified by faith, 6. He requests a pledge to confirm his faith; and being directed to prepare a sacrifice, obeys, 7—11. He is favoured with a vision, prophetick of the condition of his posterity till brought out of Egypt: and Canaan is ensured by covenant to them, 12—21.

^a xlv. 2. Num. xii. 6. Ez. i. 1. viii. 4. xi. 24. Dan. x. 1—16. Acts x. 10—17.

AFTER these things the word of the LORD came unto Abram ^a in a vision, set out on this expedition, that he would not take any thing which had belonged to the vanquished kings. The credit of his religious profession required, that if he engaged in war, it should evidently be on the most liberal and disinterested principles. This would best answer the question "What do ye more than others?"—Lifting up the hand to the Lord, was a customary token of taking an oath, or making a vow to the Lord.

PRÁCTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—16.

Sinners may for a season prosper, though "the wrath of God abides upon them:" but respites are not pardons, and prosperity often hardens and ripens men for destruction. After four hundred years the curse denounced on Canaan began to take effect: let us hear and fear, and flee from the wrath to come.—Avarice, ambition, and the thirst of dominion are insatiable, render men savage and brutal, and in all ages have filled the earth with misery and destruction: yet God executes his righteous purposes even by means of the unrighteousness of men.—Some calamity might have been expected to befall Lot for his misconduct; and we may expect similar consequences if we imitate his example, and prefer the prospect of gain, to 'the means of grace,' and 'the communion of the saints.' But the Lord, though he rebuke and chasten, will not forsake his offending children; and we also must be ready to forgive our offending brethren, and hasten to their relief.—War can never be desirable: but in the present state of things it may be lawful, and even adviseable; and never more so, than in order to relieve the oppressed.—They who serve God, whatever means they employ, will not depend on an "arm of flesh:" and when they trust in him, and have a righteous cause and a good conscience, it becomes them to be "bold as a lion," and not to shrink from difficulties in the path of duty. Nor is any courage worthy of admiration or imitation, or in the least degree rational, but that which springs from a believing dependence upon God, and a firm persuasion that we are prepared for life and death, and are in the place, and doing the work, which he hath assigned us.—It is a great advantage to stand related to those who are the friends and followers of God: for by their means, and in answer to their prayers, such persons will often be preserved.

V. 17—24.

The Lord is "the most high God, the Possessor of heaven and earth;" and all our possessions belong to him: we ought then to acknowledge his right, and seek his bless-saying, ^b Fear not, Abram; I am ^c thy Shield, and thy ^d exceeding great Reward.

2 And Abram said, Lord God, ^e what wilt thou give me, seeing I go ^f childless, and ^g the steward of my house is this Eliezer of Damascus?

3 And Abram said, ^h Behold, to me thou hast given no seed: and lo, one ⁱ born in my house is mine heir.

^{3, 4.} ^e xii. 1—3. ^f xxv. 21. xxx. 1, 2. Ps. cxvii. 3. Prov. xiii. 12. Acts vii. 5. xii. 1. ^g xxiv. 2. 10. xxxix. 4—6. 9. xliii. 19. xlv. 1. Prov. xvii. 2. i. xiv. 14. Ec. ii. 7. ^h xii. 2. xiii. 16. Jer. xii. 1.

ing, by consecrating a portion to his immediate service: and the tenth was early deemed, and long continued to be considered, a very moderate proportion.—Oaths on important occasions are lawful: but they should be taken with great solemnity, as an act of sacred worship, and observed with great punctuality.—Nothing better becomes a profession of godliness, than a noble spirit of disinterestedness: and in our whole conduct we should study to avoid, not only evil, but the very appearance of it; especially in those things which at first glance seem unsuitable to our profession. As "the earth is the LORD's and the fulness thereof," they who belong to him have no occasion to grasp at temporal advantages; for if riches are good for them, he will surely confer them. We should however, without censure, allow many things to others, which our profession and character may render it expedient for us to deny ourselves.—But what is become of Lot? Alas! he is gone back to Sodom; for indulged corruptions are not mortified except through severe discipline.—Finally, let us remember "our King of righteousness and King of peace," our "Priest upon his throne:" let us rejoice in his equitable and peaceful administration; and declare war against his and our enemies, sin, the world, and Satan. Invisibly he will assist us in every conflict, and manifest himself to us after every victory, refresh us with his gracious provisions, and bless us with the earnest of his love. And shortly, when the final victory is won, and he hath made us more than conquerors, he will applaud our achievements, accept and reward our poor services, and place us with himself upon his throne; while we rejoice in his love, and give him all the glory.

NOTES.

CHAP. XV. V. 1. This is the first time the expression, "The word of the LORD," is used in Scripture; and some persons suppose, that Christ, "The Word of God," is meant.—The prophets, when they received revelations of the divine will in a vision, seem generally to have had the exercise of their senses on outward objects suspended, though they were not asleep. Yet the circumstances of the vision here recorded, do not indicate that this was the case with Abram; for the whole is related as a real transaction. It is however probable, that this was in some way distinguished from other appearances of the Lord, and more resembled the prophetick visions, than the condescending intercourse to which Abram was on other occasions admitted.—He might be tempted to fear, lest the potent enemies whom he had exasperated, should return with larger forces

4 And behold the word of the LORD came unto him, saying, This shall not be thine heir, but he that ^k shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir.

5 And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them: and he said unto him, ^m So shall thy seed be.

6 And ⁿ he believed in the LORD; and he ^o counted it to him for righteousness.

7 And he said unto him, I am the LORD that ^p brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees, to give thee this land to inherit it.

8 And he said, Lord God, ^q whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?

9 And he said unto him, Take me ^r an heifer of ^s three years old, and a she-goat of three years old, and a ram of three years old, and a turtle dove, and a young pigeon.

10 And he took unto him all these, and ^t divided them in the midst, and laid each piece one against another: but ^u the birds divided he not.

11 And when the fowls came down upon the carcasses, ^x Abram drove them away.

12 And when the sun was going down, ^y a deep sleep fell upon Abram:

k xvii. 16. 2 Sam. vii. 12. xvi. 11. 2 Chr. xxxii 21. Philem 12

l Ps. cxlvii. 4. Jer. xxxiii. 22.

m xxii. 17. Ex. xxxii. 13. Deut. i. 10. x. 22 1 Chr. xxvii. 23. Rom. iv. 18. Heb. xi. 12.

n Rom. iv 3-6. 20-25 Gal. iii. 6-14. Jam. ii. 23.

o Pa. cvi. 31 Rom. iv. 11. 22. Gal. iii. 6.

p xi. 23-31. xii. 1. Neh. ix. 7. Acts vii. 2-4.

q xxiv. 12-14. Judg. vi 17-24. 36-40. 2 Kings xx. 8. Is. vii. 11. Luke i. 38. 34.

r xxii. 13. Lev. i. 3. 10. 14. iii. 1. 6. ix. 2. 4. xii. 8. xiv. 22. 36. Luke ii. 24. Is. xv. 5.

t Jer. xxxiv 18. 19.

u Lev. i. 17.

x Ps. cxix 113.

y ii. 21. 1 Sam. xxvi. 12. Job iv. 13. 14. Dan. x. 8, 9.

and take vengeance on him. The Lord therefore assured him that he was his "Shield," to defend him from all assailants; as well as his "exceeding great Reward," to compensate his generous behaviour to Lot, and disinterested contempt of wealth, in his conduct towards the king of Sodom.—(Marg. Ref.)

V. 2, 3. In this answer of Abram, the striving of unbelief and impatience, against his better judgment, is very discernible. Outward prosperity and security seemed of little importance, as he still continued childless; and a stranger born in his house, and entrusted by him, was likely to be his heir. The numerous posterity before mentioned, and the blessings comprised in the promised Seed, lay near his heart: nothing else could satisfy him; and perhaps the long delay almost induced him to conclude, that he had misunderstood the divine revelation.

V. 5, 6. Some expositors think, that the several particulars which follow were only presented in a vision to Abram; and they urge in support of this opinion, that "the sun was not gone down" (12), and yet he was called on to "look toward heaven and tell the stars." But it is most unreasonable to interpret one part, as a visionary representation to the mind, and the other as a real transaction: or to suppose that the whole narrative of this solemn sacrifice, and of Abram's deep sleep and prophetic dream, and of the covenant ratified with him, is merely the relation of a vision. And, if it be well considered, what time would be employed in preparing for the commanded sacrifice and other events; we shall be induced to conclude, that Abram was led forth early in the morning, before the stars disappeared, and that he spent the whole day till after sun-set in religious duties, and in receiving divine revelations and assurances.—An innumerable posterity having been again promised him, his faith was strengthened; and, depending on the divine power and faithfulness, he rose superior to discouragement on account of delays and difficulties. Thus he gave glory to God by firmly believing, that "what he had promised he was able also to perform; and therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness."—It is evident from the apostle's reasoning, that Abram's faith had a special respect to the promised Seed and to salvation by him: and therefore, though in himself a sinner, and his very faith itself not free from defect, he was accounted righteous, and dealt with as if he had personally performed a perfect righteousness; being "made the righteousness of God in Christ." This had no doubt been the case from the time when he first believed, that in "his Seed all nations should be blessed;" but it was now more expressly attested for his encouragement: and the sacred historian records this circumstance, as a remarkable instance and example of that faith, which was counted to Abram for righteousness. (Notes, Rom. iv. Gal. iii. Marg. Ref. n. o.)—Christians may believe in God, with respect of the common concerns of this life; and such faith may ascertain, that they are in a justified state: yet this is not, strictly speaking, the faith by which they are justified, which invariably has respect to the person and work of Christ. Abram believed in God as promising Christ; they believe in him as having raised him from the dead. Fuller.

V. 7, 8. The favours already shewn to Abram, were earnest of the fulfilment of all the promises of God, whose unchangeable perfections were engaged to perform them: yet Abram, that his faith might be confirmed, desired an external token as an assurance that his posterity should inherit the land; which the Lord graciously vouchsafed him.

V. 9, 10. In order to give Abram the desired token, the Lord was pleased to prescribe a solemn sacrifice. The heifer, she-goat, and ram, were supposed to be arrived at maturity, when three years old. As the ratification of a covenant between the Lord and his servant was intended, the animals were divided asunder, the birds alone excepted: because the form of covenanting required, that the persons concerned should pass between the parts of the sacrifice; perhaps intimating, that he, who broke the covenant, might expect in like manner to be cut asunder by the avenging sword of justice. The Gentiles, as well as the Jews, used a form of this kind in confirming covenants and treaties; which custom might perhaps be derived by tradition from this transaction; or the Lord saw good, in this instance, to condescend as far as practicable, to a custom already established.

V. 11. When Abram had prepared the sacrifices, he spent the rest of the day in watching them, no doubt also pouring out his heart in fervent prayer: and when the birds of prey attempted to devour them, he drove them away.

V. 12—15. Perhaps Abram did not understand how the s Ps. iv. 3-5. Acts ix. 8, 9.

 a Ex. i. ii. v. Ps. cv. 23-25. Acts vii. 6, 7.
 b Eccl. xii. 40, 41. Gal. iii. 17.
 c Ex. vi. 5, 6. vii. -xiv. Deut. vi. 22. Ps. lxxxviii. 43-51. cv. 27-37. cxxxv. 9. 14.
 d Ex. iii. 21, 22. xii. 35, 36.
 e xxx. 5. Num. xv. 24. xxviii. 13. Judg. ii. 10. Eccl. xii. 7. Acts xiii. 36.
 f 2 Chr. xxxiv. 28. Ps. xxxvii. 37. Is. lviii. 1, 2. Dan. xii. 13. Matt. xxii. 32. Heb. vi. 13-19. xi. 13-16.
 g xxxiii. 4. 19. xxxv. 9. xxxv. 29. xlii. 29. 31. l. 13. Eccl. vi. 3. Jer. viii. 1, 2.
 h xxv. 7, 8. 1 Chr. xxxiii. 1. xxxix. 28. Job v. 26. xlii. 17.
 i Ex. xii. 40.
 k 1 Kings xxi. 26. 2 Pet. iii. 8, 9.

and lo, 'an horror of great darkness fell upon him.

13 And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety, that 'thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them: and they shall afflict them ^b four hundred years.

14 And also ^c that nation whom they shall serve, will I judge; and afterward shall they come out ^d with great substance.

15 And ^e thou shalt go to thy fathers ^f in peace; thou shalt be ^g buried in ^h a good old age.

16 But in ⁱ the fourth generation they shall come hither again; for the iniquity of ^k the Amorites ^l is not yet full.

1 Dan. viii. 23. Zech. v. 5-11. Matt. xxiii. 32-35. 1 Thes. ii. 16 transaction would end, but he patiently waited on the Lord; and about sun-set, he was cast into a supernatural sleep, in which he received important prophetic information concerning the future condition of his posterity.—The "horror of great darkness" was doubtless emblematical of their affliction and bondage in Egypt, and many of their subsequent calamities. From the birth of Isaac to the deliverance of Israel out of Egypt, Abram's descendants were strangers in a land, in which they possessed no inheritance; for part of the time they were sojourners in Canaan, and the rest of it they spent in Egypt, where for many years they were enslaved and cruelly oppressed. Their departure out of Egypt is supposed to have been exactly four hundred and thirty years from the call of Abram: but the birth of Isaac was twenty-five years later, and the prediction especially relates to him and his posterity. This is therefore computed to have occurred four hundred and five years before that event; but, in so long a term, the five odd years are not mentioned. Some however think that the term began from the weaning of Isaac, when Ishmael, the son of an Egyptian, mocked him. (Note, xxi. 8-12.)—The continuance of Israel in Egypt is calculated to have been two hundred and fifteen years.—Their bondage in Egypt being introductory to subsequent honour and prosperity, and attended with signal judgments on their enemies, differed widely from the permanent slavery of the Canaanites. Abram, however, would not witness these scenes; but would live to a good old age, and then die in peace: and while his body would be decently interred, his soul would enter on a state of blessedness among those of his believing progenitors.—Afflict them, &c.] Four hundred years would elapse, before the end of their afflicted state.

V. 16. "The fourth generation" may mean the completion of the four hundred years before mentioned: but indeed the Israelites of the fourth generation, from those who went down into Egypt, seem actually to have inherited Canaan.—Among other reasons for these delays, this was one; that the inhabitants of the land, (of whom the Amorites seem to have been the chief,) though wicked, were not yet ripe for vengeance.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, that when the sun went down, and it was dark, behold a ^m smoking furnace, and ⁿ a burning lamp that passed between those pieces.

18 In that same day the LORD ^a made a covenant with Abram, saying, ^b Unto thy seed have I given this land, ^c from the river of Egypt, unto the great river, the river ^d Euphrates:

19 The ^e Kenites, and the Kenizzites, and the Kadmonites,

20 And the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and ^f the Rephaims, 21 And ^g the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and ^h the Girgashites, and the Jebusites.

xxiii. 23-28. xxxiii. 2. xxxiv. 11. Deut. vii. 1.

m Ex. iii. 2, 3. Deut. iv. 20. Judg. vi. 21. xiii. 20. 1 Chr. xxi. 26. Is. lxii. 1. Jer. xi. 4.
 n Heb. a lamp of fire. 2 Sam. xxii. 29.
 a ix. 8-17. xvii. 2 Sam. xxiii. 5. Is. lv. 3. Jer. xxxi. 31-34. xxxii. 40. xxxciii. 20-26. Gal. iii. 15-17. Heb. xiii. 20.
 b xii. 7. xiii. 15. xxxv. 4. xxxviii. 13. Deut. i. 7, 8. xi. 24. xxxiv. 4. Josh. i. 3, 4. 1 Kings iv. 21. 2 Chr. ix. 26. Neh. ix. 8. Ps. cv. 11.
 c Num. xxxiv. 5. Josh. xv. 4. Is. xxxvii. 12. q. li. 14. 2 Sam. xii. 3. 1 Chr. v. 9. d Num. xxiv. 21, 22. xiv. 5. Is. xvii. 5. x. 15-19. Ex. u. Matt. viii. 28.

V. 17. "The smoking furnace and burning lamp" represented the severe trials of Israel in Egypt, and their joyful deliverance; with the hopes and supports in the mean while afforded them. (Notes, Ex. iii.) Thus the Lord attested his acceptance of Abram's sacrifices, by the symbols of his presence passing between the parts of them, and probably at length consuming them; but not, as it may be supposed, till Abram also had passed between them.

V. 18-21. In this manner God confirmed the promise of Canaan to the seed of Abram, by a solemn covenant, and more explicitly stated what was included in it. "The river of Egypt" is supposed to have been a small current, just at the entrance of that country; and not the river Nile.—In the days of David and Solomon, the Israelites ruled over the whole extent of country here described: and it was the effect of their sins, that they neither got possession of it sooner, nor kept it longer.—During the course of four hundred years, several of the tribes here mentioned were either extinct, or blended with other tribes, or had changed their names. (Marg. Ref.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1-11.

They who trust in God, and serve him, should fear no enemies, for they have an omnipresent and omnipotent Protector. Nor need they hesitate to renounce the most valuable temporal advantages for his sake; for he will abundantly recompense them; yea, he himself will be their Shield and Portion, their exceedingly great and everlasting Reward.—Yet "hope deferred maketh the heart sick:" the strongest faith has its misgivings, the most courageous spirit has its fears, and the most resigned believer his complaints: these the Lord graciously notes, pities, pardons, and relieves.—He who in one instance, upon the single testimony of God, stedfastly expects things exceedingly difficult and improbable, will be enabled to believe all that God has revealed when he becomes acquainted with it, and will embrace and expect whatever he promises: and this man's "faith is accounted to him for righteousness." Yet he will seek, and God will grant, further tokens of his love, to confirm and strengthen his faith; and he will be encour-

CHAP. XVI.

Sarai being barren gives Hagar to Abram, 1—3. Hagar despises Sarai, who complains to Abram; he gives up Hagar to her, and Hagar, being harshly treated, flees from her, 4—6. An Angel commands her to return and submit, promises her a son and a numerous posterity, and shews their character and condition, 7—12. Hagar gives a name to the place, and returns to Sarai, 13, 14. The birth of Ishmael, and the age of Abram, 15, 16.

NOW Sarai Abram's wife ^abare him no children; and she had an handmaid ^ban Egyptian, whose ^cname was Hagar.

2 And Sarai said unto Abram, Behold now, ^dthe LORD hath restrained me from bearing: I pray thee go in unto my maid; it may be that I may ^eobtain children by her: and Abram ^ehearkened to the voice of Sarai.

^a xv. 2, 3. xxv. 21. Judg. xiii. 2. Luke i. 7. 36.
^b xii. 16. xxi. 9. 21.
^c Gal. iv. 24. Agar.
^d xvii. 16. xviii. 10. xxv. 21. xxx. 2. 3. 22. 1 Sam. i. 5. Ps. cxxvii. 3.
^e Heb. be builded by her. Ruth. iv. 11.
^e iii. 6. 12. 17.

3 And Sarai Abram's wife took Hagar her maid the Egyptian, after Abram ^fhad dwelt ten years in the land of Canaan, and ^ggave her to her husband Abram to be ^hhis wife.

4 And he went in unto Hagar, and she conceived: and when she saw that she had conceived, ⁱher mistress was despised in her eyes.

5 And Sarai said unto Abram, ^kMy wrong ^{be} upon thee; I have given my maid into thy bosom; and when she saw that she had conceived, I was despised in her eyes: ^lthe LORD judge between me and thee.

6 But ^mAbram said unto Sarai, Behold, thy maid is ⁿin thy hand; do to her ^oas it pleaseth thee. And when Sarai ^pdealt hardly with her, she ^qfled from her face.

^f xii. 5. g 5. xxx. 4. 9. h xxviii. 9. xxxi. 22. xxxv. 22. Judg. xix. 1—4. 2 Sam. v. 13. 1 Kings xi. 3. i 1 Sam. i. 6—8. Prov. xxx. 23. 1 Cor. iv. 6. xiii. 4, 5. k Luke x. 40, 41. l xxxi. 53. Ex. v. 21. 1 Sam. xxiv 12—15. 2 Chr. xxiv. 22. m xiii. 8, 9. Prov. xv. 1. 17, 18. 1 Pet. iii. 7. n Job ii. 6. Jer. xxxviii. 5. o Ex. ii. 15. Prov. xxvii. 8. Ec. x. 4.

raged to consider former mercies as earnest of future blessings.—The covenant of God with sinners has always been ratified by sacrifice and the shedding of blood: and, in attendance on his ordinances, we must wait for the confirmation of our faith, and guard against all intrusion on our devotions: especially those vain thoughts, which are apt, on the most solemn occasions, to arise, and interrupt the exercise of faith, hope, and love.

V. 12—21.

The knowledge of future events, if attainable, would seldom add to our comfort: in the most favoured families and most happy lives, there are such chequered scenes and so many afflictions, that it is merciful in God to conceal from us what will befall us and ours; for, if we knew the whole, we should painfully anticipate the troubles of life; and even distress ourselves about things, which will not take place till we are in the silent grave, or rather in the eternal world. Yet multitudes far more desire to partake with Abraham in this kind of information, than in his 'most holy faith!'—God waits till iniquity be ripe ere he punishes, and in the mean time gives space for repentance: let the sinner then count his long-suffering to be salvation, and improve it; and let believers also wait for their mercies till they are prepared for them.—Finally, the diligent Christian will daily obtain fuller assurances and more explicit knowledge, of the blessings of the covenant, which God hath ratified with him.

NOTES.

CHAP. XVI. V. 1—3. Ten years had elapsed since Abram arrived in Canaan; and a numerous posterity had repeatedly been promised him, from among whom that Seed was to arise, "in whom all the families of the earth would be blessed:" yet Sarai, though amiable and faithful, still continued childless, and was now seventy-five years of age. The promise had not hitherto been expressly restricted to her: and though we never before read of a pious person having two wives at once; yet such marriages appear to have been common, and perhaps in no bad repute in the world: and not only the natural desire of children, but the fulfilment of the promises, seemed to be concerned. Sarai therefore, no longer expecting to be herself the ancestor of the promised Seed, proposed to Abram to take a secondary wife, and expressed an intention of adopting his children by her. She indeed acknowledged the hand of God in her trial, and acquiesced in his will: yet her plan resulted from carnal policy and weakness of faith; and it was too hastily approved by Abram: it was also a bad example, a fatal precedent, and a source of manifold uneasiness. 'The father of mankind sinned, by hearkening to his wife; and now the father of the faithful imitates his example!' Fuller.—Probably, Hagar was one of the maid-servants, whom Pharaoh had given Abram.

V. 4—6. Hagar, forgetful of God who had specially favoured her, was lifted up with pride and self-preference; flattering herself that she should now secure Abram's affections, and probably expecting to be the mother of the promised Seed. Sarai also, instead of condemning herself, seemed to claim merit from her conduct; unreasonably blamed Abram, as if he had encouraged Hagar's insolence; improperly appealed to the Lord; and betrayed much passion and peevishness, and a very uneasy frame of mind. 'Passionate appeals to God, instead of indicating a good cause, are commonly the marks of a bad one.' Fuller.—In these perplexing circumstances Abram indeed acted wisely in relinquishing Hagar, and shewed that he had not been influenced by carnal affection: but he conceded too far in leaving one, whom he was bound to protect, entirely in the power of Sarai, whose mind was too much embittered to act with equity and impartiality: so that she exacted rigorously from Hagar her former service, which in her situation was unjustifiable; and she otherwise used her with harshness. And Hagar, not brooking to be treated as a slave, when she had expected the privilege of a wife, passionately and inconsiderately left Abram's house and family.

7 ¶ And the Angel of the LORD found her by a fountain of water in the wilderness, by ^p the fountain in the way to Shur.

8 And he said, Hagar, ^q Sarai's maid, whence earnest thou? and whither wilt thou go? And she said, I flee from the face of my mistress Sarai.

9 And the Angel of the LORD said unto her, Return to thy mistress, and submit thyself under her hands.

10 And ^r the Angel of the LORD said unto her, ^s I will multiply thy seed exceedingly, that it shall not be numbered for multitude.

11 And the Angel of the LORD said unto her, Behold, thou art with child, and shalt bear a son, and ^t shalt call his name ^u Ishmael; ^v because the LORD ^w hath heard thy affliction.

P xxv. 18. Ex. xv. 22. 1 Sam. xv. 7.
q 1. 4. Eph. vi. 5—8. 1 Tim. vi. 1, 2.
r Mt. 9. iv. 10. Eccl. x. 4. Jer. ii. 17, 8.
s Eph. v. 21. Tit. ii. 9. 1 Pet. ii. 18—25. v. 5, 9.
t xxii. 16—18. xxv. 11—13. xxxiii. 24—30. xlviii. 15, 16. Ex. iii. 2—6. Judg. ii. 1—3. vi. 11, 16, 21—24. xiii. 16—22. Is. lxiii. 9. Hos. xii. 3—5. Zech. iii. 8, 9. Mat. iii. 1. John i. 18. Acts vii. 30—38. 1 Tim. vi. 16.
u xxii. 20. xxi. 13. xxv. 12—18. Ps. lxxxiii. 6.
v xvii. 19. xxxix. 32—35. Is. vii. 14. Matt. i. 21—23. Luke i. 13, 31, 63.
w That is, God shall hear.
x xlii. 31, 32. 1 Sam. i. 20. Ex. ii. 23, 24. iii. 7.

12 And he will be ^a a wild man; ^b his hand will be against every man, and every man's hand against him: and ^c he shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren.

13 And she ^d called the name of the LORD that spake unto her, ^e Thou God seest me: for she said, Have I also here looked after him that seeth me?

14 Wherefore the well was called ^f Beer-labai-roi; behold, it is between ^g Kadesh and Bered.

15 And ^h Hagar bare Abram a son: and Abram called his son's name, which Hagar bare, ⁱ Ishmael.

16 And Abram was fourscore and six years old, when Hagar bare Ishmael to Abram.

a xxi. 20. Job xi. 12. xxxix. 5—8.
b xxvii. 40.
c xxv. 18.
d 7. 9, 10. xxii. 14. xxviii. 17, 19. xxxii. 30. Judg. vi. 24.
e Ex. xxxiii. 18—23. xxxix. 5—7. Ps. cxxxix. 1—12. Prov. xv. 8.
f That is, The well of him that liveth and seeth me.
g xxi. 31. xxiv. 62.
h Num. xii. 26.
i 23. Gal. iv. 22, 29.
B. C. 1910
h xvii. 18. 20. 25. 26. xxi. 9—21. xxv. 9, 12. xxviii. 9. xxxvii. 27.

V. 7—9. Probably, Hagar set out with the design of returning to Egypt, her native country; but being unable to proceed, she sat down, fatigued and overwhelmed with distress, by a fountain of water.—The Angel addressed her, as Sarai's servant, not as Abram's wife: thus her marriage was tacitly censured and disallowed, which would tend to humble her for despising and fleeing from her mistress. By enquiring of her whence she came, and whither she would go; the Angel implicitly charged her with leaving her proper station, acting inconsistently with her duty and interest, forsaking her own mercies, and rushing on destruction: and by commanding her to return and submit to her mistress, he reminded her, that her trouble was the consequence of sin, and that she must patiently endure it.—This is the first time the appearance of an angel is mentioned: but the following verses shew us who this Angel was.

V. 10, 11. The Angel said to Hagar, "I will multiply thy seed;" not "The LORD will multiply thy seed:" and there is not the least intimation that he spake in the name of another.—This confirms the opinion of those, who think the words should be rendered the ANGEL-JEHOVAH: JEHOVAH himself; yet, the Angel or Messenger of the Covenant, the eternal Word and Son of God: and the interpretation is established by the subsequent narrative. (Marg. Ref.)—"Ishmael" signifies God will hear; "he hath heard," and therefore he will hear "thy affliction;" intimating that the relief was not only unmerited, but unsolicited.

V. 12. The word, rendered "a wild man," properly signifies a wild-ass man: and perhaps this emblem was descriptive of Ishmael's character; but his posterity were principally intended. The Hagarenes, Saracens, and various other tribes of Arabs, are allowed to have descended in great measure from Ishmael: and they have, in all ages to this present day, been a hardy untamed race of free-booters, unlike every other nation in the world. They have chiefly subsisted by plundering their neighbours, and passengers; as it appears by the united testimony of all the historians and travellers, who have written of those countries. They have provoked the enmity of the neighbouring nations, and lived in a state of hostility with all men; so that there is no travelling in safety through those countries, except in large armed companies, called Caravans; and these are often plundered. Yet have they set at defiance the mightiest conquerors in every age, and stood their ground against them all. The Persians, Macedonians, and Romans, successively attempted to subjugate them; and made many powerful, but ineffectual, efforts to that purpose. At length Mohammed arose, and under him and his successors, they subdued a large part of the world. After a time indeed, the power of the Mohammedans was transferred to the Turks, who have repeatedly attempted to subdue the Saracens, or Arabs. but, instead of succeeding, they have for above three hundred years been obliged to pay a large tribute to them, for the safe passage of their pilgrims to Mecca, the city which is the centre of their religion! The descendants of Ishmael also lived as ravagers in the neighbourhood of the Israelites and Edomites, and other descendants of Abram, and yet were never subjugated by any of them. See Bp. Newton on the Prophecies. Diss. 1.

V. 13, 14. JEHOVAH spake to Hagar, and she called his name, "Thou God seest me:" yet we read of no other speaker, than the Angel.—Admiring the Lord's condescension and mercy, she added, "Have I also here looked after him that seeth me?" "Have I, who am so unworthy, here, in this desert, at a distance from his ordinances, and out of the path of duty, been favoured with such an encouraging appearance of the LORD!"—Accordingly, she called the name of the place, The well of him that liveth and seeth me. She was now brought to a better temper, returned home, and, probably, by proper behaviour, pacified Sarah, and experienced better usage.

V. 15. Abram named his son Ishmael, having been informed by Hagar of what had taken place. (11.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—6.

In every relation and situation of life there is some trouble to bear; and the exercise of faith greatly consists in patiently submitting to it, waiting the Lord's time, and

CHAP. XVII.

The Lord again ratifies the covenant with Abram; changes his name to Abraham, and Sarai's to Sarah, and institutes circumcision, 1—15; he promises him a son by Sarah; accepts his prayer for Ishmael; and fixes the time for the birth of Isaac, 16—22. Abraham circumcises himself and the males of his family, a xvi. 16

b xii. 1.
c xviii. 14. xviii. 23—27.
3. xxxv. 11. Ex. vi. 3. Num. xi. 23. Job xi. 7. Dan. iv. 35. Eph. iii. 20. Phil. iv. 13.
d v. 24. vi. 9.
* Or, upright, or sincere. Deut. xviii. 13. Job i. 1. Matt. v. 48.
e ix. 9. xv. 18. Ps. cv. 8—11. Gal. iii. 17, 18.

AND when Abram ^a was ninety years old and nine, ^b the Lord appeared to Abram, and said unto him, I am the ^c Almighty God: ^d walk before me, and be thou ^e perfect.

2 And ^e I will make my covenant between me and thee, and will ^f multiply thee exceedingly.

3 And Abram ^g fell on his face: and God talked with him, saying,

4 As for me, behold my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be ^h a father of [†] many nations.

5 Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram; but ⁱ thy name shall be Abraham, for a father of many nations have I made thee.

6 And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make ^k nations of thee; and ^l kings shall come out of thee.

g Ex. iii. 6. Lev. ix. 23, 24. Num. xvi. 22, 45. Josh. v. 14. Judg. xiii. 20. Ez. i. 28. iii. 23. ix. 8. Dan. viii. 17. x. 9. Matt. xvii. 6. Rev. i. 17.
h xvi. 10. xxv. 1—18. xxxvi. Rom. iv. 11—18. Gal. iii. 29.
† Heb. multitude of nations.
i 15. xxxii. 28.
2. Sam. xii. 25. Neh. ix. 7. 12. lxxii. 2—4. lxxv. 15. Jer. xx. 3. xxxiii. 6. Matt. i. 21—23. John i. 42.
k 4. xxxv. 11.
l 16. xxxvi. 31, &c. Ezraiv. 20. Matt. i.

using those means, and those only, which he appoints and authorizes, for its removal. But unbelief is frequently shewn by impatience, and hastily using unhallowed means of obtaining those things, which we inordinately desire.—Very bad actions may be sanctioned by the example of very good men; they may appear plausible, be supported with some shew of reason, and be suggested by those who are justly dear to us. But we never have more cause to be upon our guard, than when “Satan thus transforms himself into an angel of light.” Then especially we should appeal “to the law, and to the testimony:” “What hath God said?” Then indeed we should act with deliberation, be afraid of leaning to our own understanding, and seek counsel of the Lord by earnest prayer.—In Hagar’s insolence, in Sarai’s impatience, and in Abram’s uneasiness; and also in Sarai’s severity, and in Hagar’s flight and distress, we see the effects of carnal projects, and of deviating from the original institution of marriage: and they who consent together in sin will generally be chastened together, and will often correct each other.—Anger and discord should indeed be shunned: yet even peace may be bought too dear; and we ought not to allow any person injuriously to treat those, who are entitled to our protection. But it is never safe or prudent to quit our situation, under the influence of pride, impatience, and resentment. A haughty spirit indeed will disdain contradiction: but it is best to endure it, and to consider, that “yielding pacifieth great offences.”

V. 7—16.

Important lessons of wisdom are couched under the answer, which ought to be made to such questions, as the Angel put to Hagar. Recollecting “who we are,” would teach us our duty, and suggest motives for quietly attending to it. Seriously enquiring in many cases, “whence we came,” may shew us our sin and folly: and considering, “whither we will go,” may often discover our danger and misery, before it be too late; and prepare us to listen to the counsel of him, who calls on us to repent of what we have done in pride and passion.—How free from fear and care, how conscientious in duty, how watchful against sin, and how resolute in resisting temptation should we be, if we always were suitably impressed with this thought, “Thou God seest me!” The good Lord, who always sees us, and despises not the meanest, but hears the affliction of the distressed, even before it vents itself in prayer, help us to realize his presence, to trust in his goodness, to submit to his will, and to all those whom he commands us to honour and obey for his sake; and with admiring, humble gratitude, to acknowledge his mercies to us, which are innumerable and unmerited, and often surprise us when we least expect them.

NOTES.

CHAP. XVII. V. 1—3. This appearance of the Lord to Abram, was nearly fourteen years after his marriage with Hagar: and, perhaps, this long trial of his faith implied a rebuke for his misconduct in that transaction.—The Lord, by revealing himself as “the Almighty,” or the all-sufficient God,” most powerfully enforced the subsequent exhortation to Abram, “to walk before him,” without being discouraged; and to “be perfect,” or not to waver and decline, but to be constantly and entirely dependent on him, and devoted to him. ‘Have recourse no more to unbelieving expedients: keep thou the path of uprightness; and leave me to fulfil my promise in the time and manner that seem good to me.’ Fuller.—Abram, perceiving the special presence of God, fell on his face in humble adoration, and the Lord continued to speak to him in an audible voice.

V. 4. The Lord thus engaged, that his covenant, before confirmed, and now to be further ratified and sealed, should certainly be accomplished, notwithstanding delays and difficulties.—This covenant was essentially different from that made with Israel, as a nation, at mount Sinai: (Notes, Ex. xix. 5. Gal. iii.) yet it was far more than a personal engagement to Abram, concerning a numerous posterity and the inheritance of Canaan, or even concerning his own salvation; though these were included, with all the peculiar advantages enjoyed by Israel till the coming of Christ, and even to the end of time. But, as the covenant, confirmed to Abram with an oath, is fulfilled to all believers as his children; (Notes, Heb. vi. 13—20;) it must have been in substance the same as the Covenant of Grace, of which Christ is the Mediator and Surety, and which was ratified with Abram, as ‘the father of the faithful.’ In this view of the subject, the promised Seed was Christ, and Christians in him, of whom Israel as a nation was a type; Canaan typified heaven; every blessing was conferred on Abraham through “the righteousness of faith,” and all, who “are of faith, are blessed with faithful Abraham.”

V. 5, 6. (Marg. Ref.) The Ishmaelites, Midianites, and 7 And ^m I will establish my covenant between me and thee, and thy seed after thee, in their generations, for an everlasting covenant; to be ^a a God unto thee, and ^o to thy seed after thee.

8 And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land ^{*} wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an ^p everlasting possession: and I will be ^q their God.

9 And God said unto Abraham, Thou shalt ^r keep my covenant therefore, thou and thy seed after thee, in their generations.

in xv. 18. xxvi. 24. Ex. vi. 4. Ps. cv. 8-11. Mic. vii. 20. Luke i. 54. 55. 72-75.
a xxxviii. 13. Ex. iiii. 6, 15. Lev. xxvi. 12. Matt. xxii. 32. Heb. xi. 16. o Ex. xix. 5, 6 Rom. ix. 7-9
* Heb. of thy sojournings, xxxiii. 4. xxviii. 4. p xlvi. 4. Ex. xxi. 6. xxxi. 16, 17. xl. 15. Lev. xvi. 24. Num. xxv. 13. 2 Sam. xxiii. 5. Ps. ciii. 17. 2 Pet. i. 11.
q Ex. vi. 7. Lev. xxvi. 12. Deut. xiv. 2. xxvi. 18. xxix. 13. r Ps. xxv. 10. ciii. 18. Is. lvi. 4, 5.

10 This is my covenant which ye shall keep between me and you, and thy seed after thee; ^s every man-child among you shall be circumcised.

11 And ye shall circumcise ^t the flesh of your fore-skin, and it shall be a token of the covenant betwixt me and you.

12 And he that is [†] eight days old shall be circumcised among you, every man-child in your generations, ^u he that is born in the house, or bought with money of any stranger, which is not of thy seed.

xxxiv. 15. Deut. x. 16. xxx. 5. Jer. iv. 4. ix. 25. 28. Rom. ii. 28, 29. iii. 1. 1 Cor. vii. 18, 19. Gal. v. 3-6. vi. 12. Eph. ii. 11. Phil. iii. 3. Col. ii. 11. Ex. iv. 25. Josh. v. 3. 1 Sam. xviii. 25-27. 2 Sam. iii. 14. † Heb. a son of eight days. xxi. 4. Lev. xii. 3. Luke i. 59. 12. 21. John vii. 22. 23. Acts vii. 8. Phil. iii. 5. u 23. Ex. xii. 48, 49.

other nations, were descended from Abraham by Hagar and Keturah; and the Edomites, as well as the Israelites, by Sarah. All these nations were, for many ages, powerful and prosperous, and governed by princes of their own; and some of them are so to this day. Besides the kings of Israel, (or the ten tribes,) David and Solomon were renowned monarchs, and, with their descendants, formed an illustrious race of kings for almost five hundred years.—This is intimated by the change of his name, from ABRAM, a high father, to ABRAHAM, a father of a great multitude.

V. 7, 8. Abraham chose the Lord for his portion, and devoted himself to his service; and the Lord answered his expectations by engaging to make him partaker of everlasting felicity: and his posterity according to the flesh had his oracles committed to them, his prophets sent to them, and his ordinances administered among them. Thus he was their God by external relation, and they enjoyed vast advantages, in spiritual things, above all the rest of the human race, till the coming of Christ. (Note, Rom. iii. 1, 2.)—The word rendered everlasting, must be understood according to the nature of the subject: when used about the things of this present world or outward privileges, it means perpetual, and unalterable while the same state of things continues: but when it relates to inward spiritual blessings, or the concerns of a future state; it seems generally, if not always, strictly to denote eternal duration. Thus JEHOVAH was a God to the Israelites, till the coming of the Messiah, when, according to the whole tenour of prophecy, that state of things was to terminate: yet the nation is still kept separate for gracious purposes, in remembrance of this covenant. But of Abraham and all his spiritual seed, God is the eternal Portion and Blessedness. (Notes, Matt. xxii. 23—33. Heb. xi. 13—16.) This covenant ^c shall involve great blessings to the world; yet, it was made with Abram. ^d ... It made Abram the father of the church in all future ^e ages... All that the Christian world enjoys, or ever will ^f enjoy, it is indebted for to Abram and his Seed!... A high ^g honour this, to be the stock, whence the Messiah should ^h spring, and on which the church of God should grow. Fuller.

V. 9—12. Abraham was required to accede to the covenant, to profess his faith, and to give a proof of his ready acquiescence in the Lord's will, by submitting to circumcision; and he and all his posterity must observe this ordinance, as a pledge and mark of their being the worshippers and servants of JEHOVAH. Many nations have practised circumcision, and do so to this day; and even some not descended from Abraham, or related to him: yet it is highly probable, that this was the first introduction of this singular observance.—Cutting off the fore-skin seems to have been intended as an intimation, that a sinful nature is propagated with the human species; and this depravity, called “the old man,” must be put off, or mortified and destroyed, by believers. (Note, Eph. iv. 20—24.) In them the “heart” is circumcised to love the LORD; and rebellion and enmity are gradually destroyed out of it by sanctifying grace. This observance was the sacrament of regeneration, “the seal of the righteousness of faith;” (Note, Rom. iv. 9—12;) for the circumcision of the heart is an inward seal, that the sinner is justified by the righteousness of faith, as Abraham was.—Circumcision was a bloody and painful ordinance: for the sanctification of the Spirit is vouchsafed to sinners through the blood of Christ; the mortification of sin is painful to the flesh; and, till the blood of Christ had been shed once for all, the ordinances of God were generally attended with the shedding of blood; but none since that time have been so.—Not only Abraham and Isaac, and Abraham's posterity by Isaac, were circumcised; but his son Ishmael and his very bond-servants; for circumcision sealed the covenant of God's giving, not only Canaan to Isaac's posterity, but heaven, through Christ, to the whole Church of God. The outward sign belonged to the professed people of God; but the inward seal of the Spirit is peculiar to those whom God knows, (and he alone can know them,) to be believers.—Infants were circumcised, because a part of the visible church, and because this was a proper profession of their parents' faith, and a pledge for the religious education of their children, thus early dedicated to God. Yet they must not be circumcised till the eighth day: and, under the law, even animals must not be presented to God before that age. (Ex. xxii. 30.) But, as many infants would die before the eighth day, this might intimate that the outward ordinance, though always the parents' duty, was not essential to salvation. Males only were capable of circumcision: but in Christ there is no more distinction between male or female, than between Jew and Gentile. The Gentile, who embraced the Jewish religion, was circumcised adult; but his future offspring at eight days old. The uncircumcised were ordered to be cut off (14): for the neglect of circumcision was in fact a x xiv. 14. Ex. xii. 41.

y xxxvii. 27. 36.
xxxix. l. Ex. xxi. 2.
16. Neh. v. 5.
8. Matt. xviii. 26.

13 He ^r that is born in thy house, and he that is ^v bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised: and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant.

z Ex. iv. 24—26.
xii. 15. 19. xxx.
33. 38. Lev. vii. 20.
21. 25. 27. xviii. 29. xix. 8.
Num. xv. 30. 31.
a Ps. lv. 20. Is. xxiv. 5. xxxiii. 8.
Jer. xi. 10. xxxii. 32.

14 And the uncircumcised man-child, whose flesh of his foreskin is not circumcised, that soul shall be ^r cut off from his people; he hath ^a broken my covenant.

15 ¶ And God said unto Abraham, As for Sarai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but Sarah shall her name be.

b i. 29. xxiv. 60.
c xviii. 10—14.

16 And ^b I will bless her, and ^c give thee a son also of her: yea, I will bless her, and she shall ^{*} be a mother of nations; ^d kings of people shall be of her.

* Heb. become nations. xxxv. 11. Gal. iv. 27—31.
d See on 6. Is. xlii. 23.

17 Then Abraham fell upon his face, ^e and laughed, and said in his heart, Shall a child be born unto him that is an hundred years old? and shall Sarah, that is ninety years old, bear?

e xviii. 12. xxi. 6. Rom. iv. 19, 20.

18 And Abraham said unto God, 'Oh, that Ishmael might live before thee!

f Jer. xxxii. 39. Acts ii. 39.

19 And God said, ^g Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shalt call his name Isaac: and I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant; and with his seed after him.

g xviii. 10—14. xcl. 2, 3. 2 Kings iv. 16, 17. Luke i. 13—20. Rom. ix. 6—9. Gal. iv. 28—31.

rejection of the covenant; and the uncircumcised in heart will be separated for ever from the Lord and his people. Doubtless the parent would be chargeable with the guilt of his neglect, and not the child till grown up. (Note, Matt. xxviii. 19, 20.)

V. 13. In your flesh.] The outward seal of the covenant would remain in the flesh of Abraham, and Isaac, and their posterity, and of all who were thus incorporated among them; for the use of circumcision, as a religious rite, would distinguish them from other people.

V. 15, 16. SARAI signifies my princess; SARAH, a princess, to others as well as to Abraham: implying how honourable her name would be in the whole church of God, as well as in Abraham's family. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 17. When Abraham heard the words of God, he again prostrated himself in reverential worship, and laughed, in admiring faith and joyful gratitude.—He himself was born when Terah was a hundred and thirty years old, as it is generally calculated; (Note, xi. 26, 27;) but, in the course of the last hundred years, it seems to have become very uncommon, for men to have children at so advanced an age. He had been so long married to Sarah, and she was now so far advanced in years, continuing barren, that it seems he had given up all expectation of having seed by her: and, previously to this explicit declaration, thought that the promises would be fulfilled in Ishmael.

20 And as for Ishmael, I have heard thee: Behold, ^h I have blessed him, and will make him fruitful, and will multiply him exceedingly: twelve princes shall he beget, and I will make him a great nation.

h xvi. 10—12. xxv. 12—18.

21 But ⁱ my covenant will I establish with Isaac, whom Sarah shall bear unto thee ^k at this set time in the next year.

i xxi. 10—12. xxv. 2—5. xlv. 1. xlviii. 15. Ex. ii. 24. iii. 6. Heb. xi. 9. k xxi. 2. Job xiv. 13. Acts i. 7.

22 And He left off ^l talking with him, and God went up from Abraham.

l 3. xviii. 33. xxxv. 9—15. Ex. xx. 22. Num. xii. 6.—8. Deut. v. 4. John i. 18. x. 30.

23 ¶ And Abraham took Ishmael his son, and all that were born in his house, and all that were bought with his money, every male among the men of Abraham's house; and ^m circumcised the flesh of their fore-skin, in the self-same day, as God had said unto him.

m xviii. 19. xxxiv. 24. Josh. v. 2—9. Acts xv. 3. Rom. ii. 25—29. iv. 9—12. 1 Cor. vii. 19, 13. Gal. v. 6. vi. 15. n l. 17. Rom. iv. 19, 20.

24 And ⁿ Abraham was ninety years old and nine, when he was circumcised in the flesh of his fore-skin.

25 And Ishmael his son was thirteen years old, when he was circumcised in the flesh of his fore-skin.

26 ^o In the self-same day was Abraham circumcised, and Ishmael his son.

o xii. 4. xxii. 3, 4. Ps. cxix. 60.

27 And all the men of his house, born in the house, and bought with money of the stranger, were ^p circumcised with him.

p xviii. 19.

V. 18. Though Abraham "staggered not at the promise through unbelief, but was strong in faith giving glory to God;" yet, he seems to have had some struggle with unbelief, in which he came off victorious, through the repeated assurances which the Lord gave him.—This verse, however, may be interpreted as a natural and earnest desire that Ishmael might have a blessing also; and not be excluded from the favour of God, or separated from his worshippers, though the promised Seed was not to descend from him.

V. 19—21. It was the purpose of God, that Christ should descend from Isaac and his son Jacob: in that family true religion was chiefly supported; to them Canaan, the type of heaven, was granted; and they represented the spiritual Seed of Abraham. Yet Ishmael and others, after this limitation, being at that time a part of the visible church, were commanded to be circumcised; and we are not authorized, from the circumstance of the covenant concerning the promised Seed being restricted to the line of Isaac, to determine that any of them finally perished. (Notes, xvi. 10—12.)—Ishmael was the son of a bond-woman: how unlikely that his sons should be twelve princes, even when the twelve sons of Jacob were only shepherds!—His name Isaac.] Note, xxi. 3, 4.

V. 22. Left off, &c.] The whole narration suggests the idea of a personal conference; and leaves no reasonable

CHAP. XVIII.

The Lord again appears to Abraham, who entertains angels, 1—8. A son is promised to Sarah, at which she laughs, and her misconduct is rebuked, 9—15. The Lord discovers to Abraham his purpose of destroying Sodom, &c. 16—22; who earnestly intercedes for the inhabitants, 23—33.

AND the LORD ^a appeared unto him in the plains of ^b Mamre: and he sat in the tent-door in the heat of the day.

2 And he lifted up his eyes and looked, and lo, ^c three men stood by him: and when he saw them, he ran to meet ground of doubt, whether he, who here calls himself “the ALMIGHTY GOD,” was the same as afterwards in human nature said, “I and my Father are One;” and, “He that hath seen me, hath seen the Father.” (Marg. Ref.)

V. 23—27. Abraham prepared every thing for immediate and exact obedience, in a painful appointment, against which many objections might have been urged, and which might seem even to counteract the accomplishment of the promise sealed by it: and this obedience was not peculiar to him, but was imitated by his household, who seem to have made no opposition; and we may conclude that many of them were partakers of his faith.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—8.

The Lord, from time to time, vouchsafes to his servants peculiar manifestations of his presence and favour, and seasons of special consolation: yet their daily walk with him must be maintained by that faith, which “sees Him who is invisible.”—With however long delays, and great discouragements, the faith of true believers may be tried, God will strengthen it: and they who walk before him, trust in him, and wait for him, shall never be ashamed.—It is our part to look to our own temper and conduct; and to leave all in his hands, who is all-sufficient and almighty; and who, for the purposes of his own glory, often delays to interpose, till expectation from every other quarter fails.—But let us well consider, that the Lord’s gracious condescensions should excite our adoring reverence, lest we forget who HE is, and what we are! (Ps. lxxxix. 7. Heb. xii. 28. Rev. xv. 4.)

V. 9—27.

Not only the doctrines of revelation, but the very seals of the new covenant, remind us that we are guilty and polluted, evince our need of atoning blood, and point to the promised Saviour; they teach us to exercise faith in him; and prove, that without regeneration, sanctification by his Spirit, and the mortification of our corrupt and sensual inclinations, we cannot bear a covenant-relation to him. Let us then remember, that the true “circumcision is that of the heart, by the Spirit;” that they are “the true circumcision, who worship God in the Spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh;” (Note, Phil. iii. 1—7;) and that, both under the old and the new dispensation, many have had the external profession, the them from the tent-door, and ^d bowed himself toward the ground;

3 And said, My Lord, if now I have found favour in thy sight, pass not away, I pray thee, from thy servant.

4 Let a little water, I pray you, be fetched, and ^e wash your feet, and rest yourselves under the tree.

5 And ^f I will fetch a morsel of bread, and ^g comfort ye your hearts: after that ye shall pass on; for therefore ^h are ye come to your servant. And they said, So do as thou hast said.

6 And Abraham hastened into the ^d xxiii. 7. xxxiii. 3

—7. xlv. 14
1uth. ch. 10
2 Kings ii. 15.

^e xix. 2. xxiv. 32.
xlii. 24. 1 Sam.
xxv. 41. Luke
vii. 44. John xiii.
8—15. 1 Tim. v.
10.

^f Judg. vi. 18. xii. 15.
^g Heb. stay Judg.
xix. 5

^h Heb. ye have passed. xix. 8.

sacramental sign, and the outward seal, who were never “sealed by the holy Spirit of promise.”—True faith evidences itself by prompt and unreserved obedience in the most difficult instances: and if our faith be of this kind, we may be confident that God is our God and everlasting Portion; that the everlasting covenant is confirmed to us, by the security vouchsafed to Abraham; and that he, who has given us a new heart, hath also “given us a new name, which no man knoweth, save he who receiveth it.” (Note, Rev. ii. 17.) And while we thankfully embrace the pledges of his love, and make open profession of our faith; let us not forget to seek in earnest prayer, the same blessings for our children, our servants, and all connected with us.

NOTES.

CHAP. XVIII. V. 1, 2. It is here expressly said, that “JEHOVAH appeared to Abraham,” or was seen by him; and the manner of this appearance is afterwards related.—Abraham was waiting for an opportunity of exercising hospitality, by entertaining any weary traveller, who might need refreshment and a cooling shade; (for inns were not then to be met with, as among us;) and at that time three persons, appearing as men, presented themselves before him. It is generally agreed, that two of these were created angels; but many infer from the context, that the other was the eternal Son visibly appearing as in human form. Indeed, there is not the least intimation in the narrative of any other appearance, except that of the three men whom Abraham entertained. If this were the only instance, in which language naturally suited to warrant such a conclusion was used, it would not be proper to ground much upon it: but passages frequently occur, which seem incapable of any other construction, without having recourse to human tradition, in explaining the words of inspiration, even that very tradition which our Lord opposed; (Mark vii. 9;) and thus implying that the simple narrative of the sacred historian was calculated to mislead the unlearned. (Note, xxxii. 30. Marg. Ref.)

V. 3—8. Abraham addressed himself to one of the three, who appeared to have the pre-eminence; but, it is probable, he did not at first know his guests: for his bowing to them seems to have been rather a token of civil respect, as to persons who appeared venerable and honourable, than an act of religious adoration. (Marg. Ref. d.)—Washing the feet was customary and necessary in those hot climates

* Heb. hasten. tent unto Sarah, and said, * Make ready quickly ^ε three measures of fine meal, knead it, and make cakes upon the hearth.

h xix. 3. Am. vi. 4. Matt. xxii. 4. Luke xv. 23. 27. 30. 7 And Abraham ^b ran unto the herd, and fetched a calf tender and good, and gave it unto a young man; and he hastened to dress it.

i Deut xxxvii. 14. 8 And ^l he took butter and milk, and the calf which he had dressed, and set it before them; ^k and he stood by them under the tree, ^l and they did eat.

k Luke xii. 37. xvii. 8. John xii. 2. Rev. iii. 20. l Luke xxiv. 30. 43. Acts x. 41. m iv. 9. 9 And they said unto him, ^m Where is Sarah thy wife? And he said, Behold, ⁿ in the tent.

n xxiv. 67. xxxi. 33. Tit. ii. 5. o 13. 14. xvi. 10. xxii. 15, 16. p xvii. 21. xxi. 2. 2 Kings iv. 16. q xvii. 19. Judg. xiii. 3-5. Luke i. 13. Rom. ix. 9. Gal. iv. 23. 28. 10 And ^o He said, I will certainly return unto thee ^p according to the time of life: and lo, ^q Sarah thy wife shall have a son. And Sarah heard it in the tent-door, which was behind him.

r xvii. 24. Luke i. 7. 26. Rom. iv. 18-21. s xxxi. 35. 11 Now Abraham and Sarah were ^r old, and well stricken in age: and it ceased to be with Sarah after ^s the manner of women.

t xvii. 17. xxi. 6. 7. Luke i. 18-20. 34, 35. Heb. xi. 11, 12. u Eph. v. 33. 1 Pet. iii. 6. 12 Therefore Sarah ^t laughed within herself, saying, After I am waxed old, shall I have pleasure, ^u my lord being old also?

13 And the LORD said unto Abraham,

Wherefore did Sarah laugh, saying, Shall I of a surety bear a child, which am old?

14 Is ^v any thing too hard for the LORD? At the time appointed ^x I will return unto thee, according to the time of life, and Sarah shall have a son.

15 Then Sarah ^y denied, saying, I laughed not: for she was afraid. And he said, ^z Nay, but thou didst laugh.

16 ¶ And the men rose up from thence, and looked towards Sodom: and Abraham went with them ^a to bring them on the way.

17 And the LORD said, ^b Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do;

18 Seeing that Abraham shall surely ^c become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him?

19 For ^d I know him, that he will ^e command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the LORD, to do justice and judgment: ^f that the LORD may bring upon Abraham that which he hath spoken of him.

20 And the LORD said, Because ^g the

Num. xi. 23
2 Kings vii. 1, 2
Jer. xxxii. 17
Zech. viii. 6
Matt. iii. 9. xix. 26. Luke i. 37. Eph. iii. 20. Phil. iii. 21. iv. 13. Heb. xi. 19.
x 10. Deut. xxx. 3. Ps. xc. 18.
y iv. 9. xii. 13. Job ii. 10. John xviii. 17. 25-17. 1 John i. 8.
z Ps. xlv. 21. Prov. xii. 19. Mark ii. 8. John ii. 25. Rom. iii. 19.
a Acts xvi. 5. Rom. xv. 24. 3 John 6.
b 2 Kings iv. 27. Ps. xxv. 14. Am. iii. 7. Jolu xv. 15. Jam. ii. 23.
c See on xii. 2, 3. —xxii. 17, 18. Ps. lxxii. 17. Acts iii. 25, 26. Gal. iii. 8. 14. Eph. i. 3. d 2 Sam. vii. 20. Ps. i. 6. John xxi. 17. 2 Tim. ii. 19.
e xvii. 23-27. Deut. iv. 9, 10. vi. 6, 7. xi. 19-21. xxxii. 46. Josh. xxiv. 15. Job i. 5. Ps. lxxviii. 5-8. Prov. vi. 20, 21. xxii. 6. Eph. vi. 4. 1 Tim. iii. 4, 5. 12. 2 Tim. i. 5. iii. 15.
f 1 Sam. ii. 20, 31. Acts xxvii. 23, 24. 31.
g iv. 10. xix. 13. Jam. v. 4.

where only sandals were worn; and the several particulars here related are suited to give us an idea of the simple, liberal, active, and obliging hospitality of the ancient patriarchs.—Butter.] ‘ We read of cheese in Homer, Euripides, Theocritus, and others; yet they never mention butter: nor hath Aristotle a word about it, though he hath sundry observations about cheese. For butter was not then known among the Greeks.’ Bp. Patrick.

V. 9—12. This attention to Abraham’s concerns would gradually shew him whom he had entertained. At first, they enquired after Sarah, who was in her tent: and then one of them, JEHOVAH, (as it must appear to every plain reader,) spake to Abraham respecting that promise as his own, which had been given in the foregoing chapter by the almighty God; and he expressly engaged for its accomplishment! (Note, xvii. 19—21.) But as this had been delayed, till it had become unprecedented, according to general observation; Sarah, who heard what passed, “laughed within herself;” and spake words, not very dissimilar to those of Abraham in the preceding chapter. Yet the heart-searching God saw, that her’s was the expression of unbelief; and his, of faith, admiration, and joy.—“According to the time of life,” is supposed to mean the usual term of pregnancy.—It is observable, that from this very speech of Sarah, the apostle Peter quotes her words concerning Abraham, in which she calls him, “My lord,” as a commendable instance of her dutiful subjection to him! (1 Pet. iii. 6.)

V. 13—15. Here the speaker is expressly called JEHO-VAH.—By manifesting that he was acquainted with what Sarah did secretly, he shewed that he could accomplish his word, however contrary to the ordinary course of things. The conduct of Sarah shewed great weakness, and was exceedingly faulty; yet the rebuke was very gentle, and connected with a renewal of the promise!

V. 17. The Lord would not conceal from “Abraham his friend,” his intention of destroying the cities of the plain; for he was concerned in the event, both on account of Lot, and as the inheritance of the adjacent countries was covenanted to his posterity. God would also give his servant an opportunity to intercede for the criminals; and shew him the reasons of his conduct, that he might approve of it, and glorify him on that account. (Note, John xv. 12—16.)

V. 18, 19. The promises to Abraham and his posterity, and, through Christ, to the nations of the earth, were absolute; yet Abraham’s conduct was an essential part of the gracious plan. The Lord also approved his servant’s integrity, piety, and zeal; and knew that he would perseveringly instruct his family, set them a good example, and pray for them; and use his authority in restraining evil, and promoting justice and godliness among them. Of this he had just before given a remarkable proof, by obeying the Lord’s command in circumcising himself and family. He would also train up Isaac in the same pious manner; and thus the way would be prepared, for the promised blessings to be conferred on his posterity.

V. 20, 21. The just judge does not pronounce sentence

h xiii. 13 cry of Sodom and Gomorrah is great, and because their ^hsin is very grievous;

i xi. 5. 7. Ex. iii. 8. xxxiii. 5. Mic. i. 3. John vi. 38. 1 Thes. iv. 16. k Jer. xvii. 1. Zeph. i. 12. Heb. iv. 13. l Dent. viii. 2. m 2. xix. 1. 21 I will ^lgo down now, and ^ksee whether they have done altogether according to the cry of it, which is come unto me; and if not, ^lI will know.

n Ps. cvi. 23. Jer. xv. 1. xviii. 20. Ez. xxi. 30. Acts vii. 55. o Ps. lxxiii. 28. Jer. xxx. 21. Heb. x. 22. p xx. 4. Num. xvi. 22. 2 Sam. xxiv. 17. Ps. xi. 4-7. Rom. iii. 5. 6. q 32. Is. i. 9. Jer. v. 1. Matt. vii. 13. 14. r Acts xxvii. 24. 22 And ^mthe men turned their faces from thence, and went toward Sodom: but Abraham ⁿstood yet before the LORD.

s Jer. xii. 1. 23 ¶ And Abraham ^odrew near, and said, ^pWilt thou also destroy the righteous with the wicked?

24 Peradventure ^qthere be fifty righteous within the city: wilt thou also destroy and not ^rspare the place for the fifty righteous that are therein?

25 That ^sbe far from thee to do after this manner, to slay the righteous with the wicked: and that ^tthe righteous should be as the wicked, that be far from thee: " Shall not ^uthe Judge of all the earth do right?

26 And the LORD said, ^vIf I find in Sodom fifty righteous within the city, then I will spare all the place for their sakes.

27 And Abraham answered and said, Behold now, ^wI have taken upon me to speaking unto the LORD, which am but ^adust and ashes.

28 Peradventure there shall lack five of the fifty righteous: ^bwilt thou destroy all the city for lack of five? And He said, ^cIf I find there forty and five, I will not destroy it.

29 And he spake unto him yet again, and said, Peradventure there shall be forty found there. And He said, I will not do it for forty's sake.

30 And he said unto him, ^dOh, let not the LORD be angry, and I will speak: Peradventure there shall thirty be found there. And He said, I will not do it, if I find thirty there.

31 And he said, ^eBehold now I have taken upon me to speak unto the LORD: Peradventure there shall be twenty found there. And He said, I will not destroy it for twenty's sake.

32 And he said, ^fOh, let not the LORD be angry, and I will speak yet but this once: Peradventure ten shall be found there. And ^gHe said, I will not destroy it for ten's sake.

33 And ^hthe LORD went his way, as soon as he had left communing with Abraham: ⁱand Abraham returned ^junto his place.

a ii. 7. iii. 19. Job iv. 19. Ps. viii. 4. cxliv. 3. Ec. xii. 7. Is. lxiv. 8. 1 Cor. xv. 47. 48. 2 Cor. v. 1. Num. xiv. 17-19. 1 Kings xx. 82, 83. Job xxiii. 8, 4. c 26. 29.

d xlv. 18. Judg. vi. 39. Est. iv. 11. 16. Is. iv. 8, 9.

e 27. Luke xi. 8. xviii. 1. Eph. vi. 18. Heb. iv. 16.

f Prov. xv. 8. Is. lxii. 6, 7. Janu. v. 15-17. 1 John v. 15, 16.

g Ex. xxxiv. 8, 7. Pa. lxxxvi. 5. Mic. vii. 18. Eph. iii. 20.

h 16. 22. xxxii. 26. xxxi. 55.

on mere rumour; but ascertains the criminal's guilt, before he executes vengeance. Thus the Lord declared, that he would impartially judge and punish the guilty cities, on full proof of their atrocious wickedness.

V. 22. The two, whom we suppose to have been created angels, departed at this time; and accordingly two entered Sodom at evening: while the One, called JEHOVAH throughout the chapter, continued with Abraham, who " stood yet " before the LORD; " before the same Person with whom he had hitherto been communing.

V. 23-26. When Abraham " engaged his heart " to intercede for the devoted cities: (Note, Jer. xxx. 19-22. v. 22 :) he assumed it as an unquestionable truth, that " the Judge of all the earth would do right." But, knowing how " the righteous LORD delighteth in mercy," he not only pleaded that the pious remnant might be preserved, but likewise that the rest might be spared for their sakes.— " He does not plead, that the wicked may be spared for their own sakes, or because it would be too severe to destroy them.—This would have been siding with sinners against God!—Thus Christ makes intercession for sinners; not by arraigning the divine law, not by alleging aught in extenuation of human guilt; but by pleading his own obedience unto death." Fuller.

V. 27, 28. While Abraham, with magnanimous philanthropy, pleaded for the guilty cities; he did not forget that he himself was but " dust and ashes," a poor, sinful, dying man.—His argument also was very ingenious: he had obtained from the divine condescension an assurance, that Sodom should be saved, if fifty righteous persons could be found in it; and would the merciful God destroy the whole city for the want of only five of that number?

V. 32. Ten.] It is probable, that Abraham thought that he had now got within the limits of Lot's family; if, however, there were not that small number in Sodom and its dependencies, he must allow the justice of the sentence.— " Not a soul seems to have been won over, by Lot's residence in the place, to the worship of the true God." Fuller.

V. 33. Surely this is calculated to convey to us the idea of a visible appearance and a personal conference! But " no man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared " him: " and thence we infer, that this was an anticipation of the future incarnation of the Son of God.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1-15.

We should not " be forgetful to entertain strangers; for " thereby some have entertained angels unawares; " nay, the Lord of angels himself; as indeed we always do, when for his sake we entertain one of the least of his brethren.—Cheerful liberality, and an obliging manner in shewing kindness, are great ornaments to true piety: and wealth,

CHAP. XIX.

Lot entertains two angels, 1—3. The abandoned Sodomites are smitten with blindness, 4—11. Lot is warned, and in vain warns his sons-in-law; 12—14. He is directed to flee with his family to the mountain, but obtains leave to retire to Zoar, 15—23. Sodom and Gomorrah are destroyed; and Lot's wife, looking back, becomes a pillar of salt, 24—26. Abraham beholds the destruction of Sodom, &c. 27—29. Lot retires from Zoar; and is betrayed into drunkenness and incest; 30—35. The birth of Moab and Ammon, 36—38.

AND there came ^a two angels to Sodom at even; and Lot sat in the gate of Sodom: and Lot seeing them, ^b rose up to meet them; and he bowed himself with his face toward the ground;

^a xviii. 1, 2. 22.

^b xxviii. 2—5. Job xxxi. 32. Heb. xiii. 2.

used to pious and beneficent purposes, becomes indeed a blessing to the possessor and to many others.—Though our condescending Lord does not vouchsafe to us his personal visits, yet still, by his word and Spirit, he “stands at the door and knocks;” and when we are inclined to open, he deigns to enter; and by his gracious consolations provides a rich entertainment, on which “he sups with us, and we with him.” (Note, Rev. iii. 20—22.)—Even the strongest believers need repeated confirmations of their faith, and in trying circumstances sometimes “stagger through unbelief.”—One sin is commonly the introduction to another: and it is hardly to be expected that we should strictly adhere to truth, when we allow ourselves to question the divine veracity: but those “whom the Lord loves, he rebukes,” silences, and brings to repentance; when they sin against him.—The same action may in some cases be either good, or bad, as it springs from opposite internal principles.—Our discouragements also would be greatly removed, and our temptations prevented, did we more fully realize the almighty power of God, as engaged to fulfil his largest promises.

V. 16—22

The righteous Lord exactly determines the degree of criminality, both of individuals and nations, and proportions his punishments to their sins; but, alas! the more particular the scrutiny is, the more numerous and atrocious abominations are generally detected and exposed.—“The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him:” and whether he does, or does not, discover to his people what he is about to do, he will eventually satisfy them of his wisdom and justice in his most awful judgments on the wicked; so that the whole will animate their admiring adorations and praises.—He graciously notices our attention to family-religion: and when we use our authority, and ability, in governing and instructing our households, it is not only an acceptable service, and conducive to the diffusion and continuance of piety in the world; but is also the means of entailing spiritual advantages on our posterity: while the neglect of it is often visited by sore judgments on them, as in the case of Lot, of Eli, and of Jehoshaphat.

V. 23—33.

“The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much:” and the ungodly are little aware how deeply they are indebted, as to temporal comforts, and that long-suffering, which frequently makes way for their conversion and salvation, to the prayers of the very persons whom they despise and injure; nay, a number in any nation or city, who stand in the gap by their intercessions and exertions, are a stronger defence, than armies, navies, or fortifications.—It is our duty and privilege thus to stand before the Lord, not only in behalf of our relatives, friends, brethren, and country, but likewise of all on whom we apprehend the wrath of God is about to be poured; and to fill our mouth with arguments, and order our cause before him in the best manner we can. And though our unworthiness and vileness, compared with his majesty and holiness, must frequently excite a consciousness, how unmeet we are, thus “to engage our hearts to approach unto God;” yet, coming through our great and merciful High Priest to a throne of Grace, we, sinful dust and ashes, need not fear, that the Lord will be angry at our humble, compassionate, and fervent petitions: for they are “spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God through Jesus Christ.” We shall always find him more ready to hear, than we to ask; and shall commonly discontinue our requests, before he ceases to grant them. Yet in many cases we must be satisfied with the assurance, that our “prayers will return into our own bosom.”—In praying for sinners, we should be careful not to impeach the justice of God in their condemnation: for we could not desire, that the destruction of the finally impenitent should be prevented.—The Lord will by no means deal alike with the righteous and the wicked. “That be far from him: Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?” Yet the best of men are sinners, and may justly be involved in public calamities; especially when they have not decidedly protested against prevailing iniquity, and separated from the wicked: but God will make a more exact discrimination in a future world. He delighteth, however, in mercy; and for the sake of a few who really serve him, he often prolongs the tranquillity and preserves the lives of multitudes; so that believers are not only blessed, but a blessing wherever they live. The good Lord be pleased to increase the number of them in our land, and in every part of the world!

NOTES.

CHAP. XIX. V. 1. The sacred historian, more agreeably occupied, as it were, by the history of faithful Abraham, had for some time been silent as to Lot: but in this chapter he is again introduced, though not greatly to his credit. The apostle Peter says, that “Lot was vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked; for that “righteous man, dwelling among them, in seeing and hearing, vexed his righteous soul from day to day with their unlawful deeds.” We must therefore conclude, that his character was upright, and on the whole his example good. But he wanted firmness, and was not fit for the situation, into which he had intruded himself; nor was he able to “set his face like a flint” against the wicked inhabitants of Sodom. He went thither from unworthy motives, and continued there with unwarrantable

2 And he said, Behold now, my lords, turn in, I pray you, into your servant's house, and tarry all night, and wash your feet, and ye shall arise up early, and go on your ways. And they said, 'Nay, but we will abide in the street all night.

c Judg. xix. 17—21. Luke xxiv. 28, 29. Acts xvi. 15.
d 2 Kings iv. 8. Luke xiv. 23. 2 Cor. v. 14.

3 And he ^d pressed upon them greatly; and they turned in unto him, and entered into his house: and he made them ^e a feast, and did bake ^f unleavened bread, and they did eat.

e xviii. 6—8. xxi. 8. Luke v. 29. John xii. 2.
f Ex. xii. 15. 39. Judg. vi. 19. 1 Sam. xxviii. 24. 1 Cor. v. 8. g Prov. iv. 16. vi. 18.

4 ¶ But ^g before they lay down, the men of the city, even the men of Sodom, compassed the house round, both old and young, ^h all the people from every quarter.

h xlii. 13. xviii. 20. Ex. xvi. 2. Jer. v. 1—6. 31. Matt. xxvii. 20—25.

5 And they called unto Lot, and said unto him, ⁱ Where are the men which came in to thee this night? bring them out unto us, that we may know them.

i Lev. xviii. 22. xx. 13. Judg. xix. 22. Is. i. 9. iii. 9. Ez. xvi. 49. 51. Matt. xi. 23. 24. Rom. i. 26. 27. 1 Cor. vi. 9. 1 Tim. i. 10. Jude 7.

6 And Lot went out at the door unto them, and shut the door after him, k Judg. xix. 23. 1 Sam. xxx. 23. 24. Acts xvii. 26. 1 Ex. xxii. 22. m 31—34. xlii. 37. Judg. xix. 24. Mark ix. 6. Rom. iii. 8.

7 And said, ^k I pray you, brethren, ^l do not so wickedly.

8 Behold now, ^m I have two daughters which have not known man; let me, I pray you, bring them out unto you, and do ye to them as is good in your eyes: only unto these men do nothing; for ⁿ therefore came they under the shadow of my roof.

n xviii. 5.

9 And they said, ° Stand baek. And they said again, ^p This one fellow came in to sojourn, and he will needs be a judge: now will we deal worse with thee, than with them. ^q And they pressed sore upon the man, even Lot, and came near to break the door.

o 1 Sam. xxy. 17. Prov. ix. 7. 8. Jer. iii. 3. vi. 16. vii. 12. Matt. vii. 6.
p xlii. 12. Ex. ii. 14. Acts vii. 29.—29. 2 Pet. ii. 7, 8.
q xi. 6. 1 Sam. ii. 16. Prov. xiv. 16. xvii. 12. xxvii. 3. Ec. ix. 3. x. 13. Dan. iii. 19—22.

10 But the men put forth their hand, and pulled Lot into the house to them, and shut to the door.

11 And they smote the men that were at the door of the house with ^r blindness, both small and great: so that ^s they wearied themselves to find the door.

r 2 Kings vi. 18. Acts xlii. 11. s Ec. x. 15.

12 ¶ And the men said unto Lot, ^t Hast thou here any besides? ^u son-in-law, and thy sons, and thy daughters, and whatsoever thou hast in the city, bring them out of this place.

t vii. 1. Num. xvi. 23. Josh. vi. 22. 23. Jer. xxxii. 39. u 14.

13 For we will destroy this place, because the ^y cry of them is waxen great before the face of the LORD, and ^z the LORD hath sent us to destroy it.

x xviii. 20. Jam. v. 4.
y 1 Chr. xxi. 15. 16. Is. xxxvii. 36. Ez. ix. 5. 6. Matt. xlii. 41, 42. 49, 50. Acts xii. 23. Rev. xvi. 1—12.

14 And Lot went out, and spake unto his sons-in-law, which married his daughters, and said, ^a Up, get ye out of this place; for the LORD will destroy this city: but he seemed ^b as one that mocked unto his sons-in-law.

z Num. xvi. 21. 45. Rev. xviii. 4—8.
a Ex. ix. 21. 2 Chr. xxx. 10. xxxvi. 16. Prov. xxix. 1. Jer. v. 12—14. Luke xvii. 23—30. Acts xvii. 32. 1 Thea. v. 3.

15 And when the morning arose, then the angels ^b hastened Lot, saying, b Num. xvi. 24—27. Prov. vi. 4. 5. Luke xlii. 24. 25. 2 Cor. vi. 2. Heb. iii. 7, 8.

pertinacity: and accordingly, he seems to have done no good, and to have got much harm himself, and his family still more. He however waited for an opportunity of entertaining strangers; setting an example of hospitality in the midst of triumphant abominations: and in this he imitated Abraham.—Two angels appeared to Lot, and He who spake as JEHOVAH was not sensibly present. Lot must be delivered as “a righteous man,” and in regard to Abraham’s intercession; but sharp rebukes, rather than peculiar honour and consolation, were most suited to his case.—The angels appeared to him as men; but there seems to have been something extraordinary and attractive in their form and manner.

V. 2, 3. In order to evince the cordiality of Lot’s invitations, the angels at first declined them: but “he pressed “on them greatly;” aware that insults awaited them in the street. (Kαὶ ἐπίσταντο. Sept.—Marg. Ref. c. d.)

V. 4, 5. This simple narration conveys more forcibly an idea of the extreme and unparalleled wickedness of Sodom, and of all ranks and descriptions of its inhabitants, than the most laboured descriptions and rhetorical declamations could have done; and is a most beautiful example of giving intimations concerning practices, too shameful to be mentioned, in language which excites no other sensation than horror and indignation.

V. 6—9. The regard to the rites of hospitality, which Lot expressed on this occasion, was very commendable: but, having used all proper means of preserving his guests, he ought to have left the cause with God; and on no account to have made a proposal to the outrageous Sodomites concerning his daughters, which was entirely inconsistent with every moral obligation. It may indeed be ascribed in part to the excessive perturbation of his mind: but probably his judgment was rather perverted, and his feelings blunted, by the conversation and example of his profligate neighbours. (1 Cor. xv. 33.) He thus, however, gave them occasion, by violently resenting so gentle and feeble an admonition, to manifest their excessive depravity, in the most striking manner imaginable.

V. 11. The persons, thus smitten with blindness, seem not to have been aware of their real condition: but, supposing they saw objects which indeed they did not see, they were entirely bewildered, and wearied themselves with seeking the door, while incapable of perceiving where it really was. (Notes, 2 Kings vi. 18—20.)

V. 13. We will destroy... the Lord hath sent us. This is the language of servants obeying orders; and very different from that employed in the preceding chapter. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 14, 15. Probably the sons-in-law, here mentioned,

Arise, take thy wife, and thy two daughters which * are here; lest thou be consumed in the † iniquity of the city.

* Heb. are found.
† Or, punishment.
c Ps cxix. 60

16 And while he † lingered, the men laid hold upon his hand, and upon the hand of his wife, and upon the hand of his two daughters; † the LORD being merciful unto him: and they † brought him forth, and set him without the city.

d Ex. xxxiv. 6. Is. lxiii. 9. Lam. iii. 22. Rom. ix. 15. 16. 18. Eph. ii. 4. 5. Tit. iii. 5. e Josh. vi. 22. Pa. xxxiv. 22. 2 Pet. ii. 9.

17 And it came to pass, when they had brought them forth abroad, that he said, † Eescape for thy life; † look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain; eescape to the mountain, lest thou be consumed.

f 1 Sam. xix. 11. 1 Kings xix. 3. Matt. iii. 7. xxiv. 16—18. Heb. ii. 3. g 26. Luke xvii. 31, 32.

18 And Lot said unto them, † Oh, not so, my Lord.

h 2 Kings v. 11, 12. John xiii. 6—8. Acts ix. 13. x. 14.

19 Behold now, thy servant hath found grace in thy sight, † and thou hast magnified thy mercy, which thou hast shewed unto me in saving my life: and I cannot eescape to the mountain, † lest some evil take me, and I die.

i 1 Tim. i. 14—16.

k xii. 12, 13. 1 Sam. xxvii. 1. Ps. lxxvii. 7—11. cxvi. 11. Matt. viii. 25, 26. Mark ix. 19. Rom. viii. 31. l 30. Prov. iii. 5—7.

20 Behold, now, † this city is near to flee unto, and it is a little one: Oh, let me eescape thither, (is it not a little one?) † and my soul shall live.

m xii. 13. Ps. cx. 175. n Ps. cii. 17. cxv. 19. Matt. xii. 43. Heb. ii. 17. iv. 15, 16. o Heb. thy face. p xii. 2. xviii. 24.

21 And he said unto him, See, † I have accepted † thee concerning this thing also, † that I will not overthrow this city, for the which thou hast spoken.

22 Haste thee, eescape thither: † for I cannot do any thing till thou be come thither. Therefore the name of the city was † called Zoar.

p xxxii. 26—28. Ex. xxxii. 0. Dent. ix. 14. Mark vi. 5. 2 Tim. ii. 13. Tit. i. 2.

23 The sun was † risen upon the earth when Lot entered into Zoar.

q xiii. 10. xiv. 2. Is. xv. 5. Jer. xlviii. 34. r Heb. gone forth.

24 Then † the LORD rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah, brimstone and fire from the LORD out of heaven.

r Deut. xxix. 23. Job xviii. 15. Ps. xi. 6. Is. xiii. 19. Jer. xix. 18. l. 40. Lam. iv. 6. Ez. vii. 49. 50. Hos. xi. 8. Am. iv. 11. Zeph. ii. 9. Matt. xi. 23. 24. Luke xvii. 29, 29. 2 Pet. ii. 6. Jude 7. s xiii. 10. xiv. 3.

25 And he overthrew those cities, and † all the plain, and all the inhabitants of the cities, and that which grew upon the ground.

26 But his wife † looked back from behind him, † and she became a pillar of salt.

t 17. Prov. xiv. 14. Luke xvii. 31. 32. Heb. x. 38. u Num. xvi. 32.

27 ¶ And Abraham gat up early in the morning, † to the place where he stood before the LORD.

28 And he looked toward Sodom and had married other daughters of Lot; who either were dead, or they perished in the ruin of the city. (Note, Rev. xviii. 4—8.)

V. 16—22. Lot was forbidden to look behind him; as this would indicate great reluctance to leave his property in Sodom, and to quit the fertile plain which had so long ensnared him. Indeed, his attachment was so strong to Sodom, and his lingering so criminal, that it was an instance of special indulgence, that he was not left to loiter till it was too late to eescape. And at last, through unbelief and undue valuation of worldly things, he was unwilling entirely to quit the plain and flee to the mountain: yet mercy prevailed; and Zoar, a small city, was spared in condescension to his infirmity, and in answer to his request! Zoar signifies Little: it was before called Bela; but being spared because it was a little city, it afterwards retained the name of Zoar.—Lot addressed himself especially to the angel, who led him out of Sodom, and was answered by him; yet the other seems to have continued with his family. Many indeed suppose, that he, who appeared and spake to Abraham as JEHOVAH, had now joined them; but there is no decided proof of it. The angels might have a commission to spare Zoar at Lot's request; and he might express his gratitude to the instrument of his preservation, when visibly present, in the language here used, without ascribing to him the honour due to God alone.—Lot must arrive at a place of safety, before vengeance could be inflicted on Sodom: this implied a rebuke of his unbelieving fears, as well as a most condescending assurance of the Lord's merciful care of him.

V. 23. The rising sun promised a cheerful day; but how speedily and awfully was the prospect changed!

V. 24, 25. The language here is remarkable; "JEHOVAH rained...from JEHOVAH out of heaven:" and it is supposed by many expositors to confirm the opinion, that He, who appeared and spake to Abraham as JEHOVAH, was visibly present at Sodom, immediately commanding the fire and brimstone from heaven to destroy the city. The judgment came, however, "as a destruction from the Almighty;" and we need not enquire how he effected it. But the cities and all the inhabitants were totally destroyed; and the whole plain was converted into a great lake, called the Salt Sea, or Dead Sea; which exhibits an appearance, in many respects extraordinary, and dissimilar to that of all other seas or lakes.

V. 26. This unhappy woman, contrary to God's express command, in unbelief and love to Sodom and its riches, regretting what was left behind, and probably purposing to return, "looked back;" and as some think, actually attempted to return; and our Lord's words, "Let him not return back; remember Lot's wife," favour this supposition. She was therefore instantaneously struck dead and petrified, and thus remained to after-ages a visible monument of the divine displeasure; being punished as a warning to others through successive generations.—Perhaps she was a native of Sodom, as nothing is said of Lot having a wife, when with Abraham.—Above twenty years had passed, from the time that Lot went to Sodom.

V. 27—29. Abraham rose early to enquire after the success of his prayers, and probably to renew them: but the awful scene which he witnessed effectually precluded

Gomorrah, and toward all the land of the plain, and beheld, ^yand lo, the smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace.

29 And it came to pass, when God destroyed the cities of the plain, that ^zGod remembered Abraham, and sent Lot out of the midst of the overthrow, when he overthrew the cities in the which Lot dwelt.

30 ¶ And ^aLot went up out of Zoar, and dwelt in the mountain, and his two daughters with him; for ^bhe feared to dwell in Zoar: and he dwelt in a cave, he and his two daughters.

31 And the first-born said unto the younger, Our father is old, and there is not a man on the earth ^cto come in unto us after the manner of all the earth.

32 Come, let us make our father ^ddrink wine, and we will lie with him, that we may preserve ^eseed of our father.

33 And they made their father ^fdrink wine that night: and the first-born went ^y Rev. xiv. 10, 11. xviii. 18. xix. 3. xxi. 8.

^z viii. 1. xii. 2. xviii. 29—33. Deut. ix. 5. Ez. xxxvi. 31, 32.

^a 17—23.

^b xlix. 4. Jer. ii. 36, 37. Jam. i. 8.

^c vi. 4. xvi. 2. 4. xxxviii. 8, 9, 14. —30. Deut. xxv. 5. Is. iv. 1.

^d ix. 21. Prov. xxiii. 31—33. Hab. ii. 15, 16.

^e Lev. xviii. 6, 7.

^f Mark xii. 19. Prov. xx. 1. xxxiii. 29—35.

in, and lay with her father; and he perceived not when she lay down, nor when she arose.

34 And it came to pass on the morrow, that the first-born said unto the younger, Behold, ^gI lay yesternight with my father: let us make him drink wine this night also; and go thou in, and lie with him, that we may preserve seed of our father.

35 And they made their father drink wine ^hthat night also: and the younger arose, and lay with him; and he perceived not when she lay down, nor when she arose.

36 Thus ⁱwere both the daughters of Lot with child by their father.

37 And the first-born bare a son, and called his name Moab: the same is the father of the ^kMoabites unto this day.

38 And the younger she also bare a son, and called his name Ben-ammi: the same is the father of the ^lchildren of Ammon unto this day.

^g Is. lii. 9. Jer. iii. 9. v. 15. viii. 12.

^h Ps. viii. 4. Ec. vii. 26. Luke xxi. 34. 1 Cor. x. 1. 1 Pet. iv. 7.

ⁱ Judg. i. 7. 1 Sam. xv. 33.

^k Num. xxii.—xxiv. Deut. ii. 9. xviii. 3. 2 Sam. viii. 2 Kings iii. Deut. ii. 19. Judg. xi. 1 Sam. xi. 2 Sam. x. Neh. xiii. 1—3. Ps. lxxxiii. 4—8.

further intercession for those cities. Yet God remembered Abraham, and rescued Lot, more in answer to Abraham's prayers, than as approving Lot's behaviour.

V. 30. Lot retired from the place which he had chosen, perhaps finding it as wicked as Sodom: and that consideration, joined to the inundating of the neighbouring plain by the obstructed waters of Jordan, might excite apprehensions for his safety. He went, therefore, to reside in a cave, probably on the very mountain, to which he was at first commanded to flee.—But what hindered his return to Abraham? Doubtless Abraham would have received him, though stript of all, and a wretched outcast. We cannot but attribute his conduct to stoutness of spirit, and fear of contempt, if he should appear so degraded among those, who had known him in more prosperous days. Whatever were his reasons, he forsook his own mercies.—No doubt his herdmen, as well as his herds, perished in the overthrow of Sodom. How different was his family from that of Abraham!

V. 31—38. Many conjectures have been formed concerning the motives, which induced Lot's daughters to this most atrocious conduct; and many excuses have been attempted. It is not indeed improbable that the desire of having children, of which they seemed to have no other prospect, was one powerful inducement: but there is little reason to think that they had any expectations of being the ancestors of the promised Seed, for that distinction was expressly limited to the seed of Abraham. The truth seems to be, that, though preserved from gross crimes, they had been accustomed in Sodom to hear and witness wickedness, till their consciences were become unfeeling, and their sense of shame blunted. No sufficient excuse can be made either for them or for Lot; and indeed, scarcely any account can be given of the transaction, but this, that "the "heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; "who can know it?"—After this we read no more, in the history, of Lot, or of his daughters. Peter's testimony satisfies us, that he lived to repent; yet there is no proof that his daughters did. But he died under a dark cloud; all his substance and part of his family perished in Sodom: his wife in looking back lost her life; and it might almost have been wished, that his daughters had been taken away too, that his and their sin and shame might have been prevented: for, though he was not "written childless," his posterity were the monuments of his reproach, and their very names perpetuated the memory of their disgraceful original.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—15.

When angels entered Sodom, they found out the only righteous man residing there. Thus they still invisibly encamp round them that fear the Lord: and thus we ought to associate with the righteous in every place to which we go. Nor is it in general very difficult to distinguish them; for "by their fruits we may know them," and by the hatred which the wicked bear them: and hospitality prudently shewn for the Lord's sake will engage his protection and a gracious recompence.—But to what a pitch of wickedness do some sinners arrive! Who does not allow the justice of God in the destruction of abandoned Sodom? and could our eyes at once behold all those abominations, which the Lord every moment witnesses in other cities and countries, we should probably expect that they would share Sodom's doom. Indeed, "except the LORD of Hosts had left unto "us a very small remnant, even we should" ere this, "have "been like unto Sodom and Gomorrah." The good Lord increase that remnant!—But when, at the day of judgment, God shall "bring to light the hidden things of dark-

CHAP. XX.

Abraham sojourns in Gerar, and denies his wife; whom Abimelech takes, but is warned in a dream to restore, 1—7. Abimelech expostulates with Abraham, and restores Sarah with presents and a gentle reproof, 8—16. Abimelech and his family are healed, in answer to Abraham's prayer, 17, 18 a xiii. 1. xvii. 1.

 xiv. 62
 b xvi. 7, 14. Deu.
 i. 19. i Sam. v.
 7.
 c x. 19. xxvi. 1, 6.
 26.
 d xii. 11—13.
 7. 2 Chr. xxxv.
 31. Ec. vi. 20.
 Gal. ii. 11, 13
 e xxxvi. 16.
 f xxviii. 12. xxx.
 24. xxxvii. 5, 9.
 xl. 8. xli. 1, &c.
 Job iv. 12, 13.
 xxxiii. 15. Matt.
 i. 20. ii. 12, 13.
 xxvii. 19.

AND Abraham journeyed from thence toward the south-country, and dwelled between Kadash and Shur, and sojourned in Gerar.

2 And Abraham said of Sarah his wife, She is my sister. And Abimelech king of Gerar sent, and took Sarah.

3 But God came to Abimelech in a dream by night, and said to him, Be-ness, and manifest the counsels of all hearts;” and when the wicked shall “suffer the vengeance of eternal fire:” we shall see that the Lord hath not without cause denounced the dreadful sentence, but shall wonder at his patience and long-suffering towards them.—In attempting to do good, or prevent evil, we must take care that the methods which we adopt are justifiable: nor must we commit a less sin to prevent others from perpetrating a greater.—Nothing marks sinners more ripe for destruction, than when, being mad upon their lusts, they resent the least check, and will bear no controul: for “he, that being often reprov’d, hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy.” And they who treat the friendly warnings of God’s servants and ministers as idle tales and groundless fears, will be awfully convinced of their mistake by the event.

V. 16—38.

“The salvation of the righteous is of the LORD.” Being merciful to them, he warns them, and neither suffers them to neglect the warning, nor leaves them to the effect of their procrastinating folly: but, by the mixed influence of hopes and fears, he disposes them to leave all for the salvation of their souls; and he even condescends compassionately to accommodate himself to their infirmities. Let us, however, at the same time remark his awful severity on apostates: let us “remember Lot’s wife,” and not allow one hankering wish after forbidden or forsaken objects; and let us be much afraid, lest, “after having escaped the corruption which is in the world, through the knowledge of Christ, we should be again entangled and overcome thereby.” For, though “the Lord will not forsake his people,” the severity of his multiplied chastisements may well fill our souls with holy awe: and if he pursue his children with the rod, even unto the grave, what will be the dreadful doom of his enemies?—It is grievous to observe, that chastisement seems in some cases to lose its effect; that, for a time, they who are corrected sin more and more! and that those who have escaped contamination amongst had examples, are overcome in solitude; and remain unimpressed by the awful judgments which they have witnessed! These may expect to suffer more and more, hold, thou art but a dead man, for the woman which thou hast taken: for she is a man’s wife.

4 But Abimelech had not come near her: and he said, Lord, wilt thou slay also a righteous nation?

5 Said he not unto me, She is my sister? and she, even she herself, said, He is my brother: in the integrity of my heart, and innocency of my hands, have I done this.

6 And God said unto him in a dream, Yea, I know that thou didst this in the integrity of thy heart; for I also withheld thee from sinning against me: therefore suffered I thee not to touch her.

g 7. Ps. cv. 14. Ez.
 xxxiii. 14. Jon.
 iii. 4.
 * Heb. married to an husband.
 h 6. 18.
 i xviii. 23—25. xix.
 24. 2 Sam. iv.
 11.
 k Josh. xxii. 22.
 2 Kings xx. 3
 1 Chr. xxix. 17
 2 Cor. i. 12.
 1 Thes. ii. 10.
 † Or. simplicity, or sincerity.
 l Job xxxiii. 3. Ps.
 xxxv. 6. lxxiii.
 13. Dan. vi. 22.
 m 18. xxxi. 7.
 xxxv. 5. 1 Sam.
 xxv. 26. 34. Hos.
 ii. 6, 7.
 n xxxix. 9. Ps. li.
 4.
 o iii. 3. xxvi. 11.
 1 Cor. vii. 1.
 2 Cor. vi. 17.

and to die in uncertainty and dishonour; and it is an evident fact, that children do suffer for their parents’ sin. Let us then watch and pray, that we enter not into temptation; and especially let us guard against covetousness and drunkenness, which are inlets to all other crimes.

NOTES.

CHAP. XX. V. 1—6. Gerar was inhabited by the Philistines, and seems to have been their capital city.—Abimelech signifies My father the king. He took Sarah with intent to espouse her, though he had already at least one wife (17). She still retained her beauty; which appears wonderful to us, but might not be so very remarkable at that time. Probably Sarah was then pregnant, which circumstance would increase her anxiety and that of Abraham; and it was also an aggravation of their sin, which was indeed in every respect much more heinous than before. (Note, xii. 11—16.) Before revelation by the written word was afforded and completed, the Lord was pleased more frequently to make known his will, in ordinary cases, by dreams, as distinct from prophetic discoveries to be communicated to others: but every impression of that kind, and indeed all supposed discoveries of the divine will, must now be tried by the infallible and perfect standard of the holy Scriptures; and no farther regarded than they are warranted by them.—As Sarah was another man’s wife, Abimelech was warned that he should inevitably die, unless he restored her: and he was alarmed lest his people also should be visited with overwhelming judgments on her account. Yet he was conscious, that he had not intended to commit adultery, but had been misled by the express declarations of both Abraham and Sarah; nor could he suppose that the Lord would “slay also a righteous nation.” He evidently referred to the late destruction of Sodom and the cities of the plain, which doubtless had caused great consternation, and probably a degree of reformation in that neighbourhood.—As the Lord admitted Abimelech’s plea, we may suppose that both he and his subjects were free from the abominations of Sodom; and were not generally idolaters, but had some remains of true religion among them; and thus were comparatively “a righteous nation.”—The Lord had “withheld Abimelech from 7 Now therefore restore the man his wife ; for he is a ^p prophet, and he shall ^q pray for thee, and thou shalt live : and if thou restore her not, know thou that thou shalt ^r surely die, thou, and ^s all that are thine.

8 Therefore Abimelech rose early in the morning, and called all his servants, and told all these things in their ears : and the men were sore afraid.

9 ¶ Then Abimelech called Abraham, and said unto him, 'What hast thou done unto us ? and what have I offended thee, that thou hast brought on me, and on my kingdom, ^u a great sin ? thou hast done deeds unto me that ^x ought not to be done.

10 And Abimelech said unto Abraham, What sawest thou, that thou hast done this thing ?

11 And Abraham said, Because I thought, ^y Surely the fear of God is not in this place : and they will ^z slay me for my wife's sake.

12 And ^a yet indeed she is my sister ; she is the daughter of my father, but not the daughter of my mother : and she became my wife.

“sinning against him;” probably by some uncommon disease, with which his subjects also were visited (18). This was in fact a merciful dispensation, to keep him from bringing guilt, and heavier condemnation, on himself and his people.—If all adulterers were dead men, in this Christian land, how would it decrease our numbers, and especially how would it thin the ranks of the superior orders in the community!—Against me (6). Note, Ps. li. 4.

V. 7. Prophet.] Abraham is the first person called a prophet in the scripture. The title seems to denote one who is favoured with a peculiar intercourse with God, who receives communications from him in his own personal concerns, or is employed to deliver his mind and will to others ; whether he utter predictions of future events or not. Various external circumstances attended these communications ; and some prophets had more intimate access to God, and explicit discoveries of his will, than others : but this general definition will apply almost to every place in the sacred oracles, where the word is used ; except when false prophets are meant, who pretended to that special intercourse with God which the true prophets actually enjoyed.—The intercession of prophets was deemed peculiarly effectual. (Marg. Ref. p. q.)

V. 8. ‘His council were all of the same mind, that this ‘was a divine admonition, which it was not safe to disobey.’ Bp. Patrick.

V. 9—13. Abimelech’s expostulation and remonstrance were weighty, convincing, and mild : but Abraham’s answer implied criminal distrust of God, groundless suspicion of 13 And it came to pass, when ^b God caused me to wander from my father’s house, that I said unto her, ^c This is thy kindness which thou shalt shew unto me ; at every place whither we shall come, say of me, He is my brother.

14 And Abimelech ^d took sheep, and oxen, and men-servants, and women-servants, and gave them unto Abraham, ^e and restored him Sarah his wife.

15 And Abimelech said, Behold ^f my land is before thee : dwell ^g where it pleaseth thee.

16 And unto Sarah he said, Behold, I have given ^h thy brother a thousand ⁱ pieces of silver : ^j behold, he is to thee a covering of the eyes, unto all that ^k are with thee, and with all other : ^l thus she was reproved.

17 So Abraham ^m prayed unto God : and God healed Abimelech, and his wife, and his maid-servants ; and they bare children.

18 For the LORD had ⁿ fast closed up all the wombs of the house of Abimelech, because of Sarah, Abraham’s wife.

the Gerarites, and a settled plan of misconduct ; and his excuse was tinged with equivocation.—(Note, xi. 28—32.)

V. 16. Abimelech either gave Abraham a thousand pieces of silver, (probably shekels,) in money, besides the presents before-mentioned ; or this was the value of the whole. In stating this to Sarah, he calls him her brother, which implied a rebuke of her misconduct.—Some expound the following words of the money given to Abraham ; —“ This is a covering of the eyes, &c. ” ‘ I have given him this money to buy thee a veil, that all who converse with thee here, or in any other country where thou shalt come, may know thee to be a married woman.’—A veil was worn as a token of subjection to a husband.—Others refer them to Abraham : “ He is to thee a covering of the “ eyes, &c.” ‘ Thou shouldst have avowed thy relation to him, which would have sufficiently protected thee, either here or elsewhere.’—‘ Instead of, “ And with all other, “ &c. ; ” the Septuagint read, ‘ And in all things speak ‘ truth.’—Thus she was reproved, or instructed.

V. 17, 18. The disorders inflicted on Abimelech and his family, not only withheld him from sin, but tended to shew the efficacy of fervent prayer, and to put honour upon Abraham, and so to promote the knowledge of God among the Philistines. (1 Sam. v. vi.)—‘ Man’s wisdom ‘ leads him into a pit ; but God’s wisdom must draw him out.’ Fuller.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

It is very affecting here again to notice even ‘ the father ‘ of the faithful’ manifesting distrust of God, and undue p xii. 1—3. xviii. 17. Ex. vii. 1. Ps. cv. 9—11.

q 1 Sam. vii. 5. 8. xii. 19. 23. 2 Sam. xxiv. 17. 1 Kings xiii. 6. 2 Kings v. 11. xix. 2—4. Job xlii. 8. Jer. xiv. li. xv. 1. xxvii. 18. Jam. v. 14—16. 1 John v. 16.
r ii. 17. Ez. iii. 18. xxxiii. 8. 14—16.
s Num. xvi. 32, 33

t xii. 18. xxvi. 10. Ex. xxxii. 21. 35. Josh. vii. 25. 1 Sam. xxvi. 18. 19. Prov. xxviii. 10.
u Lev. xx. 10. 2 Sam. xii. 10. 11. Heb. xiii. 4.
x xxxiv. 7. 2 Sam. xiii. 12. Tit. i. 11

y xxii. 12. xlii. 18. Neh. v. 15. Job i. 1. xxviii. 23. Ps. xxxvi. 1. Prov. i. 7. ii. 5. viii. 13. xvi. 6. Rom. iii. 18.
z xii. 12. xxvi. 7. a xi. 29. 1 Thes. v. 22.

b xii. 1. Acts vii. 3—5. Heb. xi. 8.
c 1 Sam. xxiii. 21. Ps. lxxv. 5. Acts v. 9.
d 11. xii. 16.
e 2. 7. xii. 19, 20.
f xiii. 9. xxiv. 10. xlvii. 6. Heb. vi. 18. as is good in thine eyes.

g 5. Prov. xxvii. 5.
h xxvi. 11.
i xxiv. 65.
k 1 Clir xxi 3—6. Prov. ix. 8. 9. xxv. 12. Jon. i. 6. Rev. iii. 19.
l See on 7.—Matt vii. 7.

m xii. 17.

CHAP. XXI.

Isaac is born and circumcised, and Abraham and Sarah rejoice, 1—7. Isaac is weaned, 8. Ishmael mocks, and, at Sarah's instance and by God's direction, is sent away with Hagar, 9—14. They are distressed, but delivered; and Ishmael prospers and marries an Egyptian, 15—21. Abraham covenants with Abimelech, and worships God at Beersheba, 22—34.

AND the LORD ^a visited Sarah as he had said; and the LORD did unto Sarah ^b as he had spoken.

2 For Sarah ^c conceived and bare Abraham a son in his old age, ^d at the set time of which God had spoken to him.

3 And Abraham ^e called the name of his son that was born unto him, whom Sarah bare to him, Isaac.

4 And Abraham circumcised his son solicitude about life; equivocating with intent to deceive; relapsing into his former sin; drawing in Sarah to share his guilt, exposing her honour and chastity, and even endangering a question about the legitimacy of his promised Isaac; throwing temptation into Abimelech's way; occasioning affliction to him and his family; exposing himself and Sarah to just rebukes, and yet vainly attempting an excuse. Shall we commend or imitate Abraham in these things? by no means. They are written for our warning, that, "while we think we stand, we may take heed lest we fall." Even "Abraham hath not whereof to glory," but must be justified in "that righteousness of God, which is upon all and unto all them that believe."—We must not condemn all as hypocrites, who relapse into sin, even with aggravation, if they do not continue in it; nor need we ourselves despair, if humbly conscious of having thus relapsed. But let the unhumiliated and impenitent take heed to themselves; for their ease is unspeakably perilous: and let all men abhor the thoughts of "sinning on, that grace may abound."—It should also be noted, that artifice, of whatever kind, is more certainly unsuccessful, and more speedily detected, when used by religious characters, than in the ease of others. The irreligious may for a season practise it and prosper; but the servants of God must for their good be soon put to shame.—On the other hand, though some things in Abimelech must be blamed; and it should be observed that indulgence gives force to all our passions; yet we must commend, and should imitate, the calmness and mildness of his reproof, his ready return of good for evil, and the salutary counsel which he gave to Sarah: and it is pleasing to find that he mentions adultery as a horrible sin against God, and temptation to it as a great injury; and that he so seriously expostulates with Abraham about his misconduct in that respect.—To appeal to God in particular instances, concerning our integrity, is not at all inconsistent with a humble consciousness, that we cannot stand before him in judgment, but continually need his pardoning mercy. He will indeed graciously Isaac, ^f being eight days old, as God had commanded him.

5 And Abraham was ^g an hundred years old, when his son Isaac was born unto him.

6 And Sarah said, ^h God hath made me to laugh, so that all that hear ⁱ will laugh with me.

7 And she said, ^k Who would have said unto Abraham, that Sarah should have given children suck? for I have born him a son in his old age.

8 ¶ And the child grew, ^l and was weaned: and Abraham made a great feast the same day that Isaac was weaned.

9 And ^m Sarah saw the son of Hagar, the ⁿ Egyptian, which she had born unto Abraham, ^o mocking.

10 Wherefore she said unto Abraham, ^p Cast out this bond-woman, and admit such appeals, when well grounded; but it is difficult to vindicate ourselves, without seeming to reflect upon his righteousness.—We often disquiet ourselves, and even are led into temptation and sin, by groundless suspicions; and we sometimes find the fear of God where we least expected it.—Combinations to deceive generally issue in shame and sorrow: and restraints from sin, though by suffering, should thankfully be acknowledged. But though the Lord rebukes, yet he will pardon and deliver his people, and for his own glory put honour upon them and their prayers. He will give them favour in the sight of those with whom they sojourn; and will so over-rule even their infirmities, when they are humbled for them, that they shall prove an occasion of good to themselves and others.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXI. V. 1, 2. The word visit, when thus used, denotes the visible effects of the Lord's presence and power, either in mercy or in judgment. Here it signifies his gracious attention to Sarah, and his faithful accomplishment of his promise; when in the natural course of things, it could not be expected that she should bear a son.

V. 3, 4. Isaac signifies laughter; and this child of promise was so named, in remembrance of Abraham's believing, and Sarah's unbelieving, laughter; and as an expression of joy and gratitude. In this, as well as in circumcising Isaac on the eighth day, Abraham was implicitly obedient to the commandment of God.

V. 5—7. The joy of Abraham and Sarah, on this extraordinary occasion, and the congratulations which they would receive from friends and neighbours, were but feeble earnest of the rejoicing of many millions in Him, who descended from Isaac, to bless the nations of the earth.

V. 8—12. It is probable, that Isaac was not weaned very early; some think not till he was five years old: and Abraham made a feast on that occasion, as thankfully rejoicing that his son was thus far advanced towards maturity. It appears that Ishmael derided Isaac as the child of prof xvii. 10—12. Lev. xii. 8. Luke i. 59. ii. 21. John vii. 22, 23. xvii. 1. 17. Rom. iv. 19.

 h xvii. 17. xviii. 12—15. 1 Sam. i. 26—28. Ps. cxliii. 9. cxvii. 2. Is. liv. 1. Gal. iv. 27.
 i Luke i. 14. 58. Rom. xii. 15.
 k Num. xxiii. 23. Deut. iv. 32—34. Ps. lxxxvii. 8. Is. lxvi. 8. 2 Tues. i. 10.
 l B. C. 1893, or 1892. 1 Sam. i. 22. Ps. cxxxi. 2. Hos. i. 8.
 m xvi. 3—6. 15. xvii. 20.
 n xvii. 1.
 o 2 Kings ii. 23. 24. 2 Chr. xxx. 10. xxxvi. 16. Neh. iv. 1—5. Ps. xlii. 10. xlv. 13. 14. Prov. xx. 11. Gal. iv. 29. Heb. xi. 36.
 p Prov. xxii. 10. John viii. 35. Gal. iv. 30, 31.

her son : for the son of this bond-woman shall not be heir with my son, even with Isaac.

11 And the thing was very grievous in Abraham's sight, ^a because of his son.

12 And God said unto Abraham, Let it not be grievous in thy sight, because of the lad, and because of thy bond-woman: in all that Sarah hath said unto thee, ^r hearken unto her voice: for ^s in Isaac shall thy seed be called.

13 And also ^t of the son of the bond-woman will I make a nation, because he is thy seed.

14 And Abraham ^v rose up early in the morning, and ^x took bread, and a bottle of water, and gave it unto Hagar, (putting it on her shoulder,) and the child, and sent her away: and she departed and ^y wandered in the wilderness of ^z Beer-sheba.

15 And ^a the water was spent in the bottle, and she cast the child under one of the shrubs.

16 And she went, and sat her down over against him, a good way off, as it were a bow-shot: for she said, ^b Let me not see the death of the child. And she sat over against him and ^c lifted up her voice and wept.

17 And God ^d heard the voice of the lad: and ^e the Angel of God called to Hagar out of heaven, and said unto her, ^f What aileth thee, Hagar? ^g Fear not; for God hath heard the voice of the lad where he is.

18 Arise, lift up the lad, and hold him in thine hand: for ^h I will make him a great nation.

19 And ⁱ God opened her eyes, and she saw a well of water: and she went, and filled the bottle with water, and gave the lad drink.

20 And ^k God was with the lad, and he grew, and dwelt in the wilderness, and became ^l an archer.

21 And he dwelt ^m in the wilderness of Paran: and his mother took him ⁿ a wife out of the land of Egypt.

22 ¶ And it came to pass at that time, that ^o Abimelech, and Phichol the chief captain of his host, spake unto Abraham, saying, ^p God is with thee in all that thou doest.

q xvii. 18. xxii. 1, 2, 2 Sam. xviii. 33. Matt. x. 37.

r 1 Sam. viii. 7, 9. Is. xlvii. 10. s xvii. 19. 21. Rum. ix. 7, 8. Heb. xi. 18. t xvi. 10. xvii. 20. xxv. 12—18.

v xix. 27. xxii. 3. xxiv. 54. xxvi. 31. Prov. xxvii. 14. x xxv. 6. xxxv. 6, 7.

y xvi. 7. xxxviii. 15. Ps. cvii. 4. Is. xvi. 8. z 33. xxii. 19. xxvi. 33. xlvii. 1. Kings xix. 3. a 14. Ex. xv. 22—25. xvii. 1—3. 2 Kings iii. 9. Ps. lxxiii. 1. Is. xlv. 12. Jer. xiv. 3.

b xlv. 34. Esth. viii. 6.

c xxvii. 38. xxix. 11. Judg. ii. 4. Ruth. i. 9. 1 Sam. xxiv. 16. xxx. 4. 2 Sam. xii. 36. d xvi. 11. Ex. iii. 7. xxii. 17. 2 Kings xiii. 4. 23. e See on xvi. 9. 11. f Judg. xviii. 23. 1 Sam. xi. 5. Is. xxii. 1. g xv. 1. xvi. 3. Ex. xiv. 13. Is. xlii. 20. 14.

h 13. xvi. 10. xviii. 20.

i Num. xxii. 31. 2 Kings vi. 17—20. Luke xxiv. 16. 37.

k xxxviii. 15. xxxix. 2, 3. 21. Judg. xiii. 24, 25. Luke i. 80. ii. 40. l x. 9. xvi. 12. xxv. 27. xxxvii. 3. xlix. 23, 24.

m Num. x. 12. xli. 16. xliii. 3. 26. 1 Sam. xxv. 1. n xxiv. 3, 4. xxvi. 34, 35. xxvii. 46. xxxviii. 1, 2.

o xx. 2. xxvi. 26.

p xxvi. 28. xxx. 27. xxxix. 3. Is. lviii. 10. Zech. viii. 23. Matt. i. 23. Rev. iii. 9.

mise; and that his mocking was a kind of persecution, implying profane contempt of the covenant and promise of God, and opposition to his purpose, and some indications of malice against Isaac.—Sarah, however, seems to have been actuated, in some measure, by disdain and resentment, in requiring Abraham to send away Hagar and Ishmael: yet she was led to utter words, which were afterwards to be made use of in illustrating a most important part of divine truth. (Note, Gal. iv. 21—31.)—Abraham was grieved, on account both of Ishmael's misconduct, and Sarah's severity; and he might also be perplexed, how to reconcile the duty, which he owed to his son and to Hagar, with his affection to his wife. But the Lord made his duty plain to him, and shewed him that Ishmael must be sent away, in order that the promises might be fulfilled to Isaac and his Seed.

V. 13. Thy seed.] Ishmael should have many blessings, as Abraham's son; though not the special blessing of being the ancestor of the promised Seed.

V. 14—19. "Bread and water" denote necessaries for the journey of Hagar and Ishmael, probably into Egypt to her relations, she being now liberated from bondage. Ishmael was more than sixteen, some think he was nineteen, years of age at this time: yet the provisions were put upon Hagar's shoulder, as more inured to labour; and the lad was committed to her care. No doubt, these circumstances were ordered according to instructions given to Abraham; perhaps for Hagar's humiliation, and with some view to the future state of Ishmael's posterity. She, however, "wandered," or lost her way, in the desert, which may account for the distress which ensued; for it does not appear that the provisions were consumed, or that she was sent away without money. But the water was spent, and the climate was hot; so that Ishmael was overcome with fatigue and thirst, and ready to die; and Hagar assisted him in reaching the shade of some shrubs, and lying down as his circumstances would admit: and, fully expecting that he would die, she sat down at a distance and wept. In this season of deep distress the Lord heard the voice of Ishmael's groaning, perhaps of his prayer, and addressed Hagar by an angel, saying, "What aileth thee, Hagar? "Fear not:" intimating that the promise, before made to her, (xvi. 10—13,) was a full security that Ishmael should not die at this time, and that therefore her anguish was needless, and her fear groundless. At the same time the Lord directed her attention to the relief, which was near at hand, but which she had not before observed.

V. 20, 21. The Lord prospered Ishmael in his outward circumstances: nor can we positively conclude, either from his past misconduct, his general character, or the typical meaning of his expulsion from Abraham's family, that he lived and died destitute of the special grace and favour of God. He became, however, an archer and a hunter; and thus the prophecy concerning him began to be accomplished, in his person, as it has been ever since in his posterity. (Note, xvi. 12.)—We have no reason to conclude, that he was never visited by his father, or that he came no more to see him. (Note, xxv. 9, 10.)

V. 22—24. Abimelech was convinced that the promises of God would be fulfilled to Abraham; and he was there-

23 Now therefore ^q swear unto me here by God, ^r that thou wilt not deal falsely with me, nor with my son, nor with my son's son; but according to the kindness that I have done unto thee, thou shalt do unto me, and to the land wherein thou hast sojourned.

24 And Abraham said, I will swear. 25 And Abraham ^r reproved Abimelech because of a well of water, which Abimelech's ^s servants had violently taken away.

26 And Abimelech said, 'I wot not who hath done this thing; neither didst thou tell me, neither yet heard I of it but to-day.

27 And Abraham ^u took sheep, and oxen, and gave them unto Abimelech: and both of them ^x made a covenant.

28 And Abraham set seven ewe-lambs of the flock by themselves.

29 And Abimelech said unto Abraham, ^y What mean these seven ewe-lambs which thou hast set by themselves?

30 And he said, For these seven ewe-lambs shalt thou take of my hand, ^z that they may be a witness unto me, that I have digged this well.

31 Wherefore he ^a called that place ^t Beer-sheba: because there they sware both of them.

32 Thus ^b they made a covenant at Beer-sheba: then Abimelech rose up and Phichol the chief captain of his host, and they returned into the land of ^c the Philistines.

33 And Abraham ^a planted a ^d grove in Beer-sheba, and ^e called there on the name of the Lord, the ^f everlasting God.

34 And Abraham ^g sojourned in the Philistines' land many days.

^q xxiv. 3. xxxi. 53. Josh. ii. 12. 1 Sam. xx. 42. xxiv. 21, 22. xxx. 15. Heb. vi. 16. Heb. if thou shalt lie unto me.

^r xxvi. 15-22. Prov. xvii. 10. xxx. 9. xxxvii. 5. Matt. xviii. 15. ^s xiii. 7. Ex. ii. 16, 17.

^t 2 Kings v. 20-24.

^u xiv. 22, 23. Prov. xviii. 24. Is. xxxii. 8.

^x xxvi. 28-31. 1 Sam. xviii. 3. Ez. xvii. 13. Rom. i. 31. Gal. iii. 15.

^y xxxiii. 8. Ex. xii. 26. 1 Sam. xv. 14.

^z xxxi. 44. 52. Josh. xxii. 27. 28. xxiv. 27.

^a xxvi. 23. ^t That is, The well of the oath. 14. Josh. xv. 28.

^b 27. 1 Sam. xviii 3.

^c x. 14. xxvi. 8. 14. Ex. xiii. 17. Judg. xiii. 1. ^d Or, tree. ^e Deut. xxxii. 27. ^f Pa. xc. 2. 18 xl. 28. lvii. 15. Rom. xvi. 26. 1 Tim. i. 17. ^g xx. 1. 1 Chr. xxix. 15. Pa. xxxix. 12. Heb. xi. 9. 13.

fore desirous of securing his friendship, and the benefit of it, to himself, to his posterity, and to his people.—Perhaps he too was a true believer: at least his character seems not at all inconsistent with that supposition. (Notes, 1 Sam. xx. 12—17.)—Phichol.] Note, xxvi. 26.

V. 25, 26. Wells of water, being scarce, were very valuable in those countries. (Marg. Ref. r.)

V. 31. Beer-sheba.] The well of the oath: or, The well of the seven, alluding to the seven ewe lambs. Perhaps these were given to Abimelech, as the proprietor of the land, in which the well was digged, and as the rent of it, that the well might be the more clearly Abraham's property.—The verb rendered "to swear," is derived from the word translated seven; probably with reference to the number of the sacrifices frequently offered on these solemn occasions.

V. 32. Into the land of the Philistines.] That is, to Gerar. Beer-sheba seems at that time to have been under the dominion of the king of the Philistines: (33:) but it was not generally considered as a part of Philistia.

V. 33. Perhaps Abraham planted this grove to shelter his tent; and to form a shade for the performance of sacred worship, which was at that time usually performed in the open air.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.
V. 1—21.

Blessed are they whose hope is in the Lord, and who patiently wait for him; for their expectations shall certainly be answered, and even exceeded. The delay may seem tedious, and the exercise of faith and patience sharp: but they shall at length acknowledge, that their blessings were only deferred, that they might have them with additional comfort, by perceiving more plainly the power, love, and faithfulness of God in them; and that his name might be the more glorified. He does not indeed relieve and comfort, when we should choose it; but he always observes his own set time, which is the best that infinite wisdom can select: and they, who uprightly serve him, will never be ashamed of any thing, except their unbelief; and this shame will be swallowed up in their thankful joy for the largeness of his performances.—As he keeps his time in giving blessings, so we must observe the appointed season for performing his commandments, and not be induced by any consideration to omit or defer our obedience.—Grievous things speedily follow joyous events in this world, and the effect of former miscarriages often interrupts the satisfaction of present advantages. Even children are more certain cares than comforts; and their ill behaviour and contentions, with the fear or pain of parting with them, greatly alloy the pleasure which we might otherwise derive from them.—In all our anxieties, we should observe the directions, obey the commandments, and depend on the promises and providence of God: and thus, "casting our care on him," our minds will be kept in peace; and he will take care of those whom we love, when we are no longer able to do it.—Let us not, however, neglect to notice the secret influence of the Lord in this domestick transaction; nor overlook the instruction given us, not to rest in external privileges, or in our own performances, lest we be outcasts with Ishmael: but let us learn to seek the blessings of the new covenant, by faith in its divine Surety; and that grace and Spirit of adoption, which mark the children and heirs of God, and enable them to walk at liberty in his commandments, and cheerfully to expect the fulfilment of his promises. And let us habitually recollect, that our despondency and complaints arise from forgetfulness of his word; that relief is often nearer than we perceive; that the Lord always hears the prayer of faith, and frequently the very cry of distress; and that numerous advantages are conferred on the posterity of those who have honoured God, for the sake of their pious ancestors.

CHAP. XXII.

Abraham, tried by the command to sacrifice Isaac, shews his faith by obeying, 1—10 He is prevented from slaying his son, and offers a ram in his stead, 11—13. A name is given to the place; and the covenant is renewed with Abraham, 14—19. Some account of Nahor's family, 20—24.

^a Ex. xv. 25, 26.
xvi. 4. Deut. viii.
2. xiii. 3. Judg.
ii. 22. 2 Chr.
xxxii. 31. Prov.
xvii. 3. 1 Cor. x.
13. Heb. xi. 17.
Jam. i. 12—14.

AND it came to pass after these things, that God did tempt Abraham, and said unto him, Abraham: and he said, Behold, here I am.

2 And he said, Take now thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of Moriah; and offer him there for a burnt-offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of.

3 And Abraham rose up early in the morning, and saddled his ass, and Heb. Behold me.

7. 11. Ex. iii. 4.
Is. vi. 8.
b xvii. 19. xxi. 12.
John iii. 16.
Rom. v. 8. vii.
32. 1 John iv. 9.
10.
c 2 Chr. iii. 1.
d Judg. xi. 31. 29.
2 Kings iii. 27.
Mic. vi. 7.
e xvii. 28. Ps. cxix.
60. Ec. ix. 10. Is.
xxvi. 3, 4. Matt.
x. 37. Mark x.
28—31. Luke
xiv. 26. Gal. i.
16. Heb. xi. 8.
17—19.

V. 22—34.

The behaviour of believers may be so undeniably excellent, and the Lord's favour to them so manifest, as to convince observers that "God is with them in all they do:" and this conviction is often the means of their conversion. How important then is it, that we "walk in wisdom towards those that are without!"—Common prudence might suffice to teach men, that it is advantageous to be connected with those whom the Lord blesses; did not the enmity of the carnal mind counteract its influence.—They who would "live peaceably with all men," must watch over their servants, and be careful whom they trust, as well as be circumspect in their own conduct; especially if affluence or high station require many to be employed: for injuries are often committed, and charged on the principal, of which he knows and hears nothing. On this, as well as on other accounts, it is far better mildly to reprove those by whom we suppose ourselves ill-used, than to complain to others, without giving them the opportunity of clearing themselves.—They who profess to serve God, should act in all cases with strict fidelity; requite every kindness liberally, to the benefactor, or his relatives and descendants; and exhibit, in all things, an example of integrity and disinterestedness. In general it is advisable to avoid oaths or vows; yet on important occasions, and when due solemnity is observed, the honour of God and religion, and the cause of justice and peace, may require us to confirm our covenants by these awful obligations. In this case, however, it is incumbent on us to be very explicit in our requirements and engagements; that we may neither entangle our own consciences, nor give others the least ground to suspect that we have failed in fulfilling our promises. Indeed, honest and friendly purposes naturally lead to an unreserved frankness, which is the best security of peace and harmony.—But while we attend to outward matters with prudence and equity, we must never forget that we are strangers and pilgrims on earth: and, wherever we sojourn, we must neither neglect, nor be ashamed of, the worship of JEHOVAH, the everlasting God, our Refuge, Rest, and Portion, through all generations, and to all eternity.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXII. V. 1. "After these things;" "after five and twenty years' waiting; after the promise had been frequently repeated; after hope had been raised to the highest pitch, yea, after it had been actually turned into enjoyment: and when the child had lived long enough to discover an amiable and godly disposition." Fuller. —Tempt.] This word, as here used, conveys an idea, which may seem inconsistent with other testimonies of the sacred oracles; but the case is different as to the original languages, in which, to tempt, and to try or prove, are expressed in the same manner. Accordingly, the old translation very properly renders the clause, "God did prove Abraham."—Every trial indeed is eventually a temptation, and tends to manifest the prevailing dispositions of the heart, whether holy or unholy. As to the state of the heart, or the influence of external agents upon it, exciting to sin, "let no man say, he is tempted of God, for God cannot be tempted of evil, neither tempteth he any man:" but he appoints all external circumstances, he gives us general or particular commandments, and he allots us our several services. In all these respects, he acts in perfect wisdom and holiness: yet his appointments are intended "to prove us, and shew what is in our hearts;" and they frequently give occasion to our evil propensities to manifest themselves, and to Satan and wicked men to tempt us. Thus the Lord may be said, not only to try us, but also to "lead us into temptation;" (Note, Matt. vi. 13;) which, conscious of our weakness, we are taught to deprecate.—If the young man, whom our Lord required "to sell all and follow him," had possessed Abraham's strength of faith, he would have given an illustrious example of self-denying obedience. Had Abraham, when commanded to sacrifice Isaac, been under the power of unbelief and carnal attachments, he would have been recorded as a lamentable instance of defection in the day of trial.—Joseph overcame a far more dangerous temptation to adultery, than that by which David fell; because his heart was vastly more under the influence of holy dispositions, than David's was on that awful occasion. This is universally applicable. The holy law gives occasion to all manner of concupiscence; and even the blessed gospel, to still deeper malignity, when sin reigns in the heart: while the most horrid temptations tend to illustrate the power of divine love and zeal, when holy affections completely possess it; as the conduct of our tempted, suffering, and holy Redeemer most evidently shews.—We may apply these remarks to the case of Abraham. The Lord saw good to put his faith and obedience to a most severe trial. The evil propensities of our fallen nature are, in no sense, to be ascribed to God; for that would make him the author of sin. He did not tempt Abraham, by suggesting evil thoughts to his mind, or exciting sinful passions; for thus a man is tempted by his own lust, by the devil, and by his fellow-sinners; but he placed him in such circumstances, as effectually shewed the ruling dispositions of his heart, and proved them to be very excellent.

V. 2. Every word in this surprising command is marked with emphasis of terror, when we consider it as took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his son; and clave the wood for the burnt-offering, and rose up, and went unto the place of which God had told him.

^f Ex xix. 11. 15. ¹ Cor. xv. 4. 4 Then on the ^fthird day Abraham lifted up his eyes and saw the place afar off.

^g Heb. xii. 1. ^h Heb. xi. 19. 5 And Abraham said unto his young men, ^gAbide ye here with the ass; and I and the lad will go yonder and worship, and ^hcome again to you.

ⁱ Is. liii. 6. Matt. viii. 17. John xix. 17. 1 Pet. ii. 24. 6 And Abraham took the wood of the burnt-offering, and ¹laid it upon Isaac his son; and he took the fire in his hand, and a knife: and they went both of them together.

7 And Isaac spake unto Abraham his father, and said, ^kMy father: and he said, ^{*}Here am I, my son. And he said, Behold the fire and the wood: ¹but where is the [†]lamb for a burnt-offering? ^k Matt. xxvi. 39. ⁴² John xviii. 11. ¹ Rom. viii. 15. [•] Heb. Behold me. ¹ i. v. 2-4. viii. 20 [†] Or, kid. Ex. xii. 3. marg. ^m John i. 29. 36. ¹ 1 Pet. i. 19. 20. ¹ Rev. v. 6. 12. vii. 14. xiii. 8.

8 And Abraham said, My son, ^mGod will provide himself a lamb for a burnt-offering: so they went both of them together.

9 And they came to the place which God had told him of; and Abraham built an altar there, and laid the wood in order; and ⁿbound Isaac his son, and laid him on the altar upon the wood. ⁿ Ps. cxviii. 27. ¹ Matt. xxvii. 2. ¹ John x. 17. 18. ¹ Acts viii. 32. ¹ Eph. v. 2. ¹ Phil. ii. 8.

10 And Abraham ^ostretched forth his hand, and took the knife to slay his son. ^o Is. liii. 6-12. ¹ Heb. xi. 17-19. ¹ Jam. ii. 21-23.

11 ¶ And the ^pAngel of the LORD ^pcalled unto him out of heaven, and said, ^p See on xvi. 9. ¹⁰.

directed to a tender parent: "Thy son"—"thine only son" by Sarah thy wife—"whom thou lovest—even Isaac."—Go into the land of Moriah;—then, after that long journey, offer him there for a burnt-offering, shed his blood, and burn his body to ashes!—How many objections might Abraham have started to this command! He might have urged the divine prohibition of murder; and the evil report which such an action would bring on his character, on the religion which he professed, and the God whom he worshipped. He might have pleaded the fatal consequences of such an example; and even the very promises and covenant of God, ratified again and again with him.—Moriah.] Moriyah—JAH is shevn: nearly the same as ЈЕРОВАН-jireh. (Note, 14.)—The temple was built on mount Moriah, which was doubtless in the land of Moriah. (2 Chron. iii. 1.) This therefore must have been some adjacent mountain, of which there were many in that neighbourhood: and there is no improbability in the general opinion, that it was mount Calvary, where Christ, the great Anti-type, was afterwards crucified; and that it was selected with reference to that event.

V. 3, 4. Being assured that this was a divine command, Abraham implicitly confided in the infinite wisdom, justice, holiness, faithfulness, goodness, and power of God; and neither hesitated nor objected. Nay, the very energy of the command, compared with past mercies received, and the promises made to him, excited a firm expectation, that God would, from the ashes, immediately restore his son to life, though there had never been an instance of the kind from the beginning of the world. (Note, Heb. xi. 17-19.) It does not appear that he manifested that anguish or anxiety, which might have been expected from the command; or that either Sarah, or his attendants, or even Isaac, perceived any thing unusual in his conduct. It is probable, that he did not inform Sarah, lest her feebler faith and more tender frame might not support so severe a shock; or lest she should start some objection, or make some opposition, to the heavenly mandate.—Till the third day Abraham's faith was thus tried, that his obedience might appear to be the result, not of rash precipitation, but of calm deliberation: and then he saw the place; perhaps, marked out by an appearance of glory, such as had probably on some occasions been the token of the Lord's presence with him.

V. 5, 6. Abraham left the servants behind, lest their affectionate, but ill-timed interference should create him disturbance.—The expression, "We will come again to you," (the original is plural,) clearly implies, an expectation that God would raise Isaac again, to return along with him.—Isaac was evidently grown up at this time; some say he was twenty-five years of age, some thirty, and some thirty-three or thirty-five.—In carrying the wood for the intended sacrifice, he typified Christ bearing his cross.

V. 7, 8. Isaac's question, so full of consideration and filial respect, must have tended to put Abraham's resolution to the sharper trial: but he deemed it not proper as yet to disclose this solemn business; and the Holy Spirit by his mouth seems to have predicted "the Lamb of God" which God hath provided, and "which taketh away the sin of the world." (Note, John i. 29.)

V. 9. It is probable, that Abraham previously explained to Isaac the nature and obligations of the divine command, the principle of his obedience, and the expectation of his faith in respect of the event; and Isaac yielded submission and concurrence: for certainly he did not attempt to escape or resist, but yielded up himself voluntarily to be a sacrifice.—When he lay bound upon the altar, he typified Christ, as bound by the officers of the high priest, and as nailed to the cross: and as "bruised" and put to grief by his heavenly Father, "when he made his soul a sacrifice for sin," even for our sins.

V. 10. Abraham acted with firm and calm determination, as if about to offer an ordinary sacrifice, and was allowed to proceed thus far, that his obedience might be complete: but at this crisis he was stopped; for it was not the intention of God that Isaac should actually be sacrificed. Thus it was intimated, that nobler blood than that of animals, even the blood of the only begotten Son of God, was in due time to be shed for sin: but that in the mean while, the Lord would in no case have human sacrifices used, as typical of that atoning blood.

V. 11, 12. The Angel called to Abraham out of heaven

q 1. Ex. iii. 4. ^a Abraham, Abraham: and he said, Here am I.

12 And he said, ^r Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou any thing unto him: for ^s now I know that thou fearest God, ^t seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, from me.

13 And Abraham lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold, ^u behind him a ram caught in a thicket by his horns: and Abraham went and took the ram, and offered him up for a burnt-offering ^x in the stead of his son.

14 And Abraham ^y called the name of that place ^z JEHOVAH-jireh: as it is said to this day, ^{aa} In the mount of the LORD it shall be seen.

15 And ^{ab} the Angel of the LORD called unto Abraham out of heaven the second time,

16 And said, ^b By myself have I sworn, saith the LORD, for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son:

17 That ^c in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying ^d I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea-shore ^e; and ^f thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies;

18 And ^g in thy Seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast ^h obeyed my voice.

19 So ⁱ Abraham returned unto his young men, and they rose up, and went together to ^j Beer-sheba, and Abraham dwelt at Beer-sheba.

x 1 Cor. v. 7, 8.
1 Pet. i. 19, 20.
y xvi. 13, 14. xxviii. 19. xxxii. 30. Ex. xvii. 15. 1 Sam. vii. 12.
z Deut. xxxii. 36. Mic. iv. 10. 2 Cor. i. 8-10.
aa 11.

b Ps. cv. 9. Is. xlv. 23. Jer. xlix. 13. ii. 14. Am. vi. 8. Luke i. 73. Heb. vi. 13, 14.
c xxvii. 28, 29. xlix. 25, 26. Deut. xxviii. 2-13. Eph. i. 3.
d See on xiii. 16. xv. 5. Jer. xxxiii. 22.
e Heb. ii. 1 Kings. ix. 26. marg. xxiv. 60. Num. xxiv. 17-19. Josh. i. 2.
f 2 Sam. viii. 2. Ps. ii. 8, 9. lxxii. 8, 9. Dan. ii. 44. 45. Luke i. 68-75. Rev. xi. 15.
g xxvii. 18. Acts iii. 25. Gal. iii. 16, 28, 29.
h xxvi. 5. Heb. xi. 5.
i xxi. 31.

by name: and he says, "Thou hast not withheld thy son... from me;" and by this he knew, that Abraham feared the Lord.—Doubtless God knew the reality and vigour of Abraham's piety previous to this trial; but he saw good to require experimental evidence of it, for the glory of his own grace, for Abraham's comfort, and for the benefit of his whole church.—"The fear of God" is frequently put for the whole of true religion, being an essential part of it, and necessarily connected with all the rest. (Marg. Ref. s.) It seems to comprise, a reverential regard to the majesty, authority, presence, and purity of God; an influential dread of his displeasure, accompanied with a desire and hope of his favour; (otherwise it would drive us from him, inspire hard thoughts, excite enmity, and discourage all endeavours to please him; Matt. xxv. 24, 25;) a submissive acquiescence in his appointments; a conscientious obedience to his commandments, and a serious devoted attendance on his worship, in his holy ordinances: nor can it be ever separated from a real belief of his truth, and a cordial acceptance of his salvation, as far as we are acquainted with them; or from love, gratitude, and other holy affections. In proportion as faith and hope deliver the soul from terror; humble, admiring reverence of God will be increased: and when "perfect love shall have cast out," entirely and finally, that "fear which hath torment;" the filial reverential regard to God, as our adorable Friend and Father, will be enlarged and perfected for ever, even as it is in the holy angels. (Notes, Ps. lxxxix. 6-12. v. 7.)

V. 13. The ram now became the type of the sacrifice of Christ's death, and indicated what sort of prefigurations of that event God would approve and accept.—Isaac thus rescued, after having been three days under the sentence of death, and living to be the progenitor of the promised innumerable posterity, represented the Saviour rising on the third day, "to see his seed, and prolong his days, that the pleasure of the Lord might prosper in his hand."

V. 14. JEHOVAH-jireh perhaps alludes to Abraham's words, "God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt-offering." The latter clause should be translated, "In the mount the LORD will appear;" that is, just in the crisis, as he did upon the mount to Abraham. This it seems became a proverb, similar to that in our language; 'Man's extremity is God's opportunity.'

V. 16-18. "Because he could swear by no greater, the Lord swore by himself;" and thus he solemnly pledged the honour of his holy name, and of all his perfections, as the security for the fulfilment of his engagements to Abraham. The promises before given had been formed into a covenant; that covenant was signed, sealed, and ratified; and now it was solemnly confirmed with an oath. (Notes, xii. 1-5. xv. xvii.) This was done, not only that Abraham, but also "that we, might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge, to lay hold on the hope set before us" in Christ. (Notes, Heb. vi. 13-20.)—To the former promises it is here added, "Thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies;" or, by occupying their cities, shall acquire the dominion over them. 'Thy seed shall inherit the cities of the adversaries.' Sept. This was accomplished when the Israelites conquered Canaan, and in the victories of David, and the extensive authority of Solomon; but in a far higher sense, when Christ, the promised Seed, ascended the mediatorial throne; when the Gentiles were converted to Christianity; and when opposing nations were crushed before him, or submitted to him.—The language of the last clause also is changed. It had before been said, "In thy Seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed;" but here the expression literally is, "They shall bless themselves;" perhaps implying, how highly they would value the promised Saviour, and how desirous they would be to declare to others their blessedness in him, that they might come and share it.—Abraham's obedience evinced the strength of his faith, and the sincerity of his love: thus "faith wrought with his works, and by works was his faith made perfect." As a sinner, he was justified before God by faith alone; as a professed believer, he was justifi-

20 ¶ And it came to pass after these things, that it was told Abraham, saying, Behold ^k Mileah, she hath also born children unto thy brother ^l Nahor;

21 ^m Huz his first-born, and ⁿ Buz his brother, and Kemuel the father of Aram, 22 And Chesed, and Hazo, and Pildash, and Jidlaph, and Bethuel.

23 And ^o Bethuel begat ^p Rebekah: these eight Mileah did bear to Nahor Abraham's brother.

24 And his ^q concubine, whose name was Reumah, she bare also Tebah, and Gaham, and Thahash, and Maachah.

fied before the whole world, by the works which his faith produced. (Note, Jam. ii. 21—24.)—"Hast not withheld." (16.) Ouk ἐφείστω. Sept. 12. See Rom. viii. 32. 2 Pet. ii. 4, 5. Gr.

V. 20—24. This is introduced as a preface to the account given of Isaac's marriage with Rebekah, and afterwards to that of Jacob with Leah and Rachel. (Marg. Ref.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—12:

N. B. The practical observations on this chapter cannot well be divided; but the first section, being on Abraham's example, may be read with the former part; and the second, on the typical import of the transaction, with the latter

While we remain in this world, we must never expect to be exempt from trials, and frequently the sharpest come last: we should therefore "put on," and keep on, "the whole armour of God," that when summoned to the conflict, we may answer "Here I am."—Where God bestows much grace, he will be sure greatly to try it; and though the conflict is painful, the event will be glorious and joyful. Conscious of our weakness, we ought not to rush uncalled into difficult services, and should pray "not to be led into temptation;" yet, if we be upright and watchful, we may be confident "that the Lord will not suffer us to be tempted above what we are able:" nay, we may "count it all joy, when we fall into divers temptations;" firmly believing that "the trial of our faith shall be to praise, and honour, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ."—If there be any earthly object which seems to rival God in our affections, we may expect that he will in that particular try the sincerity and supremacy of our love; and by cheerfully parting with even our beloved Isaacs for his sake, we most undeniably prove that we have given him our hearts.—They who would perform unreserved obedience, when satisfied what the will of God is, must neither be influenced by carnal affections, listen to plausible objections, consult partial counsellors, make needless delays, nor leave an opening to interruption and disturbance; but, committing all into the Lord's hand, they must simply follow his direction, and leave all consequences with him: and they need not doubt, but in the trying moment he will appear for their comfort or relief.—But what a wonderful sight is in this chapter set before us! The long-expected seed, the son of joy, the child of promise, the well-beloved Isaac, now grown up to maturity, and entwining every day more closely round the tender affections of his parents, of which he was justly deserv- ing; nay, the church's hope, and the declared progenitor of him "in whom all the families of the earth are blessed;" bound, laid upon the altar, and mildly expecting the fatal blow from the hand of his loving father; who, with collected firmness and intrepid resolution, takes the knife to shed his blood, and prepares immediately to kindle that fire which is to consume him to ashes!—For this singular conduct Abraham could render no other reason, than the express command of God: nor was there any other principle of obedience to that extraordinary command, (an obedience never equalled by mere man,) but faith, an unshaken belief of the Lord's testimony, a firm expectation of the accomplishment of his promises, and a full confidence in his wisdom, power, and love. Though the command seemed to run counter to those promises, Abraham knew it only seemed to do so: obedience was his part, and the Lord would take care to glorify his own faithfulness. He had received Isaac from God, who had a right to dispose of him: honour and comfort were in his path; and, though untried before, with undaunted constancy he walked in it.—Hear this, ye inattentive objectors, who traduce the doctrine of salvation by faith, as inimical to practical godliness; go, and upon your principles equal and exceed this obedience: till then be dumb, or allow that, though you understand it not, this apparently weak principle produces effects beyond comparison prodigious. Hear this likewise, ye abusers of this most holy faith, whose conduct merits still deeper indignation; who "say you have faith," yet cleave to your sins, renounce not the world, deny not yourselves, refuse the cross, are lovers of yourselves, of pleasure, of money, or of worldly honour, more than lovers of God; and, instead of parting with a deservedly beloved Isaac at God's command, like Judas, kiss Christ, and sell him to his enemies for a few pieces of silver, or some vile sensual gratification! Here then compare your faith with Abraham's, and acknowledge that ye are no genuine sons of this "father of the faithful;" but that your faith is dead, your hope presumptuous, and that Abraham disowns and is ashamed of you.—In plain language, nothing but faith will carry a man through with unreserved obedience, in every possible trial; and that is no true faith, which perseveres in refusing to obey a plain command, in any case whatever. "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you."—In proportion as faith stands this test, when sharply and repeatedly tried, we may be assured that we are Abraham's children, interested in his covenant, and in the oath by which it was confirmed; and have a right to that strong consolation which by it God wills and intends for his people.

V. 13—24.

In the wonderful transaction recorded in this chapter, faith discerns one infinitely more stupendous. What was the love which Abraham or Isaac bore to the Lord, compared with the love of God the Father in giving his only begotten Son? and with that of the only begotten Son in giving himself a sacrifice upon the cross, for the sins of

CHAP. XXIII.

The age and death of Sarah, 1, 2. Abraham commences with the sons of Heth, and purchases the field and cave Machpelah of Ephron, 3—18; where Sarah is buried, 19, 20.

a xvii. 17.
b xiii. 18. Num. xiv. 22. Josh. xiv. 15. xx. 7. Judg. i. 10.
c xxxvi. 41. l. 10. Num. xx. 29. Deut. xxxiv. 8. 1 Sam. xxviii. 3. 2 Chr. xxxv. 25. Jer. xxii. 10. 18. Ez. xxiv. 16—18. Acts viii. 2. d 5. 7. x. 19. xxv. 10. xxxii. 46. xiv. 30. 1 Sam. xxvi. 6. 2 Sam. xxiii. 39.
e xvii. 8. xlvii. 9. Lev. xxv. 24. 1 Chr. xxix. 15. Ps. xxxix. 12. cv. 12. Heb. xi. 9. 13. 1 Pet. iv. 11.
f li. 19. xlix. 30. 1. 13. Job xxx. 23. Ec. xii. 7. Acts vii. 5.
g 19.

AND Sarah was ^aan hundred and seven and twenty years old: these were the years of the life of Sarah.

2 And Sarah died in ^bKirjath-arba; the same is Hebron in the land of Canaan: and Abraham came to ^cmourn for Sarah, and to weep for her.

3 ¶ And Abraham stood up from before his dead, and spake unto the sons of ^dHeth, saying,

4 I am a ^estranger and a sojourner with you: give me a possession of a ^fburying place with you, that I may ^gbury my dead out of my sight.

men? God commanded Abraham previously to his yielding up his son; but the sacrifice of Christ prevented even solicitation! The Lord had an undoubted right to demand that life which he had given: but where shall we sinners, deserv- ing of eternal misery, ground our claim to such a gift, as that of Christ to be “the propitiation for our sins?” The Lord had been a most liberal Friend to Abraham, before he was required to offer Isaac as a burnt-offering; but “God commended his love to us, in that when we were yet sinners Christ died for us:” and in that, “when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son.” Isaac was a sinner born to die: but the Son of God assumed human nature for the very purpose of dying for us; and in human nature being free from sin, he was under no obligation to suffer death, except the bond of his love to us. If Isaac was justly beloved by Abraham; Jesus was the “beloved Son of the Father, in whom he was well pleased.” Had Isaac died, it had been with inward peace, without extraordinary pain, and with singular reputation: but Christ tasted death in all its bitterness, died by violence, surrounded with contempt and insult, treated with indignity and cruelty, and loaded with the weight of our iniquities; while “it pleased the Lord to bruise him, and to put him to grief, and make his very soul a sacrifice for sin.” By this we know the loving-kindness of God our Saviour towards sinful man, in that “he hath not withheld his Son, his only Son from us:” by this we perceive the love of Christ, in that he gave himself a sacrifice for our sins.—Behold, he dies; yet rises! lives, ascends, and intercedes for us! and calls on sinners to come to him, and partake of his blood-bought salvation. Let them therefore be warned to hear his voice, and encouraged to trust in him. He calls to his redeemed people to rejoice in him and glorify him: “What then shall we render for all his benefits?” May this “love constrain us to live no longer to ourselves, but to him who died for us and rose again;” and, admiring and adoring his grace, let us devote our all to his service, who laid down his life for our salvation. Thus every Christian

5 And the children of Heth answered Abraham, saying unto him,

6 Hear us, ^hmy lord: thou art ^aa mighty ¹prince amongst us; in the choice of our sepulchres bury thy dead: none of us shall withhold from thee ²his sepulchre, but that thou mayest bury thy dead.

7 And Abraham stood up, and ³bowed himself to the people of the land, even to the children of Heth.

8 And he communed with them, saying, If it be your mind that I should bury my dead out of my sight, hear me, and ^kintreat for me to Ephron the son of Zohar:

9 That he may give me the cave of Machpelah, which he hath, which is in the end of his field; for [†]as much money as it is worth he shall give it me, a xviii. 12. xxiv. 18. xxxi. 35. xxvii. 4. 5. 12. xlii. 10. xlv. 5. 8. Ex. xxxii. 22. Ruth ii. 13. Heb. A prince of God. xxi. 22. l xlii. 2. xiv. 14. xxiv. 35.

l xviii. 2. xix. 1
k 1 Kings ii. 17. Luke vii. 3. 4. Heb. vii. 26. 1 John ii. 1, 2 † Heb. full money.

may be sure, that in all emergencies, the Lord will appear for his relief, be his shield in all dangers, provide effectually for all his wants, order all events for his good, and make him conqueror over all enemies, till he shall sit down with him upon his throne of glory.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXIII. V. 1, 2. Sarah is the only woman whose entire age is recorded in Scripture.—‘She was ten years younger than Abraham, and died thirty-eight before him. —God often takes the youngest before the eldest.’ Fuller. It seems that Abraham had some time before her death left his residence at Beer-sheba, and come to sojourn at Hebron. When she died, he came to her tent, to express his unfeigned sorrow, and pay her the last tribute of affection.

V. 3, 4. The sons of Heth are called elsewhere Hittites, that is, Hethites. Abraham was “a stranger and a sojourner” among them; one who had no fixed settlement, and did not attempt to acquire any. (Marg. Ref. e.) —It has generally been the custom, in the church of God, to inter the dead; though burning has elsewhere been much in use: and indeed interring more aptly expresses an acquiescence in that sentence, “until thou return unto the ground, whence thou was taken: . . . for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.”

V. 6. According to those times, Abraham’s retinue, wealth, and prosperity, would rank him among the surrounding princes. Yet the sons of Heth, in calling him “a prince of God,” (margin.) might perhaps also advert to his religion, as respecting his honourable character.

V. 7. Bowed.] Abraham rendered honour and respect to the sons of Heth, according to the custom of that age and country.—It is evidently no part of the religion of the Bible, to refuse such expressions of regard; but an ornament to godliness to render them, as far as it can be done, without flattering the persons, or countenancing the crimes, of those to whom they are addressed.

V. 9. Abraham would have a separate burying-place:

for a possession of a burying-place amongst you.

10 And Ephron dwelt among the children of Heth. And Ephron the Hittite answered Abraham in the audience of the children of Heth, even of all that went in at the gates of his city, saying,

11 Nay, ^m my lord, hear me: the field give I thee, and the cave that is therein, I give it thee; in the presenee of the sons of my people give I it thee: bury thy dead.

12 And Abraham bowed down himself before the people of the land.

13 And he spake unto Ephron in the audience of the people of the land, saying, But if thou will give it, I pray thee hear me: ^a I will give thee money for the field; take it of me, and I will bury my dead there.

14 And Ephron answered Abraham, saying unto him,

15 My lord, hearken unto me: the land is worth four hundred shekels of silver; what is that betwixt me and thee? bury therefore thy dead.

16 And Abraham hearkened unto Ephron, and Abraham ^o weighed to Ephron the silver, which he had named in the audience of the sons of Heth, ^p four hundred shekels of silver, current money with the merchant.

17 And ^q the field of Ephron, which was in Machpelah, which was before Mamre, the field and the cave which was therein, and all the trees that were in the field, that were in all the borders round about, were ^r made sure

18 Unto Abraham, for a possession, in the presenee of the children of Heth, before all that went in at the gate of his city.

19 ¶ And after this, Abraham ^s buried Sarah his wife in the cave of the field of Machpelah, before Mamre: the same is Hebron in the land of Canaan.

20 And the field, and the cave that is therein, were made sure unto Abraham for a possession of a burying place, by the sons of Heth.

^o xliiii. 21. Ezr. viii. 25—30. Job xxviii. 15. Jer. xxxii. 9. Zech. xi. 12.

^p 15. Ex. xxx 13 Ez. xlv. 12

^q xxv. 9. xlix. 30 32. 1. 13. Acts vii 16

^r Ruth iv. 7—10. Jer. xxxii. 7—14.

^s xxv. 9. 10. xxxv. 27—29. xlvii. 30 xlix. 29—32. 1 13. 25.

• Heb evra

¹ 18. xxxiv. 20. 24. Ruth iv. 1—4. Job xxix. 7. 1s. xxviii. 6.

^u 6. 2 Sam. xxiv 20—24. 1 Chr. xxi. 22—24

^t xiv. 22. 23. Phil. iv. 5—8. Col. iv. 5 Heb. xiii. 5.

perhaps intimating, that, though the righteous live intermingled with the ungodly in this world, there will be a separation after death.

V. 15, 16. Shekel comes from a Hebrew verb, signifying to weigh; for money was not then coined and stamped; but the precious metals passed by weight. A shekel is about half an ounce. (Tables.)

V. 20. Thus Abraham, in a burying-place, had an earnest of Canaan, and a pledge of his reversionary inheritance!

“This chapter not only illustrates the excellent spirit of “the father of the faithful,” but exhibits a specimen of manners which might do honour to any age and country. The scene of the transaction appears to be a publick assembly of the chief persons among “the sons of Heth,”—“in the audience of the people of the land.” Abraham “stands up and bows himself” before them, with respect and deference, at the commencement of his suit, and repeats this courtesy on hearing their kindness and readiness to comply with his wishes. He assumes no civil superiority on the ground of his high religious distinctions; nor cherishes any sense of right to what he asked, in virtue of the whole land being promised to his family: on the contrary, while they pronounce him “a mighty prince among them,” he styles himself a mere “stranger and sojourner” in the country: and when, in compliance with their invitations, he selects a particular portion of land as what he should desire, he requests the good offices of the assembly with one of their principal members, (such we may suppose Ephron to have been,) to obtain it for him. They, on the other hand, evidently sympathize with him, and study to shew him all the respect due to his character and his circumstances. They desire him to choose his own place of sepulture, assured that no one of them all would withhold from him the object of his choice. When he pitches upon the field of Ephron, Ephron immediately steps forward, without waiting for any such intervention as Abraham had requested, and begs he will accept the land as a free gift. “The field give I thee, and the cave that is therein, I give it thee; in the presence of the sons of “my people give I it thee: bury thy dead” (11). Of this liberal offer Abraham, however, is too disinterested to avail himself, and Ephron consents to accept the price of the land, at the same time observing, that it was a matter of no consideration between him and Abraham.—Nothing could, throughout, be more agreeable to every principle of good manners, and it is impossible not to admire the behaviour of both parties.—How strong must have been the impression made by Abraham’s general character and conduct, to procure him such treatment among persons to whom his religion would naturally be obnoxious, and his prosperity an object of jealousy or envy!

The closing verses of the chapter exhibit the earliest instance on record of the regular conveyance of landed property: “the field, and the cave that was therein, and a “the trees that were in the field, and that were in all the “borders round about.”

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The longest life must shortly close; and the survivors among relations only live to experience painful separations.—The more valued any earthly enjoyment is, the

CHAP. XXIV.

Abraham commissions his servant to go to Mesopotamia in order to take a wife for Isaac, 1—9. The servant arrives at the city of Nahor; his prayer is answered, and he is entertained by Laban, 10—33. He proposes a marriage between Isaac and Rebekah, which is acceded to, 34—58. Rebekah goes with him, and is married to Isaac, 59—67.

a xviii. 11. xxi. 5. xxv. 20. 1 Kings i. 1. Luke i. 7. * Heb. gene into days. b 35. xii. 2. xlix. 25. Ps. cxli. 1—3. Prov. x. 22. Is. li. 2. Gal. iii. 9. Eph. i. 3. c xv. 2. d 10. xxxix. 4—6. 8 9. xliiv. 1. e 9. xlvii. 29. f xxi. 23. xxv. 28—31. xxxi. 53. Ex. xx. 7. xxii. 11. Deut. vi. 13. x. 20. Josh. ii. 12. 1 Sam. xx. 17. Jer. iv. 2. xii. 16. g xiv. 22. 2 Kings xix. 15. 2 Chr. ii. 12. Neh. ix. 6. Is. cxv. 15. Jer. x. 11. h vi. 2. 4. xxvi. 34. 35. xxvii. 46. xxviii. 8. Ex. xxxiv. 16. Deut. vii. 3. 4. 1 Cor. vii. 39. 2 Cor. vi. 14—17. i xii. 1. xlvii. 20—23. xxviii. 2.

AND Abraham was ^aold and ^bwell stricken in age; and the LORD had ^bblessed Abraham in all things.

2 And Abraham said unto his ^celdest servant of his house, that ^druled over all that he had, ^ePut, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh:

3 And I will make thee ^fswear by the LORD, ^gthe God of heaven, and the God of the earth, ^hthat thou shalt not take a wife unto my son, of the daughters of the Canaanites amongst whom I dwell:

4 But thou shalt go unto my country, and ⁱto my kindred, and take a wife unto my son Isaac.

5 And the servant said unto him, ^kPeradventure the woman will not be willing to follow me unto this land: must I needs bring thy son again unto the land from whence thou camest?

6 And Abraham said unto him, ^lBe-ware thou, that thou bring not my son thither again.

7 The ^mLORD God of heaven, which ⁿtook me from my father's house, and from the land of my kindred, and ^owhich spake unto me, and that sware unto me, saying, Unto thy seed will I give this land; he shall send his ^pangel before thee, and thou shalt take a wife unto my son from thence.

8 And if the woman will not be willing to follow thee, then shalt thou be ^qclear from this my oath: only bring not my son thither again.

9 And the servant ^rput his hand under the thigh of Abraham his master, and sware to him concerning that matter.

k 38. Ec. v. 2. l Heb. x. 39. xi. 13—16. 2 Pet. ii. 20—22. m Ezra i. 2. Dan. ii. 44. Jon. i. 9. Rev. xi. 13. n xii. 1. o xiii. 15. xv. 18. xvii. 8. xxii. 16 —18. xxvi. 3, 4. 24. Ex. xliii. 5. Num. xiv. 16. 20. xxxvii. 17. Deut. i. 8. Josh. i. 6. Judg. ii. 1. Ex. xxiii. 20—23. xxxiii. 2. Ps. xxxiv. 7. Ciii. 20 Is. lxvii. 9. Heb. i. 14. q Num. xxx. 5. 8 Josh. ii. 17—20. ix. 20.

greater must be our anxiety about it, and our reluctance to part with it; and the sharper the anguish when this trial takes place: and when those, who have lived together in conjugal affection for many years, are parted by death, the separation bears some resemblance to the dissolution of soul and body. Thus the entrance of sin, and the sentence of death, have filled all below with vanity and vexation.—Blessed be God, that there is a world, where sin, death, anxiety, and sorrow, gain no admission; that there are relations formed, which even death cannot part; and that sinners are invited to enter into this indissoluble union and intimate relation, with “the everlasting God,” by faith in his only begotten Son. “He that is joined to the Lord “is one spirit;” and no separation can injure, or should terrify him, who can never feel that separation from God, “which is the second death.”—Soon they whom we most love, yea, our very bodies which we often inordinately care for, will become so deformed, that they must be “buried “out of sight.” How vain then, to boast of vigour and comeliness! how mean to pamper and decorate these bodies of humiliation! and how loose should we be to all earthly attachments! Let us rather seek to have our souls adorned with heavenly graces: then shall they flourish in immortal beauty; and the very body shall rise incorruptible and glorious, meet for the eternal enjoyment of God, in the blessed society of the angelick hosts.—As we, if true believers, are “strangers and sojourners” here below, are seeking a heavenly city, and shall shortly want nothing but a burying-place; let us mourn departed friends with submission and in hope, and not indulge sorrow so as to interfere with present duty, any more than other passions, which are of worse repute: for indulged grief, however plausible, is rebellion against Providence; ingratitude for remaining undeserved mercies; and a proof of the want or weakness of faith, and of confidence in the promises and all-sufficiency of the living God.—Let us also avoid every appearance of selfishness, and not be out-done by the people of this world, in courteousness or generosity, when consistent with sincerity and a good conscience; let us manage our concerns with punctuality and precision, in order to avoid contention; and thus let us stand prepared, and waiting for the coming of our Lord.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXIV. V. 1. These events took place three years after Sarah's death, when Isaac was forty years of age, and Abraham a hundred and forty.—It is remarkable, that though a numerous posterity was so eminent a part of the promised blessing, no great haste was made about Isaac's marriage, and much less afterwards about that of Jacob.—“The LORD had blessed Abraham in all things,” notwithstanding his trials, and even by means of them.

V. 2—9. There can be no reasonable doubt, that Eliezer of Damascus was the servant employed on this occasion. (xv. 2.) About sixty years had elapsed, since Abraham spoke of him as “the steward of his house;” and the words, rendered “the eldest servant of his house,” or his servant, the elder of his house, are of similar import. He was, therefore, not only far advanced in years, but a person of singular piety and wisdom.—“Lifting up the “hand to the LORD” was before mentioned, as the form of taking an oath; (Notes, xiv. 22—24;) but “putting the “hand under the thigh” might be used to express submissive duty and fidelity.—Eliezer was required to swear, that he would diligently use his influence to prevent Isaac from marrying a wife of the Canaanites, who were then generally idolaters, and not proper persons with whom to form so intimate a connexion; (especially as the Lord

10 ¶ And the servant took ten camels, of the camels of his master, and departed, (* for * all the goods of his master were in his hand :) and he arose, and went to Mesopotamia, unto the city of Nahor.

11 And he made his camels to kneel down without the city, by a well of water, at the time of the evening, even the time that † women go out to draw water.

12 And he said, † O LORD God of my master Abraham, † I pray thee send me good speed this day, and shew kindness unto my master Abraham.

13 Behold, I stand here by the well of water, and the † daughters of the men of the city come out to draw water:

14 And let it come to pass, that the damsel to whom I shall say, Let down thy pitcher, I pray thee, that I may drink; and she shall say, Drink, and I will give thy camels drink also; let the same be she † that thou hast appointed had shewn Abraham, that they were filling up their measure of iniquity, and were doomed to destruction;) but that he would endeavour to procure him one of Abraham's kindred, among whom the worship of God was still, in some measure, maintained.—‘ There does not appear in ‘ all this concern the least taint of worldly policy, or any ‘ of those motives which usually govern men in the settle- ‘ ment of their children. No mention is made of riches, ‘ or honours, or natural accomplishments; but merely of ‘ what related to God.’ Fuller.—Before, however, Eliezer thus engaged, he enquired whether, if the proper person, when found, should not consent to leave home, and become a stranger in Canaan, Isaac ought to go and live in Mesopotamia. But the sojourning of the patriarchs in Canaan represented the state of believers in this world; and Isaac's returning and settling in that country, from which Abraham at God's command had come, would have been an emblem of apostasy in a professed worshipper of God. Abraham, therefore, declared his assurance, grounded on the former mercies of the Lord, and on his promises, and his covenant confirmed by an oath, that “ he would “ send his angel before him” to prosper his way. And this assurance, with the express stipulation, that the oath should not otherwise be binding, fully satisfied this faithful and conscientious servant.—We may here make some remarks about good angels, as we formerly did about fallen angels. (Note, Gen. iii. 1.) It appears then from Scripture, that the holy angels were created by God, complete in derived and dependent excellence; that they are very numerous, and of different orders, “ angels, principalities, “ and powers;” that they are now confirmed in holiness, and felicity; that they excel in wisdom, knowledge, and strength; and that they are as a flame of fire, with fervent love, gratitude, and active zeal; and yet proportionably influenced by deep humility, and reverential awe of God. They are represented as standing in his presence, waiting his commands; covering their faces with their wings, or prostrate in profound adoration; hearkening to his voice, doing his will, and fulfilling his pleasure. (Notes, Ps. lxxviii. 17. ciii. 20—22. Is. vi. 1—4. Rev. v. 11—14.) They are, on this account, called angels, or messengers: for though he “ puts no trust in them,” and even, in comparison with his own infinite wisdom, “ charges them with folly;” yet he is pleased, to honour, and, (if we may so speak,) to indulge them with his commands, which they execute with unwearied alacrity: and when he appoints and approves, the meanest or the most important services are alike delightful to them. These blessed beings are the ministers of his providence, and are often introduced as executing his awful vengeance; but more generally they are considered as “ sent forth to minister to them who “ shall be heirs of salvation.” (Notes, 2 Kings xix. 35. Heb. i. 13, 14.) There is not a bright seraph through all the heavenly train, who would not delight and glory in attending a poor despised Lazarus, in a hospital or a dungeon, to ward off the machinations of evil spirits, to procure a calm to his dying moments, and to hail his departing soul to the mansions of the blessed: for they are all free from pride and envy, all full of love to the Redeemer and redeemed, and all rejoice, even over one sinner brought to true repentance. Our obligations to them are great: but all the adoration and praise belong to Him who works by them; for they are our fellow-servants, and have no claim to our worship, but abhor it as sacrilege and idolatry. (Note, Rev. xix. 9, 10.) We may, however, feel a love for them, and rejoice in the thought of being with them, and like them for ever: and we may well endeavour to copy the example of their humble zeal, their fervent love, their solemn worship and cheerful services; and, in our conduct to each other, take pattern from them, by condescending to the meanest, and the vilest, without envying, disdain, or overlooking one another. For the lowest and worst of human creatures is not so mean and vile, compared with the greatest and the best of men; as the greatest and best of men is mean and vile, compared even with a created angel.

V. 10. It is evident that these ten camels carried every thing requisite for the journey, and suited to the occasion; and that Eliezer was accompanied by other servants. (30—32. 59.)—The word rendered Mesopotamia, is literally Aram of the two rivers; that is, Aram, or Syria, which lies between the Euphrates and the Tigris. Nahor did not dwell at Ur of the Chaldees, but at Haran. (xi. 31. xxix. 4.)

V. 11—14. ‘ That which is done for life, and which ‘ may involve things of another life, requires to be done ‘ well; and nothing can be done well, in which the will ‘ of God is not consulted, and his blessing implored.’ Fuller. Great humility and caution are requisite, in imitating such examples as this of Abraham's servant: yet we must not limit God by our rules; and he may still at some times so impress the minds of his servants in perplexity, as to lead them to expect extraordinary interpositions, and then evidently to answer these expectations. We should not, therefore, hastily condemn every thing of this kind; provided it neither countenances unscriptural opinions or practices; nor takes men off from attending

* Or, and.
2. xxxix. 4—6.
8, 9, 22. 23.

† Deut. xxiii. 4.
Judg. iii. 8—10.
1 Chr. xix. 6.
Acts ii. 9.
u xi. 31. xxix. 4.
5.

† Heb. women which draw water go forth.
13—20. Ex. ii.
16. 1 Sam. ix.
11. John iv. 7.

x 27. xxxi. 42.
xxxii. 9. 1 Kings
xviii. 36 2 Kings
ii. 14.

y xliii. 14. Neh. i.
11. ii. 4. Ps.
xxxvii. 6. xc. 16.
17. cxviii. 25.
Prov. iii. 6. Phil.
iv. 6. 1 Thes. iii.
10, 11.

z 11. xxxix. 9, 10.

a 44. Prov. xix.
14.

b xv. 8. Ex. iv. 1
—9. Judg. vi. 17.
37. vii. 13—15.
1 Sam. vi. 7—9.
x. 2—10. xiv. 10.
2 Sam. v. 24
2 Kings xx. 8—
11. 18. vii. 11.
c Ps. xxxiv. 15.
cxlv. 18, 19. Is.
lxv. 24 Dan. ix.
20—23.
d 24. xxii. 20—23.
e xi. 27. 29

for thy servant Isaac; and thereby shall I know that thou hast shewed kindness unto my master.

15 ¶ And it came to pass before he had done speaking, that behold, Rebekah came out, who was born to Bethuel, son of Mileah, the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother, with her pitcher upon her shoulder.

16 And the damsel was very fair to look upon, a virgin, neither had any man known her; and she went down to the well, and filled her pitcher and came up.

17 And the servant ran to meet her, and said, Let me, I pray thee, drink a little water of thy pitcher.

18 And she said, Drink, my lord: and she hastened, and let down her pitcher upon her hand, and gave him drink.

19 And when she had done giving him drink, she said, I will draw water for thy camels also, until they have done drinking.

20 And she hastened, and emptied her pitcher into the trough, and ran again unto the well to draw water, and drew for all his camels.

21 And the man wondering at her held his peace, to wit whether the LORD had made his journey prosperous, or not.

22 And it came to pass, as the camels had done drinking, that the man took a golden ear-ring, of half a shekel weight, and two bracelets for her hands, of ten shekels weight of gold;

23 And said, Whose daughter art thou? tell me, I pray thee: is there room in thy father's house for us to lodge in?

24 And she said unto him, I am the daughter of Bethuel, the son of Milcah, which she bare unto Nahor.

25 She said moreover unto him, o We have both straw and provender enough, and room to lodge in.

26 And the man bowed down his head, and worshipped the LORD.

27 And he said, Blessed be the LORD God of my master Abraham, who hath not left destitute my master of his mercy and his truth: I being in the way, the LORD led me to the house of my master's brethren.

28 And the damsel ran, and told them of her mother's house of these things.

29 And Rebekah had a brother, and his name was Laban: and Laban ran out unto the man, unto the well.

30 And it came to pass when he saw the ear-ring, and bracelets upon his sister's hands, and when he heard the words of Rebekah his sister, saying, Thus spake the man unto me; that he came unto the man, and behold, he stood by the camels at the well.

31 And he said, Come in, thou blessed of the LORD: wherefore standest thou without? for I have prepared the house, and room for the camels.

32 And the man came into the house: and he ungirded his camels, and gave straw and provender for the camels, and water to wash his feet, and the men's feet that were with him.

33 And there was set meat before him to eat: but he said, I will not eat, until I have told my errand. And he said, Speak on.

34 And he said, I am Abraham's servant.

35 And the LORD hath blessed my master greatly, and he is become great: and he hath given him flocks, and herds, and silver, and gold, and menservants, and maid-servants, and camels, and asses.

36 And Sarah my master's wife bare to the ordinary means of instruction; nor is substituted as the foundation of hope, instead of the promises of God, and the work of his Spirit upon the heart.—It is observable that Abraham's servant had in mind, in this address, the idea of a wife for Isaac, as one who united in her character, simplicity, industry, humility, affability, and cheerfulness in being serviceable and hospitable.

V. 21. Abraham's servant had attendants, who might have spared Rebekah; and the labour of drawing water for ten camels must have been great: but he would not interpose, that he might observe her conduct, and wait the answer to his prayer.

V. 22. About six ounces of gold, in all.
V. 28. 'It was her mother's house, not her father's.'—The whole narrative implies, that Bethuel, Rebekah's father, was dead; and that Bethuel, afterwards mentioned, was Laban's younger brother. (50. 53.)

V. 33—36. Abraham had received intelligence concerning the family of Nahor, and we may suppose they had also heard of him; but now the report was authen-a son to my master when she was old: and ^funto him hath he given all that he hath.

^g 2-9. 37 And ^emy master made me swear, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife to my son of the daughters of the Canaanites, in whose land I dwell;

38 But thou shalt go unto my father's house, and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son.

39 And I said unto my master, Peradventure the woman will not follow me.

^b 40 And he said unto me, The LORD, ^hbefore whom I walk, ⁱwill send his angel with thee, and prosper thy way: and thou shalt take a wife for my son of my kindred, and of my father's house.

41 Then thou shalt be clear from this my oath, when thou comest to my kindred; and if they give not thee one, thou shalt be clear from my oath.

^k 42 And I came this day unto the well, and said, ^kO LORD God of my master Abraham, if now thou do ^lprosper my way which I go;

43 Behold, I stand by the well of water; and it shall come to pass, that when the virgin cometh forth to draw water, and I say to her, Give me, I pray thee, a little water of thy pitcher to drink;

^m 44 And she say unto me, ^mBoth drink thou, and I will also draw for thy camels: let the same be ⁿthe woman whom the LORD hath appointed out for my master's son.

^o 45 And ^obefore I had done ^pspeaking in mine heart, behold Rebekah came forth with her pitcher on her shoulder; and she went down unto the well, and drew water: and I said unto her, Let me drink, I pray thee.

46 And she made haste, and let down her pitcher from her shoulder, and said, Drink, and I will give thy camels drink also: so I drank, and she made the camels drink also.

47 And I asked her, and said, Whose daughter art thou? And she said, The daughter of Bethuel, Nahor's son, whom Mileah bare unto him: and ^qI put the ear-ring upon her face, and the bracelets upon her hands.

48 And ^rI bowed down my head, and worshipped the LORD, and blessed the LORD God of my master Abraham, which had ^sled me in the right way to take my master's brother's daughter unto his son.

49 And now ^tif ye will deal kindly and truly with my master, tell me: and if not, tell me: ^uthat I may turn to the right hand, or to the left.

50 Then ^xLaban and Bethuel answered and said, ^yThe thing proceedeth from the LORD: ^zwe cannot speak unto thee bad or good.

51 Behold, Rebekah is before thee, take her, and go, and let her be thy master's son's wife, as the LORD hath spoken.

52 And it came to pass, that when Abraham's servant heard these words, he ^aworshipped the LORD, bowing himself to the earth.

53 ¶ And the servant brought forth ^bjewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment, and gave them to Rebekah: He gave also to her brother and to her mother ^cprecious things.

54 And they did eat and drink, he and the men that were with him, and tarried all night: and they rose up in the morning, and he said, ^dSend me away unto my master.

55 And her brother and her mother

ticated, and the particulars ascertained. The narration is beautifully simple; well suited to recommend Isaac, and to promote the object of the journey.—The servant's heart was so deeply engaged in the business, that he could not eat till he had declared it. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 44. Appointed.] Those events, which appear to us the effect of choice, contrivance, or chance, are matters of appointment with God: and the persuasion of this does not prevent, but rather encourage, the use of all proper means; at the same time that it confines us to proper means, and delivers the mind from useless anxiety about consequences.

V. 45. Some things form more proper subjects for secret than for social prayer: Abraham's servant therefore used mental prayer, and was silent, till the singularity of the answer required that it should be communicated.

V. 50. The whole concern was so evidently according to the appointment, and under the direction, of the Lord, that there was no room for hesitation or objection.

V. 53. Her brother and mother.] No mention is made of her father.

V. 55, 56. This good and faithful servant's desire of communicating the agreeable intelligence at home, no doubt induced him to hasten his departure as much as he

^b v. 22. 24. vi. 9. xviii. 1. xlviii. 15. 1 Kings ii. 3. viii. 23. 2 Kings xx. 3. 17. Ex. xxiii. 20. xxxiii. 2. Dan. iii. 28. Rev. xxii. 8. 16.

^k 12-14. Acts x. 7, 8. 22. ^l 31. xxxix. 3. Ezra viii. 21. Neh. i. 11. Ps. xc. 17. Rom. i. 10

^m Heb. xiii. 2. ⁿ 14. ii. 22. Prov. xvi. 33. xviii. 22. xix. 14

^o 15-20. 1s. lxx. 24. Dan. ix. 19. 23. Acts iv. 24-33. x. 20. xii. 12-17. ^p 1 Sam. i. 13-15. Neh. ii. 4. Rom. viii. 26

^q 22. 53. Ps. xlv. 9. 13. 14. 1s. lxii. 3-5. Ez. xvi. 10-13. Eph. v. 26. 27.

^r 26. 27. 52.

^s 27. Ex. xviii. 20. 1s. xxxii. 5. xlviii. 14. cvii. 7. Prov. iii. 6. iv. 11. 1s. xlviii. 17.

^t xlvii. 29. Job. ii. 14.

^u Num. xx. 17. Deut. ii. 27

^x 15. 28. 55. 60.

^y Ps. cxviii. 23.

^z xxxi. 24. 29. 2 Sam. xiii. 22

^a 26. 48. 1 Chr. xxix. 20. 2 Chr. xx. 18. Ps. xcvi. 6. cvii. 21. 22. cxvi. 1. 2. Matt. ii. 11. Acts x. 25, 26. ^b Heb. vessels. Ex. iii. 22. xi. 2. xii. 35.

^c Deut. xxxiii. 13-16. 2 Chr. xxi. 3. Ezra i. 6. 1s. xxxix. 2.

^d 56. xxviii. 5, 6. xiv. 24. 2 Sam. xviii. 19. 27. 28. Luke viii. 38, 39.

^a Or, a full year, or ten months. Lev. xxv. 29. said, Let the damsel abide with us ^a a few days, at the least ten; after that she shall go.

^d xlv. 9—13. Prov xxv. 25. 56 And he said unto them, ^d Hinder me not, seeing the Lord hath prospered my way: send me away, that I may go to my master.

57 And they said, We will call the damsel, and enquire at her mouth.

^e Ps. xlv. 10, 11. Luke i. 38. 58 And they called Rebekah, and said unto her, ^e Wilt thou go with this man? And she said, I will go.

^f 50. 53. 60. g xxxv. 8. 59 And they sent away Rebekah ^f their sister, and her ^g nurse, and Abraham's servant and his men.

^h i. 28. ix. 1. xiv. 19. xvii. 16. xxviii. 3. xlviii. 15, 16. 20. Ruth iv. 11, 12. 60 And ^h they blessed Rebekah, and said unto her, Thou art our sister, be thou the mother of thousands of millions, and let ⁱ thy seed possess the gate of those which hate them.

^k xxxi. 34. 1 Sam. xxx. 17. Esth. viii. 10. 14. 61 And Rebekah arose, and her damsels, and ^k they rode upon the camels, and followed the man: and the servant took Rebekah, and went his way.

62 ¶ And Isaac came from the way of the well ^l Lahai-roi; for he dwelt in the south-country. ^l xvi. 14. xxv. 11.

63 And Isaac went out ^t to ^m meditate [†] Or, to pray in the field at the even-tide: and he lifted up his eyes, and saw, and behold, the camels were coming. ^m Josh. i. 8. Ps. 1. 2. lxxvii. 11, 12. civ. 34. cxlix. 15. cxxxix. 17, 18. cxliii. 2, 6.

64 And Rebekah lifted up her eyes, and when she saw Isaac, she ⁿ lighted ⁿ off the camel. ⁿ Josh. xv. 18. Judg. i. 14.

65 For she had said unto the servant, What man is this that walketh in the field to meet us? And the servant had said, It is my master: therefore she took ^o a veil and covered herself. ^o xxx. 16. 1 Cor. xi. 5, 6. 10.

66 And ^p the servant told Isaac all things that he had done. ^p Mark vi. 30.

67 And Isaac brought her into ^q his mother Sarah's tent, ^q and took Rebekah, and she became his wife: and he loved her: and Isaac was ^r comforted after his mother's death. ^q xviii. 6, 9, 10. ^r ii. 22—24. 2 Cor. xi. 1, 2. Eph. v. 22—33. ^s xxxvii. 35. xxxviii. 12. 1 Thes. iv. 13.

could with propriety: yet the transaction may admit of a useful accommodation. (P. O. 33—67.)

V. 58. I will go.] The excellence of Rebekah's character forbids us to think, that there could be any thing in her answer inconsistent with true delicacy; though it does not accord to the modern standard, which is frequently subversive of sincerity. No doubt she saw with peculiar clearness, that the whole was the appointment of God; and she would not so much as seem to slight the honour and happiness of being a progenitor of the promised Seed; but, like his immediate parent, she answered, "Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word." Luke i. 38.

V. 59, 60. Their sister... our sister.] Bethuel, as well as Laban, must have been her brother.—Nurse.] Note, xxxv. 8.

V. 63. To meditate.] To reflect on the works and truths of God, and pour out his heart in prayer and praise.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS

V. 1—9.

The effect of good example and instructions, and the reverential worship of God, in publick ordinances and in private families, will generally appear in the piety, faithfulness, prudence, and affection of the domesticks: and to live in pious families, or to be favoured with pious servants, is a blessing highly to be valued, and thankfully to be acknowledged.—No concern in life is of more importance to ourselves, to others, and to the church, and even to posterity, than contracting marriage; which therefore ought always to be undertaken with much circumspection and prudence, with an eye to the will and appointment of God, and with prayer for his direction and blessing.—It is an important part of a parent's duty, to direct, counsel, and assist his children in this particular, with great tenderness and affection: and those young persons are highly favoured, who have parents that will, in a proper manner, and with suitable consideration, perform this duty; and they are wise who avail themselves of these advantages. But where such parents are not consulted and regarded, the blessing of God cannot be expected; nor when godliness is not regarded as the primary requisite in a companion for life.—They, who stay their minds on God, will be kept in peace, and enabled to disregard the peradventures which trouble others: they wait to know his appointment, are prepared to be satisfied with it, and assured that in due time it will take place, and correspond with his promises; and they only aim to know and to do their duty, and use the proper means. But, in binding ourselves by an oath, we should take great care that, through inattention, we do not ensnare our souls.

V. 10—32.

They, who acknowledge God in all their ways, will find him present to direct their paths, and make their way prosperous: and, when the prayer of faith meets with an immediate answer, the glory ought as speedily to be rendered to God in solemn praise and thanksgivings.—How are the times changed, since the chief persons, and their sons and daughters, cheerfully performed the most laborious services with their own hands! It is to be feared we have got but a poor exchange, in our excessive refinements, for the simplicity, diligence, and usefulness, which characterized the patriarchs. And surely common sense must allow, that these are the most valuable endowments in one, who is to fill up the important duties of a wife and a mother; to be the companion of a wise and pious man's retired hours; and to be entrusted with the management of his domestick concerns, and with forming the tender minds of his children!

CHAP. XXV.

Abraham marries Keturah, 1 : his sons by her, 2—4. He gives his substance to Isaac; and sends them away with gifts, 5, 6. His age, death, and burial, 7—10. God blesses Isaac, 11. The posterity, age, and death of Ishmael, 12—18. Isaac prays for Rebekah, who was barren; and is heard, 19—21. Circumstances preceding and attending the birth of Esau and Jacob, 22—26. Their different characters and pursuits, 27, 28. Esau sells his birth-right to Jacob, 29—34

^a xxiii. 1, 2. 1 Chr. i. 32, 33. THEN ^aagain Abraham took a wife, and her name was Keturah.

2 And she bare him Zimran, and Jokshan, and Medan, and ^b Midian, and Ishbak, and ^c Shuah.

3 And Jokshan begat ^d Sheba and ^e Dedan. And the sons of Dedan were ^f Asshurim, and Letushim, and Leumim.

4 And the sons of Midian; ^g Ephah, and Ephher, and Hanoch, and Abidah, and Eldaah. All these were the children of Keturah.

5 And Abraham ^h gave all that he had unto Isaac.

6 But unto the sons of the ⁱ concubines, which Abraham had, Abraham

^b xxxvi. 35. xxxvii. 28. Ex. ii. 15. 16. xviii. 1—4. Num. xxii. 4. xxv. 17, 18. xxxi. 2. 8. Judg. vi. vii. viii. Job ii. 11. ^c 1 Kings x. 1. Job vi. 19. Ps. lxxii. 70. ^e Jer. xxv. 23. xlix. 8. Ez. xxv. 13. xxvii. 20. ^f Ez. xxvii. 6. ^g Is. lx. 6. ^h xxii. 10—12. xxiv. 36. Matt. xi. 27. xxviii. 18. John iii. 35. Rom. vii. 17. 32. ix. 7—9. 1 Cor. iii. 21—23. Gal. iii. 29. iv. 28. Heb. i. 2. 1. xvi. 3. xxx. 4. 9. xxxii. 22. xxxv. 22. Judg. xix. 1. 2. 4.

V. 33—67.

Whatever business we are entrusted with, we should, like this pious servant, attend to it in preference to our own indulgence or refreshment: and when our purpose is honourable, and we are waiting to know the Lord's appointment, a plain recital of facts, in which the hand of God appears evident, is more becoming, and frequently more effectual, than all the trappings of oratory, which too often disguise the real truth.—The remarkable private experience, which we have of God's mercy and faithfulness, ought to be declared among those who fear God, for his glory and their encouragement.—Though the counsel and consent of parents should be obtained; yet, before marriage is solemnized, the mutual and cheerful compliance of the contracting parties is also requisite, being essential to the comfort and happiness of that honourable state: and when matters are thus begun, and completed in faith, and with the prayer of all parties, the blessing of God on them and their posterity may reasonably be expected; while the comfort of one relation will compensate for the loss of another.—But, will not the most sober judgment allow, that in this transaction we have a type of Christ and his church? We know who is the Bridegroom, that in perfect harmony with his heavenly Father, having offered himself as a sacrifice for sin, espouses his church unto himself, by the ministration of his servants, the preachers of the gospel; who, with his commission, go to find out those who are afar off, "that they may present them as a chaste virgin unto Christ." They represent to sinners his glory, his excellency, his suitableness and loving-kindness; their own experience of his grace, and his unsearchable riches, to induce their willingness: and by these representations, the drawings of his Spirit, and some foretastes of his goodness, they are prevailed on to consent to their own happiness, and made willing to forsake their own country, and to renounce all for him. (Note, John xvi. 14, 15.) Then he adorns them with the robe of his righteousness, and the graces of his Spirit; endows them with all his riches; ennobles them by their relation to him, and makes them happy in his love, and their fellowship with him. They are now supremely attached to his person and interest, and faithful to their engagements to him; they give him their heart, and devote body and soul to his service, in sincerity and simplicity. He greatly delights in the beauty which he hath put upon them: being thus united to him, they bring forth fruit unto God; and at length he will wash away every spot and blemish, and present them, (adorned as a bride for her husband,) faultless before his presence with exceeding joy.—In this view, how punctual, laborious, faithful, self-denying, disinterested, fervent in prayer, watchful of providence, jealous for Christ, and affectionately desirous of souls, ought all to be, who sustain the sacred ministerial character! The good Lord send forth many such labourers and stewards, and make them wise to win souls!

NOTES.

CHAP. XXV. V. 1—4. Abraham was a hundred and thirty-seven years of age when Sarah died; and, nearly forty years before that event, his age had rendered it very improbable he should have children: yet he had six sons by Keturah, whom he sent away in his life-time: and on these grounds it has been conjectured that he had married this wife long before.—But the language of the original text, "And Abraham added, and took a wife," as well as the unnatural disturbance, which this supposition occasions in the simple narration, militates against the opinion. The Lord had promised him an innumerable posterity, and the long delay both served to try his faith, and to illustrate the divine power and faithfulness; when at length, beyond all probability, the promise was so remarkably fulfilled. And, as Abraham lived thirty-eight years after Sarah's death, all these children might be grown up, and much older than Ishmael was when he was sent away, and might be settled in the world before his death.—They were afterwards intimately connected with the Ishmaelites; and many great nations at this very day claim Abraham for their progenitor, by some of these branches.—Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses, was descended from Midian: and Job and some of his friends, either from others of Keturah's sons, or from Ishmael, or from Esau. (Marg. Ref. Note, Job ii. 11.)

V. 5, 6. Abraham gave the bulk of his substance to Isaac, as his legitimate heir, his only son by Sarah the free woman, according to the promise. Isaac typified the Son of God, "whom he hath appointed Heir of all things;" and also represented believers, to whom with Christ the Father giveth all things.—The word concubine is used, not only for one who cohabited with a man that had another wife, as Hagar; but also for one who was a lawful wife, gave ^k gifts, and sent them away from Isaac his son, (while he yet lived,) eastward, unto the ^l east-country.

¹ Judg. vi. 3. Job 3

7 ¶ And these are the days of the years of Abraham's life which he lived, an hundred threescore and fifteen years.

B. C. 1822.

8 Then Abraham ^m gave up the ghost, and died in a ⁿ good old age, an old man, and full of years; and was ^o gathered to his people.

m 17. xxxv. 18. xlix. 23. Acts v. 5. 10. xii. 23. n xv. 15. xxxv. 24. 29. xlvii. 8, 9. Judg. viii. 32. 1 Chr. xxix. 28. Job xlii. 17.

9 And his sons, ^p Isaac and Ishmael, buried him ^q in the cave of Machpelah, in the field of Ephron the son of Zohar the Hittite, which is before Mamre;

o 7. xlix. 33. Num. xx. 24. xxvii. 13. Judg. ii. 10. Acts xiii. 36. p xxi. 9, 10. xxxv. 29. q xxiii. 9—20. xlix. 29, 30. i. 13.

10 The field which Abraham purchased of the sons of Heth: there was Abraham buried, and Sarah his wife.

r xii. 2. xvii. 19. xxii. 17. i. 24.

11 And it came to pass ^r after the death of Abraham, that God blessed his son Isaac: and Isaac dwelt by the well ^s Lahai-roi.

s xvi. 14. xxiv. 62

12 ¶ Now ^t these are the generations of Ishmael Abraham's son, whom Hagar, the Egyptian, Sarah's handmaid, bare unto Abraham.

t xvi. 10—15. xvii. 20. xxi. 13. Ps. lxxxiii. 6.

13 And these ^u are ⁿ the names of the sons of Ishmael, by their names, according to their generations: The first-born of Ishmael, ^x Nebajoth; and ^y Kedar, and Adbeel, and Mibsam.

u 1 Chr. i. 29—31. v. 19, 20.

x xxxvi. 3. Is. lx. y Ps. cxc. 5. Cant. i. 5. Is. xxi. 16. 17. xlii. 11.

14 And Mishma, and ^a Dumah, and ^z la. xxi. 1. Massah, 15 ^a Hadar, and ^a Tema, Jetur, Na-phish, and Kedemah.

^a Or, Hadad. 1 Chr. i. 30. a Job ii. 11. vi. 19.

16 These are the sons of Ishmael, and these are their names, by their towns, and by their castles; ^b twelve princes according to their nations.

b xvii. 20. B C. 1773

17 And ^c these are the years of the life of Ishmael, an hundred and thirty and seven years: and he gave up the ghost and died, and was gathered unto his people.

c 7, 8

18 And they dwelt from ^d Havilah unto Shur, that is before Egypt, ^e as thou goest ^f towards Assyria: and he ^f died ^g in the presence of all his brethren.

d ii. 11. x. 7. 29. xx. 1. 1 Sam. xv. 7. c xlii. 10. f 2 Kings xxiii. 29. Is. xix. 23, 24. † Heb. fell. g xvi. 12.

19 ¶ And these are the generations of Isaac, Abraham's son: ^h Abraham begat Isaac.

h 1 Chr. i. 34. Matt. i. 2. Luke iii. 34. Acts vii. 8.

20 And Isaac was forty years old ⁱ when he took Rebekah to wife, the daughter of Bethuel ^k the Syrian of Padan-aram, the sister to Laban the Syrian.

i xxii. 23. xxiv. 67. k xxviii. 5, 6. xxxi. 18. 20, 24. xxxv. 9. Dent. xxvi. 5.

21 And Isaac ^l intreated the LORD for his wife, ^m because she was barren: and the LORD was intreated of him, ⁿ and Rebekah his wife conceived.

l 1 Sam. i. 11. 27. Luke i. 13. m xi. 30. xv. 2, 3. xvi. 2. xvii. 16—19. 1 Sam. i. 2. Luke i. 7.

22 And the children struggled ton Rom. ix. 10—12.

though not admitted to the full privilege of that relation, in respect of rank and possessions, as Keturah. Ishmael was one of the sons here mentioned; and we may hence infer, that he was not sent away destitute, or finally deserted by Abraham.

V. 7, 8. The sacred historian here concludes the history of Abraham, to prevent the subsequent interruption of his narrative; for Esau and Jacob were born fifteen years before the death of Abraham.—The word, rendered “Gave up the ghost,” means no more than expired, or ceased to breathe. A Greek word of similar import is used concerning Ananias and Sapphira: but the words of one Evangelist concerning our Lord signify, that “he yielded up his spirit.” (Matt. xxvii. 50.)—The words, of years, are not in the original; and the term employed seems to denote, that Abraham was satisfied with living in this world, and ripe for a better.—The expression, “gathered to his people,” decides nothing concerning the eternal state of the persons spoken of, being used without any exact discrimination of characters. (Marg. Ref. o.)

V. 9, 10. It is probable, that Isaac and Ishmael maintained a degree of friendly intercourse with each other; and that Ishmael was satisfied the inheritance belonged to Isaac, as the son of Sarah, and that his father had acted properly in leaving it to him.

V. 11. God blessed Isaac with that special blessing, which had been engaged to his believing father.

V. 16. The Ishmaelites were settled in towns and castles, when Moses wrote this history; and probably had been so a long time before the descendants of Isaac were delivered out of Egypt.

V. 18. The Ishmaelites inhabited the country to the east and south of Judea, from the entrance into Egypt almost to the river Euphrates: perhaps the direct road, from Egypt to Assyria, lay through their country. Thus Ishmael's lot fell among his brethren, Abraham's sons by Keturah, who probably survived him; and he died surrounded by them and their descendants.

V. 20, 21. The faith of Isaac was tried by the barrenness of Rebekah during twenty years, as that of Abraham and Sarah had been for a much longer time; but Isaac, depending on the promise of an innumerable posterity, ceased not to intreat the Lord to remove this hindrance to its fulfilment; and at length his prayer was answered.

V. 22, 23. The extraordinary sensations, experienced by Rebekah, convinced her that there was something supernatural in her case.—She therefore said, “If so, why is it thus with me?” ‘This must be enquired into.’ Abraham was yet living, and was a prophet; and probably he directed her in enquiring of the Lord; but the particular method used on this occasion is not recorded. She however received for answer, that two nations, and two manner of people, were in her womb; namely, the Israelites, and the Edomites or Idumeans, being then in their con-gether within her: and she said, If it be so, why am I thus? And she went to enquire of the LORD.

o 1 Sam. ix. 9. x. 22. xxviii. 6. xxx. 5.

23 And the LORD said unto her, Two nations are in thy womb, and two manner of people shall be separated from thy bowels: and the one people shall be stronger than the other people, and the elder shall serve the younger.

p xvii. 16. xxiv. 60. q 27. xxxii. 6. xxxiii. 3. xxxvi. 31. Num. xx. 14.

24 And when her days to be delivered were fulfilled, behold, there were twins in her womb.

r xxvii. 29. 40. 2 Sam. viii. 14. 1 Kings xxii. 47. 2 Chr. xxv. 11. 12. Ps. lx. 8, 9. lxxxiii. 5—15. Is. xxxiv. lxiii. 1—6. Jer. xlix. 7. 22. Ez. xxxv. 12—14. xxxv. Am. i. 11. 12. Ob. 1—16. Mal. i. 2—4. Rom. ix. 10—13.

25 And the first came out red, all over like an hairy garment: and they called his name Esau.

s xxvii. 11. 23.

26 And after that came his brother out, and his hand took hold on Esau's heel; and his name was called Jacob: and Isaac was three-score years old when she bare them.

t xxxviii. 28—30.

u Hos. xii. 3.

x xxvii. 85. B. C. 1837. v. 20.

27 And the boys grew: and Esau was a cunning hunter, a man of the z x. 9. xxi. 20. xxvii. 3—5. 40.

mon parents, Jacob and Esau. They were men of very opposite dispositions, and their descendants were as dissimilar; they personally struggled hard for the pre-eminence, and so did their posterity during many ages. In the days of David, the descendants of Esau, the elder brother, were generally subject to those of Jacob the younger; and much more entirely in the latter times of the Jewish state.—These struggles may be considered as an emblem of the conflict between the world and the true church of God, the seed of the serpent and the Seed of the woman; in which the church, which is the younger, after many struggles, will gain a final mastery. (Note, iii. 14, 15.)—The conflict, between “that which is born of the flesh,” and “that which is born of the Spirit,” in the true believer, is of the same nature, and will have a similar event. (Notes, John iii. 7, 8; Gal. v. 16—18.)

V. 25, 26. Esau signifies made, or formed.—‘He was as full of hairs when he was born, as others are at man’s estate.’ Bp. Patrick. Jacob, even at his birth, seemed to struggle for the primogeniture, which was an indication of his subsequent conduct. His name was given him with evident allusion to this circumstance; and signifies a supplanter, or one who throws down another, by taking hold of his heel.

V. 27. Esau hunted the beasts of the forest with dexterity and address; till probably, like Nimrod, he became a warrior and conqueror: accordingly, when he met his brother, he had with him four hundred men. But Jacob was a plain man dwelling in tents; an industrious, honest, pious character: “a stranger and pilgrim” in his spirit, and a shepherd all his days.

V. 28. (Notes, xxvii.)—Venison.] That which is taken in hunting. (Onpa. Sept.)

V. 30. Edom signifies red, and is nearly the same as field; and Jacob was a plain man, dwelling in tents.

a xxviii. 10, 11. xxxd. 39—41. xlvi. 34. b Heb. xi. 9.

28 And Isaac loved Esau, because he did eat of his venison: but Rebekah loved Jacob.

* Heb. venison was in his mouth. xxvii. 4. 19.

29 ¶ And Jacob sold pottage: and Esau came from the field, and he was faint.

c Judg. vii. 4, 5. 1 Sam. xiv. 28. 31. Is. xl. 30, 31.

30 And Esau said to Jacob, Feed me, I pray thee, with that same red pottage; for I am faint: therefore was his name called Edom.

† Heb. with that red, with that red pottage.

31 And Jacob said, Sell me this day thy birth-right.

d xxxvi. 1. 9. 43. Ez. xv. 15. Num. xx. 14—21. Deut. xxiii. 7. 2 Kings viii. 20.

32 And Esau said, Behold, I am at the point to die: and what profit shall this birth-right do to me?

e Heb. going to die. Job xxi. 15. xxii. 17. xxxiv. 9. Mal. iii. 14.

33 And Jacob said, Swear to me this day: and he sware unto him: and he sold his birth-right unto Jacob.

f xxiv. 3. Mark vi. 23. Heb. vi. 10. g xxvii. 36. xxxvi. 6, 7.

34 Then Jacob gave Esau bread and pottage of lentiles: and he did eat and drink, and rose up, and went his way: thus Esau despised his birth-right.

h Is. xxii. 13. 1 Cor. xv. 32. i Zech. xi. 13. Matt. xxii. 5. Luke xiv. 18—20. Phil. iii. 18, 19. Heb. xii. 16, 17.

Adam. (Note, v. 1, 2.) This name was given Esau, because he so eagerly desired the red pottage of Jacob.

V. 31—34. As it does not appear, that Jacob inherited a double portion of Isaac’s substance, it is probable this was not meant by the birth-right. But it included the special blessings covenanted to Abraham and his posterity; not only in respect of the land of Canaan, but also in respect of the Messiah, who would arise from among them, and all the religious advantages connected with this distinction. These blessings, Jacob as a believer supremely valued; but unbelieving Esau despised them.—It cannot be conceived, that Esau was literally dying of hunger, nor would the transaction have been so severely condemned had this been so. He had indeed come in from hunting, in the field, where he had continued till he was faint for want of refreshment: but doubtless, other food might have been procured in Isaac’s family, had he not inordinately craved Jacob’s pottage, which he probably saw as soon as he entered the house, and determined at any rate to obtain. The words signify, ‘I am going towards death;’ and he seems to have meant, ‘I shall never live to inherit Canaan, or any of these future supposed blessings; and what signifies it who has them when I am dead?’ This was the language of profaneness, for which the Apostle condemns him; and it implied, a great contempt of the birth-right, which the historian notes with decided censure. (Note, Heb. xii. 15—17.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—18.

By repeated examples the Lord teaches us, that he tries the faith of his people by long delays; but at length vastly exceeds their expectations, by fulfilling to them his largest promises.—“The vision is for an appointed time, but at

CHAP. XXVI.

Isaac, because of a famine, sojourns in Gerar; and the Lord instructs and blesses him, 1—5. He denies his wife, and is detected and reprov'd, 6—11. The Philistines envy his prosperity; he removes from them, and they fill up, or take from him, the wells which his father and he had dug, 12—17. He digs several other wells, 18—22. The Lord blesses him at Beer-sheba, 23—25. Abimelech covenants with him, 26—33. Esau marries two Canaanitish wives, to the grief of his parents, 34, 35.

AND there was a famine in the land, besides ^a the first famine that was in the days of Abraham. ^b And Isaac went unto ^c Abimelech king of the Philistines, unto Gerar.

² And the LORD ^d appeared unto him, and said, Go not down into Egypt;

^e dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of.

³ 'Sojourn in this land, and ^f I will be with thee, and will bless thee: for ^g unto thee and unto thy seed I will give all these countries, and will perform the ^h oath which I swore unto Abraham thy father.

⁴ And I will make thy seed to ^k multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries: and in thy ⁱ Seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed:

⁵ Because that Abraham ^m obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws.

⁶ ¶ And Isaac dwelt in Gerar.

a xii. 10
b xxv. 11.
c xx. 2.
d xii. 7. xvii. 1.

e xii. 1. Ps. xxxvii. 3.
f xx. 1. Ps. xxxix. 12. Heb. xi. 9. 13—16.
g xxviii. 15. xxxix. 2. 21. Phil. iv. 9.
h xii. 7. xiii. 15. 17. xv. 18. xvii. 8.
i xxii. 16. 18. Ps. cv. 9. Heb. vi. 17.
k xiii. 16. xv. 5. xxii. 17. Heb. xi. 12.
l xii. 8. xxii. 19. Ps. lxxii. 17. Acts iii. 25. Gal. iii. 8. 16.
m xii. 4. xvii. 23. xxviii. 19. xxii. 18. Ps. cxii. 1. 2. Matt. v. 19. vii. 24. Gal. v. 6. Heb. xi. 8. Jam. ii. 22.

“the end it shall speak and not lie; though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry.”

Hab. ii. 3.—A great part of this history relates to those who go off, and those who appear on, the stage of life; and it is of little consequence, whether our continuance on this grand theatre be short or long, provided we act in such a manner, as to quit the world with comfort to ourselves, with benefit to others, and with the approbation of our gracious God. Only let us be anxious to leave behind us a testimony from our lips to the faithfulness and goodness of the Lord, and in the consciences of others, to the uprightness and consistency of our walk before him; and the blessing of God to our families. Having then lived to every good purpose, and being ripe for the world above, we may cheerfully resign our souls into the hands of our Redeemer, expecting to join “the spirits of just men made perfect;” and leave our bodies to the silent tomb, in joyful hope of a happy resurrection. But God forbid, that the writer or any of the readers of these observations, should rest contented with earthly blessings, which the Lord bestows on the men of this world; or should come short of those special and eternal blessings, which belong to the children of the promise! Though the former seem to have the pre-eminence here, yet the latter will have their portion, when that of the former is spent and gone for ever.

V. 19—34.

They who are stirred up, by the delays of promised and expected blessings, to “pray always and not faint,” will surely succeed; for “every one that asketh receiveth,” though perhaps not immediately.—In all our doubts and perplexities, we should enquire of the Lord by prayer, attendance on his ordinances, and attention to his word: and in many of our conflicts and struggles with sin and temptations, we may adopt Rebekah’s words: “If it be so, why am I thus?” “If a child of God, why so careless or carnal? If not a child of God, why so afraid of sin or burdened with it?”—In the best of characters we perceive infirmities, and in the best of parents sinful partialities; but surely those children are entitled to our superior regard, who are evidently beloved of the Lord!—Men, who are slaves to their appetites, and who inordinately crave earthly things, and despise spiritual blessings, will, however sagacious in other respects, find themselves infinitely excelled in wisdom by those, who “choose that good part which shall never be taken from them.” But, while we should be of Jacob’s judgment in preferring the birth-right, we ought carefully to avoid all approaches to imposition, in seeking to obtain the most important advantages; and even the appearance of being a supplanter, should be shunned with scrupulous vigilance.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXVI. V. 1. Abraham sojourned in Gerar just before the birth of Isaac, and soon after entered into a treaty with Abimelech; and Isaac was sixty years of age when his sons were born, and a hundred when Esau married. (34.) Esau and Jacob are spoken of in the close of the former chapter, as grown up. The transaction, therefore, recorded in this chapter, must have been at least ninety years after the former covenant.—It is probable that Abimelech, (which signifies ‘my father the king,’) was the common name of the kings of the Philistines; and that this Abimelech was a successor to him with whom Abraham covenanted. (Note, Ps. xxxiv. title.)

V. 2—5. Abraham had gone down into Egypt during a famine, and we may suppose that Isaac was purposing to do the same; but God commanded him to dwell in some part of the land of Canaan, according to such intimations as should from time to time be given him. For the present he was directed to sojourn in the country of the Philistines: and the Lord promised to be with him, to supply his wants, and to protect and comfort him; and he renewed the promises, which had been repeatedly ratified to Abraham. God thus testified his approbation of Abraham’s remarkable obedience, for the honour of his own name, and the encouragement of Isaac, and of others in every age and nation. This obedience likewise conduced to the fulfilment of the promises. It was the evidence of that faith, by which Abraham was justified; and, in consequence of his prompt obedience, the covenant respecting his seed was confirmed to him by an oath.—The several expressions

7 And the men of the place asked ⁿ him of his wife; and he said, ⁿ She is my sister: for he feared to say, She is my wife; lest, said he, the men of the place should kill me for Rebekah, because she was ^o fair to look upon.

8 And it came to pass, when he had been there a long time, that Abimelech king of the Philistines looked out at ^p a window, and saw, and behold, Isaac was ^q sporting with Rebekah his wife.

9 And Abimelech called Isaac, and said, Behold, of a surety, she is thy wife: and how saidst thou, She is my sister? And Isaac said unto him, Because I said, Lest I die for her.

10 And Abimelech said, ^c What is this thou hast done unto us? one of the people might lightly have lien with thy wife, and thou shouldest have brought guiltiness upon us.

11 And Abimelech charged all his people, saying, He that ^o toucheth this man or his wife, shall surely be put to death.

12 ¶ Then Isaac sowed in that land, and ^o received in the same year [†] an hundred-fold, and the LORD ^o blessed him.

13 And the man waxed great, and ^u went forward, and grew until he became very great.

14 For he had ^x possession of flocks, and possession of herds, and great store of ^y servants. And the Philistines ^z envied him.

15 For all the wells which ^z his father's servants had digged, in the days of Abraham his father, the Philistines had stopped them, and filled them with earth.

16 And Abimelech said unto Isaac, Go from us: for thou art much ^a mightier than we.

17 And Isaac departed thence, and pitched his tent in the valley of Gerar, and dwelt there.

18 ¶ And Isaac digged again the wells of water, which they had digged in the days of Abraham his father; for the Philistines had stopped them, after the death of Abraham: and he called their names after the names by which his father had called them.

19 And Isaac's servants digged in the valley, and found there a well of [†] springing water.

20 And the herdmen of Gerar did strive with Isaac's herdmen, saying, The water is ours: and he called the name of the well [†] Esck, because they strove with him.

21 And they digged another well, and strove for that also: And he called the name of it [†] Sitnah.

n xii. 13. xx. 2. 5.
3. Prov. xxix.
25.

o cxiv. 16.

p Judg. v. 29. Prov.
vii. 6. Cant. ii.
9.

q Prov. v. 18, 19.
Ec. ix. 9.

c xii. 19 xx 9 10.

o xx. 6 Ps. cv. 15.
Prov. vi. 29.
Zech. ii. 8.

o Heb. found.
† Ps. lxxii. 16. Ec.
xi. 6. Zech. viii.
12. Matt. xiii.
28. 1 Cor. iii. 6.
2 Cor. ix. 10, 11.
Gal. vi. 7, 8.

u 29. xxx. 30. Job
xlii. 12. Prov. x.
22.

† Heb. went going.

x Job i. 3 Ps. cxii.
3.

z Or, husbandry.
y xxxvii. 11. Job
v. 2. Ps. cxii.
10. Prov. xxvii.
4. Ec. iv. 4
z xxi. 30.

a Ex. i. 9.

† Heb. living.
Cant. iv. 15.
John iv. 10, 11.

† That is, Contention.

* That is, Hatred.

made use of seem to refer to Abraham's unreserved obedience, in leaving his native country, sojourning in Canaan, offering sacrifices, being circumcised, and circumcising his sons and servants, and at length intentionally sacrificing Isaac, at God's command; as well as to his general course of piety, righteousness, and holiness.—As "Abraham was justified by faith," which referred to the righteousness of Christ; so the Lord's blessing Isaac for Abraham's sake, was virtually blessing him through the Redeemer.—The principle of blessing some for the sake of others, seems to have been intended to prepare men's minds for receiving the blessings of salvation, not as due to them, but as given for the sake of the divine Saviour.

V. 7. (Notes, xii. 10—20. xx.) The questions of the men of Gerar excited Isaac's apprehensions: his answer contained a more direct falsehood than that used by Abraham; and his unbelief was the more inexcusable, because he lived in Gerar by God's express command, and under his immediate protection.

V. 8. A long time.] Without interruption, which shewed that Isaac's suspicions were injurious to the Philistines.

V. 11. Probably Abimelech recollected the reproof and correction, which had been incurred on Abraham's account, in similar circumstances.

V. 12. An hundred-fold.] If this be the meaning of the passage, (for it is not without difficulty,) it was an extraordinary increase, and an evident effect of the divine blessing. In many parts of this land, with all our improvements in agriculture, an ordinary crop of grain is very seldom known to exceed twenty-fold; and much more frequently, without any remarkable mismanagement or disaster, to come short of ten-fold clear increase upon the seed sown.—^c And he found the barley increased unto him 'an hundred-fold in that year.' Sept.

V. 13—16. The conduct of the Philistines was a direct infringement of the covenant, which Abimelech had made with Abraham; but Isaac's prosperity excited their envy and jealousy, which induced forgetfulness of all moral obligations.

V. 17. Valley of Gerar.] Upon the borders of Abimelech's kingdom.

V. 21. Sitnah.] Hatred, (marg.) or opposition. Ezra iv. 6. Heb. The name Satan, an adversary, is derived from the same root.

22 And he removed from thence, and digged another well; and for that they strove not: and he called the name of it * Rehoboth; and he said, For now ^b the LORD hath made room for us, and we shall be fruitful in the land.

23 And he went up from thence to ^c Beer-sheba.

24 And the LORD appeared unto him the same night, and said, ^d I am the God of Abraham thy father: ^e fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed, for my servant Abraham's sake.

25 And he ^f builded an altar there, and called upon the name of the LORD, and pitched his tent there: and there Isaac's servants digged a well.

26 ¶ Then ^g Abimelech went to him from Gerar, and Ahuzzath one of his friends, and Phicol the chief captain of his army.

27 And Isaac said unto them, Wherefore come ye to me, ^h seeing ye hate me, and have sent me away from you?

28 And they said, ⁱ We saw certainly that the LORD was with thee; and we said, ^j Let there be now an oath betwixt us, even betwixt us and thee, and let us make a covenant with thee;

29 ^k That thou wilt do us no hurt, as we have not touched thee, and as we have done unto thee nothing but good, and have sent thee away in peace: thou art now ^l the blessed of the LORD.

30 And he ^m made them a feast, and they did eat and drink.

31 And they rose up ⁿ betimes in the morning, and swarc one to another: and Isaac sent them away, and they departed from him in peace.

32 And it came to pass the same day, that Isaac's servants came, and told him concerning the well which they had digged, and said unto him, We have found water.

33 And he called it ^o Shebah: therefore the name of the city is ^p Beer-sheba unto this day.

34 ¶ And Esau was forty years old when he took to wife Judith, ^q the daughter of Beeri the Hittite, and Bashemath the daughter of Elon the Hittite:

35 ^r Which were a ^s grief of mind unto Isaac and Rebekah.

* That is, Room.

b Ps. iv. 1. xviii. 9. cxviii. 5.

c xxx. 31. xlvi.

d xv. 1. xvii. 7. xxiv. 12. xxviii. 13. Ex. iii. 6. Matt. xxii. 32. Acts vii. 32.

e Ps. xxxvii. 1. xlv. 1. 2. Is. xli. 2. xlii. 10. 14. Il. 7. 12. Luke xii. 32. Heb. xiii. 6.

f viii. 20. xii. 7. xxxv. 1. Ex. xvii. 15.

g xxi. 22—32

h Judg. xi. 7. Acts vii. 9. 14. 35. Rev. iii. 9.

i Heb. Seeing we hate.

j xxxi. 49—53.

k Heb. If thou shalt, &c.

l xxiv. 31. Ps. cxv. 15. xxxi. 54. Rom. xii. 18. Heb. xii. 14. 1 Pet. iv. 9.

m xxii. 3.

o That is, on oath.

p That is, the well of the oath.

q n xxiv. 3. Ex. xxxiv. 16.

r o vi. 2. xxvii. 46. xxviii. 2. 8. * Heb. bitterness of spirit.

V. 22. The piety of the language, here used in the ordinary concerns of life, is worth noticing and imitating.

V. 24. Fear not.] 'Be not afraid of the envy or enmity of the Philistines.' (Marg. Ref.)

V. 26. Phicol.] This seems to have been the name of some dignity among the Philistines; for probably Phicol, who came with Abimelech to Abraham on a similar occasion, was dead before this time. (xxi. 22. 32.)

V. 29—31. The Philistines attempted to justify their conduct, though indeed they had acted deceitfully and unjustly, and in a manner wholly inexcusable; but Isaac, loving peace, admitted their plea without altercation.

V. 35. 'And they were quarrelling with Isaac and Rebekah.' Sept.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—11.

Repeated famines in "the land of promise" taught the patriarchs, and uneasiness in the most eligible situations should teach us, to look to the heavenly inheritance for unalloyed felicity. Yet they are happy, even on earth, who are guided by JEHOVAH's counsel, upheld and protected by his power, encouraged by his presence, and assured of an interest in his everlasting love. If he engage to be with us, and if we abide in our proper place, nothing but unbelief and distrust can prevent our comfort.—The blessing which descends upon posterity in answer to prayer, as the effect of wholesome instructions and a good example, and as a gracious recompence of the obedience of faith, is unspeakably preferable to any other riches which can be left them. "The righteous LORD loveth "righteousness," and will shew his love of it by abundantly rewarding the good works of his believing people.—But alas! it is far more natural and easy to imitate the faults of eminent characters, than their faith and holiness; and too many conclude, that they may venture on improper conduct, because pious persons have been betrayed into it. How careful therefore should we be, not to sanction transgression, or give force to temptation, by our example! 'The falls of them who have gone before us are 'as so many rocks, on which others have split; and the 'recording of them, is like placing buoys over them, for 'the security of future mariners.' Fuller. Such examples also shew, that righteousness cometh not by the law, but by the faith of Christ.—Let us, however, imitate the conduct of Abimelech, in seriously reproving Isaac, and in returning good for evil. It may also be proper to enquire whether his abhorrence of adultery will not rise up in judgment "against such a nation as this," or at least against very many of its inhabitants, its nobles, and princes.

V. 12—35.

The Lord detects and reproves his offending servants, but he also pardons and blesses them. His blessing maketh rich, and the increase of the earth is his gift: but riches generally excite envy, suspicion, and jealousy; and we may very often call our worldly acquisitions, (as Isaac

CHAP. XXVII.

Isaac when old sends Esau to take venison, intending to bless him, 1—4. Rebekah instructs Jacob how to secure the blessing, and over-rules his objections, 5—13. The stratagem succeeds, and Isaac blesses Jacob, supposing him to be Esau, 14—29. Esau afterwards arrives, complains bitterly, and by importunity obtains a blessing, 30—40. Esau purposes to murder Jacob, who is sent away to Mesopotamia, 41—46.

AND it came to pass that when Isaac was old, and his eyes were ^a dim, so that he could not see, he called Esau his eldest son, and said unto him, My son: and he said unto him, Behold here am I.

2 And he said, Behold now, I am old, ^b I know not the day of my death. 3 Now therefore ^c take, I pray thee, thy weapons, thy quiver, and thy bow, and go out to the field, and ^d take me some venison;

^a xviii. 10. Sam. iii. 2. Ec. xii. 3.

^b xlviii. 21. Prov. xxvii. 1. Ec. ix. 10. Is. xxxviii. 1. Jam. iv. 14.

^c x. 9. xxv. 27, 28.

^d Heb. hunt.

4 And make me savoury meat, such as I love, and bring it to me, that I may eat; ^e that my soul may bless thee before I die.

5 And Rebekah heard when Isaac spake to Esau his son: and Esau went to the field to hunt for venison, and to bring it.

6 ¶ And Rebekah spake unto Jacob her son, saying, Behold, I heard thy father speak unto Esau thy brother, saying,

7 Bring me venison, and make me savoury meat, that I may eat, and bless thee ^f before the LORD before my death.

8 Now therefore, my son, ^g obey my voice, according to that which I command thee.

9 Go now to the flock, and fetch me from thence ^h two good kids of the goats; and I will make them savoury meat for thy father, such as he loveth.

^e 7. xviii. 9. 13—20. xlix. 28. Deut. xxxiii. 1. &c. Luke xxiv. 51. Heb. xi. 29.

^f Josh. vi. 26. I Sam. xxvi. 19. f 13. Acts iv. 19. v. 29. Eph. vi. 1.

^g Judg. xiii. 15. I Sam. xvi. 20.

did his wells,) contention and enmity.—"The spirit that is "in us lusteth to envy;" and, while we watch and pray against it in ourselves, we shall avoid whatever may needlessly excite it in others; for when once it is kindled, none can tell, what malice and mischief it may occasion.—As Isaac constantly chose to reside near a well, so we should give up many other advantages, in order to be near the ordinances of God. Many will try to deprive us of these "wells of salvation:" but we must contend for them earnestly, yet meekly; and endeavour to preserve for our children, the religious privileges which we have received from our fathers.—In other things, "the wisdom which is "from above" will teach us to recede from our right, and retire from the contentious; and if we are injuriously driven from one place, the Lord will make room for us in another, and recompense us with the assurance and consolations of his love. Yea, he will "make our enemies "to be at peace with us," and to court our friendship, acknowledging that he loveth us: and we should always shew ourselves disposed to reconciliation and hospitality.—We must, however, have some trial to counterbalance each comfort: yet children are highly culpable, who by their sins grieve the hearts of their pious and affectionate parents: nor has any thing been more generally the bane of domestick happiness, as well as of piety, than unhal- lowed marriages, and the practice of polygamy.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXVII. V. 1. The subsequent narrative shews, that Joseph was born about fourteen years after the events recorded in this chapter. (xxix. 20. 30. xxx. 24—26.) Joseph was thirty years of age when he stood before Pharaoh; (xli. 46;) and after the seven years of plenty, and two or three years of famine, Jacob told Pharaoh that he was a hundred and thirty. (xlvii. 9.) Jacob must have been about ninety when Joseph was born, and about seventy-five at this time; and as Isaac was sixty when Esau and Jacob were born, he must have been about a hundred and thirty-five or six years of age. Since Esau married his two wives, thirty-five or six years had elapsed, concerning which nothing is recorded.

V. 2. Isaac deemed it best to settle his domestick concerns, that he might not have encumbrances of that kind to discompose him at the solemn season of death, which his infirmities led him continually to expect. Yet he lived almost forty-four years longer.

V. 3, 4. As this preparation was not intended for a publick feast, but merely for a private, self-indulgent meal, it must be considered as, in some degree, a carnal introduction to the spiritual blessing, which Isaac purposed to pronounce: a solemn sacrifice would have been much more consistent with his character, and more suitable to the occasion. (7.)—Isaac's partiality for Esau, and the custom of regarding the elder brother as the heir, led him to forget, misunderstand, or disregard, the answer which the Lord had formerly given Rebekah on this subject. (xxv. 23.)

V. 6—10. Rebekah was sensible that Isaac was about to act improperly; for she knew that the blessing was intended for Jacob, and expected that he would have it. But she ought either calmly to have argued the case and expostulated with Isaac; or, if that appeared inexpedient, to have committed the matter to the Lord by prayer, and by no means to have used any artifice on such an occasion. She indeed did no wrong to Esau in regard to the birth-right; as both the purpose of God, and his own agreement, ratified with an oath, deprived him of all claim to it: (Notes, xxv. 22, 33. 31—34:) but she injured Isaac, by practising an imposition upon him; and Jacob, by using her authority and persuasions to tempt him to sin. She also dishonoured the power and faithfulness of God, by supposing that he needed such means of effecting his

10 And thou shalt bring it to thy father, that he may eat, and that he may bless thee before his death.

11 And Jacob said to Rebekah his mother, Behold, Esau my brother is a hairy man, and I am a smooth man.

12 My father peradventure will feel me, and I shall seem to him as ^la deceiver; ^k and I shall bring a curse upon me, and not a blessing.

13 And his mother said unto him, ^l Upon me be thy curse, my son: only obey my voice, and go fetch me them.

14 And he went, and fetched, and brought them to his mother: and his mother ^m made savoury meat, such as his father loved.

15 And Rebekah took ^{*} goodly raiment of her eldest son Esau, which were with her in the house, and put them upon Jacob her younger son.

16 And she put the skins of the kids of the goats upon his hands, and upon the smooth of his neck.

17 And she gave the savoury meat, and the bread which she had prepared, into the hand of her son Jacob.

18 ¶ And he came unto his father, and said, My father: And he said, Here am I: who art thou, my son?

19 And Jacob said unto his father, ⁿ I am Esau thy first-born; I have done according as thou badest me: arise, I pray thee, sit and eat of my venison, that thy soul may bless me.

20 And Isaac said unto his son, How is it that thou hast found it so quickly, my son? And he said, ^o Because the LORD thy God brought it [†] to me.

21 And Isaac said unto Jacob, Come near, I pray thee, that I may feel thee, my son, whether thou be my very son Esau, or not.

22 And Jacob went near unto Isaac his father; and he felt him, and said, The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau.

23 And he discerned him not, because his hands were hairy, as his brother Esau's hands. So he blessed him.

24 And he said, Art thou my very son Esau? And he said, ^p I am.

25 And he said, Bring it near to me, and I will eat of my son's venison, that my soul may bless thee. And he brought it near to him, and he did eat: and he brought him wine, and he drank.

26 And his father Isaac said unto him, Come near now, and kiss me, my son.

27 And he came near, and kissed him: and he smelled the smell of his raiment, and blessed him, and said, See, ^q the smell of my son is as the smell of a field, ^r which the LORD hath blessed.

h xxv 25

i 36. xxv 27.
l Thea. v. 22.
k ix 25. Dent.
xxvii. 18. Mal. i 14.

i xxv 23, 23. 1 Sam.
xiv. 24—28. 36—
45. 2 Sam. xiv.
9. Matt. xxvii.
25.

m 4. 7. 9. 17. 31.
xxv. 28. Ps. cxli.
4. Prov. xxiii. 2,
3.
• Heb. desirable.
27

n 21. 24 xxix 23
—25. 1 Kings xlii.
18 xiv. 2. Zech.
xiii. 3. 4. Matt.
xxvi. 70—74.

o Ex. xx. 7.

† Heb. before me.

p 1 Sam. xxi. 2. 13.
xxvii. 10. 2 Sam.
xiv. 5. Job xlii.
7. 8. xv. 5. Prov.
xii. 19. 22. xxx.
8. Rom. iii. 7.
8. Eph. iv. 26.

q Cant. ii. 13. iv.
11—14. vii. 12.
13. Hos. xiv. 6.
r xxvi. 12. Heb.
vi. 7.

purpose and fulfilling his promise. Nay, by exciting Jacob to act so treacherous a part, she even threw a stumbling block in Esau's way; and furnished him with a plausible pretext for his enmity, not only against his brother, but also against religion.

V. 11—14. Jacob objected to the proposed measure as impolitical; and feared that he should be detected, and put to shame, for trying to impose on his father by means of his infirmities; and that he should thus provoke him to pronounce a curse on him instead of a blessing: but he does not seem to have been in any degree properly impressed with the sense of the exceedingly great criminality of the attempt. And Rebekah, (who, from her confidence that Jacob would obtain the blessing, was encouraged to urge him to commit evident sin,) in engaging to take the consequences on herself, acted too much like those persons who are bold in transgression, because "God is rich in mercy." Thus they both contracted deep guilt, for which they were afterwards sharply chastised; yet the purposes of God were accomplished, even by means of their misconduct.

V. 16. The animals, in those hot climates, are not covered with so thick a coat of hair, as they are in more northerly regions.

V. 19, 20. Jacob not only told the most palpable falsehoods on this occasion, but directly profaned the name of the Lord in his answer to Isaac's enquiry; and thus made religion the cloke of his dissimulation!

V. 21—23. Isaac no doubt would have rejoiced to hear Esau use the language of piety, as Jacob had affected to do: yet this circumstance seems to have concurred in exciting his suspicions. But as his eyes failed him, he distrusted his ears also; and thus the plan of Rebekah succeeded.—How wonderful is that difference, which there is betwixt the faces and the voices of the several individuals of the human species! Scarcely any two of the innumerable millions are exactly alike in either, and yet the difference cannot be defined or described! The power, wisdom, and kindness of our Creator should be admired and adored in this remarkable circumstance; for they are very visible.—This description of Jacob is not unaptly accommodated to the character of a hypocrite: his voice, his language, is that of a Christian; his hands, or conduct, that of an ungodly man: but the judgment will proceed from God the Judge of all, at the last day, as in the present case, not by the voice, but by the hands.

V. 27—29. The hand of God is manifest in this transaction; and the blessing pronounced on Jacob was an evi-

28 Therefore God give thee *of the dew of heaven, and † the fatness of the earth, and † plenty of corn and wine.

29 † Let people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee; † be lord over thy brethren, and let thy mother's sons bow down to thee: † Cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee.

30 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as Isaac had made an end of blessing Jacob, and Jacob was yet scarce gone out from the presence of Isaac his father, that Esau his brother came in from his hunting.

31 And he also had made savoury meat, and brought it unto his father; and said unto his father, Let my father arise, and eat of his son's venison, that thy soul may bless me.

32 And Isaac his father said unto him, Who art thou? And he said, I am thy son, thy first-born Esau.

33 And Isaac * trembled very exceedingly, and said, Who, where is he that hath † taken venison, and brought it me, and I have eaten of all before thou camest, and have blessed him? † yea, and he shall be blessed.

* Heb. trembled with a great trembling greatly. Job xxi. 6, xxxvii. 1. Ps. lv. 5. † Heb. hunted.

34 And when Esau heard the words of his father, † he cried with a great and exceeding bitter cry, and said unto his father, Bless me, even me also, O my father.

35 And he said, † Thy brother came with subtlety, and hath taken away thy blessing.

36 And he said, Is not he rightly named † Jacob? for he hath supplanted me these two times: he took away my birth-right; and behold now he hath taken away my blessing. And he said, Hast thou not reserved a blessing for me?

37 And Isaac answered and said unto Esau, Behold, † I have made him thy lord, and all his brethren have I given to him for servants; and with corn and wine have I † sustained him: and what shall I do now unto thee, my son?

38 And Esau said unto his father, † Hast thou but one blessing, my father? bless me, even me also, O my father. And Esau lifted up his voice, and wept.

a xxviii. 3, 4 Rom. xi. 29 Heb xi. 20

b 1 Sam. xxx. 4. Prov. i. 24-26. xix. 3. Luke xiii. 24-28. Heb xii. 17.

c 19-23. 2 Kings x. 19. Mal. ii. 10 1 Thes. iv. 6.

† That is, a Supplanter. xxv. 31 -34, xxxii. 28. John i. 47.

d 29. xxv. 23. Rom. ix. 10-12.

‡ Or, supported.

e 34. 36. xlix. 28. Is. lxxv. 14. Heb. xii. 17.

dent prophecy, which was fulfilled in the history of the two nations descended from Jacob and Esau: and indeed the language of the original implies this; being literally, "God shall give thee, . . . the people shall serve thee, &c." It is likewise observable, that no explicit mention is made here, as elsewhere, of the promised Seed and of the promised land. Perhaps Isaac was conscious, that these were intended for Jacob, and confined his interpretation of the answer given Rebekah to these particulars; or he deemed that matter determined by the sale of the birth-right; or he knew that Esau did not set much value on the spiritual meaning of the blessing, and therefore couched it in general terms. Indeed, he seems to have spoken with hesitation; yet he was led to use such expressions, as assigned the dominion to Jacob, and conferred on him the substance of the blessings first promised to Abraham. (Note, xii. 1-3.)—Dew, &c. (28.) Marg. Ref. s.—Thy mother's sons. (29.) The sons not only of the same father, as Ishmael was brother to Isaac; but of the same mother also, as Jacob was brother to Esau. Jacob, with his posterity, was especially intended, whom Isaac desired and hoped would be subject to Esau and his posterity; though their mother Rebekah, as he well knew, favoured Jacob.

V. 33. By the unexpected entrance of Esau, and his address and answer, Isaac was exceedingly agitated and alarmed. Various reflections now rushed at once into his mind; and he was convinced that he had been rashly attempting to counteract the appointment of God. The language of this verse most emphatically expresses the confusion into which he was thrown, on perceiving in what manner his intention had been counteracted: but he acquiesced in what had been done, as manifestly the will of God: and indeed he seems to have been directed by the Spirit of prophecy, in thus confirming the blessing to Jacob.

V. 34. Esau was exceedingly grieved and vexed at being thus circumvented and disappointed; and at finding that the providence of God had ratified his former foolish bargain. Perhaps he dreaded some immediate temporal calamity in consequence: yet it is plain that he expressed no proper value for the spiritual blessings of the covenant, made with Abraham and Isaac, which were thus transferred to Jacob.

V. 36. Is not he? &c.] הֲלוֹ אֵינוּ אֵלָיו Or, "Is it because one called his name Jacob?"—Does he act in this manner, because the name Jacob was given him?—See 2 Sam. xxiii. 19. Heb. Esau spoke, as if Jacob had taken away the birth-right by force or fraud; being more disposed to blame his brother than himself.—Jacob.] Note, xxv. 25, 26.

V. 38. If Esau might not have that very blessing, which was promised to Abraham, and then limited to Isaac, and now given to Jacob, and which implied and typified the everlasting blessings which believers have in and by Christ, as descended from Jacob; he earnestly intreated, that he might have an assurance of some blessing, though not exactly of the same kind.

And Esau lifted up, &c.] 'And Isaac being pierced in his heart, (κατανοήσεντος, Acts ii. 37. Gr.) Esau cried out with his voice and wept.' Sept.

39 And Isaac his father answered, and said unto him, 'Behold, thy dwelling shall be *the fatness of the earth, and of the dew of heaven from above.

40 And by ^sthy sword shalt thou live, and shalt ^bserve thy brother: and it shall come to pass when thou shalt have the dominion, that ^lthou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck.

41 ¶ And Esau ^khated Jacob, because of the blessing wherewith his father blessed him: and Esau said in his heart, ^lThe days of mourning for my father are at hand, ^mthen will I slay my brother Jacob.

42 And these words of Esau her elder son were told to Rebekah: And she sent and called Jacob her younger son, and said unto him, Behold, thy brother

Esau, as touching thee, doth ⁿcomfort himself, purposing to kill thee.

43 Now therefore, my son, ^oobey my voice: and arise, flee thou to Laban my brother to ^pHaran.

44 And tarry with him ^qa few days, until thy brother's fury turn away;

45 Until thy brother's anger turn away from thee, and he forget that which thou hast done to him: ^rthen I will send and fetch thee from thence. ^sWhy should I be deprived also of you both in one day?

46 And Rebekah said to Isaac, ^tI am weary of my life, ^ubecause of the daughters of Heth: if Jacob take a wife of the daughters of Heth, such as these which are of the daughters of the land, what good shall my life do me?

V. 39, 40. This blessing was very well suited to Esau's character, and probably would not have been disagreeable to him, had it not been for the clause, "Thou shalt serve thy brother." Yet it was intimated that Esau's posterity would break the yoke, and not serve submissively, but indignantly; and that at some times they would be so powerful as to revolt successfully, though never so as to acquire dominion over the descendants of Jacob. (Marg. Ref.) Probably, the country, in which Esau dwelt, was fertile in his days; but it afterwards became barren. (Note, Mal. i. 2—5.)

V. 41, 42. Jacob had given Esau a plausible pretext for his enmity; yet it originated from the same source, and was of the same nature, as the hatred of Cain to Abel; namely, the piety of Jacob's character, and the evident preference which the Lord had manifested for him.—Esau seems to have retained no regard for Rebekah, whom probably he disliked for her love to Jacob, and for assisting him in procuring the blessing: and therefore, when Isaac should be removed, (which he erroneously supposed would soon take place, Note, 2.) he purposed to slay his brother, whatever anguish his mother might endure. And, it seems, he could not keep his purpose to himself; but told it to others, and thus it came to the ears of Rebekah.

V. 45. Both in one day.] Either by the death of the murderer, by some judgment from God, if human justice reached him not; or by her son Esau's thus becoming so vile, as to be only a trouble and a grief of heart to her.

V. 46. Rebekah, being reluctant to render Isaac's mind more uneasy, did not mention the principal reason of her proposal; but adduced one, which was perfectly consistent with truth, and which gives us a melancholy idea of Esau's two wives, and the effect of this part of his conduct on his father's domestick felicity: for her words imply, that they were still living; though she likewise referred to the general character of the daughters of the land.—What good? " &c." Or, "For what do I live?"

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—29.

What is long life, of which we are naturally so desirous, but surviving our dearest friends and choicest comforts, our capacities of enjoyment, and our very faculties and senses? and what can life then be, but "labour and sorrow?"—We should indeed be willing to live as long as, either by active service or patient suffering, we can glorify God and "serve our generation:" but we should never postpone the necessary preparation for death; and, if ready, we need not be unwilling to quit this vale of tears, whenever the Lord shall call. Nor will the constant expectation of that uncertain hour, or habitual preparation for it, in the least hasten its approach.—The same impartiality, which influenced the inspired writer, requires us to note, that we must not follow the best of men further than they act in conformity to the law of God; and that we meet with many things in this chapter decidedly to condemn and shun: such as, Isaac's partiality for profane Esau, and the unworthy grounds of that preference; his disregard of the divine revelation, and his heedless attempt to disannul the purposes of God; Rebekah's rash project to deceive Isaac, her putting into Jacob's mouth many falsehoods, and urging him to venture on them with her absurd engagement, "Upon me be thy curse, my son;" and Jacob's undertaking and going through with this most fraudulent and disgraceful design. Nor could their faith, or desire of the blessing, justify or excuse, (much less sanctify,) such unlawful means; for "we must not do evil that good may come." We may likewise observe, that the arts of falsehood are soon learned; that one sin makes way for many; and that "a lying lip is but for a moment." Nor can they expect to be treated with candour and truth by others, who do not strictly adhere to veracity themselves. (Notes, xxix. 22, 23. xxxvii. 32.)

V. 30—46.

They, who profanely despise spiritual blessings, may one day bewail their folly, with unavailing lamentations: nay,

CHAP. XXVIII.

Isaac blesses Jacob, and sends him to Padan-aram to take a wife from thence, 1—5. Esau marries Mahalath the daughter of Ishmael, 6—9. Jacob journeys, has a vision of a ladder, sets up a stone as a pillar, calls the place Beth-el, and makes a solemn vow, 10—22.

AND Isaac called Jacob, and ^a blessed him, and charged him, and said unto him, ^b Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan.

2 Arise, go to ^c Padan-aram, to the house of Bethuel thy mother's father; and take thee a wife from thence of the daughters of ^d Laban thy mother's brother.

3 And ^e God Almighty bless thee, and make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, that thou mayest be ^f a multitude of people:

4 And give thee ^g the blessing of Abraham, to thee and to thy seed with thee; that thou mayest inherit the land wherein thou art a stranger, ^h which God gave unto Abraham.

5 And Isaac sent away Jacob, and he went to Padan-aram unto Laban, son of Bethuel the Syrian, the brother of Rebekah, Jacob's and Esau's mother.

6 ¶ When ⁱ Esau saw that Isaac had blessed Jacob, and sent him away to Padan-aram, to take him a wife from thence: and that as he blessed him, he gave him a charge, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan:

7 And ^k that Jacob obeyed his father, and his mother, and was gone to Padan-aram:

8 And Esau seeing that ^l the daughters of Canaan ^m pleased not Isaac his father:

9 Then went Esau ⁿ unto Ishmael, and took unto the wives which he had, ^o Mahalath the daughter of Ishmael Abraham's son, the sister of Nebajoth, to be his wife.

10 ¶ And Jacob went out from Beer-sheba, and ^p went toward ^q Haran.

11 And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set: and he took

^a 3, 4. xxvii. 27—32.

^b xxiv. 3. 37. xxvi. 34. 35. xxvii. 46. xxxiv. 9. 16. Ex. xxxiv. 15. 16. 2 Cor. vi. 14—16.

^c xxii. 20—23. xxiv. 10. 15—24. xxv. 20. xxxi. 18. xxxv. 9. xlvii. 15.

^d xxiv. 29. 50.

^e xvii. 1—6. xxii. 17. 18. xxxv. 11. xliii. 14. xlviii. 3. Ex. vi. 3. 2 Cor. vi. 18. Rev. xxi. 22.

^f i. 23. ix. 1. xxiv. 60. xli. 52. Ps. cxxvii. 3—5.

^g Heb. an assembly of people.

^h xii. 1—3. 7. xv. 3—7. xvii. 6—8. xxii. 17. 18. Gal. iii. 8. 14. Eph. i. 8.

ⁱ Heb. of thy sojournings.

^j xiii. 14—17. xv. 18—21. Ps. cv. 6—12. Heb. xi. 9—13.

^k xxvii. 43. Prov. xxx. 17. Eph. vi. 1—3.

^l xxiv. 3. xxvi. 34. 35. ^m Heb. were eyed in the eyes. 1 Sam. viii. 6. marg.

ⁿ xxv. 13—17. xxxvi. 3.

^o Called also, Bashe-math. xxxvi. 8.

^p xi. 31. Hos. xii. 12.

^q Acts vii. 2. Charan.

^r Matt. viii. 20.

even in this world, there are seasons when the most ungodly perceive and envy, though they will not seek for, the superior felicity of believers.—Impenitent sinners blame any rather than themselves: and, in the abundance of worldly enjoyments, they soon forget the folly and misery of forfeiting spiritual blessings.—A pious man, when reminded and convinced of the will of God, will submit his inclination to it, though before he were otherwise minded.—The wicked indeed, being the seed of the old serpent, implacably and without cause hate the righteous: but sometimes the misconduct of the latter furnishes them with a pretext, and draws forth their enmity into more immediate malice and murder; and it behoves us to be very circumspect, that we may not thus become their tempters.—There is much wickedness in the world; but far more in the heart of man. It is however restrained by fear, natural affection, shame, conscience, or human laws; without which the earth would be a mere field of blood: for that heart must be truly diabolical, which can seek comfort in a brother's murder.—Though the Lord over-ruled the conduct of the parties concerned, in the transactions here recorded, to the accomplishment of his own purposes; yet we may learn his judgment respecting it, from Isaac's trembling and consternation, and the subsequent discord in his family; from the anguish of Rebekah, when she heard of Esau's murderous intentions, and when she parted with her beloved Jacob, probably no more to meet with him on earth; from Jacob's tedious exile, and great and many hardships; and from his fear, long after, that enraged Esau would smite the mother with the children. (lxxxii. 11.)—We would commend Rebekah for her prudent care to prevent the fatal effects of her son's anger, for her tenderness to Isaac, and for her dislike to the ill behaviour of Esau's wives: yet it is hard to express abhorrence of evil, without some mixture of impatience; for life may be valuable and useful, though the world, and even our near relatives, be wicked and ungrateful.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXVIII. V. 2. Bethuel.] Bethuel had been long dead, but Jacob was directed to go to his family and descendants.

V. 3, 4. Isaac at this time deliberately confirmed the blessing before pronounced on Jacob; lest it should not be deemed valid, seeing it had been obtained by fraud.—And it is remarkable, that he more explicitly, than before, mentions the blessings which God gave to Abraham and his seed, as thus pledged to Jacob.—The original is, “God almighty shall bless thee;” being the language of prophecy, rather than of prayer. (Note, xxvii. 27—29.)

V. 9. Ishmael had been dead some time, but Esau went to his family. It is doubtful whether he would have done right, had he married Ishmael's daughter, first and singly. Probably, some regard to Abraham's God remained in Ishmael's family; yet it did not look well in Esau to unite himself with those who were cast out from the inheritance by God himself: and to marry a descendant of Ishmael, when he had two other wives, was certainly wrong, and wholly contrary to the original institution of marriage.

V. 10, 11. We should not resolve the solitary journey of Jacob, on this occasion, merely into the simplicity of the times: for the servant of Abraham, when he took the of the stones of that place, and put them for his pillows, and lay down in that place to sleep.

12 And ^p he dreamed, and behold, a ladder set upon the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven; and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it.

13 And behold, ^r the LORD stood above it, and said, ^s I am the LORD God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: ^t the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed.

14 And ^u thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth: and thou shalt ^x spread abroad ^y to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south: ^z and in thee and in thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed.

15 And behold, ^a I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land: for I will not leave thee ^a until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of.

16 And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the LORD is in this place; ^b and I knew it not.

17 And ^c he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! this is none other but ^d the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

18 ¶ And Jacob rose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had put ^e for his pillows, and ^f set it up for a pillar, and ^g poured oil upon the top of it.

19 And he called ^h the name of that place ⁱ Beth-el: but the name of that city ^j was called Luz at the first.

same journey on a similar occasion, had a suitable retinue; and probably Isaac was much more wealthy than his father. We may therefore suppose, that the plan was concerted by Rebekah, in order that Jacob might set out, unobserved by Esau, lest he should embrace that opportunity of murdering him; and that Esau's envy and jealousy might not be inflamed, as they would have been, had Jacob been sent away with a suitable attendance; but rather be abated by the consideration of the hardships to which he was exposed: and to shew that he did not, in consequence of the birth-right and blessing, advance any claim to the temporal riches of his father.—Jacob, as a plain man, would have no objection to go unattended and obscure. Yet we must not conclude from the meanness of this night's lodging, that he had not wherewithal to purchase a better: but as night came on, and there was no publick inn nor hospitable person at hand; and as the climate was mild, and the spot pleasant (Note, 19); having taken such refreshment as he had with him, and being weary and of a hardy disposition, he soon composed him to sleep; though in circumstances which we should think neither comfortable nor secure.

V. 12. This ladder seems to have been an emblem of the gracious care, which the God of heaven takes of the inhabitants of the earth, especially of such as fear and trust in him. This is, in many things, carried on by the ministry of holy angels, executing his mandates and reporting their services. (Note, xxiv. 2—9.) But it is vouchsafed to us, only through Jesus Christ, as “God manifest in the flesh,” the Mediator and Advocate for sinners. He is the true Ladder; and Jacob, as well as Abraham, “saw his day and was glad.” (Note, John i. 47—51.)—“It was giving the patriarch a glimpse of that glory, which should be accomplished in his Seed.” Fuller.

V. 13—15. The Lord seems to have appeared to Jacob above the ladder, in some visible form; and, as the God of Abraham and Isaac, he ratified to him in the fullest manner the blessings originally covenanted to them; accompanying this transaction with most encouraging promises, suited to his present circumstances.—He was at this time about seventy-five years of age, and unmarried.

V. 16, 17. Jacob was not ignorant of God's omnipresence, or of his gracious nearness to those who fear him. But, having left his father's house under the rebukes of Providence, probably uneasy in his conscience, and fleeing from the face of enraged Esau; being removed, not only from the company of endeared friends, (of whom ^{5c} he had taken a sorrowful farewell,) but from the ordinances of divine worship; and having nothing before him but a long journey into a strange country; his heart was disquieted within him, and he was ready to say, “I am banished from the sight of thine eyes.” Little expecting the ordinary comforts of religion, he was surprised with this extraordinary visit, and these gracious assurances, which in fact formed a prophetic revelation of the Lord's will to him: and, in a deep sense of his own unworthiness, ashamed of his unbelieving despondency, and in a thankful, reverential acknowledgment of the divine condescension, he thus expressed his mingled affections.—The vision of angels and the display of the divine glory, with the gracious promises which he had received, induced the conviction, that JEHOVAH was present in a special manner in that place, which thus might be considered as “the house of God, and the gate of heaven;” for there He appeared, attended by his angelick retinue.

V. 18. Jacob thus expressed, as well as he was able in his present situation, his willing mind to offer “the sacrifice of praise,” and his desire to keep in remembrance the goodness of the Lord; and to leave a sort of monument, by which the place of this gracious vision might be readily known, when he should return to perform his vows. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 19. It seems that there was even then a city near the place, though Jacob did not go to it.—Luz] ¹⁹ לוז. This word is rendered hazel, xxx. 37, where alone it occurs in the Hebrew.—Probably the spot was remarkable for the p xv. 1. 12. xx. 6, 7. xxxvii. 5—11. xl. xli. Num. xii. 6. Job iv. 12—21. xxxiii. 15, 16. Dan. ii. iv. vii. 1. Matt. i. 20. ii. 12, 13, 19. q xxxii. 1. 2. 2 Chr. xvi. 9. 1s xli. 10. John i. 51. 2 Tim. iv. 16, 17. Heb. i. 14. r xxxv. 1. 6, 7. xlviii. 3. s xv. 1. xxxi. 42. xxxii. 9. xlv. 3. Ex. iii. 6. 15, 16. Matt. xxii. 32. t See on 4. u xiii. 16. xxxv. 11, 12. Num. xxxiii. 10. * Heb. break forth. x Deut. xii. 20. Matt. viii. 11. y xii. 3. xviii. 18. xvii. 18. xxvi. 4. Gal. iii. 16. z 20, 21. xxvi. 24. xxxi. 3. xxxix. 2. 21. xlv. 4. Ex. iii. 12. Josh. i. 5. Judg. vi. 16. Ps. xlv. 7. 11. 1s vii. 14. viii. 10. xliii. 2. Jer. i. 19. Matt. xxiii. 20. xxviii. 20. Rom. viii. 31. Heb. xliii. 5, 6.

a Num. xxiii. 19. Josh. xxiii. 14—16. Matt. xxiv. 28. b Ex. iii. 5. Josh. v. 15. Job i. 11. Ex. iii. 6. Judg. xiii. 22. Matt. xvii. 5. Rev. i. 17. c 22. 2 Chr. v. 14. Ec. v. 1. Heb. x. 21. 1 Pet. iv. 17. d xxxi. 13. 45. xxxv. 14. 20. Josh. xxiv. 26, 27. 1 Sam. vii. 12. 2 Sam. xviii. 18. 1s. xix. 19. f Lev. viii. 10—12. Num. vii. 1. g xii. 8. xxxv. 1. xlviii. 3. Judg. i. 22—26. Hos. xii. 4, 5. h That is, The house of God.

^h Lev. xxvii. Num. vi. 1—20. xxi. 2, 3. Judg. xi. 30. 31. 1 Sam. i. 11. xiv. 24. 2 Sam. xv. 8. Neh. ix. x. Ps. lxxvi. 11. cxix. 106. Ec. v. 1—7. Is. xix. 21. Jon. i. 16 Acts xviii. 18 xxiii. 12—15.
^l See on 15.
^k 1 Tim. vi. 8.
^l Ex. xv. 2. Deut. xxvi. 17. 2 Kings v. 17.
 20 And Jacob ^h vowed a vow, saying, ^l If God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and ^k will give me bread to eat and raiment to put on :
 21 So that I come again to my father's house in peace : ^l then shall the LORD be my God ;
 22 And this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be ^m God's house : and of all that thou shalt give me, ⁿ I will surely give the tenth unto thee.

number of hazel trees which it produced. The meaning generally given it, as denoting an almond tree, is taken from the Arabick. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 20—22. Jacob solemnly bound himself unto God by a voluntary engagement, in the particulars here stated. His language does not imply any unbelieving distrust of the divine promise, or disposition to dictate to the Lord: but he merely took his words, put the most moderate sense upon them, and intimated, that having food and raiment, he desired no more; and that, when he returned in peace, as it had been promised, he would publickly set up the worship of the Lord his God, as his father and grandfather had done; build an altar in that very spot; and offer the tenth of all the substance which he brought back with him, to the immediate service of God, and the support of his worship, or to pious and charitable uses in general. All that he engaged for was lawful and practicable; and the circumstances, the place of this solemn worship, and the proportion of his goods to be thus dedicated, were in themselves things discretionary, and thus the proper matter for a religious vow. This is the first instance of the kind which we meet with in Scripture. Yet Abraham had given the same proportion of the spoils to Melchizedek, and it was afterwards appropriated by the law to the priests: so that we may reasonably suppose, the patriarchs had some traditional or immediate intimations of the will of God in this particular.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—11.

It is incumbent on parents to unite their influence and authority with wisdom and experience, in warning and advising their children, and in charging things of consequence upon their consciences: and when such instructions are joined with fervent, affectionate prayers, they are likely to make a deep impression. It is also well, when former miscarriages render us more watchful and attentive; and when we have humility enough, openly and explicitly to retract, what we have erroneously attempted.—Good examples of obedience to God and pious parents, cannot but make some impressions, even upon the profane and malicious: but a few external acts of partial or imaginary amendment, which only spring from a desire of pleasing men, too often serve as a fatal quietus to the conscience.—We know not to what hardships we may in Providence be called: it is therefore prudent to inure ourselves to labour and self-denial; as the mean accommodations, which are intolerable to the delicate and luxurious, are scarcely in-

CHAP. XXIX.

Jacob arrives at Haran, and confers with some shepherds, 1—8. He meets with Rachel, is entertained by Laban, and serves seven years for Rachel, 9—20. He is cheated by Laban with Leah; he remonstrates, and Laban excuses himself; Jacob marries both sisters, and serves other seven years, 21—30. Rachel is barren; but Leah bears Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah, 31—35.

THEN ^a Jacob ^{*} went on his journey, and ^b came into the land of the [†] people of the east.

^a Ps. cxix. 32. Ec. ix. 7.
^{*} Heb. lifted up his feet.
^b xxviii. 5—7. Num. xxiii. 7. Judg. vi. 3. 33. vii. 12. viii. 10. 1 Kings iv. 30.
[†] Heb. children

convenient to those, who have been accustomed to labour and fare hardly.

V. 12—22.

When the Lord hath made his offending children humbly sensible of their misconduct, he will again encourage them, lest they should “be swallowed up of over-much sorrow:” and generally the sweetest comforts are afforded in the sharpest trials, and surprise us when ready to faint under deserved rebukes.—When the soul by faith can see Christ, the true Ladder, opening the way of communication betwixt heaven and earth, and securing to us acceptance with God, the protection of his providence, the ministrations of his angels, and the consolations of his Spirit; every place becomes pleasant, and every prospect joyful. With the Lord for our Guide, Companion, and Comforter, we may defy all enemies, out-brave all dangers, and despise all difficulties: every thing must succeed, and end well; and he will never leave us, till his last promise is accomplished in our everlasting felicity.—The places and ordinances, in which God is more especially present, ought to be regarded with solemn reverence; and peculiar consolations should leave us filled with holy awe, prepared for self-denying services, and disposed to adopt every means of keeping the Lord's goodness in remembrance.—Many “an Israelite indeed,” who had been for a time burdened with guilt, oppressed with desponding fears, and conflicting with difficulties and temptations; has at length unexpectedly been surprised with sweet peace, and a sense of pardoning mercy, through “the love of God shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Spirit;” and, in adoring gratitude, has surnamed the scene of such a deliverance, Beth-el; has deemed it the “very house of God, and the gate of heaven;” and perhaps has been afraid to quit it, lest he should lose the sweet consolations which he there had tasted, or forget the loving-kindness of the Lord. At such times, how ready are we to enquire, “What shall we render unto the Lord for his goodness!” How willing are we to forego all worldly considerations, and to be contented with food and raiment, however mean and hardly earned! How do we stand prepared for any service or suffering; and, by solemn vows, to yield ourselves unto the Lord, to take him for our God, and to devote all we have and are to his glory! All this is well, and as it should be: but oh, that there were at all times such a heart in us! Let us remember our Beth-els, be ashamed of our forgetfulness, and “pay the vows which we vowed, when the Lord an swered us in the day of our distress.” (Notes, xxxv. 1—5.)

^c xxv. 11. Ex. 11. 15. xxiii. 2. ^d 1st. xxiii. 2. ^e 1st. xxiii. 2. ^f 1st. xxiii. 2. ^g 1st. xxiii. 2. ^h 1st. xxiii. 2. ⁱ 1st. xxiii. 2. ^j 1st. xxiii. 2. ^k 1st. xxiii. 2. ^l 1st. xxiii. 2. ^m 1st. xxiii. 2. ⁿ 1st. xxiii. 2. ^o 1st. xxiii. 2. ^p 1st. xxiii. 2. ^q 1st. xxiii. 2. ^r 1st. xxiii. 2. ^s 1st. xxiii. 2. ^t 1st. xxiii. 2. ^u 1st. xxiii. 2. ^v 1st. xxiii. 2. ^w 1st. xxiii. 2. ^x 1st. xxiii. 2. ^y 1st. xxiii. 2. ^z 1st. xxiii. 2.

2 And he looked, and behold, ^a a well in the field, and lo, ^b there were three flocks of sheep lying by it; for out of that well they watered the flocks: and a great stone was upon the well's mouth.

3 And thither were all the flocks gathered: and they rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the sheep, and put the stone again upon the well's mouth in his place.

4 And Jacob said unto them, My brethren, whence be ye? and they said, ^e Of Haran are we.

5 And he said unto them, Know ye Laban the son of Nahor? And they said, We know him.

6 And he said unto them, ^f Is ^g he well? And they said, He is well: and behold, Rachel his daughter cometh with the sheep.

7 And he said, ^h Lo, ⁱ it is yet high day, neither is it time that the cattle should be gathered together: water ye the sheep, and go and feed them.

8 And they said, We cannot, ^j until all the flocks be gathered together, and till they roll the stone from the well's mouth; then we water the sheep.

9 And while he yet spake with them, ^k Rachel came with her father's sheep: for she kept them.

10 And it came to pass, when Jacob saw Rachel the daughter of Laban his mother's brother, and the sheep of Laban his mother's brother; that Jacob went near, ^l and rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the flock of Laban his mother's brother.

11 And Jacob ^m kissed Rachel, and lifted up his voice, and wept.

12 And Jacob told Rachel that he was her father's ⁿ brother, and that he was Rebekah's son: ^o and she ran and told her father.

13 And it came to pass, when Laban heard the ^p tidings of Jacob his sister's son, that he ^q ran to meet him, and embraced him, and ^r kissed him, and brought him to his house. And he told Laban all these things.

14 And Laban said to him, Surely thou ^s art my bone and my flesh; and he abode with him ^t the space of a month.

15 ¶ And Laban said unto Jacob, Because thou art my brother, shouldest thou therefore serve me for nought? ^u tell me what shall thy wages be?

16 And Laban had two daughters: the name of the elder ^v was Leah, and the name of the younger was Rachel.

17 Leah was tender-eyed, but Rachel ^w was beautiful and well-favoured.

18 And Jacob ^x loved Rachel; and said, ^y I will serve thee seven years for Rachel thy younger daughter.

19 And Laban said, ^z It is better that I give her to thee, than that I should give her to another man: abide with me.

20 And Jacob served seven years for Rachel; and they seemed unto him but a few days, ^a for the love he had to her.

^e xxvii. 43. xxviii. 10.

^f xliii. 27. ^g Heb. peace to him. xxviii. 14. Ex. xviii. 7. 1 Sam. xvii. 22. Marg.

^h Gal. vi. 10. ⁱ Heb. get the day is great.

^j 3.

^k xxiv. 15. Ex. ii. 16.

^l Ex. ii. 17.

^m xxxiii. 4. xliii. 30. xlv. 2. 14. 15. Ex. iv. 27. xviii. 7.

ⁿ xliii. 8. xiv. 14-16. ^o xxiv. 28.

^p Heb. hearing. ^q xxiv. 29.

^r Luke vii. 45. Rom. xvi. 16.

^s ii. 23. Judg. ix. 2. 2 Sam. v. 1. xix. 12. 13. ^t Heb. a month of days.

^u xxx. 28. xxxi. 7.

^v 17. 25-32. xxx. 19. xxxi. 4. xxxiii. 2. xxxv. 23. xvi. 15. xlix. 31. Ruth iv. 11. ^w 6-12. 18. xxx. 1. 2. 22. xxxv. 19. 20. 24. xlv. 18-22. xlviii. 7. 1 Sam. x. 2. Jer. xxxi. 15. Matt. ii. 18. ^x xii. 11. xxiv. 16. xxxix. 6. Prov. xxxi. 30. ^y 20. 30. ^z xxxi. 41. xxxiv. 12. Ex. xxii. 16. 17. Hos. iii. 2. xii. 12. ^a Ps. xii. 2.

^z Cant. viii. 6. 7. 2 Cor. xiii. 14. B. C. 1753.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXIX. V. 3. This verse describes what was usually done, by some mutual compact among the shepherds; and shews the purpose for which the flocks lay by the well: for the stone was not removed till all the flocks had been collected (8).

V. 5. Laban seems to have been grandson to Nahor, who, as the head of the family, is mentioned rather than Bethuel. (Notes, xxiv. 28. 53.)

V. 8. It is probable that there was some regulation agreed on, to prevent the waste or the unequal use of the water, where it was so scarce and valuable.

V. 12-14. Jacob informed Rachel, that he was "her father's brother" (12). Accordingly Laban calls Jacob "my bone and my flesh." He owns him as a very near relation; being his sister's son.—The word brother is often used in scripture with this or greater latitude. (xiii. 8.)

V. 18, 19. When Abraham's servant came, with great appearance of wealth, to take a wife for Isaac, Laban readily consented that Rebekah should accompany him. But Jacob came in a great measure destitute; and it might be supposed that, notwithstanding the transactions of the birth-right and the blessing, Esau, being on the spot, would inherit Isaac's wealth. Therefore, though Jacob had told him the circumstances and motives of his journey; and had doubtless informed him, that he came to seek a wife from among his mother's kindred, as well as to escape from Esau; Laban did not see, that "the matter proceeded from the Lord;" (xxiv. 50;) or offer to give Jacob one of his daughters, till he had witnessed his ability and industry; and then Jacob's proposal addressed his selfishness with success. Yet he would not, it seems, let him have his daughter, till he had performed his seven years' service! (Notes, xxiv. 29-60.)

21 ¶ And Jacob said unto Laban, Give me my wife, (for my days are fulfilled,) that I may go in unto her.

22 And Laban gathered together all the men of the place, ^b and made a feast.

^b Judg. xiv. 10—18. Ruth iv. 10—13. Matt. xxii. 2—10. xxv. 1—10. John ii. 1—10. Rev. xix. 9.

23 And it came to pass in the evening, that he took Leah his daughter, and ^c brought her to him: and he went in unto her.

^c xxiv. 65. xxxviii. 14, 15.

24 And Laban gave unto his daughter Leah, ^d Zilpah his maid for an handmaid.

^d xvi. 1. xxiv. 59. xxx. 9—12. xlvii. 18.

25 And it came to pass that in the morning, behold it was Leah: and he said to Laban, What is this thou hast done unto me? did not I serve with thee for Rachel? ^e Wherefore then hast thou beguiled me?

^e xxvii. 35, 36. Prov. xi. 31. Matt. vii. 2. John xxi. 17. Rev. iii. 19.

26 And Laban said, It must not be so done in our ^f country, to give the younger before the first-born.

^f Heb. place.

27 Fulfil her ^g week, and ^h we will give thee this also, for the service which thou shalt serve with me yet seven other years.

^g ii. 2, 3. viii. 10—12. Lev. xviii. 18. Judg. xiv. 12. Mal. ii. 15. Matt. xix. 5. ^h 20.

28 And Jacob did so, and fulfilled her week: and he gave him Rachel his daughter to wife also.

29 And Laban gave to Rachel his daughter ⁱ Bilhah his handmaid, to be her maid.

ⁱ See on 24.—xxx. 3—8. xxxv. 22. 25. xxxvii. 2.

30 And he went in also unto Rachel, and ^j he loved also Rachel more than Leah, and ^k served with him yet seven other years.

^j 20. 31. xlvii. 27. ^k 18. xxx. 25, 26. xxxi. 15. 1 Sam. xviii. 17—27. Hos. xii. 12.

31 And when the LORD saw that Leah ^l was hated, ^m he opened her womb: but Rachel was barren.

^l 30. xxvii. 41. Deut. xxi. 15. Mal. i. 3. Matt. vi. 24. x. 37. Luke xiv. 26. John xii. 25.

32 And Leah conceived and bare a son, and she called ⁿ his name ^o Reuben: for she said, Surely the LORD hath ^p looked upon my affliction: now therefore my husband will love me.

ⁿ xxxi. 2. xxv. 21. xxx. 2, 22. Judg. xiii. 2, 3. 1 Sam. i. 5. 20. 27. ii. 21. Ps. cxxvii. 3. ^o xxxv. 22. xlix. 3. ^p 1 Chr. v. 1. ^q That is, See a son.

33 And she conceived again, and bare a son: and said, ^r Because the LORD hath heard that I was hated, he hath therefore given me this son also: and she ^s called his name ^t Simeon.

^q Ex. iii. 7. iv. 31. 1 Sam. i. 11, 20. 2 Sam. xvii. 12. Ps. xxv. 18. Luke i. 25. ^r xxx. 6, 8. 18. 20. ^s xxxiv. 30. xlii. 24. ^t That is, Hearing.

34 And she conceived again, and bare a son; and said, Now this time will my husband be joined unto me, because I have born him three sons: therefore ^u was his name called ^v Levi.

^u That is, Hearing. ^v B. C. 1750.

35 And she conceived again, and bare a son; and she said, Now will I praise the LORD: therefore she ^w called his name ^x Judah, and ^y left bearing.

^w xlix. 5—7. Ex. ii. 1. xxxii. 29—29. Deut. xxxiii. 8—10. ^x That is, joined. ^y Num. xviii. 2. 4. xlv. 18—34. xlix. 8—12. Deut. xxxiii. 7. 1 Chr. v. 2. Matt. i. 2. ^z That is, Praise. ^{aa} Heb. stood from bearing.

V. 21. The language of the narration evidently determines, that Jacob waited till the seven years were expired before his marriage. This interpretation has indeed been objected to, both on account of Jacob's age, and also as not allowing time enough before he went to Egypt, for the several events which intervened: but the objection does not seem well grounded, nor the difficulty insurmountable.—The promise of an innumerable posterity was first given to Abraham; yet he was very old before he had any child, and a hundred years of age before Isaac was born. It was again made to Isaac, who was childless till the age of sixty; and then it was ratified to Jacob, who did not marry till he was about eighty-three or four years old. These circumstances were suitable evidences or exercises of their faith: but it might be expected, that the descendants of these patriarchs, as the progenitors of so numerous a posterity, would marry and have children as soon as possible; which was accordingly the case.

V. 22, 23. The publick feast, made on this occasion, formed the regular method of recognizing the marriage; and in the evening it was customary to convey the bride, veiled; to her husband's house. Thus Jacob, who had deceived Isaac by personating Esau, was imposed on by Laban and Leah, in a most important concern, by a similar deception! In this the Lord was righteous, but the parties concerned were highly criminal.—If Rachel had been led to expect, that she was to be given to Jacob at that time; probably she was not undeceived, till it was too late to undeceive Jacob: though, if it had been otherwise, it might not have been practicable or expedient to do so.

V. 26. This seems to have been a mere pretence; but, if it was the custom of the country, Laban ought previously to have informed Jacob of it.

V. 27, 28. The week, here mentioned, was that of the marriage-feast; and did not relate to the years Jacob afterwards served.—There existed no express and positive law against polygamy; Jacob considered Rachel as his wife, and yet he could not desert Leah; and so he seems to have thought himself obliged to retain both.—The division of time by weeks, intimates that some regard was paid to the sabbath.

V. 30, 31. Jacob loved Rachel more than Leah, not only as most beautiful and amiable, and the object of his first and most endeared affection; but likewise, because he considered Leah as having concurred in the imposition put on him by Laban. Thus his preference of Rachel led him, in some respects, to treat Leah with an indifference and neglect, which resembled hatred.

V. 32—35. From the names which Leah gave her sons, and the reasons which she assigned for them, it seems probable that she was piously disposed; though criminal in imposing on Jacob, and faulty in some other respects. (Marg. Ref.)

CHAP. XXX.

Rachel envies Leah, and complains impatiently to Jacob, who sharply rebukes her; yet at her instance takes Bilhah to wife, who bears Dan and Naphtali, 1—8. Leah gives Zilpah to Jacob, and she bears Gad and Asher, 9—13. Leah purchases Jacob's company, of Rachel, by her son's mandrakes; and bears Issachar, Zebulun, and Dinah, 14—21. Rachel bears Joseph, 22—24. Jacob desires to leave Laban, who agrees with him for his future services, 25—36. The means by which Jacob grew rich, 37—43.

AND when ^aRachel saw that she bare Jacob no children, ^bRachel envied her sister; and said unto Jacob, Give me children, ^cor else I die.

2 And Jacob's ^danger was kindled against Rachel; and he said, ^eAm I in God's stead, who hath ^fwithheld from thee the fruit of the womb?

3 And she said, ^gBehold my maid ^gBilhah, go in unto her: and ^hshe shall bear upon my knees, that I may also ⁱhave children by her.

4 And she gave him Bilhah her handmaid ^jto wife: and Jacob went in unto her.

5 And Bilhah conceived, and bare Jacob a son.

6 And Rachel said, ^kGod hath judged me, and hath also heard my voice, and hath given me a son: therefore called she his name ^lDan.

7 And Bilhah Rachel's maid conceived again, and bare Jacob a second son.

8 And Rachel said, With ^mgreat wrestlings have I wrestled with my sister, and I have prevailed: ⁿand she called his name ⁿNaphtali.

a xxix. 21.
b xxxvii. 11. 1 Sam. i. 4—8. Es. cvi. 16. Prov. xiv. 30. xxvii. 4. 1 Cor. iii. 3. Gal. v. 21. Jam. iv. 5.
c xxxv. 16—19. Num. xi. 15. 1 Kings xix. 4. Job iii. 1—3. 11. 20—22. v. 2. xiii. 19. Jer. xx. 14—18. Jon. iv. 3. 8. 2 Cor. vii. 10.
d xxxi. 86. Ex. xxxii. 19. Matt. v. 22. Mark iii. 5. Eph. iv. 26.
e xxxv. 21. i. 19. 1 Sam. i. 5. ii. 5. 6. 2 Kings v. 7. Deut. vii. 13, 14. Ps. cxiii. 9. cxxvii. 3. Luke i. 42.

g 9. xvi. 2, 3. h 1. 23 Job iii. 12.
* Heb. be built up by her. xvi. 2. Marg. Ruth iv. 11.
xvi. 3. xxi. 10. xxv. 1. 6. xxxiii. 2. xxxv. 22. 2 Sam. xii. 11.
k xxix. 32—35. Pa xxxv. 24. Lam. iii. 59.
† That is, Judging. xlix. 16, 17. Deut. xxxiii. 22. Judg. xiii. 2. 24. xv. 14—20.
; Heb. wrestlings of God. Ex. ix. 28. 1 Sam. xiv. 15. Marg. xlix. 21. Deut. xxxiii. 22. That is, My wrestling. xxxii. 24. 25.—Matt. iv. 13. Nephtalim.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—15.

Gracious consolations are intended as cordials, to animate and strengthen us, that we may proceed without weariness or fainting, in the arduous and self-denying paths of obedience: and in so doing, we shall speedily experience the faithfulness of God to his promises; even as he accompanied and kept Jacob, in all the places to which he went.—We cannot but approve the simplicity, court-cousness, and benevolence, which mark this first interview between Jacob and the shepherds; the frank manner in which he makes his observations, offers his advice, and affords his assistance; and the mild and candid reception that he meets with from them: for the proud are offended when intimations are given, that they are mistaken or to blame.—He, who has all hearts in his hands, disposes all things for the good of those who trust in him, and works upon the natural affection even of selfish hearts, to procure them kind entertainment. And they who are skilful and active in business, being capable of rendering themselves useful, will generally, when known, be made welcome.—Relations, however, should not be less rewarded for their services than others, but meet with greater encouragement.

V. 16—35.

Love, whatever be its object, is a most active and powerful principle; and not only engages a man in hard and difficult services, but even renders them delightful. If then the Lord possess our supreme love, we shall greatly delight in his commandments, and all other affections will be regulated and subordinated by it, and rendered lawful and useful: yet times may come, when we must, in the superiority of our love to him, be called to disregard our dearest friends, as if we hated them. But, on the other hand, if they have our supreme regard, we shall for their sakes despise and neglect the Lord.—How often in Providence are men reminded of their sin in their punishment, and corrected by others much worse than themselves! One cannot but lament to see Jacob cheated into polygamy, in so extraordinary a manner; and indeed the malice and artifice of Satan are clearly discernible in the transaction.—The Lord, however, so sets one thing against another, that there is less difference in the comparative happiness of mankind, than superficial observers imagine; and in the most ordinary circumstances of private life, his hand should be acknowledged; especially, when he relieves our distresses, and answers our prayers.—And let us always remember, that “children and the fruit of the womb are a heritage and gift that cometh of the LORD,” and should be received as from his hand, and trained up for his service.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXX. V. 1, 2. Under the influence of selfish and malignant passions, Rachel impatiently murmured against God, and expressed her fretfulness in very absurd language, which Jacob justly, though sharply, reproved.—Instead of humbly intreating the Lord, as Isaac and no doubt Rebekah had done, and waiting his time of granting her requests; she declared that her heart would break with grief and vexation, if she continued any longer childless!—She who said, “Give me children, or else I die,” afterwards died in child-birth. (Marg. Ref.) Hannah, whose trial resembled Rachel's, but was much heavier, acted far more properly, and had several children with comfort and a blessing. (1 Sam. i. 2—28. ii. 1—11. 20, 21.)

V. 3. Rachel intended to adopt and nurse Bilhah's children as her own, and thus solace herself under the trial and reproach of barrenness. But had not her sister been her rival, and had she not been influenced by envy and resentment, she would have thought Leah's children nearer to her, and more entitled to her care, than Bilhah's could be.

V. 4. Rachel might, in some measure, be induced to this conduct by the same motives which influenced Sarah in a similar case; and Jacob doubtless supposed that he was merely imitating his illustrious progenitor: but the circumstances were, in all respects, so different, as to render their conduct far less excusable. (Notes, xvi. 1—3.)

V. 8. The literal marginal translation, wrestlings of God,

9 ¶ When Leah saw that she had left bearing, she took Zilpah her maid, and gave her Jacob to wife.

10 And Zilpah Leah's maid bare Jacob a son.

11 And Leah said, A troop cometh: and she called his name Gad.

12 And Zilpah Leah's maid bare Jacob a second son.

13 And Leah said, Happy am I, for the daughters will call me blessed: and she called his name Asher.

14 And Reuben went in the days of wheat-harvest, and found mandrakes in the field, and brought them unto his mother Leah. Then Rachel said to Leah, Give me, I pray thee, of thy son's mandrakes.

15 And she said unto her, Is it a small matter that thou hast taken my husband? and wouldest thou take away my son's mandrakes also? And Rachel said, Therefore he shall lie with thee to-night for thy son's mandrakes.

16 And Jacob came out of the field in the evening, and Leah went out to meet him, and said, Thou must come in unto me, for surely I have hired thee with my son's mandrakes. And he lay with her that night.

17 And God hearkened unto Leah, and she conceived and bare Jacob the fifth son.

18 And Leah said, God hath given me mine hire, because I have given my maiden to my husband: and she called his name Issachar.

19 And Leah conceived again, and bare Jacob the sixth son.

20 And Leah said, God hath ended me with a good dowry: now will my husband dwell with me, because I have born him six sons: and she called his name Zebulun.

21 And afterwards she bare a daughter, and called her name Dinah.

22 ¶ And God remembered Rachel, and God hearkened to her, and opened her womb.

23 And she conceived and bare a son: and said, God hath taken away my reproach.

24 And she called his name Joseph; and said, The LORD shall add to me another son.

25 ¶ And it came to pass, when Rachel had born Joseph, that Jacob said unto Laban, Send me away, that I may go unto mine own place, and to my country.

26 Give me my wives and my children, for whom I have served thee, and let me go: for thou knowest my service which I have done thee.

27 And Laban said unto him, I pray thee, if I have found favour in thine eyes, tarry: for I have learned by experience, that the LORD hath blessed me for thy sake.

28 And he said, Appoint me thy wages, and I will give it.

29 And he said unto him, Thou knowest how I have served thee, and how thy cattle was with me.

prolifick, and the reproach of being barren, may be supposed to have had considerable influence in these contests; though combined with jealousy and other selfish passions.

V. 18. Leah was so far from considering herself culpable, in giving her handmaid to her husband, that she deemed it meritorious, and erroneously interpreted the Lord's kindness as the reward of it!

V. 21, 22. Dinah means the same as Dan, the name of Jacob's first son by Bilhah, Rachel's handmaid; and this name seems to have been given by Leah to her daughter, in a kind of triumph over her sister. It therefore follows that "God remembered Rachel."

V. 23. All these children were born to Jacob, within the second seventh year of his serving Laban (25). Reuben, therefore, was not much above six years older than Joseph; and Judah not more than four.

V. 25, 26. The fourteen years being expired, Jacob, depending on the promise of God, was willing to depart, m xlix. 19. Deut xxxiii. 20, 21. • That is, A troop, or company. Is. lxx. 11. B. C. 1748. † Heb. In my happiness. n Prov. xxxi. 28. Cant. vi. 9. Luke i. 48. o Gen. xlix. 20. Deut. xxxiii. 24, 25. ‡ That is, Happy p Cant. vii. 13.

q Num. xvi. 9, 10, 13. Is. vii. 13. Ez. xvi. 47. 1 Cor. iv. 3.

r 22 Ex. iii. 7. 1 Sam. i. 20, 26. 27 Luke i. 13.

s xlix. 14, 15. Deut. xxxiii. 18. † That is, An hire.

15. xxix. 34. u xlix. 13. Judg. iv. 10. v 14. Ps. lxxviii. 27. ¶ That is, Dwelling. Matt. iv. 13. Zabulon. x xxxiv. 1-3. 26. xlvii. 15. • That is, Judgement. y viii. 1. 1 Sam. i. 19, 20. Ps. cv. 42. B. C. 1744. z 2. xxi. 1, 2. xxv. 21. xxix. 31. Ps. cxliii. 9. cxxvii. 3. xxxix. 31. 1 Sam. i. 6. Is. iv. 1. Luke i. 25.

b xxxvii. 2, 4. xlii. 6. xlviii. 1. &c. xlix. 22-26. Deut. xxxiii. 13-17. Ez. xxxvii. 16. Acts vii. 9-15. Heb. xi. 21, 22. Rev. vii. 8. † That is, Adding xxxv. 17, 18.

c xxiv. 6, 7. xxvi. 3. xxvii. 44, 45. xxviii. 13, 15. xxxi. 13. Acta vii. 4, 5. Heb. xi. 15, 16. d xxxix. 19, 30. xxxi. 26, 31, 41. Hos. xii. 12. e 29, 30. xxxi. 6 38-40.

f Ex. iii. 21. Neh. i. 11. ii. 5. Dan. i. 9. Acta vii. 10.

g 30. xii. 3. xxxix. 2-5, 21-23. Ps. i. 3. Is. lxi. 9.

h xxxix. 15.

i See on 5.-Eph. vi. 5-8. Col. iii. 22-25. Tit. ii. 10. 1 Pet. ii. 18.

in this connexion, seems to imply, that Rachel thought there was some excellency, as well as earnestness, in her contest; and that her success was a token of God's favour, if not an answer to her prayers. Yet she seems to have been mistaken; her motive might in part be good, but her measures cannot be justified.

V. 11. A troop cometh.] The word in the Hebrew text (נדר) more obviously means, "In a troop:" and so answers to the marginal reading, verse 13, "In my happiness" (בְּאַשְׁרָה).

V. 14. Mandrakes.] These were either fruit or flowers, pleasing to the eye, the smell, or the taste; probably the latter. It is generally thought that the word is not properly translated; but it is uncertain what they were, though very much has been written on the subject.

V. 15, 16. The desire, good in itself, but often inordinate and irregular, of being the mother or ancestor of the promised Seed; together with the honour of being

30 For it was little which thou hadst before I came, and it is now ^{• Heb. broken forth.} ^{k 27} increased unto a multitude, ^{† Heb. at my foot.} ^{l 2 Cor. xii. 14.} ^{1 Tim. v. 8.} and the LORD hath blessed thee [†] since my coming: and now ^l when shall I provide for mine own house also?

31 And he said, What shall I give thee? And Jacob said, ^{m 2 Sam. xxi. 4—6} Thou shalt not give me any thing: if thou wilt do this thing for me, I will again feed and keep thy flock:

32 I will pass through all thy flock to day, removing from thence all the speckled and spotted cattle, and all the brown cattle among the sheep, and the spotted and speckled among the goats: and ^{n xxxi 8} of such shall be my hire.

33 So shall my ^{o xxxi. 37. 1 Sam. xxvi. 23. 2 Sam. xxii. 21. Ps. xxxvii. 6.} righteousness answer for me ^{† Heb. to-morrow Ex. xiii. 14.} in time to come, when it shall come for my hire before thy face: every one that is not speckled and spotted amongst the goats, and brown amongst the sheep, that shall be accounted stolen with me.

34 And Laban said, Behold, ^{p Num. xxii. 29. 1 Cor. vii. 7. xiv. 5. Gal. v. 12. Rev. iii. 15} I would it might be according to thy word.

35 And he removed that day the he-goats, that were ring-streaked and spotted, and all the she-goats that were speckled and spotted, and every one that had some white in it, and all the brown among the sheep, and gave them into ^{q xxxi. 9.} the hand of his sons.

without any other recompence from Laban for his hard service, than his large family; though he could appeal to Laban himself, that he had served him with diligence, fidelity, and success! He was also very desirous of returning to Isaac and Rebekah, and the land of his pilgrimage. But he had, in many ways, an equitable claim on Laban's large substance, and it was the will of God that he should be amply provided for out of it.

V. 30. Laban had acknowledged, that "the LORD blessed him for Jacob's sake" (27); but Jacob, with observable modesty, alters the term for one of a more general application. (Marg.)

V. 31—34. Jacob chose to refer his cause to God, in the way here proposed, rather than to enter into an agreement for stated wages with Laban, whose selfishness was excessive. He would have no such cattle left under his care, as were coloured in any unusual way; and then he required that the spotted and speckled, &c. which they bred, should be given to him. Thus it would appear, whenever the question concerning his hire should be started, that he had acted honestly; provided none, but those of the stipulated colours, were found in his possession. And La-

36 And he set three days' journey betwixt himself and Jacob: and Jacob fed the rest of Laban's flocks.

37 ¶ And ^{r xxxi. 9—13.} Jacob took him rods of green poplar, and of the hazel and chesnut-tree; and piled white streaks in them, and made the white appear which was in the rods.

38 And he set the rods which he had piled before the flocks in the gutters in the watering-troughs, when the flocks came to drink; that they should conceive when they came to drink.

39 And the flocks conceived before the rods, and ^{s xxxi. 9—12. Ex. xii. 35, 36. Jer. xxxii. 5, 6.} brought forth cattle ring-streaked, speckled, and spotted.

40 And Jacob did separate the lambs, and set the faces of the flocks toward the ring-streaked, and all the brown in the flock of Laban: and he put his own flocks by themselves; and put them not unto Laban's cattle.

41 And it came to pass whensoever the stronger cattle did conceive, that Jacob laid the rods before the eyes of the cattle in the gutters, that they might conceive among the rods.

42 But when the cattle were feeble, he put them not in: so the feebler were Laban's, and the stronger Jacob's.

43 And the man ^{t 30. xiii. 2. xxiv. 35. xxvi. 13, 14. xxviii. 15. xxxi. 7, 8. xxxii. 10. xxxiii. 11. xxxvi. 7.} increased exceedingly, and had much cattle, and maid-servants, and men-servants, and camels, and asses.

ban, judging from common observation, that his cattle would breed but few colours different from their own, eagerly acceded to his proposal.

V. 37—42. Jacob's conduct in this transaction has commonly been considered, as an instance of his policy and management; and it has by many been objected to, by others vindicated and commended. But, as the means which he used would not in general produce similar effects; nay, probably the experiment was never in any other instance tried with success; it is more reasonable to suppose, that he was directed by some divine intimation; and rendered successful, if not by a direct miracle, yet at least by the Lord's giving a new and uncommon bias to the tendency of natural causes. (Note, xxxi. 10—13.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—24.

When eminent persons sanction any thing evil by their example, the consequences are often durably pernicious; because it is far more easy to imitate the misconduct of those whom we esteem, than to copy their faith and obedience. And when we tread their devious footsteps, it is

CHAP. XXXI.

Jacob is envied by Laban and his sons, 1, 2. Being commanded by God to return to his kindred, he proposes it to his wives; explains the Lord's dealings with him; and, with their consent, privately departs, taking his family and substance, 3—21. Laban pursues him, but is warned in a dream not to injure him: he overtakes Jacob and expostulates with him, 22—32. Laban searches in vain for his images, which Rachel had stolen and concealed, 33—35. Jacob vindicates himself, and complains of Laban, 36—42; they enter into a covenant, and Laban returns home, 43—55.

a 8, 9, Job xxxi. 31 Ps. cxx. 3—5. b Esth. v. 11. Job xxxi. 24, 25. Ps. xvii. 14. xlix. 16, 17. Is. v. 14. Jer. ix. 23. Matt. iv. 8. 1 Pet. i. 24. c iv. 5. 1 Sam. xviii. 9—11. Dan. iii. 19. d xxx. 27. e xxviii. 15, 20, 21. xxxii. 9. xxxv. 1, xlv. 2, 3. l. 24. f xxvi. 3—5. xxviii. 4. 13. xxx. 25.

AND he heard the words of Laban's sons, saying, "Jacob hath taken away all that was our father's; and of that which was our father's hath he gotten all this glory."

2 And Jacob beheld the countenance of Laban, and behold, it was not toward him as before.

3 And the Lord said unto Jacob, Return unto the land of thy fathers, and to thy kindred; and I will be with thee.

4 ¶ And Jacob sent and called Rachel and Leah to the field unto his flock;

5 And said unto them, I see your father's countenance, that it is not toward me as before: but the God of my father hath been with me.

6 And ye know that with all my power I have served your father.

7 And your father hath deceived me, and changed my wages ten times: but God suffered him not to hurt me.

8 If he said thus, The speckled shall be thy wages; then all the cattle bare speckled: and if he said thus, The ring-streaked shall be thy hire; then bare all the cattle ring-streaked.

9 Thus God hath taken away the cattle of your father, and given them to me.

g 2, 3. h 42. 53. xxxii. 9. xlviii. 15. l. 17. i 38—42. xxx. 29. Tit. ii. 9, 10. k 41. Lev. xxvi. 25. Num. xiv. 22. Neh. iv. 12. Job xix. 3, 18. iv. 1. Zech. vii. 23. xx. 6. Ps. cv. 14. Is. liv. 17. m xxx. 32. n 1. 16. Est. ciii. 1, 2. Ps. l. 10. Prov. xiii. 22. Matt. xx. 15.

natural for us to go further than they did: nay, we are apt to think ourselves authorized, or at least excused, in so doing. What an unhappy precedent was Sarah to Rachel and Leah, and Abraham to Jacob! We are grieved to see this plain man, in his old age, yielding to one suggestion after another to multiply wives; though by that means he multiplied bitter envying and contention in his family. This "his way was his folly;" though many of his posterity approved and imitated his example.—To carry matters even between two wives, who have an equal claim to affection, is almost, if not utterly, impossible; and to fail of it ensures emulation and strife, and may even perpetuate discord to posterity. How much more comfortably did Isaac live with Rebekah, according to God's primary institution, than Jacob with his two wives and their handmaids!—Envy and jealousy are most tormenting passions to the breast which harbours them, vexatious to all around, and introductory to much impatience and ungodliness: observing therefore, how absurd and odious they appear in Rachel, we should watch and pray against them in ourselves; and turn aside from all such objects and pursuits as tend to excite them.—Too frequently they, who possess the most beautiful countenances, are lamentably deficient in "the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit; which is in the sight of God" and of all wise men, of much greater value; and partial affections are often corrected by the persons on whom they are misplaced.—They who are angry only at sin, and express that anger by reasonable, though sharp, rebukes, and with zeal for the honour of God, are not sinfully angry: nor must those whom we love best be connived at in wickedness.—Our natural conscience is a partial and erroneous judge, and, if left to itself, will often excuse, nay commend, our very faults: we ought, therefore, to seek to the word, and pray for the Spirit, of God, to illuminate our understandings, and deliver our consciences from mistake and self-flattery.

V. 25—43.

The Lord is ever ready to hear the prayer of faith, and to forgive the transgression of his people; and he graciously recompenses and honours their integrity and faithful industry. He convinces all, with whom they are connected, that he hath loved them, and that he blesses others on their account; so that it is not uncommon for those, who love neither them nor their religion, to value them from interested motives; and to desire to employ them in preference to others: and "all who name the name of Christ" should, for the honour of his Gospel, be ambitious of this distinction.—The Lord will also, in one way or other, plead the cause of the injured and oppressed; and honour those who simply trust his providence, avoid evil and the appearance of it, and walk so wisely, as to give no occasion of reproach to those who manifestly are seeking it. And, as "the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof," he hath an indisputable right to dispose of every one's property as he pleases; and who shall dare to find fault with his appointments?

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXI. V. 1—3. Laban's sons were probably younger than his daughters; but were now grown up, and resembled him in selfishness. Instigated by them, Laban appeared so dissatisfied, and expressed in his looks so much envy and resentment, that Jacob deemed it dangerous to continue longer with him. But, though he had overheard the words of Laban's sons, and evidently perceived the effect which they had produced; yet he did not attempt to remove, till the Lord expressly commanded him: perhaps thinking it still more dangerous to come within the reach of his brother Esau.

V. 7. Ten times.] As the history of these six years is very compendious, we cannot determine, whether Laban changed Jacob's wages exactly ten times, or whether the 10 And it came to pass at the time that the cattle conceived, that I lifted up mine eyes, and saw in a dream, and behold, the rams which leaped upon the cattle were ring-streaked, speckled, and grizzled.

11 And the Angel of God spake unto me in a dream, saying, Jacob: And I said, Here am I.

12 And he said, Lift up now thine eyes and see all the rams which leap upon the cattle are ring-streaked, speckled; and grizzled: for I have seen all that Laban doeth unto thee.

13 I am the God of Beth-el, where thou anointedst the pillar, and where thou vowedst a vow unto me: now arise, get thee out from this land, and return unto the land of thy kindred.

14 And Rachel and Leah answered, and said unto him, Is there yet any portion or inheritance for us in our father's house?

15 Are we not counted of him strangers? for he hath sold us, and hath quite devoured also our money.

16 For all the riches which God hath taken from our father, that is our's, and our children's: now then whatsoever God hath said unto thee, do.

17 ¶ Then Jacob rose up, and set his sons and his wives upon camels.

18 And he carried away all his cattle, and all his goods which he had gotten, the cattle of his getting, which he had gotten in Padan-aram, for to go to Isaac his father in the land of Canaan.

19 And Laban went to shear his sheep: and Rachel had stolen the images that were her father's.

20 And Jacob stole away unawares to Laban the Syrian, in that he told him not that he fled.

21 So he fled with all that he had, and he rose up, and passed over the

24. xx. 6. xxviii. 12.

Or, he-goats

p 5. 13.—See on x-i. 7.—13. xlviii. 15, 16.

q xxii. 1. Ex. iii. 4. 1 Sam. iii. 4. 6. 8. 16. Is. lviii. 9

r xxx. 37—43.

e 42. Ex. iii. 7. 9. Ec. v. 8. Acts vii. 34.

t xxviii. 12—22. xxxv. 7. Marg.

u 3. xxxii. 9.

x ii. 24. xxix. 24. 29.

v 41. xxix. 18—29. 27—30. xxx. 26. Ex. xxi. 7—11. Neh. v. 8.

x See on 1. 9.

a xxiv. 10. 61. 1 Sam. xxx. 17.

b xxvii. 1. 2. 41. xxviii. 21. xxxv. 27—29.

† Heb. teraphim. 30. 32. Josh. xxiv. 2. Judg. xvii. 4. 5. xviii. 14—24. 31. 1 Sam. xix. 13. Ez. xxi. 21. Hos. iii. 4.

‡ Heb. the heart of Laban 27 Marg.

c ii. 14. xv. 16

expression only meant in general, many times. It is plain, however, that Laban tried all methods of circumventing and defrauding him, but in vain. (Marg. Ref. k.)

V. 10—13. It has before been supposed, that Jacob had some previous divine intimation, suggesting the plan which he adopted respecting the cattle; (Note, xxx. 37—42;) but the dream, which he here relates to Rachel and Leah, seems to have taken place towards the close of his service. Thus he accounted to them for the rapid increase of his flocks, and introduced the subsequent proposal, in which he made known to them the will of God, and the justice of his cause; that by thus appealing to them, and consulting with them, he might obtain their willing acquiescence. The Lord himself pointed out the circumstance concerning the colour of the rams, that Jacob might ascribe his success to the divine blessing, and possess his substance with a thankful heart and a quiet conscience, regardless of the unmerited anger of Laban and his sons.—The language of the passage is worthy of peculiar attention. “The Angel of God spake:… I am the God of Bethel.” The supposition of some learned men, that the angel spake as an ambassador, in the name of God, is extremely unreasonable: for what ambassador, when representing his principal, ever said, ‘I am the king?’ Would not such language be a claim to the honour due only to his Sovereign?—The Jewish expositors, and some others, imagine, that on such occasions there was a glorious appearance of JEHOVAH, distinct from the angel: but were there two speakers in this instance? Nothing can be plainer, than that he, who is called “The Angel,” said “I am the God of Beth-el.”—Repeated instances of this kind continually augment the evidence, that the Speaker was no other than the Word and Son of God, who “was God, and with God,” but now condescended to be the Angel or Messenger of the Father to men; as he afterwards did in human nature to “take upon him the form of a servant.” Yet in both manifestations of himself he could say: “He that hath seen me hath seen the Father; for I and the Father are One.”—The title, “the God of Beth-el,” would be peculiarly encouraging to Jacob.

V. 15, 16. Laban, instead of providing for his daughters, had sold them as strangers and slaves to increase his wealth, which he spent entirely on himself and his sons. But God had provided for them, by giving Laban's substance to Jacob; and they acknowledged his hand in it, and were well satisfied. The conduct of Leah and Rachel, in this particular, does not appear reprehensible: they could not have concurred with Laban, without neglecting their duty to a still nearer relation; and preferring the cause of an idolater, and an unjust man, to that of Jacob, the approved servant of God. What they said was private, and in conjugal confidence: and so did not dishonour Laban.

V. 17. Reuben, Jacob's eldest son, could not be much above twelve years of age, at this time.

V. 19. Rachel and Leah no doubt returned to their tents, and to the house of Laban, to take what belonged to them; which gave Rachel the opportunity of stealing these images, or teraphim. (Marg. Ref.) It is evident, that they had been made for idolatrous or superstitious purposes: but it is not clear what Rachel's motive was in taking them away; whether she intended to use them, or to prevent her father from so doing. She however acted very improperly; she exposed herself and the rest of the company to great danger; and the images afterwards seem to have been a snare to Jacob's family. (Note, xxxv. 2. 4.)

V. 20, 21. Had Laban known of Jacob's intentions, he would doubtless have attempted forcibly to defeat them; but Jacob eluded his vigilance, and was actually got to a great distance before Laban heard of it.—The Hebrew

d xiv. 28. Luke river, and ^dset his face toward the mount ^eGilead.

e 23. Num. xxxii. 1. Judg. x. 18. 1 Kings xvii. 1 f xxx. 36.
g xlii. 8. xxiv. 27 Ex. ii. 11.
22 ¶ And it was told Laban on the ^fthird day, that Jacob was fled.

23 And he took his ^sbrethren with him, and pursued after him seven days' journey; and they overtook him in the mount Gilead.

24 And God came to Laban ^bthe Syrian in a ^ldream by night, and said unto him, ^kTake heed that thou speak not to Jacob ^{*}either good or bad.

25 Then Laban overtook Jacob. Now Jacob had ^lpitched his tent in the mount: and Laban with his brethren pitched in the mount of Gilead.

26 And Laban said to Jacob, ^mWhat hast thou done, that thou hast stolen away unawares to me, and ⁿcarried away my daughters, as captives taken with the sword?

27 Wherefore ^odidst thou flee away secretly, and ^rsteal away from me? and didst not tell me, ^pthat I might have sent thee away ^qwith mirth and with songs, with tabret and with harp?

28 And hast not suffered me to ^rkiss my sons and my daughters? thou hast now done ^{*}foolishly in so doing.

29 It is in ^uthe power of my hand to do you hurt: but ^vthe God of your father spake unto me yesternight, saying, ^wTake thou heed that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad.

30 And now though thou wouldest needs be gone, because thou sore longedst after thy father's house; yet wherefore hast thou stolen ^ymy gods?

31 And Jacob answered and said to Laban, ^zBecause I was afraid: for I said, Peradventure thou wouldest take by force thy daughters from me.

32 With ^awhomsoever thou findest thy gods, let him not live: ^bbefore our brethren discern thou what is thine with me, and take it to thee: ^cfor Jacob knew not that Rachel had stolen them.

33 And Laban went into Jacob's tent, and into ^dLeah's tent, and into the two maid-servants' tents; but he found them not. Then went he out of Leah's tent, and entered into Rachel's tent.

34 Now Rachel ^ehad taken the images, and put them in the camel's furniture, and sat upon them; and Laban ^zsearched all the tent, but found them not.

35 And she said to her father, Let it not displease ^fmy lord that I cannot ^grise up before thee: for the ^hcustom of women is upon me: and he searched, but found not the images.

36 ¶ And Jacob ⁱwas wroth, and chode with Laban: and Jacob answered, and said to Laban, What is my trespass? what is my sin, that thou hast so hotly pursued after me?

37 Whereas thou hast searched all my stuff, what hast thou found of all thy household-stuff? ^kset it here before phrase translated, unawares to Laban, seems to mean, that Jacob rendered his sagacity and vigilance as useless, as if he had deprived him of his understanding. (Marg.)

V. 23, 24. Without doubt, Laban intended at least to plunder Jacob's property; if he could not induce him by promises or threats to return, or compel him to do so. But the Lord, in a dream, at this critical time, effectually deterred Laban from all such attempts. Jacob had passed the Euphrates, and crossed the spacious desert, which intervened between that river and mount Gilead, before Laban overtook him. This was a very long journey, considering the largeness of his company, and all his encumbrances.

V. 26. Captives.] This was very false and injurious. Jacob had a nearer interest in Leah and Rachel than Laban had; they had voluntarily agreed to go with their husband, rather than abide with their father; and indeed it was their duty so to do. (Marg. Ref. u.)

V. 27—29. Laban pretended to a very amicable disposition towards Jacob, now that he was overawed and durst not hurt him and his company: perhaps he thought that he acted from religious motives, in regarding the divine admonition.

V. 30. Laban thus insinuated that Jacob had no cause of dissatisfaction with him; and that he went away, merely because he exceedingly longed to see his parents and friends.

V. 31. Jacob answered Laban's former question in the first place, without mentioning it; "Wherefore didst thou flee away secretly, and steal away from me?" (27.) "Because," says Jacob, "I was afraid." This implied a strong charge of injustice and oppression against Laban.

V. 32. Not live.] This was rash, and might have produced fatal effects: but Jacob was partial to Rachel, and did not suspect her; and he was indignant at being accused of a crime, which he deeply abhorred.

V. 34. Probably the furniture of the camels formed a kind of a couch, for the convenience of women in long journeys.

my brethren and thy brethren, that they may judge betwixt us both.

141. 38 This ^ltwenty years have I been with thee; thy ^mewes and thy she-goats have not cast their young, and ⁿthe rams of thy flock have I not eaten.

39 That which was ^otorn of beasts I brought not unto thee; ^pI bare the loss of it: of my hand didst thou require it, whether stolen by day, ^qor stolen by night.

40 Thus I was; ^rin the day the drought consumed me, and the frost by night; and my sleep departed from mine eyes.

41 Thus have I been twenty years in thy house; I served thee ^sfourteen years for thy two daughters, and six years for thy cattle: and thou hast changed my wages ^tten times.

42 ^uExcept the God of my father, the God of Abraham, and the ^xFear of Isaac, had been with me, surely thou hadst sent me away now empty: God ^yhath seen mine affliction, and the labour of my hands, and rebuked thee yesternight.

43 And Laban answered, and said unto Jacob, These daughters are my daughters, and these children are my children, and these cattle are my cattle, and all that thou seest is mine: and what can I do this day unto these my daughters, or unto their children which they have born?

44 Now therefore come thou, ^zlet us make a covenant, I and thou; and let it be for ^aa witness between me and thee.

V. 39. Note, Ex. xxii. 7—15.

V. 40. The transition from great heat in the day, to chilling cold in the night, is often known in those regions.

V. 42. The fear of Isaac.] The God, whom Isaac (who was still living) worshipped with “reverence and “godly fear.”—Jacob’s language, though keen, was too obviously true to admit of any answer; and it is too plain to need any comment. (Marg. Ref.) Laban’s silence proves Jacob’s innocence.

V. 45, 46. Thus a large heap of stones was formed to be an abiding memorial of this compact, and a reproach to him who should pass over this heap to injure the other.

V. 47. Jegar-sahadutha—Galeed.] The former word in the Chaldee or Syriac, the latter in Hebrew, signifies the heap of witness. These were indeed distinct dialects of the 45 And Jacob took a ^bstone, and set ^bit up for a pillar.

46 And Jacob said unto his brethren, ^cGather stones; and they took stones, and made an heap: and they did eat there upon the heap.

47 And Laban called it ^{*}Jegar-sahadutha: but Jacob called it [†]Galeed.

48 And Laban said, This heap is a witness between me and thee this day. Therefore was the name of it called Galeed:

49 And [‡]Mizpah; for he said, The Lord watch between me and thee, when we are absent one from another.

50 If thou shalt ^dafflict my daughters, or if thou shalt take other wives besides my daughters, no man is with us; see, ^eGod is witness betwixt me and thee.

51 And Laban said to Jacob, Behold this heap, and behold this pillar, which I have cast betwixt me and thee;

52 This ^fheap be witness, and this pillar be witness, that I will not pass over this heap to thee, and that thou shalt not pass over this heap and this pillar unto me, for harm.

53 The ^gGod of Abraham, and the God of Nahor, the God of their father, ^hjudge betwixt us. And Jacob sware by the ⁱFear of his father Isaac.

54 Then Jacob ^joffered sacrifice upon the mount, and called his brethren to eat bread: and they ^kdid eat bread, and tarried all night in the mount.

55 And early in the morning Laban rose up, ^land kissed his sons and his daughters, and ^mblessed them: and Laban departed, ⁿand returned unto his place.

same general language, which marked the inhabitants of the different regions; though they had no difficulty in understanding each other.

V. 53. There seems to be some ambiguity in Laban’s language, respecting the God by whom he sware: for Abraham and Nahor, and their father Terah, had worshipped other Gods in Mesopotamia: (Josh. xxiv. 2 :) and Laban’s expressions in this discourse imply that he was an idolater, and did not worship the true God alone. (29, 30.) Jacob therefore appealed to the God of his father Isaac, who had never been an idolater, that he might not leave it in doubt, to whom he rendered this act of solemn worship.

V. 54, 55. Laban had spoken of a common feast (27); but Jacob offered a solemn sacrifice, and feasted the com-

CHAP. XXXII.

Jacob has a vision of angels, 1, 2. He sends a message to Esau; and, alarmed by the report of his coming with four hundred men, prays for deliverance, 3—12. He prepares a present for Esau; instructs his servants, and passes the brook Jabbok, 13—23. He wrestles at Peniel; prevails, is blessed, and called Israel; yet goes away halting, 24—32.

AND Jacob went on his way, and the angels of God met him.

2 And when Jacob saw them, he pany in a religious manner. In this we read the different characters of the two men; and hence we may form some estimate of the low state of religion in Laban's family.—This parting proved final; and we hear no more of Laban, or any other of that branch of Abraham's family; who seem after this to have sunk into idolatry, and to have been lost among the other Gentiles.—Some indeed think that Balaam descended from Laban; but this is quite uncertain.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS:

V. 1—21.

How particularly are the affairs of these families related, while the great events of states and kingdoms are passed over in silence, and buried in obscurity! Indeed the Bible is intended to teach people the duties of common life; and how to serve God, enjoy comfort, and do good, in their several stations and relations: and but very few are concerned in the government of empires, compared with the numbers who support the characters of parents and children, husbands and wives, masters and servants.—The selfish think themselves robbed of all which others obtain from them, however justly; and covetousness destroys even natural affection. Yet those objects, which the men of the world count "all their glory," are so scanty, that, in the pursuit or possession of them, they stand in each other's way, and every one seems to be taking from the rest: hence discontent, and envy, and discord. But there are possessions of such extent, as amply to suffice for all: happy they who seek them in the first place!—We may however thankfully receive, and cheerfully use, the portion which Providence allots us, as far as we obtain it with a clear conscience, and a testimony in the consciences of others to our fidelity and integrity: and even if men should hate and criminate us without reason, yet, when "our ways please the LORD," he will plead our cause, and "make our very enemies to be at peace with us;" he will vindicate our characters, do us justice, and over-rule every event for our good.—In all our removals we should have respect to the command, promise, and providence of God; and if he be with us, we need not fear in the most dangerous circumstances. Indeed, so many are the perils with which we are surrounded, that nothing else can reasonably ensure our safety, or encourage our hearts.—The remembrance of favoured seasons of communion with God is very refreshing to us, when embarrassed in difficulties; and the recollection of our vows should be frequent, that we may not fail to fulfil them.

V. 22—55.

God can put a bridle into the mouth of wicked men, to said, This is ^b God's host: and he called ^c the name of that place *Mahanaim.

3 And Jacob sent messengers before him to Esau his brother, unto the land of ^d Seir, the ^e country of ^e Edom.

4 And he commanded them, saying, Thus shall ye speak unto ^f my lord Esau: Thy ^g servant Jacob saith thus, I have sojourned with Laban, and stayed there until now.

xxxiii. 8. Ex. xxxii. 22. 1 Sam. xxvi. 17. Prov. xv. 1. x. 4.

^b Josh. v. 14
^c 2 Kings vi. 17.
Pa. xxxiv. 7.
ciii. 21. cxlviii
2. Luke ii. 13.
^d Josh. xxi. 38.
2 Sam. ii. 8.
xvii. 24. 27.
1 Kings ii. 8. iv.
14.
^e *That is, two hosts, or camps.
Cant. vi. 13.
^f xiv. 6. xxxvi. 6
—8. Deut. ii. 5.
22. Josh. xxiv.
4.
^g † Heb. feld.
^e See on xxv. 30.
f 5. 18. iv. 7. xxiii
6. xxvi. 29. 37.
g 1 Kings xx. 32. Ec.

restrain their malice, even without changing their hearts; and then, though they have no love for his people, they will pretend to it, and try to make a merit of necessity. But great watchfulness is necessary to keep out evil, and the appearance of evil, even from those undertakings which are in themselves according to the will of God; yet nothing less than this can stop the mouths of our enemies, and make those ashamed who would speak evil of us.—There are seasons, when a sharp reproof may consist with meekness, and reminding others of our services, with humility: but great wisdom and grace are necessary on such occasions, that the reproofs may be well timed, well conducted, and unanswerably convincing; and they should always be accompanied with a disposition to forgiveness, to accept of even a partial apology, and to overlook injurious insinuations.—Those who mean honestly and kindly, need not scruple assurances; but these should be solemnly entered into, in the fear of God, who is both the Witness and the Avenger of fraud and injustice.—And finally, an amicable conclusion of differences, though upon disadvantageous terms, is generally preferable, in respect of our innocence, peace, and interest, to the most successful litigation.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXII. V. 1, 2. A company of angels met Jacob, in some visible and glorious appearance, to encourage him with the assurance of the divine protection, especially from the power and anger of Esau. This he called, "God's host," or army; by which we learn that the angels were numerous, and appeared very formidable and powerful, to protect or to destroy. Mahanaim signifies two armies: the one, as some suppose, having conveyed him safe from Mesopotamia, the other was ready to welcome him to Canaan, and receive him under their protection. Or perhaps one encamped before, and the other behind him and his company, as his guard on every side, both against Laban and Esau.

V. 3. The word rendered "angel" signifies a messenger: so that the same term is used for the messengers whom Jacob sent to Esau, and for those whom the Lord sent to protect him.—While Jacob, to whom the promise and blessing belonged, had been a hired servant to a hard master; Esau was become a prince, and had established his authority in mount Seir, which was afterwards called Edom from him. (xxv. 30.)

V. 4, 5. My lord.] Esau's success in obtaining authority, probably by conquest, in mount Seir, had no doubt procured him from others the title of honour which Jacob

h xxx. 43. xxxiii 11. Job vi. 22 5 And ^hI have oxen, and asses, flocks, and men-servants, and women-servants: and I have sent to tell my lord, that I ¹may find grace in thy sight.

i xxxiii. 8, 15. xlvii. 25. Ruth ii. 2. 1 Sam. i. 18. 2 Sam. xvi. 4 k 11. xxvii. 40, 4. xxxviii. 1. Amos v. 19.
l Ex. xiv. 10. Ps. lv. 4, 5. lxi. 2. Matt. viii. 26. 2 Cor. i. 8-10.
6 And the messengers returned to Jacob, saying, We came to thy brother Esau, and also he cometh to meet thee, ^kand four hundred men with him.

m xxxiii. 1-3. Matt. x. 16.
n xxxiii. 1-3. Matt. x. 16.
o 1 Sam. xxx. 6. 2 Chr. xx. 6, 12. xxxii. 20. Ps. xxxv. 4-6. 1. 15. xci. 15. Phil. iv. 6, 7. xxviii. 18. xxxi. 20, 42. Ex. iii. 6. xxxi. 3, 13. Heb. less than all.
p xviii. 27. 2 Sam. vii. 18. Job xlii. 6, 6. 1s. vi. 5. Esai. 7. Dan. ix. 8, 9. Luke v. 8. 2 Cor. xii. 11. 1 Tim. i. 12-15. 1 Pet. v. 5. 1 John i. 8-10. xxiv. 27. xxviii. 15. Mic. vii. 20. xxxviii. 10, 11. Job viii. 7. t 7.
u 1 Sam. xii. 10. xxiv. 15. Ps. xxxv. 20. xxxi. 2. cxix. 134. cxliii. 5. Dan. iii. 17. Matt. vi. 13.
x Hos. x. 14.
y Ex. xxxii. 13. Num. xxxiii. 19. Matt. xxiv. 35. Tit. 1. 2. Heb. vi. 17.
z xxxviii. 13-15. xlv. 3, 4.
7 Then Jacob was ¹greatly afraid, and distressed: and he divided the people that was with him, and the flocks and herds, and the camels, into two bands;

8 And said, ^mIf Esau come to the one company and smite it, then the other company which is left shall escape.

9 ¶ And ⁿJacob said, °O God of my father Abraham, and God of my father Isaac, the LORD ^pwhich saidst unto me, Return unto thy country, and to thy kindred, and I will deal well with thee:

10 I am ^qnot ^rworthy of the least of all the mercies, and of all the ^struth which thou hast shewed unto thy servant; for with ^tmy staff I passed over this Jordan, and now I am become ^utwo bands.

11 ^vDeliver me, I pray thee, from the hand of my brother, from the hand of Esau: for I fear him, lest he will come and smite me, ^wand ^xthe mother ^ywith the children.

12 And ^zthou saidst, ^aI will surely do thee good, and make thy seed as the sand of the sea, which cannot be numbered for multitude.

13 ¶ And he lodged there that same night; and took of that ^bwhich came to his hand, ^ca present for Esau his brother;

14 Two ^dhundred she-goats and twenty he-goats, two hundred ewes and twenty rams.

15 Thirty milch eamels with their colts, forty kine and ten bulls, twenty she-asses and ten foals.

16 And he delivered them into the hand of his servants, every drove by themselves; and said unto his servants, Pass over before me, and put a space betwixt drove and drove.

17 And he commanded the foremost, saying, When Esau my brother meeteth thee, and asketh thee, saying, ^eWhose art thou? and whither goest thou? and whose are these before thee?

18 Then thou shalt say: They ^fbe thy servant Jacob's; it is a present sent unto my lord Esau: and behold also he is behind us.

19 And so commanded he the second, and the third, and all that followed the droves, saying, On this manner shall ye speak unto Esau, when ye find him.

20 And say ye moreover, Behold, thy servant Jacob is behind us: for he said, I will appease him with the present that goeth before me, and after-gave him. By this humble message Jacob intimated, that he was well satisfied with his present possessions, the fruit of his labour; and was ready to give up all pretensions to Isaac's substance, and to render his brother all suitable respect.

V. 6-8. Jacob doubtless understood from the messengers, that Esau came towards him in a hostile manner. This appears from the narrative itself, and from Jacob's precautions, and from the language of his prayer: and to suppose the contrary, is to assume, without the least proof, that both Jacob and the messengers were mistaken. Indeed, the consciousness of having deeply offended his brother might render him suspicious; yet Esau's resentment seems actually to have revived on this occasion. And though the Lord did not restrain him by force, or in a dream prohibit him from injuring Jacob, as he had prohibited Laban; yet he influenced his heart to kindness, and blessed the means of conciliation which Jacob employed. (Prov. xvi. 7.)

V. 9-12. There can scarcely be a finer model of genuine prayer than this. Jacob's thankful acknowledgment of former unmerited favours; the humble confession of his entire unworthiness; his simple description of his fears and distress; his unreserved reference of the whole matter to God, renouncing all other dependence, and resting all his hopes on him; his explicit mention of the very words both of the Lord's promises and commands, as engaging his own glory to protect him; and his anxiety for the preservation of his family, but especially of his children, in whose lives the promises seemed chiefly concerned;—these are points peculiarly worthy of notice and of imitation.—Thus he made “the name of the LORD his strong tower,” and could not but be safe.

V. 13. Came to his hand.] Or, that which Providence had put into his possession.

V. 14, 15. The present was noble; and not intended as a restitution for injuries done to Esau.—The blessing belonged to Jacob, by God's own appointment; and Esau was only affronted, and disappointed in his object, not injured in his property, by Jacob's misconduct.

V. 16-20. Jacob had purchased the birth-right, and the dominion had been expressly promised him in the ward I will see his face: ^s peradventure he will accept ^a of me.

^{* Heb. my face.} 21 So went the present over before him: and himself lodged that night in the company.

22 And he rose up that night, and took ^h his two wives, and his two women-servants, and his eleven sons, and passed over the ford ^l Jabbok.

23 And he took them, and [†] sent them over the brook, and sent over that he had.

24 ¶ And Jacob was left alone: and there ^k wrestled a ^l man with him, until the ^z breaking of the day.

25 And when he saw ^m that he prevailed not against him, he ⁿ touched the hollow of his thigh: and the hollow of bleasing: yet, understanding that the temporal advantages were principally intended for his posterity, and satisfied with the spiritual benefits for himself, he paid homage to Esau, as an acknowledged superior.—His liberal present being thus divided, and the persons attending each drove thus repeating the same expressions of respect to Esau, would have a powerful tendency to soften his resentment and conciliate his favour.

V. 21—23. Marg. Ref.

V. 24. Having taken every needful precaution, Jacob retired into some solitary place, to renew his earnest supplications; and while he was thus employed, one “in fashion as a man” appeared to him, and engaged in wrestling with him. Nothing requires more vigour, activity, attention, and unintermitting exertion, than wrestling; which seems on this account to have been selected as an emblem of the fervent prayer of faith, persisted in amidst delays, alarms, discouragements, and opposition from every side; and which at length will surely be crowned with success. (Marg. Ref. k.)

V. 25. Prevailed not.] This circumstance significantly marked out that frame of mind, which refuses, as it were, to yield, or take a denial. (Notes, Matt. xv. 21—28.) He with whom Jacob wrestled, by touching the hollow of his thigh, and dislocating the bone, evidently shewed, that when he suffered himself to be prevailed over, it was the effect of mercy, and the gracious acceptance of Jacob’s importunity in prayer. The dislocation seems to have been momentary, though the effect in some measure continued afterwards.

V. 26. The morning now called Jacob to the care of his family, which was here intimated to him. But Jacob, in the person who contended with him, recognized a friend; yea, that Friend, from whom all blessings flow; and therefore he refused to let him go, till he had blessed him.

V. 27, 28. This change of name, from Jacob to Israel, signified, that he was no longer to be regarded as one who got the blessing, yet with some discredit, by twice supplanting his elder brother; but, as a prince of God, (marg.) who had wrestled with him for it, and prevailed to his everlasting honour. Having power with God, he would Jacob’s thigh was out of joint, as he wrestled with him.

26 And he said, ^o Let me go, for the day breaketh: And he said, ^p I will not let thee go, except ^q thou bless me.

27 And he said unto him, ^r What is thy name? And he said Jacob.

28 And he said, ^s Thy name shall be called no more Jacob, but ^t Israel: for as a prince hast thou ^u power with God and ^v with men, and hast prevailed.

29 And Jacob asked him, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, thy name: And he said, ^x Wherefore is it, that thou dost ask after my name? and he ^y blessed him there.

30 And ^z Jacob called the name of surely also prevail with man. Thus he was, so to speak, knighted in the field. His posterity inherited his new name, but were never called after his original name; and the nation of Israel was a type of “the Israel of God,” in every age and country, who wrestle and prevail with him by faith and prayer. (Note, John i. 47—51.)

V. 29. Wherefore? &c.] After what had passed, there could be no ground of doubt or uncertainty, in respect of Him with whom Jacob had wrestled: and it was therefore wholly needless to enquire his name. But Jacob’s other request was granted, “and he blessed him there;” probably ratifying to him the blessings covenanted to Abraham, and Isaac, and afterwards to him. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 30. He who appeared to Jacob was before called a Man; yet here he is called God. The prophet Hosea calls him “the Angel, even JEHOVAH the God of hosts, JEHOVAH is his memorial;” and says, that “Jacob wept and made supplication to him.” (Note, Hos. xii. 3—6.) We cannot, therefore, reasonably doubt the sentiments of Jacob, of Moses, and of Hosea, concerning him who now wrestled with Jacob, and surnamed him Israel. And the Scriptures referred to in the margin, if carefully examined and compared, will have a powerful tendency to convince the impartial enquirer, that he could be no other than the eternal Son of God, by these appearances anticipating his incarnation.—It is indeed asserted by the Rabbinical expositors, and from them adopted by some learned men, that the SHECHINAH, or visible glory of God, of which the attendant angels constituted a part, was displayed on this occasion, as well as on all others of a similar kind; and that these expressions, and the language often used by the angel who appeared, are to be thus accounted for.—But there seems no scriptural ground for this sentiment; and it was probably first devised, to answer the arguments taken from such passages by the ancient Christian writers, for the Deity of the predicted Messiah, and the doctrine of the Trinity; though it has been since espoused by many who profess those doctrines. The word SHECHINAH is not found in Scripture, but only in the Rabbinical Hebrew. It signifies merely a habitation: but it is used to denote all those appearances, by which the special presence of JE-

^h xxxix. 23—35. xxx. 1—20.
ⁱ Deut. ii. 37. iii. 16. Josh. xii. 2.
[†] Heb. caused to pass.
^k xxx. 8. Luke xiii. 24. xxii. 44. Rom. viii. 26. xv. 30. Eph. vi. 12. Col. ii. 1. iv. 12. Heb. v. 7.
^l 23. 30. Is. xxxiii. 2. Hos. xii. 3—5. 1 Cor. xv. 47.
^z Heb. ascending of the morning.
^m Cant. ii. 17.
ⁿ Num. xiv. 13, 14. Matt. xv. 29. Luke xi. 5—8.
^o 2 Cor. xii. 7—9.

^o Ex. xxxix. 19. Deut. ix. 14. Is. lxxiv. 7. Luke xxiv. 28, 29.
^p Cant. i. iii. 4. Luke xiii. 1—7. Rom. viii. 37.
^q 1 Chr. iv. 10. Ps. lxxvii. 1. 6, 7. cxv. 12, 13.
^r 29.
^s xvii. 5. 15. xxxiii. 20. xxxv. 10. 2 Kings xvii. 34. Is. lxii. 2—4. lxx. 15.
^t That is, A Prince of God.
^u 24. Hos. xii. 3—5.
^v xxv. 31. xxvii. 33—36. xxxi. 24. xxxiii. 4. 1 Sam. xxvi. 25. Prov. xvi. 7.
^x 27. Judg. xiii. 16—18. Is. ix. 6. y xxvii. 28, 29. xxxviii. 3, 4. 13, 14.
^z 31. Penult. xxviii. 19. Judg. viii. 8. 17. 1 Kings xii. 25.

• That is, The face of God.
 a xvi. 13. Ex. xxiv. 10, 11, xxxiii. 14. 19—23. Num. xii. 8. Judg. vi. 22, 23. xiii. 21, 22. 1s. vi. 5. John i. 18. 2 Tim i. 10 b 25.

the place ^a Peniel: for ^a I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved.

31 And as he passed over Penuel, the sun rose upon him, and ^b he halted upon his thigh.

32 Therefore the children of Israel eat not of the sinew which shrank, ^{1 Sam. v. 5.} which is upon the hollow of the thigh, unto this day: because he touched the hollow of Jacob's thigh, in the sinew that shrank.

HOVAH was announced. It is readily allowed, that a visible glory of this kind afterwards appeared to Moses and to Israel; and perhaps in the holy of holies, both of the tabernacle and temple, above the Mercy-Seat. (Ex. xiii. 21, 22. xiv. 19—24. xvi. 10. xxxiii. 7—11. 18—23. xl. 34—38. Num. xii. 4, 5. xiv. 10. xvi. 19. 42. 1 Kings viii. 10, 11.) But it must strike every attentive reader, that these displays of the glory of the Lord differed exceedingly from such appearances, as we have repeatedly considered; in which an Angel spake in the name of God, and as JEHOVAH; or one in human form was addressed by the patriarchs as JEHOVAH, and spoken of by them and by the historian in that character. No doubt, the tabernacle and temple were intended as types of Him, in “whom dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily.” He in fact is the true SHECHINAH: “No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him:” and I cannot doubt, after the most deliberate examination, that the exposition, which has been given in the notes, on this and many preceding passages, is the only true, scriptural, and consistent interpretation.—Jacob, beholding the Lord in human form, was not overwhelmed by the appearance; as it was generally supposed they must be who beheld the divine glory. He had also received an assurance of deliverance from the dreaded resentment of Esau; and in both respects his life was preserved. (Note, Ex. xxxiii. 20—23.)

V. 31. Halted.] Israel carried this token away with him, that it was a reality, and not a dream, or vision, or delusive imagination.

V. 32. Probably this was done by some divine appointment, before the giving of the law: and the meaning was clear to them, though obscure to us.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—12.

Though we cannot behold the angels meeting us, and, as “the host of God,” encamping round us; yet, possessing that “faith which is the evidence of things not seen,” we may have a full and comfortable assurance that they actually do so. And we need to be encouraged, not only by expecting the guardianship of angels, but by a firm reliance on the protection of the God of angels, to render us secure and happy in such a world as this; where victory in one conflict only reminds us to arm for another; and deliverance from one trouble or danger, to prepare for further suffering. Yet our severest trials frequently result from former transgressions, and call them to our remembrance for our deeper humiliation.—Prudent precautions may and ought to be employed, by those who simply trust in God; and to neglect them is to tempt him: nor are any means more proper to disarm resentment, especially that of proud and worldly men, than humble, respectful language, and cheerfully relinquishing the objects of contention. Yet these are but means; and unless God arrest and influence the heart, they cannot subdue the power of jealousy and revenge.—In times of urgent danger, even strong faith and repeated assurances will not entirely exclude terror and distress: but they will put life and vigour into humble, fervent prayer; and enable us to plead the promises, to remember former mercies and deliverances; and, in the path of unreserved obedience, so to leave ourselves in the Lord's hands, as shall ensure protection, and restore peace to our souls.

V. 13—32.

Every duty has its season; and the care of our families, according to present emergencies, may properly succeed, though it must not exclude our devotions: and again, when we have used every prudent means for our own and others' good, we must retire, and pray for the blessing. If we are in a proper frame of mind, we shall rather abridge ourselves of wonted refreshments than neglect communion with God: nay, there may be urgent cases, when even the night itself does not seem too long to pour out our hearts before him; and if our faith do not fail, our spirits flag, and we grow formal, our devotions should not be counted too long. When “the Spirit of God helpeth our infirmities,” and our intense, earnest, and vast desires can scarcely find words large and emphatick enough to utter them, but we still mean more than we can express; then prayer is indeed wrestling with God: and, however we be tried or discouraged, we shall certainly prevail. He will approve our importunity, and largely communicate his blessings; and, prevailing with him in prayer, we shall succeed against all our enemies who persist in striving with us, and prevail on many to be at peace with us. Indeed, in every case in which we desire to prevail with man, fervent prayer to God is our most efficacious means. (Notes, Neh. i. 5—11. ii. 4.)—But it is only in human nature that sinners can see God, and live. “The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ,” God as reconciled in and through him, is the Object of a sinner's acceptable worship; with him we may be as importunate as we please; and if, in humble faith, we determine “not to let him go except he bless us,” he will take it well: nor should we ever leave off wrestling, in the nights of trouble or temptation, till the day break, nay, till “the Sun of righteousness arise,” upon our souls. Thus shall we be acknowledged as true Israelites, and crowned as princes with God: and while we carry away the memorials of our victories, we must record his goodness, for his glory and the benefit of others. But we must not wonder, if even our sweetest consolations carry with them evidences of our infirmity; and if we have afterwards a thorn in the flesh and buffetings of Satan, to preserve us from being exalted above measure.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Esau and Jacob meet, and after an amicable conference, Esau departs, 1—16. Jacob abides at Succoth; and buys a field, and builds an altar at Shechem, 17—20.

AND Jacob lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold, ^aEsau came, and with him four hundred men. ^bAnd he divided the children unto Leah, and unto Rachel, and unto the two hand-maids.

2 And he put the hand-maids and their children foremost, and Leah and her children after, ^cand Rachel and Joseph hindermost.

3 And he ^dpassed over before them, and ^ebowed himself to the ground seven times, until he came near to his brother.

4 And Esau ran to meet him, and ^fembraced him, and ^gfell on his neck, and kissed him: and they wept.

5 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw the women and the children; and said, Who are those ^hwith thee? And he said, The ⁱchildren which God hath graciously given thy servant.

6 Then the hand-maidens came near, they and their children, and they bowed themselves.

7 And Leah also with her children came near, and bowed themselves: and after came Joseph near, and Rachel, and they bowed themselves.

8 And he said, ^jWhat meanest thou by ^kall this drove, which I met? And he said, These are to find grace in the sight of my lord.

9 And Esau said, I have enough; ^lmy brother, ^mkeep that thou hast unto thyself.

10 And Jacob said, Nay, I pray thee, ⁿif now I have found grace in thy sight, then receive my present at my hand: for therefore ^oI have seen thy face, as though I had seen the face of God, and thou wast pleased with me.

11 Take, I pray thee, ^pmy blessing that is brought to thee; because God hath dealt graciously with me, ^qand because I have ^renough; and he ^surged him, and he took it.

12 And he said, Let us take our journey, and let us go, and I will go before thee.

13 And he said unto him, My lord knoweth that ^tthe children are tender, and the flocks and herds with young are with me; and if men should overdrive them one day, all the flock will die.

14 Let my lord, I pray thee, pass over before his servant: and I will lead on softly, ^uaccording as the cattle that goeth before me, and the children ^vbe able to endure; until I come unto my lord ^wunto Seir.

^j Heb. What is all this band to thee?
^k xxxii. 13—20.

^l iv. 9 xxxvii. 41. Judg. xx. 23. Acts ix. 17. xxi. 20. Philem. 7. 16.

^m Heb. be that to thee that is thine.
ⁿ xix. 19. xlvii. 29. l. 4. Ex. xxxiii. 12, 13. Ruth ii. 10. 1 Sam. xx. 3. Jer. xxxi. 2. m xxxii. 30. Job xxxiii. 26. Matt. xviii. 10. Rev. xxii. 4.

^o Josh. xv. 19. 1 Sam. xxv. 27. xxx. 26. 2 Kings v. 15. 2 Cor. ix. 5, 6.

^p 9. Phil. iv. 11, 12, 18.

^q Heb. all things.
Rom. viii. 32. 1 Cor. iii. 21. 2 Cor. vi. 10. Phil. iv. 18.

^r 2 Kings ii. 17. v. 16. 23. Luke xiv. 23.

^s 1s. xl. 11. Ez. xxxiv. 23. John xxi 15—17.

^t Heb. according to the foot of the work, &c; and according to the foot of the children.
Mark iv. 33. Rom. xv. 1. 1 Cor. iii. 2. ix. 19—22. See on xxxii. 3. —Deut. ii. 1. Judg. v. 4. 2 Chr. xx. 10. Ez. xxv. 8. xxxv. 2, 3.

^u 1s. xl. 11. Ez. xxxiv. 23. John xxi 15—17.

^v Heb. according to the foot of the work, &c; and according to the foot of the children.
Mark iv. 33. Rom. xv. 1. 1 Cor. iii. 2. ix. 19—22. See on xxxii. 3. —Deut. ii. 1. Judg. v. 4. 2 Chr. xx. 10. Ez. xxv. 8. xxxv. 2, 3.

^w 2 Kings ii. 17. v. 16. 23. Luke xiv. 23.

^a xxvii. 41. 42. xxxii. 6. ^b xxxii. 7.

^c xxix. 30. xxx. 22—24. xxxvii. 3. Mal. iii. 17.

^d John x. 4. 11, 12. ^e xviii. 2. xlii. 6. xliii. 26.

^f xxxii. 28. xliii. 30. xlv. 2. 15. Ezra vii. 27. 28. Neh. i. 11. Ps. xxxiv. 4. Prov. xvi. 7. xxi. 1.

^g xlv. 14. xlvii. 29. Luke xv. 20. Acts xx. 37. ^h Heb. to thee.

ⁱ xxx. 2. xlviii. 9. Ruth iv. 13. 1 Chr. xxviii. 3. Ps. cxxvii. 3. 1s. viii. 18.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXIII. V. 2. Rachel.] Rachel and Joseph being dearest to Jacob, he provided most carefully for their security.

V. 3. Jacob still prosecuted his plan of satisfying Esau, that he made no claim to secular pre-eminence, but readily yielded him all due respect, as his superior.

V. 4. In answer to Jacob's prayer, and in accomplishment of the promise made to him, the Lord thus influenced Esau's heart, to the exercise of natural affection towards his brother. The reconciliation from this time seems to have been cordial; though there is no proof or token that Esau was become truly religious.

V. 5. The children, &c.] The piety and simplicity of this answer is well worthy of admiration and imitation. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 7. It is remarkable that, on this affecting occasion, we find no intimation of Esau's expressing any good will to his brother Jacob's numerous family, thus respectfully bowing before him, one after another. No good wish towards them is recorded, such as even irreligious men often make in similar circumstances. Much less was any prayer offered in their behalf, for the blessing of God upon them.

This should be carefully noticed in estimating Esau's character.

V. 10. Jacob expressed the great satisfaction, which he took in this friendly interview; as if it resembled even the pleasure of intimate communion with God. We may suppose him to have used a proverbial expression: yet we cannot so cordially approve of this answer, as of the preceding; unless in Esau's conduct, he recognized the special presence and favour of God, who was thus granting the prayers which he had presented, when he saw his face and wrestled with him. (xxxii. 30.)—To accept a present from an inferior, was a customary pledge of friendship, but refusing it implied disaffection: and the case in the eastern world is the same at this day.

V. 12. Esau thus offered to escort Jacob into the land of Seir.

V. 14. It is not likely that Jacob intended to settle in Seir with his family; nor do we know that he ever paid Esau a visit there, though he probably at this time intended it: there is no proof, however, that he did not. But, perhaps, on more mature consideration, or by divine monition, or because of some change in his circumstances, he might afterwards alter his intention, or fail of performing it.

CHAP. XXXIV.

15 And Esau said, Let me now

* Heb. set, or place.
 † Heb. Wherefore are with me: And he said, † What needeth it? Let me † find grace in the sight of my lord.

16 So Esau returned that day on his way unto Seir.

‡ That is, Booths.
 † John iii. 23.
 † That is, Booths.
 † John iii. 23.

17 ¶ And Jacob journeyed to Succoth, and built him an house, and made booths for his cattle: therefore the name of the place is called Succoth.

u Josh. xiii. 27.
 Judg. viii. 5. 8
 16. † Kings vii. 46
 Ps. lx. 6.

18 And Jacob came to Shalem a city of Shechem, which is in the land of Canaan, when he came from Padanaram; and pitched his tent before the city.

v Josh. xxiv. 1.
 Judg. ix. 1. Acts vii. 16. Shechem.
 2 xxv. 20. xxviii. 6, 7. xxxv. 9. xlv. 15.

19 And he bought a parcel of a field, where he had spread his tent, at the hand of the children of Hamor, Shechem's father, for an hundred pieces of money.

a xxxiii. 17—20. xlix. 29—32. Josh. xxiv. 32. John iv. 5.
 b xxxiv. 2, &c Acts vii. 16. Emmor.

20 And he erected there an altar, and called it El-Elohe-Israel.

† Or, lamba.
 c xii. 7, 8. xiii. 18.
 † That is, God, the God of Israel.
 xxxii. 28. xxxv. 7.

Dinah visits the daughters of the land, and is defiled by Shechem; who loves her and proposes to marry her, 1—12. Jacob's sons insidiously consent, on condition that all the Shechemites be circumcised; to which at Shechem's instance they submit, 13—24. Simeon and Levi murder all the men of Shechem, plunder the city, make captives of the women and children, and recover Dinah, 25—29. Jacob bitterly complains, and his sons excuse their conduct, 30, 31.

AND Dinah the daughter of Leah, which she bare unto Jacob, went out to see the daughters of the land.

a xxx. 21. xlv. 15.

2 And when Shechem the son of Hamor the Hivite, prince of the country, saw her, he took her, and lay with her, and defiled her.

b xxvi. 34. xxvii. 46. xxviii. 6. c xxxiii. 19.

3 And his soul clave unto Dinah the daughter of Jacob, and he loved the damsel, and spake kindly unto the damsel.

d vi. 2. xxxix. 6. 7. 2 Sam. xi. 2. Job xxxi. 1. 9. Matt. v. 28.
 † Heb. humbled her. Deut. xxi. 14. xxii. 24. 29. Judg. xix. 24. 25. Ez. xxii. 10, 11.

4 And Shechem spake unto his fa-

† Heb. to the heart of the damsel.
 2 Sam. xix. 7. 2 Chr. xxx. 22. Is. xl. 2. Hos. ii. 14. margin.

V. 15. What needeth it?] Guarded thus far by the angels of God, Jacob neither required nor wished for a guard of soldiers. The friendship of Esau was all that he asked. (Note, Ezra viii. 21—23.)

V. 17. Succoth was on the east side of Jordan, being the last station at which Jacob rested before he passed that river. After a very long journey, he staid here awhile, in some temporary habitation which he had hastily built, to rest and refresh his family and his flocks.

V. 18. Shalem.] This place was situated on the west side of Jordan, on which Jacob was after he had crossed that river. Some translate it, He came in peace to the city of Shechem; and it is probable that this is the true meaning of the clause.

V. 20. El-Elohe-Israel.] The altar was erected and inscribed to Him, with whom Jacob had before wrestled and prevailed, and by whom he had been surnamed Israel, as the very name indisputably proves: and this is an additional discovery, who that Man was; and an indication, what value Jacob put on the new name which he had thus received. (Notes, xxxii. 24—30.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

When we have poured out our souls before the Lord in fervent prayer, we are prepared to meet dangers and difficulties with confidence and comfort, and shall soon experience the mercy and faithfulness of God. He hath various methods of "making our enemies to be at peace with us:" he can either bind their hands, awe their spirits, excite natural affection, or plant supernatural grace in their hearts. Yet in all this the Lord works by suitable means; and "yielding" often forms the wisest method of "pacifying great offences." This is done by waving points in contest, paying all due respect, and receding from our temporal interest; and by manifesting to the consciences of our opponents, that we are satisfied with a portion earned by our labour, and neither envy nor covet their abundance; that we count it "more blessed to give than to receive;" that we consider ourselves happy in the Lord's favour, and under his protection; and that we want nothing more than to live in peace and amity, which we much desire and greatly value. Yet, in such circumstances, we must be careful that we do not carry too far our desire of pleasing, or our fear of offending, or profess more than consists with piety or sincerity: nor may we conceal or be ashamed of our religion, when in the company of those who fear not God. It is not therefore desirable to be too intimate with superior ungodly relations, who will expect us to join in their vanities, or at least to connive at them, though they disapprove and perhaps deride our religion; and thus they will either be a snare to us, or offended with our conduct. It is more prudent to keep at a distance, and live among such as have less ascendancy over us, and where we can be more at liberty.—Let us also observe, that we shall be least willing to expose to hazard that which we value most and love best: we shall therefore venture the loss of all things, rather than endanger the loss of our souls, if we know their value; or than renounce Christ, if we truly love him. And while we admire Jacob's tender care of his family and flocks, the good Shepherd of our souls, who "gathers the lambs in his bosom, and gently leads those that are with young," should not be forgotten; whose example we should all imitate, whether as parents, teachers, or pastors. Blessed be his name, he is still "The mighty God, the God of Israel:" may he who writes these reflections, and may all who read them, be numbered among the true Israel of God; that we may record his name, and rejoice in his love, through our pilgrimage here on earth, and for ever in the Canaan above! Amen.

^e xxi. 21. Judg. xiv. 2. 2 Sam. xiii. 13. ther Hamor, saying, ^e Get me this damsel to wife.

^f xxx 35. xxxvii. 13, 14. 1 Sam. xvi. 11. xvii. 15. Luke xv. 26, 29. 5 And Jacob heard that he had defiled Dinah his daughter: ^f now his sons were with his cattle in the field; and Jacob held his peace until they were come:

6 And Hamor the father of Shechem went out unto Jacob to commune with him.

7 ¶ And the sons of Jacob came out of the field when they heard it, and the men were grieved, and they were very wroth: because he had ^g wrought folly in Israel, in lying with Jacob's daughter; which ^h thing ought not to be done.

8 And Hamor communed with them, saying, ⁱ The soul of my son Shechem longeth for your daughter: I pray you give her him to wife.

9 And ^j make ye marriages with us, and give your daughters unto us, and take our daughters unto you.

10 And ye shall dwell with us: ^k and the land shall be before you; dwell and trade you therein, and get you possessions therein.

11 And Shechem said unto her father, and unto her brethren, Let me find grace in your eyes, and what ye shall say unto me I will give.

12 Ask me never so much ^l dowry and gift, and I will give according as ye shall say unto me: but give me the damsel to wife.

13 And the sons of Jacob answered Shechem and Hamor his father ^m deceitfully, and said, because he had defiled Dinah their sister:

14 And they said unto them, We cannot do this thing, to give our sister to one that is ⁿ uncircumcised: for that were a reproach unto us.

15 But in this will we consent unto you: ^o If ye will be as we be, that every male of you be circumcised;

16 Then will we give our daughters

^k 21—23. xiii. 9. xv. 15. xlii. 34. xlvii. 27.

^l xxiv. 53. xxix. 18. Ex. xxii. 16. 17. Deut. xxii. 28, 29. 1 Sam. xviii. 25—27. 2 Sam. iii. 14. Hos. iii. 2.

^m Judg. xv. 3. 2 Sam. xiii. 20—29. Ps. xli. 2. Prov. xii. 18—20. xxiv. 28, 29. xxvi. 24—26. Rom. xii. 19. 1 Thes. v. 15.

ⁿ xvii. 11. Josh. v. 2—9. 1 Sam. xiv. 6. xvii. 26. 36. 2 Sam. i. 20. xv. 7. 1 Kings xxi. 9. Matt. ii. 8. 13. Gal. iv. 12.

^g Deut. xxii. 15. Josh. vii. 15. Judg. xix. 23—26. xx. 6. 2 Sam. xiii. 12, 13. h xx. 9. Lev. iv. 2. 13. 27. Deut. xxiii. 17. Eph. v. 3. 1 Tim. v. 13. Jam. iii. 10.

ⁱ 3. 1 Kings xi. 2. Ps. lxxiii. 1. lxxiv. 2. cxix. 20.

^j vi. 2. xxiv. 3. xxvi. 34, 35. xxvii. 46. Deut. vii. 3.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXIV. V. 1. Jacob must have continued several years near Shechem, before the events recorded in this chapter took place; and this made way for too free an intercourse between his family and the Shechemites. Dinah seems to have been about the age of Joseph, or rather younger. As, some time after Jacob's departure from Shechem, Joseph was seventeen years of age, and went to his brethren and was sold by them; so Dinah could not at this time be more than fifteen years old. She was an only daughter, doubtless much beloved, and probably too much indulged; and having got acquainted with the daughters of their heathen neighbours, she went to visit them, and to look about with them, as the original implies, probably on some publick occasion of mirth and festivity: but it does not appear, whether it was with or without the consent of her parents.

V. 2. There is nothing, in the narrative, which implies that Shechem committed a rape on Dinah; nay, the contrary is denoted in the words, "Should he deal with our sister, as with an harlot" (31)? for force is not used with harlots. The Jewish expositors, however, assert that he ravished her. Perhaps they devised this, in order to palliate the cruelty and injustice of Jacob's sons, by the greatness of the provocation. But Shechem rather seems to have used the common arts of seduction; and to have detained Dinah with the promise of marrying her, till she was afterwards taken away by her brethren.

V. 5. Jacob kept silence till his sons returned home; as scarcely knowing what to say, or as afraid, either of exasperating the men of Shechem, or of taking some improper step. Probably, he would have acted more wisely, if he had taken the management of the business wholly upon himself: instead of entrusting it with his sons, who were young, rash, and violent, and had too-much influence with him.

V. 7. Jacob's sons were extremely grieved and enraged; more, probably, on account of the disgrace of their family, than for the sin committed against God.—What follows seems to be the sentiment of the historian, who spake according to the language of the times in which he wrote, to intimate to the children of Israel, the inconsistency of such practices with their name and profession: for it is not probable, that at this early period the name of Israel was so well known, and so much regarded in its genuine import, by the sons of Jacob.

V. 8—12. Hamor seems to have made his proposal to Jacob alone, in the first instance, who deferred him till his sons came home, when it was more fully stated to them. Shechem appears to have been sincerely desirous of conciliating their favour, and obtaining their consent to his marriage with Dinah, on any terms. Nothing, as matters then stood, could have been spoken more fairly: and it may be questioned whether, in such a case, it would have been wrong in Jacob to consent to Dinah's marriage; though the proposal, of forming further connexions of that kind, ought perhaps to have been declined. But Shechem's conduct in detaining Dinah did not well accord to his language.

V. 13. Because, &c.] Jacob's sons made Shechem's sin the excuse for their own deceitful project. Perhaps at first most of them only intended to procure an opportunity of rescuing their sister, in case Shechem should refuse to restore her peaceably: but Simeon and Levi formed and executed a far deeper scheme of revenge and plunder. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 14—17. Neither Abraham nor Isaac had daughters: both Isaac and Jacob had married the daughters of uncirunto you, and we will take your daughters to us, and we will dwell with you, and we will become one people.

17 But if ye will not hearken unto us to be circumcised, then will we take our daughter, and we will be gone.

18 And their words pleased Hamor, and Shechem Hamor's son.

19 And the young man deferred not to do the thing, ^p because he had delight in Jacob's daughter: and he was more ^q honourable than all the house of his father.

20 And Hamor and Shechem his son came unto ^r the gate of their city, and communed with the men of their city, saying,

21 These men are peaceable with us, therefore let them dwell in the land, and trade therein; for the land, behold, it is large enough for them; let us take their daughters to us for wives, and let us give them our daughters.

22 Only herein ^a will the men consent unto us, for to dwell with us, to be one people, if every male among us be circumcised, as they are circumcised.

23 Shall ^t not their cattle, and their substance, and every beast of their's be ours? Only let us consent unto them, and they will dwell with us.

24 And unto Hamor and unto Shechem his son hearkened all that went out of the gate of his city: and ^u every male was circumcised, all that went out of the gate of his city.

25 ¶ And it came to pass on the third day, when they were ^v sore, that two of the sons of Jacob, ^w Simeon and Levi, Dinah's brethren, took each man his sword, and came upon the city boldly, and slew all the males.

26 And they slew Hamor and Shechem his son with the ^x edge of the sword, and took Dinah out of Shechem's house, and went out.

27 The sons of Jacob came upon the slain, and ^y spoiled the city; because ^z they had defiled their sister.

28 They took their sheep, and their oxen, and their asses, and that which was in the city, and that which was in the field.

29 And all their wealth, and all their little ones, and their wives took they captive, and spoiled even all that was in the house.

30 ¶ And Jacob said to Simeon and Levi, ^b Ye have troubled me to make me ^c to stink among the inhabitants of the land, amongst the Canaanites, and the Perizzites; ^d and I being few in number, they shall gather themselves together against me, and slay me, ^e and I shall be destroyed, I and my house.

31 And they said, 'Should he deal with our sister as with an harlot?

p xxix. 20. Cant. viii. 6. Is. lxii. 4.

q Num. xxii. 15. 2 Kings v. 1. Is. iii. 3-5. v. 13. xxvii. 8, 9. Acts xiii. 50. xvii. 12.

r xxii. 17. xxiii. 10. Ruth iv. 1. Job xxix. 7. Prov. xxxi. 23. Am. v. 10. 12. 15. Zech. viii. 16.

a 16, 17.

t John ii. 16. vi. 28, 27. Acts xix. 24-26. 1 Tim vi. 6-10.

u xvii. 23. Is. i. 10. -16. Matt. vii. 6. Rom. ii. 29. 29. 1 Cor. vii. 19.

x Jost. v. 8. v xxix. 33. 3a xlix. 5-7. Num. xxxi. 7. 17.

x Heb. mouth. Deut. xxxii. 42. 2 Sam. ii. 26. Is. xxxi. 8.

z Est. ix. 16. 16.

a 2. 31. See on 15.

b Josh. vii. 25. 1 Kings xviii. 18. 1 Chr. ii. 7. c Ex. v. 21. 1 Sam. xiii. 4. xxvii. 12. 1 Chr. xix. 6. d Deut. iv. 27. vii. 7. Ps. cv. 12.

e xii. 2. 12. xxviii. 13, 14. 1 Sam. xvi. 2. xxvii. 1. Rom. iv. 18-20. See on 13. xliii. 7.

cumcised persons; and we have reason to conclude, that most of Jacob's sons, if not all, did the same. (Ex. vi. 15.) As far as we know, there was no law nor custom against intermarriages with uncircumcised persons, at that time existing; though the intermarriages of Abraham's family, with idolaters in general, and with the inhabitants of the land, in particular, were in many ways discountenanced. Indeed, this seems to have been merely a pretence, as used by Jacob's sons; though it might have become a general opinion in his family, grounded on the covenant ratified with Abraham by circumcision, and perhaps on tradition: but religion was by no means their object in this transaction.—Some doubt may exist, concerning the propriety of admitting into the church by circumcision, the Shechemites, who belonged to the devoted race of Canaan, even if they had made an intelligent and suitable profession of religion: but the very proposing the performance of this religious ordinance, as a condition of secular advantages, was as inconsistent with true piety, as the deceitful intention and subsequent conduct of Jacob's sons were with truth, justice, and humanity. Yet alas! practices of the same nature are still shamefully common in the visible church!

V. 18—24. The Shechemites acted upon the most selfish principles, and submitted to circumcision without the least regard to its nature, meaning, or divine institution, avowedly to obtain their own secular ends: yet they were much more excusable in this profanation, than the sons of Jacob, who proposed it to them, and who might have been expected to know better.

V. 25—28. Simeon and Levi, sons of Leah, were Dinah's brethren by the whole blood.—It has not probably been conjectured, that they were at that time hospitably entertained in Shechem's house; which gave them a fairer opportunity of coming upon the Shechemites, when sore and unprepared, and of effecting this dreadful execution. Though no more of Jacob's sons were concerned in the massacre, perhaps some servants might assist; and it seems that all the rest, without hesitation, concurred in the plunder.

V. 29. We are not informed what became of these captives afterwards, any more than of the servants of Jacob's household; whether they were otherwise previously disposed of, or whether they went down with Jacob's family into Egypt. Some think that Jacob restored both the per-

CHAP. XXXV.

God commands Jacob to go to Bethel, and pay his vows; and he obeys, 1—7. The death of Deborah, Rebekah's nurse, 8. The Lord appears to Jacob, and encourages him, and Jacob worships, 9—15. Benjamin is born, and Rachel dies, 16—20. Reuben commits incest with Bilhah, 22. The names of Jacob's sons, 23—26. Jacob visits Isaac; Isaac's age, death, and burial, 27—29.

AND God said unto Jacob, Arise, go up to ^a Beth-el, and dwell there: and ^a 7. xii. 8. xlii. 3.

4. xxviii. 10—22.
xxxi. 13. Ec. v.
4—6. Hos. xii.
4. Nah. i. 15.

sons and the property, to their surviving relatives and countrymen; and indeed this is highly probable.

V. 30. To make me to stink.] Abraham and Isaac had been respected, though strangers; and their religion honoured, through their good behaviour and that of their families: but, by this infamous conduct, Jacob apprehended, that his sons would cause him and his religion to be even execrated among the heathen, whose crimes they had surpassed.

V. 31. Thus the criminals attempted to vindicate themselves, and wickedly insinuated that Jacob was willing to permit his daughter to be treated as a harlot.—Though he said nothing more for the present, their conduct made a deep and durable impression on his mind.—After this, we read nothing more of Dinah, than her name; and it may be concluded that she lived and died unmarried, but we hope not impenitent.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—12.

Young persons, especially females, are never so safe as under the inspection of prudent and pious parents: for their own inexperience and credulity, and the intoxicating nature of flattery, together with the artifice of those who are continually laying snares for them, expose them to imminent danger. They are therefore their own enemies, if they desire to go from home alone, especially among those who are strangers to God and true religion: but those parents are much more inexcusable, who allow or encourage their children in acting so imprudently; nay, who do not interpose their authority to prevent them from heedlessly exposing themselves to unseen and unsuspected danger.—Children who are indulged, because beloved, too often, like Dinah, become the shame and grief of their relations. And indeed, large families, even when trained up in the fear of God, will frequently occasion many trials, anxieties, and sorrows to their parents; and the grief of losing them in infancy is transient and tolerable, compared with that of seeing them grow up and live in wickedness. Let parents then rejoice as though they rejoiced not, and submit with resignation if the Lord bereave them of their beloved offspring; and if their children be spared, let them bring them up for the Lord, and commend them to his gracious protection.—When young women listen to the vile proposals, or flattering promises of seducers, they not unfrequently seclude themselves from every prospect of forming honourable connexions; and voluntarily consign themselves to a single life, if still worse consequences do not ensue: and this consideration, combined with nobler motives, should induce them to reject, with determined indignation and disdain, every dishonourable proposal.—No sin is made lighter of by multitudes than lewdness: yet no crime is more injurious to the bodies and souls of individuals, to the peace and comfort of families, and to the welfare of society; and no sin makes way for more horrible consequences, as introductory to all other wickedness. But, how will these heathens rise up in judgment against thousands, falsely called Christians, and condemn them; who, having seduced and defiled the objects of their pretended affection, afterwards treat them with contempt and hatred; leave them to the infamy and misery of prostitution, disease, and death; and, without the least compassion for them or their broken-hearted parents, proceed to add new trophies of their infamous success, and to multiply the victims of their unbridled lusts! Surely Shechem was in this more honourable, not only than all the house of his father, but than all the rest of his brethren, the whole tribe of seducers; who are in honour and conscience bound to make this only, but inadequate reparation, though very few of them are willing to do it!

V. 13—31.

How lamentable is it, that children, who have profited little by the example and instructions of their godly parents, should so often gain an undue ascendancy over them! and that they, who express great indignation at the crimes of others, and the “folly wrought in Israel,” should prove themselves so unacquainted with the character of a true Israelite, as far to exceed in their own conduct those crimes which they punish in others! They, who under the pretext of religion, and by profaning its sacred institutions, can conceal their designs, that they may, without being suspected, execute atrocious wickedness, are the most dangerous enemies of religion: for they cause both it and its professors, to be hated and execrated, expose them to inward anguish and outward persecution, and open the mouths and harden the hearts of multitudes to their destruction.—But they who are wicked enough to perpetrate enormous crimes, will never fail to vindicate them; nor can any thing, but the grace of God, or the discoveries which will be made at the day of judgment, effectually stop men's mouths and silence their excuses. Then, however, the impenitent sinner will awfully learn, at length, that the crimes of others form no excuse for his own: and though God may justly punish those who profane his ordinances, or transgress his laws, even by the hands of their very tempters; yet the latter shall be punished with still greater severity.—The good Lord preserve our families from such crimes and miseries, and his church from such scandals, as are recorded in this chapter!

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXV. V. 1. Jacob had hitherto deferred to perform his vow at Beth-el, and to dedicate the tenth part of his substance to the Lord; but on what account we are not informed.—Perhaps his afflictions, recorded in the former chapter, were intended to chastise that delay; and indeed they might arise, as natural consequences, from his continuing so long near Shechem. But, being now reminded by an immediate revelation of the will of the Lord, make there an altar unto God, that appeared unto thee ^b when thou fleddest from the face of Esau thy brother.

^d 2 Then Jacob said ^c unto his household, and to all that were with him, Put away the ^d strange gods that are among you, and be ^e clean, and change your garments:

^f 3 And let us arise, and go up to Beth-el; and I will make there an altar unto God, ^g who answered me in the day of my distress, and ^h was with me in the way which I went.

ⁱ 4 And they gave unto Jacob all the strange gods which were in their hand, and all their ^j ear-rings which were in their ears; and Jacob ^k hid them under the oak which was by Shechem.

^l 5 And they journeyed: and ^m the terror of God was upon the cities that were round about them, and they did not pursue after the sons of Jacob.

ⁿ 6 So Jacob came to ^o Luz, which is in the land of Canaan, (that is Beth-el,) he and all the people that were with him.

b xxvii. 41—45.
 c xviii. 19. Josh. xxv. 15. Ps. ci. 2—7.
 d xxxi. 19. 34. Josh. xxiv. 2. 23. Judg. x. 1. 1 Sam. vii. 8. 2 Cor. vi. 15—17.
 e 22. xxxiv. 2. 24. 25. Ex. xix. 10. 14. Job i. 5. Ps. ii. 2. 7. Ec. v. 1. Ez. xviii. 31. xxxvi. 25. 2 Cor. vii. 1. Heb. x. 22. Jam. iv. 8. 1 Pet. ii. 1, 2.
 f xxviii. 12, 13. Ps. xli. 1. l. 15. lxxi. 13, 14. xci. 15. ciii. 1—5. cvii. 8. cxvi. 1. 2. 16—18. cxviii. 19—22.
 g xxviii. 20. xxxi. 3. Prov. iii. 6. Is. xliii. 2.
 h Ex. xxxii. 2—4. Judg. viii. 24—27. Hos. ii. 13.
 i Ex. xxxii. 20. Deut. vii. 5. 25. Is. ii. 20. xxx. 22.
 k Josh. xxiv. 25. 26. Judg. ix. 6.
 l xxxiv. 30. Ex. xv. 15, 16. xxiii. 27. xxxiv. 24. Deut. xi. 25. Josh. ii. 9—11. v. l. 1 Sam. xi. 7. xiv. 5. 2 Chr. xiv. 14. xvii. 10. Ps. xiv. 5.
 m xii. 8. xxviii. 19. Judg. i. 22—26.

7 And he ^a built there an altar, and called the place ^b El-beth-el: because there God appeared unto him, when he fled from the face of his brother.

8 But Deborah ^c Rebekah's nurse died, and she was buried beneath Beth-el, ^d under an oak: and the name of it was called ^e Allon-bachuth.

9 And ^f God appeared unto Jacob again, when he came out of Padan-aram; and blessed him.

10 And God said unto him, Thy name is Jacob: ^g thy name shall not be called any more Jacob, but Israel shall be thy name; and he called his name Israel.

11 And God said unto him, I am ^h God Almighty; be fruitful and multiply: ⁱ a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee: and kings shall come out of thy loins.

12 And ^j the land which I gave Abraham and Isaac, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed after thee will I give the land.

n 1. 3. Ec. v. 4, 5.
 * That is, The God of Beth-el. Ex. xvii. 15. Judg. vi. 24. Ez. xviii. 25.
 o xxiv. 59.
 p 1 Sam. xxxi. 13.
 † That is, The oak of weeping. Judg. ii. 5.
 q xxviii. 13. xxxi. 3. 11—13. xxxii. 24—30. xvi. 2. 3. xlviii. 3, 4.
 r xvii. 5. 15. xxxii. 3. 11—13. xxxii. 24—30. xvi. 2. 3. xlviii. 3, 4.
 s xvii. 1. xliii. 14. xlviii. 3, 4. Ex. vi. 3. 2 Cor. vi. 18.
 t See on xvii. 6, 7. 16. xxviii. 3.
 u xii. 7. xiii. 14—17. xv. 18. xxvi. 3, 4. xxviii. 3, 4. 13. xlviii. 4.

he doubtless accomplished the whole of his vow, though we are not particularly informed about it.

V. 2. The "strange gods" were idols, worshipped by those who were strangers to the true God and his covenant. Probably the images, which Rachel had stolen, were of that number, and some might have been found among the spoils of the Shechemites. It seems, that some of Jacob's household worshipped them, and that he had been aware of this; yet had timidly or indolently connived at it.—It is evident, that there existed rules for external purification, before the promulgation of the Mosaic law, probably from traditional revelation. The means of purifying, thus appointed, were designed to represent the sanctification of the Spirit, as the sacrifices prefigured the atonement of Christ's death. The abominations recorded in the foregoing chapter, as well as the other evils which prevailed in Jacob's family, rendered such reformation and purification very needful, as a preparation to the solemn sacrifices and services, which Jacob was about to perform.

V. 4. Jacob's family seem to have parted with their idols, less reluctantly than he expected. The ear-rings were probably worn as an amulet or charm, in token of some dependence on the strange gods; and rather from superstition than for ornament. Jacob buried them in the ground secretly, that his family might not know what he had done with them. He would not convert the metal to other uses; and perhaps he did not know how more entirely to destroy it. (Note, Ex. xxxii. 20.)

V. 5. Terror of God.] Though the inhabitants of the land could not approve the conduct of Shechem; yet the revenge taken by the sons of Jacob was so complicated an act of treachery, cruelty, and rapine, that it is scarcely conceivable, how they were restrained from combining together and making war against them, or at least from pursuing them as they fled. But perhaps they respected the character of Jacob, as a worshipper of JEHOVAH, and were afraid to make any assault on his family.—Probably Jacob had made what reparation he could to the survivors; yet the preservation of him and his family is expressly ascribed to a divine influence.

V. 8. As Jacob was a hundred and thirty years old when Joseph was about forty; (compare xli. 46. xlv. 6. with xlvii. 9;) he was about ninety when Joseph was born, who at this time was fifteen or sixteen. (Note, xxxiv. 1.) Jacob was then about a hundred and six; Isaac had been married twenty years when Jacob was born; so that at least a hundred and twenty-five years had passed since Isaac's marriage. Probably after Rebekah's death, (which is not recorded,) this aged servant was taken into Jacob's house, by the desire of Leah and Rachel, as peculiarly dear to them: thus her death was recorded in Jacob's history, rather than in Isaac's; and from this it is inferred, that Jacob had before this visited his father Isaac. "Allon-bachuth" signifies the oak of weeping. Deborah was not a relation, but a servant in extreme old age; and probably, not only incapable of being useful to others, but occasioning much trouble: yet her good behaviour had so engaged the affections of the whole family, that her death was greatly lamented.

V. 9. Several years had passed, since Jacob returned from Padan-aram; but this appearance is thus distinguished from the Lord's appearance to him, before he went to Padan-aram, and when in that country.

V. 10—13. He called. (10.) The Lord, appearing in x xi. 5. xvii. 22. xviii. 33. 13 And ^a God went up from him, in the place where he talked with him.

v 20. xxviii. 18. 19. 1 Sam. vii. 12. 14 And Jacob ^v set up a pillar in the place where he talked with him, even a pillar of stone: and he poured a drink-offering thereon, and he poured oil thereon.

15 And Jacob called the name of the place, where God spake with him, Beth-el.

16 ¶ And they journeyed from Beth-el: and there was but ^a a little way to come to ^a Ephrath: and Rachel travailed, and she had ^a hard labour.

* Heb a little piece of ground. xlviii. 7. Ruth i. 2. Ps. cxxxii. 6. Mic. v. 2. xiii. 16. 1 Tim. ii. 15.

17 And it came to pass when she was in hard labour, that the midwife said unto her, ^b Fear not; thou shalt have this son also.

b 1 Sam. iv. 19-21.

18 And it came to pass as ^c her soul was in departing, (for she died,) that she called his name ^a Benoni: but his father called him ^a Benjamin.

c Ps. xvi. 10. Ec. xii. 7. Lam. ii. 12. Luke xii. 20. xxxii. 46. Acts vii. 59.

f That is, The son of my sorrow. 1 Chr. iv. 9

g That is, The son of the right hand. xlii. 4. 38. xliii. 14. xlv. 27-31.

19 And Rachel died, and was buried in the way to Ephrath, which is Beth-lehem.

20 And Jacob set a pillar upon her grave: that is ^e the pillar of Rachel's grave unto this day.

e 14. 1 Sam. x. 2. 2 Sam. xviii. 18.

21 ¶ And Israel journeyed, and spread his tent beyond the tower of Edar.

22 And it came to pass when Israel dwelt in that land, that Reuben went and ^f lay with Bilhah his father's concubine: and Israel heard it. ^g Now the sons of Jacob were twelve.

xliv. 4. Lev. xviii. 8. 2 Sam. xvi. 21. 22. xx. 3. 1 Chr. v. 1. 1 Cor. v. 1.

23 The ^b sons of Leah; Reuben, Jacob's first-born, and Simeon, and Levi, and Judah, and Issachar, and Zebulun.

g 18. xxix. 31-35. xxx. 5-24. xlvii. 8-27. xlix. 1-28. Ex. i. 1-5. Num. i. 5-45. 20. &c. iii. 3-35. vii. 12. &c. xxvi. 5-51. 57-62. xxxiv. 14-28. Deut. xxxiii. Josh. xiii. -xxi. 1 Chr. ii. 1, 2. Ez. xviii. Rev. vii. 4-8.

24 The ^h sons of Rachel; Joseph and Benjamin.

h xxxix. 32-35. xxx. 18. 20. xxxiii. 2. xlv. 8-15. 16-18. xxx. 22-24. xlvii. 19-22.

25 And ^k the sons of Bilhah, Rachel's hand-maid; Dan and Naphtali.

k xxxv. 4-8. xxxvii. 2. xlv. 23-25.

26 And ⁱ the sons of Zilpah, Leah's hand-maid; Gad and Asher. These are the sons of Jacob, which were born to him in Padan-aram.

i xxx. 9-13. xlv. 16-18.

27 ¶ And ^m Jacob came unto Isaac his father unto ⁿ Mamre, unto the city of Arbah, (which is Hebron,) where Abraham and Isaac sojourned.

m xxvii. 43-45. xxviii. 5. n xlii. 18. xxvii. 2. 19. Josh. xiv. 15. xv. 13.

28 And the days of Isaac were ^o an hundred and fourscore years.

o xxv. 7. xlvii. 28. 1. 26. B. C. 1716.

29 And Isaac ^p gave up the ghost and died, and was gathered unto his people, being old and full of days: and ^q his sons Esau and Jacob buried him.

p xv. 15. xxv. 7. 8. 17. xxvii. 1, 2. xlix. 33. Job v. 26. q xxiii. 19. xxv. 9. xxvii. 41. xlix. 31.

some visible and remarkable manner, thus confirmed to Jacob all the special favour and protection, which the name Israel implied.

V. 14, 15. Jacob seems to have renewed, with greater solemnity, the ceremony which he observed when God first met him at Bethel; and confirmed to the place more publickly that name by which he had privately called it; and which it ever after bore, till it became Beth-aven, a house of vanity and idolatry. (Notes, xxviii. 18-22. Josh. vii. 2.)

V. 17. The midwife, in saying, "Thou shalt have this son also," seems to have alluded to the name of Joseph, and the occasion of that name. (xxx. 24.)

V. 18. The expression, "her soul was in departing," aptly describes the nature of death, which is the dissolution of the union betwixt soul and body.—Rachel had rashly said, "Give me children, or else I die." God gave her children, and she died in child-birth.—Jacob, by changing the name which Rachel had given to her son, intimated that it was not proper so to indulge his sorrow, as to overlook the mercies still vouchsafed him, or neglect the duties of his station.—The son of the right hand, seems to mean, one valued as a right hand; or, 'a son, who shall be my defender in old age, as if he were my right hand.'

V. 21. Tower of Edar.] The same words (מִגְדַּל עֵדָר) are rendered, "Tower of the flock," in Micah. (Mic. iv. 8. Heb.

V. 22. Reuben and Bilhah doubtless flattered themselves that their abominable crime would be concealed; yet Jacob was made acquainted with their conduct, and most decidedly shewed his abhorrence of it. Their actual crime is indisputable, notwithstanding the palliating glosses of some Jewish writers. (Note, xlix. 3, 4.)

V. 27. It should not be concluded, from the silence of Scripture, that Jacob had not before this visited his father. Probably he came often to see him; but at length, as he evidently drew near death, he came to dwell with him, or in the neighbourhood.

V. 28. The age, death, and burial of Isaac, are here inserted by anticipation; for by computation we find that he did not die till about the time that Joseph stood before Pharaoh. Isaac was about a hundred and fifty years old when Joseph was born; Joseph therefore must have been thirty when Isaac was a hundred and eighty. (Note, xxvii. 1.)

V. 29. Esau, instead of taking this opportunity to murder Jacob, as he had purposed, found his heart so influenced, that he amicably assisted at Isaac's funeral.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1-15.

Such is the imperfection of the best of men, that they are prone to defer those things which they know ought to be done, and which they really intend to do; and to forget the mercies which they have received, and the obligations under which they lie: nay, without great circumspection, gross abuses will find their way even into religious families, especially if numerous. We need therefore to be fre-

CHAP. XXXVI.

Esau's wives and children; his removal to mount Seir, and his descendants in Seir, 1—19. The descendants of Seir the Horite, 20—30. Kings and dukes of Edom, 31—43.

NOW these are ^athe generations of Esau, who is Edom.

^a xxv. 24—34
xxvii. 35—41.
xxxii. 3—7.
Num. xx. 14—21.
Deut. xxiii. 7. 1s. lxxiii. 1.
Ez. xxv. 12.
^b xxvi. 34, 35
xxvii. 46.

2 Esau ^btook his wives of the daughters of Canaan; Adah the daughter of Elon the Hittite, and Aholibamah the daughter of Anah, the daughter of Zibeon the Hivite:

3 And ^cBashemath Ishmael's daughter, sister of Nebajoth.

^c xxv. 13. xxviii. 9.

4 And ^dAdah bare to Esau, Eliphaz: and Bashemath bare Reuel.

B. C. 1760.
^d 1 Chr. i. 35

5 And Aholibamah bare Jeush, and quently reminded of our duty, and even rebuked for neglecting it; and we should deem it a very great mercy to be stirred up to personal or family reformation, and cheerfully part with every thing, however valuable, which proves an occasion of sin.—Not only rebukes, however, but sharp chastisements, may be expected, if we neglect or postpone our solemn tribute of praise to God, when he hath “answered us in the day of our distress.”—A good example and serious admonitions will go a great way in promoting the good behaviour of those around us; and there is often less opposition made to our pious endeavours than we expected.—The Lord does not deal with his people and their families according to their deservings; nay, he is better to them than their fears: and when he overawes the spirit of their enemies, his servants cannot but be safe whithersoever they go, or wherever they are. When we have obediently hearkened to the Lord's reproofing voice, have rectified abuses, and paid our vows, we may expect to hear from him with comfort, and to enjoy the assurance and earnest of his covenanted blessings. But all our consolations in this world only prepare us for trials, and are intermingled with sorrows: and the continual ravages of death, bereaving us of our nearest and best beloved friends and relatives, will frequently excite our fears and lamentations, and remind us to be ready also, and to set our affections on things above.—It is very becoming when servants, by good behaviour, deservedly enjoy the endeared affection of the families in which they reside, so that they live beloved and die lamented: and when they, who have had the benefit of their faithful services, while in health and strength, provide comfortably for them in sickness and old age.—Such scenes of domestick life are far more beautiful and instructive, than the events which crowd the pages of history, with splendid evidences of the folly and madness of mankind.

V. 16—29.

We should be very cautious not to desire too earnestly any temporal object, nor impatiently to complain of the want of it; as the Lord may remember our unadvised expressions long after, and rebuke them even in granting our de-

Jaalam, and Korah: these are the sons of Esau, which were born unto him in the land of Canaan.

6 And Esau took his wives, and his ^{B. C. 1716.}sons, and his daughters, and all the ^epersons of his house, and his cattle, ^fand all his beasts, and all his substance which he had got in the land of Canaan; and ^ewent into the country, from the ^fface of his brother Jacob.

7 For ^ftheir riches were more than that they might dwell together: and the land wherein they were strangers could not bear them, because of their cattle.

8 Thus dwelt Esau in ^gmount Seir: Esau is Edom.

9 ¶ And these are the generations

^e xiii. 6. 11. xvii. 8. xxviii. 4.
^f xiii. 6.
^g xxxii. 3. Deut. ii. 5. Josh. xxiv. 4. Mal. i. 3.

sires, without giving his blessing with them.—Even the most favoured servants of the Lord are frequently tried with afflictions, which quickly succeed each other. Yet “all shall work together for their good.”—While we live in this world, we must witness so much sin around us, and mourn over so much in ourselves and our families, as well as experience so many bodily infirmities and outward disappointments; that we may well congratulate, and almost envy, those who have finished their measure of sufferings and services, and leave the world full of days, and ripe for glory: for if we are fit for heaven, “better is the day of our death, than the day of our birth.”—They, who live the most peaceably and comfortably, are least noticed in history: and it may be some consolation to reflect, that while we read of scarcely any thing else than the vices and miseries of mankind; very many, unnoticed by man, have “walked with God, and are not, for God hath taken them.”

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXVI. V. 2, 3. Esau married “Judith the daughter of Beeri the Hittite, and Bashemath the daughter of Elon the Hittite.” (xxvi. 34.) And as these wives are mentioned many years after, in a manner which implies they were then living, (xxvii. 46. xxviii. 9.) we can hardly suppose that they both died childless, and that after their death Esau married the wives, by whom he had most of his children, and especially Eliphaz his eldest son.—Possibly his wives had different names. Bashemath might also be called Adah. And if Aholibamah were the same person as Judith, Beeri the Hittite might be her father, and Anah, the daughter of Zibeon the Hivite, her mother.—It is evident that Bashemath, the daughter of Ishmael, is also called Mahalath. (xxviii. 9.) And indeed such variations in names are very common in Scripture.

V. 6, 7. Probably, Esau came frequently to Isaac during his life-time, and had part of his family and property in Canaan, where his children were born: but after his father's death he took away all his possessions, and finally removed from Canaan the land of promise, the type of heaven; and left Jacob unmolested in the prospect of his rever-

* Heb. Edom. of Esau the father of the * Edomites, in mount Seir.

10 These are the names of Esau's sons, Eliphaz the son of Adah the wife of Esau, Reuel the son of Bashemath the wife of Esau.

h 1 Chr. i. 36. Zeph. 4. 11 And the sons of Eliphaz were Teman, Omar, ^b Zepho, and Gatam, and Kenaz.

12 And Timna was concubine to Eliphaz Esau's son; and she bare to Eliphaz, ¹ Amalek: these were the sons of Adah Esau's wife.

13 And these are the sons of Reuel; Nahath, and Zerah, Shammah, and Mizzah: these were the sons of Bashemath Esau's wife.

k 2: 78 14 And these were the sons of ^k Aholibamah, the daughter of Anah, the daughter of Zibeon Esau's wife: and she bare to Esau, Jeush, and Jaalam, and Korah.

15 These were dukes of the sons of Esau: the sons of Eliphaz the first-born son of Esau; ¹ duke Teman, duke Omar, duke Zepho, duke Kenaz, 16 Duke Korah, duke Gatam, and duke Amalek: These are the ^m dukes that came of Eliphaz, in the land of Edom: these were the sons of Adah.

n 4: 13 1 Chr. I. 37. 17 And these are the sons of ⁿ Reuel Esau's son; duke Nahath, duke Zerah, duke Shammah, duke Mizzah. These are the dukes that came of Reuel, in the land of Edom: these are the sons of Bashemath Esau's wife.

o 5: 14 1 Chr. I. 38. 18 And these are the sons of ⁿ Aholibamah Esau's wife: duke Jeush, duke Jaalam, duke Korah: these were the dukes that came of Aholibamah the daughter of Anah Esau's wife.

19 These are the sons of Esau, (^p who is Edom,) and these are their dukes.

20 ¶ These are the sons of ^q Seir the Horite, who inhabited the land: Lotan, and Shobal, and Zibeon, and Anah, B. C. 1810 q xiv. 6. Deut. ii. 12, 22. 1 Chr. I. 38-42.

21 And Dishon, and Ezer, and Dishan: these are the dukes of the Horites, the children of Seir in the land of Edom.

22 And the children of Lotan were, Hori, and ^r Heman: and Lotan's sister was Timna. 1 Chr. i. 39. Homam.

23 And the children of Shobal were these; ^r Alvan, and Manahath, and Ebal, Shepho, and Onan. 1 Chr. i. 40. Alan.—Shephi.

24 And these are the children of Zibeon: both Ajah, and Anah: this was that Anah that ^s found the mules in the wilderness, as he fed the asses of Zibeon his father. s Lev. xix. 19. 2 Sam. xiii. 29. xviii. 9. 1 Kings i. 38. 44. iv. 28. Zech. xiv. 15.

25 And the children of Anah were these: Dishon, and Aholibamah, the daughter of ^t Anah.

26 And these are the children of Dishon; ^u Hemdan, and Eshban, and Ithran, and Cheran. t 2. 5. 14. 19 1 Chr. i. 41. u 1 Chr. i. 41. Amran.

27 The children of ^v Ezer are these; Bilhan, and Zaavan, and ^x Achan.

28 The children of Dishan are these; ^y Uz, and Aran. v 21. 1 Chr. i. 38. x 1 Chr. i. 42. Jakan. y Job i. 1. Jer. xxv. 20. Lam. iv. 21. B. C. 1780. z 20. 1 Chr. i. 38.

29 These are the dukes that came of the Horites; ^z duke Lotan, duke Shobal, duke Zibeon, duke Anah, 30 Duke Dishon, duke Ezer, duke Dishan: these are the dukes that came of Hori, among their dukes in the land of Seir.

31 ¶ And these are ^a the kings that sionary inheritance.—He seems, however, to have inherited a large portion of Isaac's riches.

V. 12. Amalek.] It has generally been taken for granted, that the Amalekites descended from this grandson of Esau: but, as they were a powerful people when the Israelites came out of Egypt, and able to contend with them in battle; as they are always spoken of as a distinct people from the Edomites; and as mention had before been made of their country; this opinion is not very probable. The marginal references may enable the reader to form a judgment on the subject. Timna was sister to Lotan, a descendant of Seir. (20—22.)

V. 15, 16. Dukes.] (דוכים.) Heads of families, princes, or military leaders, some of whom were contemporaries.—Korah is not mentioned before among the sons of Eliphaz: probably he was one of his grandsons.

V. 20. The sons of Seir the Horite.] These were the former inhabitants of that country, with whom probably the descendants of Esau intermarried, and were in a great measure incorporated.

V. 24. Found, &c.] This passage is particularly difficult, as the word translated mules occurs in no other place: and many conjectures have been formed concerning what it was that Anah found; among which the more general has been, that in keeping asses he discovered the method of breeding mules, either by accident or contrivance.—Anah is the name both of a woman and a man, as Aholibamah likewise is. (2. 14. 18. 20. 25. 41.)

V. 31—39. It is not agreed whether these kings were reigned in the land of Edom, before there reigned any king over the children of Israel.

32 And Bela the son of Beor reigned in Edom, and the name of his city was Dinhabah.

33 And Bela died, and Jobab the son of Zerah of ^bBozrah reigned in his stead.

34 And Jobab died, and Husham of the land of ^cTemani reigned in his stead.

35 And Husham died, and Hadad the son of Bedad, who smote Midian in the field of Moab, reigned in his stead: and the name of his city was Avith.

36 And Hadad died, and Samlah of Masrekah reigned in his stead.

37 And Samlah died, and Saul of Rehoboth ^dby the river reigned in his stead.

38 And Saul died, and Baal-hanan the son of Achbor reigned in his stead.

39 And Baal-hanan the son of Achbor died, and ^eHadar reigned in his stead: and the name of his city was Pau; and his wife's name was Mehetabel, the daughter of Matred, the daughter of Mezahab.

40 ¶ And these are the names of the dukes that came of Esau, according to their families, after their places, by their names; duke Timnah, duke ^fAlvah, duke Jetheth, 41 Duke Aholibamah, duke Elah, duke Pinon,

42 Duke Kenaz, duke Teman, duke Mibzar,

43 Duke Magdiel, duke Iram: these ^gbe ^hthe dukes of Edom according to their habitations, in the land of their possession: he is Esau the father of ⁱthe Edomites.

b Is. xxxiv. 6. lxiii. 1. Jer. xlix. 13. 22. Mic. ii. 12.
c See on 15.—Job ii. 11. Jer. xlix. 7.

d x. 11. 1 Chr. i. 48.

e 1 Chr. i. 50. Hadad.—Par.

f See on 15. 16.—1 Chr. i. 51—54.
g 1 Chr. i. 51. Aliah.

h Ex. xv. 15. Num. xx. 14.

i Heb. Edom.

CHAP. XXXVII.

Joseph is loved by Jacob, but hated by his brethren, 1—4. His dreams and the interpretation, 5—11. Jacob sends him to his brethren, who counsel to slay him, 12—20. At Reuben's desire they cast him into a pit, 21—24; and afterwards sell him to the Ishmaelites; while Reuben grieves at not finding him, 25—30. His coat, covered with blood, is sent to Jacob, who mourns inordinately, 31—35. Joseph is brought to Egypt and sold to Potiphar, 36.

AND Jacob dwelt in the land ^{*}where in his father was a stranger, in the land of Canaan.

* Heb. of his father's sojournings. xvii. 8. xxiii. 4. xxviii. 4. xxxvi. 7. Heb. xi. 9—16.

descendants of Esau, or of Seir.—They seem to have been elective, and to have reigned in succession over the whole country.

V. 40. Dukes.] These were either eminent leaders under the kings before mentioned; or, as some suppose, they succeeded them in authority, by a revolution in the form of government.—It has been thought, that some part of this chapter was written after the death of Moses, or added from the first chapter of Chronicles; and perhaps it was: but all these events might very well take place, while Israel was in Egypt and in the wilderness. (Ex. xv. 15.) Eight successions are mentioned; but it is uncertain when the period began, or how long it continued.—Moses had before recorded the prediction, that kings should descend from Jacob; but these kings reigned before that prophecy began to be fulfilled. (Marg. Ref. on 31.)

V. 43. Their possession.] The descendants of Esau were settled in possession of the land of Seir; while Israel had his inheritance only in reversion.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

This chapter seems intended to evince the faithfulness of God in performing his promise to Abraham, "Nations shall come of thee;" and to shew the accomplishment of his prophetic information to Rebekah, "Two nations are in thy womb;" and of the blessing pronounced on Esau, "By thy sword shalt thou live." It might also be in many ways useful to the children of Israel. Yet it contains mere registers, and is very different from the particular history of the heirs of promise; who have the best place and the highest character in the book of God, though not in many other books.—However men may struggle against the purpose of God, his counsel will stand; they will finally be compelled to give place to it, and he hath many ways of inducing them to do so. He often gives ungodly people a large portion of this world; and, satisfied with it, they leave others to possess and enjoy spiritual blessings unenvied and unmolested. This is Esau: still the profane despiser of heavenly things, as when he sold his birth-right; though not the same malicious persecutor, as when he vowed Jacob's destruction.—Yet persons of his character look great, become dukes and princes, and are envied and courted; while the "Israel of God" are poor, obscure, and despised! But soon the state of things will be reversed: the wicked shall be ent down, and wither as the grass; while "the righteous shall flourish as the cedar in Libanus;" and having their good things, when those of the sinner are spent and gone, they shall have them durably, yea eternally. Let us then seek an interest in these blessings; and not covet, envy, or glory in those fading distinctions, which are so often lavished upon the enemies of God, and "the vessels of wrath fitted for destruction."

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXVII. V. 1. Jacob continued to dwell in Canaan, "the land of his father's sojournings," (marg.) after Esau had got possessions and exercised lordship in Seir. (Notes, xxiv. 2—9. Heb. xi. 13—16.)

a xi. 4. v. 1. vi. 9
x. 1.

2 These are ^a the generations of Jacob: Joseph being seventeen years old, was feeding the flock with his brethren, and the lad was with the sons of Bilhah, and with the sons of Zilpah, his father's ^b wives: and Joseph brought unto his father their ^c evil report.

b xxx. 4. 9. xxxv 22.
c 1 Sam. ii. 22—
24. 1 Cor. i. 11
v. 1. xi. 18

3 Now Israel loved Joseph more than all his children, because he was the ^d son of his old age: and he made him ^e a coat of many ^f colours.

d xlv. 29.
e 23. 32. Judg. v.
30. 2 Sam. xiii.
18 Ps. xlv. 13.
14 Ez. xvi. 16
† Or, pieces.

4 And when his brethren saw that their father loved him more than all his brethren, they ^g hated him, and could not speak peaceably unto him.

f 11. 18—20 iv. 5.
xxvii. 41. xlix.
23 1 Sam. xvi.
12, 13. xvii. 28.
John vii. 3—5.
g 9. xxviii. 12. xl.
5. xii. 1. xlii. 9.
h Num. xii. 6.
1 Kings iii. 5.

5 And Joseph ^h dreamed a dream: and he told it his brethren: and they hated him yet the more.

h xlv. 18. Judg
ix 7

6 And he said unto them, ⁱ Hear, I pray you, this dream which I have dreamed.

7 For behold, we were binding sheaves in the field, and lo, my sheaf arose, and also stood upright; and behold, ^j your sheaves stood round about, and made obeisance to my sheaf.

i xlii. 6. 9. xliii.
25 xlv. 14.

8 And his brethren said unto him, ^k Shalt thou indeed reign over us? or shalt thou indeed have dominion over us? and they hated him yet the more for his dreams, and for his words.

j 4. Ex. ii. 14
1 Sam. x. 27. Ps.
ii. 3—6. cxviii.
22. Luke xix. 14.
xx. 17. Acts. vii.
27, 28. vii. 35

9 And he dreamed yet ^k another dream, and told it his brethren, and said, Behold, I have dreamed a dream more; and behold, ^l the sun and the moon, and the eleven stars made obeisance to me.

k xli. 25. 32.

10 And he told it to his father, and to his brethren: and his father rebuked him, and said unto him, What is this dream that thou hast dreamed?

l 10. xliiii. 28. xlvii.
29 xlvii. 12. l.
15—21. Acts. vii.
9—14.

^m Shall I and thy mother and thy bre-

m xxxvii. 29. Is. lx.
14. Phil. ii. 10,
11.

V. 2. By "the generations of Jacob," we may understand the history of him and of his family. (xxxv. 23—26.) The inspired writer had done with Esau, except as he came in his way when treating of the affairs of Israel: he had joined himself to the heathen; let him be numbered among them: but of Jacob and the chosen seed, Moses had much to record.—Joseph, though greatly beloved, was not trained up delicately and in sloth, but inured to labour. Though but a lad, he accompanied the sons of Bilhah and Zilpah, particularly assisting them in their pastoral employments. Perhaps his father thought, that the sons of Bilhah, his mother's hand-maid, would favour him; and that those of Zilpah would be less disposed to emulation against him, than the sons of Leah. But he witnessed their ill behaviour, and brought to his father their evil report, in order that the crimes which he could not prevent, might be reproved and repressed by Jacob's authority.

V. 3. Jacob had no son by his beloved Rachel, till about seven years after his marriage, when he was far advanced in years. Benjamin was, in the more strict sense, "the son of his old age;" but he was at the same time very young.—His other sons had in many things grieved and disgraced him: but Joseph seems to have given early indications of that wisdom and piety, which adorned his maturer age. He was therefore the chief earthly comfort Jacob enjoyed after Rachel's death; and, in token of special affection, he clothed him in "a coat of colours," or "of pieces;" for there is nothing for many in the original.—However this may be understood, it is evident that the garment was deemed superior to the clothing worn by the others; but this distinction between him and his brothers seems to have been invidious and injudicious.

V. 4. The preference manifested to Joseph excited the envy of his brethren; and the ground of that preference, even his wisdom and piety, called forth their enmity. Conscience of his superior excellency, and hating him for it, they considered Jacob's approbation of his conduct as a reproach of their's; all which was augmented by his reporting their evil deeds.—In this Joseph was a type of Christ, the Beloved of the Father, who was on that account envied and hated by the Jews and by the world; not only notwithstanding his excellency, but for it, as it reproached and exposed their hypocrisy and wickedness; and because he also "testified of them, that their works were evil." (John vii. 7.) This was the effect of the old enmity, put between "the Seed of the woman and the seed of the serpent."

V. 5. God, by supernatural dreams, gave Joseph a pre- intimation of his future greatness, to prepare him for his previous trials, and to support him under them.—Mr. Henry observes, "that he dreamed of his preferment, but 'not of his imprisonment; as young people are apt to 'dream of prosperity, but think nothing of affliction.'"

V. 6—9. Some expositors consider Joseph as faulty in disclosing his dreams, but probably he was led by a divine impulse on his mind to do so. It was on many accounts proper they should be known, though otherwise it would have been impolitic for him to declare them. His brethren rightly interpreted the dream, though they abhorred the interpretation; and while in endeavouring to defeat it they spared no pains, and ventured upon the most atrocious crimes, they were themselves the instruments of its accomplishment.—Thus the Jews understood Christ's parables, and the intimations he gave of his kingdom; but, determining that he should not reign over them, they consulted to put him to death, and by his crucifixion they actually made way for that exaltation, which they intended to prevent.—'Their hatred' (that of Joseph's brethren towards him,) 'had originated in religion: and the thought 'of God having determined to honour him, provoked them 'the more. Such were the operations of malice in Cain 'towards Abel, in Esau towards Jacob, in Saul towards 'David, and in the Scribes and Pharisees towards the Lord 'of glory.' Fuller.

V. 10, 11. Perhaps Jacob meant to abate the indignation of his other sons by rebuking Joseph; yet it is evithren indeed come to bow down ourselves to thee, to the earth?

11 And his brethren ^o envied him: but his father ^o observed the saying.

12 ¶ And his brethren went to feed their father's flock ^p in Shechem.

13 And Israel said unto Joseph, Do not thy brethren feed the flock in Shechem: ^q Come, and I will send thee unto them. And he said unto him, ^r Here am I.

14 And he said to him, Go, I pray thee, ^s see whether it be well with thy brethren, and well with the flocks; and bring me word again. So he sent him out of the vale of ^t Hebron, and he came to Shechem.

15 And a certain man found him, and behold, ^u he was wandering in the field: and the man asked him, saying, ^v What seekest thou?

16 And he said, I seek my brethren: ^w tell me, I pray thee, where they feed their flocks.

17 And the man said, They are departed hence: for I heard them say, Let us go to ^y Dothan. And Joseph went after his brethren, and found them in Dothan.

18 And when they saw him afar off, even before he came near unto them, they ^z conspired against him, to slay him.

19 And they said one to another, Behold, this ^a dreamer cometh.

20 Come now therefore, ^b and let us slay him, and cast him into some pit: and we will say, Some evil beast hath devoured him: ^b and we shall see what will become of his dreams.

21 And ^c Reuben heard it, and he delivered him out of their hands; and said, Let us not kill him.

22 And Reuben said unto them, Shed no blood, but cast him into this pit that is in the wilderness, and lay no hand upon him; that he might rid him out of their hands, to deliver him to his father again.

23 And it came to pass when Joseph was come unto his brethren, that they ^d stript Joseph out of his coat, his coat of ^d many ^e colours that was on him: ^e Or, pieces, 3 marg.

24 And they took him, and cast him into a pit: and ^f the pit was empty, there was no water in it.

25 And ^f they sat down to eat bread: and they lifted up their eyes and looked, and behold, a company of ^g Ishmaelites came from ^h Gilead, with their camels u Is. xxvi. 11.

Matt. xxvii. 18.
Mark xv. 10.
Acts vii. 9.
o Dan. vii. 28.
Luke ii. 19. 51.
p J. xxxiii. 18.
xxxiv. 25—31.

q 1 Sam. xvii. 17
—20. Matt. x. 16.
Luke xx. 13.

r xxii. 1. xxvii. 1.
18. 1 Sam. iii. 4.
5, 6, 8. 16.

s Heb. see the peace of thy brethren. &c. 1 Sam.
xvii. 17. Jer.
xxix. 7. Luke
xix. 42.

t xxiii. 2. xxxv. 27.
Num. xiii. 22.
Josh. xiv. 13. 15.

u cxi. 14.

v Judg. iv. 22.
John i. 38. iv.
27. xviii. 4. 7.
xx. 16.

w Cant. i. 7.

y 2 Kings vi. 13.

z 1 Sam. xix. 1.
Ps. xxxi. 13.
xxxvii. 12. 32.
xciv. 21. Matt.
xxi. 28. xxvii. 1.
Mark xii. 7. xiv.
1. Luke xi. 14.
15. John xi. 53.
Acts xxiii. 12.
† Heb. master of dreams.
a Ps. lxxiv. 5. Prov.
i. 11. 16. vi. 17.
xxvii. 4.

b 1 Sam. xxiv. 20.
xxvi. 2. Matt. ii.
2—16. xxvii. 40
—42. Mark xv.
29—32. John xxi.
10, 11. Acts ix.
16—18.
c xxxv. 22. xlii.
22.

d 3. 32. 33. Matt.
xxvii. 28.
: Or, pieces, 3
marg.

e Ps. xl. 2. lxxxviii.
6. 8. cxxx. 1, 2.
Jer. xxxviii. 6.
Lam. iii. 52—55.
Zech. ix. 11.

f Esth. iii. 15.
Amos vi. 6.
g 28. 36. xvi. 11.
12. xxv. 1—4.
16—18. Ps.
lxxxiii. 6.

h xliii. 11. Jer.
viii. 22.

dent that he thought, there was something supernatural in the dream.—Rachel, the mother of Joseph, was dead; but it is probable that Leah was still alive: the expression may, however, only mean the whole family, with peculiar reference to the number of his brethren.

V. 12—14. Shechem was at least forty miles northward from Hebron, where Jacob then resided. Dothan was about eight miles further (17).—Jacob had bought a piece of land there: but it is probable that his sons went thither, for the sake of better pasture for their numerous flocks, than could be found in the region about Hebron. After the wickedness which they had perpetrated on the Shechemites, it is more wonderful that they should venture thither, than that Jacob should be anxious for their safety. Had he suspected their malignant enmity against Joseph, he would not have thus exposed his favourite son; out the hand of the Lord was in it.

V. 15. Wandering.] Either having lost his way, or traversing the country in search of his brethren.

V. 19, 20. These unnatural children had no more compassion for their father than for Joseph; nay, perhaps they secretly enjoyed the pleasure of disappointing and grieving him. Their proposal shewed how desperate their enmity was; and the sarcasm concerning Joseph's dreams, intimated at least some misgivings, that they were divine presages of his future pre-eminence.—'Let us kill him,' say they, 'and then he cannot rule over us.' (Marg. Ref.)—

Their diabolical malignity rendered them prompt to invent a subtle plan of concealment. None, I think, after consulting the marginal references, can doubt, that Joseph was, in the strictest sense, a type of Christ. And the conduct of his brethren, on this occasion, calls to our recollection those, of whom Christ said, "Now have they both seen and hated both me and my Father." John xv. 24.

V. 21. Reuben had been guilty of "such fornication," as is not so much as named among the Gentiles; yet here he opposed the wickedness of his brethren, of another kind! Human depravity runs in different channels; some are more prone to one sin, some to another.

V. 22. Reuben spake as if he meant, that Joseph should be left to starve in the pit; but he purposed to restore him to his father, hoping probably by that service to recover his favour: and though his purpose was disappointed, yet God by his means preserved the life of Joseph, on which consequences infinitely important depended.—Thus Joseph, murdered in the intention of his brethren, and, as it were, buried in the pit, yet preserved in order to his exaltation, was a type of Christ crucified, buried, risen, and glorified.

V. 25. The descendants of Ishmael, Midian, Medan, and the other sons of Abraham by Keturah, (who were grown into a multitude, while the descendants of the promised Isaac were few in number,) uniting together, engaged in this traffick.

bearing spicery, and balm, and myrrh, going to carry it down to Egypt.

26 And Judah said unto his brethren, ^lWhat profit is it if we slay our brother, and ^kconceal his blood?

27 Come, and let us ^lsell him to the Ishmaelites, and ^mlet not our hand be upon him; for he is ⁿour brother, and our flesh: and his brethren ^{*}were content.

28 Then there passed ^oby Midianites merchant-men; and they drew and lifted up Joseph out of the pit, and ^psold Joseph to the Ishmaelites for twenty pieces of silver: and they brought Joseph into Egypt.

29 And Reuben returned unto the pit: and behold Joseph was not in the pit: and ^qhe rent his clothes.

30 And he returned unto his brethren, and said, ^rThe child is not; and I, whither shall I go?

31 ¶ And they took ^{*}Joseph's coat and killed a kid of the goats, and dipped the coat in the blood.

32 And they sent the coat of many colours, and they brought it to their father; and said, This have we found; know now whether it be thy son's coat or no.

33 And he knew it, and said, It is my son's coat; an ^uevil beast hath devoured him: Joseph is without doubt rent in pieces.

34 And Jacob ^vrent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his loins, and mourned for his son many days.

35 And all his sons and all his daughters ^{*}rose up to comfort him; but he refused to be comforted; and he said, ^wFor I will go down into the grave unto my son, mourning. Thus his father wept for him.

36 And ^{}the Midianites sold him into Egypt unto Potiphar, an ^zofficer of Pharaoh's, and ^{}captain of the guard.

l xxx. 32 Ps. xxx. 9. Jer. xli. 8. Rom. vi. 21. iv. 10. Job xvi. 18. Ez. xxiv. 7. 1 Ex. xxi. 16. Neh. v. 8. Matt. xxvi. 15. 1 Tim. i. 10 Rev. xviii. 13. m 1 Sam. xviii. 17. 2 Sam. xi. 14. 17. xii. 9. n xxix. 14. xlii. 21. o Heb. hearkened. p xlv. 4. 5. Ps. cv. 17. Zech. xi. 12. 13. Matt. xxvii. 9 Acts vii. 9. q 34. xlv. 13. Num. xiv. 6. Judg. xi. 35. Job i. 20. Joel ii. 13. Acts xiv. 14. r xlii. 13. 32. 36. Jer. xxxi. 15. s 3. 23.

3. xlv. 20—23. Luke xv. 30. u xlv. 28. v 29. Josh. vit. 6. 2 Sam. i. 11. iii. 31. 1 Kings xx. 31. xxi. 27. 1 Chr. xxi. 16. Ezra iv. 3—5. Neh. ix. 1. Esth. i. 1—3. Job i. 20. ii. 12. Ps. lxix. 11. Is. xxxii. 12. 13. xxxvi. 22. xxxvii. 1. 2. Jer. xxxix. 24. Joel ii. 13. Jonah iii. 5—8. Matt. xi. 21. xxvi. 65. Acts xiv. 14. Rev. xli. 3. x 2 Sam. xii. 17. Job ii. 11. Ps. lxxvii. 2. Jer. xxxi. 15. y xlii. 38. xlv. 29 —31. xiv. 28. z 28. xxxix. 1. † Heb. eunuch, chamberlain, or courtier. Esth. i. 10. ‡ O1, chief marshal. — Heb. chief of the slaughtermen, or executioners. xl. 4. 2 Kings xxv. 8. marg.

V. 26. What profit? &c.] Judah seems to have been naturally prone to covetousness, as Judas afterwards was; one great objection with him to killing Joseph was, that they should get nothing by it. The word rendered profit is almost always used in a bad sense.

V. 28. Sold Joseph.] Thus Christ was sold for thirty pieces of silver, and by a Judas or Judah; one of the same name as his who proposed the sale of Joseph.

V. 29, 30. Reuben seems to have been sincerely grieved when he missed his brother, no doubt suspecting that some violence had been done to him; and he might also dread his father's displeasure against himself, as his eldest son, who ought especially to have protected his beloved Joseph. But though he was absent when the plan of selling him had been proposed, agreed upon, and executed; yet he never disclosed this circumstance to his father; for fear, perhaps, of drawing down the resentment of the rest upon himself. Whether he was informed of the transaction, or not, he concurred in the plan of imposing on Jacob.

V. 32. Thy son's coat.] Not our brother's coat, nor Joseph's, but "thy son's;" as if, even in this cruel imposition, they would reproach their father for his partiality to Joseph, and almost insinuate that he alone was considered as a son!

V. 34. Rent his clothes, &c.] These were, in the earliest ages, the customary indications of great sorrow; and they seem also to have implied abhorrence of sin, and humiliation before God on account of it, as the cause of affliction.—This is the first instance recorded in Scripture of wearing sackcloth; as that of Reuben (29) is of rending the clothes. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 35. Daughters.] Not only Dinah, but his son's wives, (for many of them were at that time married,) joined in endeavouring to comfort Jacob.—His sons too seem to have rather relented, when they witnessed his excessive sorrow: yet not so far as to confess their evil deeds; though Jacob's grief might have been thus abated, and probable measures taken for recovering Joseph.—The word translated the grave, is rendered elsewhere, hell; and means the unseen state, either of the body in the grave, or of the soul in the world of departed spirits. (Notes, Ps. xvi. 10. Acts ii. 25—32.)—Joseph was not supposed to be buried in the grave; but Jacob expected to meet him in another world. Yet he wept for him immoderately, and without proper resignation to the will of God.

V. 36. The word in this place signifies Medanites, rather than Midianites. (xxv. 2.)—Pharaoh was the common name of the kings of Egypt. (xii. 15—20.)—Potiphar seems to have been, according to our translation, captain of the guard to Pharaoh; and, in that capacity, to have had the charge of the state-prisoners, and to have superintended the execution of criminals. (Marg.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—30.

They who hate to be reformed, hate also to be reproved, and are offended with those who expose them to reproof: and though it is often of important advantage, to disclose the secret crimes which men commit to such as are authorised to restrain them; yet nothing requires more prudence and candour. It should never be done out of resentment, or without urgent occasion; but always from hatred of the sin and love to the sinner, and with reluctance, as expecting nothing but unpleasant consequences to ourselves.—In the present state of things, there will frequently be contentions among brethren, especially those of opposite characters: and, while parents ought to manifest a preference of such, as behave with the greatest piety and prudence; even this will excite the enmity and envy of those who are proud and ungodly. Great care should therefore be taken not to inflame these malignant passions, by use-

CHAP. XXXVIII.

Judah's marriage and children, 1—5. His son Er's marriage and death, 6, 7. Onan marries his brother's widow; is cut off for his sin; and Tamar his widow is reserved for Shelah, 8—11. Judah's wife dies; he is deceived by Tamar and commits incest with her;

less and invidious distinctions; and that wisdom which is from above is greatly wanted, to avoid sowing those seeds of discord, that will not speedily be eradicated. For when once malice and envy have got possession of the heart, every circumstance inflames them: love shewn to the person envied is considered as hatred to the envious man; and commendation and kindness bestowed on the one seem to be reproaching and injuring the other: yea, the very excellency of a person's character and conduct makes him appear the more odious, in the distempered judgment of his competitor. These passions, when matured, break through every tie of nature, every obligation of duty, and every restraint of conscience and compassion: and, if grafted upon that enmity, which is in the "seed of the serpent against the seed of the woman,"—upon religious enmity and the spirit of persecution,—they produce the most atrocious crimes, committed without remorse or reluctance.—But though the Lord knows, that his favours, and the honour which comes from him, will excite these diabolical dispositions, and inflame them more and more; yet he will not on that account, withhold the marks of his approbation: nay, he will rather confer them, purposely to evidence the force and tendency of these base passions, either for the sinner's future conviction and humiliation, or to manifest the justice of his condemnation. For he can make "the wrath of man to praise him, and the remainder of it he will restrain;" he can check and moderate the force of men's passions, work upon their humanity or natural affection; excite horror or terror in their minds, or even let loose selfishness, covetousness, or fear of man, to counteract the effects of malice and revenge: so that, in direct opposition to their own intentions, his enemies shall just go far enough to accomplish his purposes, and to defeat their own; and to promote the benefit and advancement of believers, which they meant to hinder.—In whatever way he may give his servants any previous intimations of future honour and usefulness, they may be considered as equivalent to assurances of many preparatory trials: for "before honour is humility;" and the human heart is seldom sufficiently humbled, for suitably filling up important stations, without a previous course of painful discipline.

V. 31—36.

Scarcely any thing can be baser, than for children to insult and torture the heart of a parent, whose chief fault consists in having too much indulged them; yet, in this common ease, though the conduct of the child is vile, the appointment of God is wise and righteous.—The more we love earthly objects, the greater affliction are we exposed to on their account; and impatient mourning, when they are taken away, too plainly proves the excess of our affection, and the need there was of the salutary stroke. Yet our sorrow would often cease, and be turned into joy, if we knew all the truth. We should therefore endeavour, in the exercise of faith, to rest satisfied, that, though we hit crime is detected, and Tamar bears to him Pharez and Zarah, 12—30

AND it came to pass at that time, that Judah went down from his brethren, and ^a turned in to a cer-

^a xix. 3. Judg. iv. 18. 2 Kings iv. 8. Prov. xiii. 20 know not now what the Lord is doing, we shall know and approve it hereafter; and thus to find comfort, instead of rashly, and in general falsely, determining, under severe trials, to go down mourning to the grave. (xlv. 28. xlviii. 11.)—As we know not what we may come to before we die, it is good to habituate ourselves to labour, self-denial, and submission.—When men are bent upon wickedness, they will never want some stratagem to effect it, and some pretext to conceal it; yet, however unanimous they may be in hiding their sins, they will at last be discovered to their confusion.—But let us in all this behold Jesus, hated, envied, persecuted, sold, and suffering for us: yea, in some sense by us; for we are like-minded by nature with those who crucified him; and our sins were the real causes of those sufferings, which made way for his mediatorial exaltation. Thus while we were enemies, provision was made for our extreme necessity, against the time when we should become sensible of our real character and condition: and then we find, that he was thus waiting his opportunity of overcoming evil with good.—While we receive from his fulness daily, let us not forget the anguish of his soul, when suffering for our sins: that we may mourn for our crimes, and crucify his crucifiers; that we may love and serve him; and, through envy, reproach, and tribulation, follow him to glory.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXVIII. V. 1, 2. The inspired historian here breaks off his narration, to relate some other occurrences, which had taken place in Jacob's family, and were doubtless an additional cause of great grief to the aged Patriarch.—Though Judah and his brethren so strenuously opposed the marriage of Dinah with an uncircumcised person; yet he, and probably all the rest, married the daughters of those who were not circumcised. (Note, xxxiv. 14—17.)—The marriages of Israelitish women with uncircumcised persons, were, by the law, virtually forbidden; for they were not allowed to marry Gentiles, who had not fully embraced the religion of Israel, and who were consequently uncircumcised. But if the daughters of uncircumcised persons were converted to the worship of the true God, not being capable of circumcision, they might become the wives of Israelites, without violating any statute; and indeed this seems to have been allowed in some other cases. (Deut. xxi. 10—14. Judg. xiv. 1—4. Ruth iii. 9—13. iv. Matt. i. 5.) It does not however appear, that Judah was more careful in this respect, than Esau had been. He must have been very young when he married, which probably took place before Joseph was sold into Egypt; yet he seems to have acted without Jacob's consent, by the advice of his Canaanitish friend. Adullam was not far from Ephrath, and, it is generally supposed, to the north of Hebron. Probably, Judah at this time left his father's house for some other residence.—

^b Josh. xv. 35. ^b tain ^b Adullamite, whose name was Hirah.

^c iii. 6. vi. 2. xxiv. 3. xxxiv. 2. Judg. xiv. 2. xvi. 1. 2 Sam. xi. 2. ^d 1 Chr. ii. 3. ^a Shua.
 2 And Judah ^c saw there a daughter of a certain Canaanite, whose name was ^a Shuah; and he took her and went in unto her.

3 And she conceived and bare a son: and he called his name ^c Er.

4 And she conceived again, and bare a son; and she called his name Onan.

5 And she yet again conceived, and bare a son; and called his name ^f Shelah: and he was at Chezib, when she bare him.

6 And Judah ^g took a wife for Er his first-born, whose name was Tamar.

7 And Er, Judah's first-born, was ^h wicked in the sight of the LORD; and the LORD slew him.

8 And Judah said unto Onan, ⁱ Go in unto thy brother's wife, and marry her, and raise up seed to thy brother.

9 And Onan knew that the seed should not be his: and it came to pass, when he went in unto his brother's wife, that he spilled it on the ground, lest that he should give seed to his brother.

10 And the thing which he did ^{*} displeased the LORD: wherefore he slew him also.

Shuah was the name of Judah's wife's father, and not that of his wife (12).

V. 4, 5. Probably Judah was from home when these two sons were born, and so his wife named them.—Chezib is supposed to have been the same as Achzib. (Josh. xv. 44.)

V. 7. Er was "wicked in the sight of the LORD;" but perhaps not in the sight of man, from whom he concealed his crimes. The LORD, however, was so provoked at his secret sins, that he slew him.—Many premature deaths might probably be accounted for in the same manner, had we as impartial and well informed historians to record them.

V. 8. The custom of marrying a brother's widow, when he died childless, seems to have been traditional before it became a written law; and the first-born from such marriages was accounted the child of the deceased, adopted into his family, and so became his heir. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 9, 10. Onan's habitual conduct, (for this is meant,) was not only unnatural and detestable in itself, but full of envy and malice, and not without something of the nature of murder in it: for the same principle would have induced him to murder a child born to him, but accounted his brother's, if he could have done it with impunity. It implied also a contempt of the promise of a numerous pos-

11 Then said Judah to Tamar his daughter-in-law, Remain a widow at thy father's house, ^k till Shelah my son be grown; (for he said, Lest peradventure he die also as his brethren did;) and Tamar went and dwelt in her father's house.

12 ¶ And [†] in process of time, the daughter of Shuah, Judah's wife, died: and Judah was ^l comforted, and went up unto his ^m sheep-shearers to Timnath, he and his friend Hirah the Adullamite.

13 And it was told Tamar, saying, Behold, thy father-in-law goeth up to ⁿ Timnath, to shear his sheep.

14 And she put her widow's garments off from her, and covered her with a veil, and wrapped herself, ^o and sat in [†] an open place, which is by the way to Timnath: for she saw ^p that Shelah was grown, and she was not given unto him to wife.

15 When Judah saw her, he thought her to be an harlot: because she had covered her face.

16 And he turned unto her by the way, and said, Go to, I pray thee, let me come in unto thee (for he knew not that she was his daughter-in-law): and she said, ^q What wilt thou give me that thou mayest come in unto me?

terity, made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and of that Seed especially in whom all nations "should be blessed."

V. 11. Perhaps Judah, being ignorant of the real cause of his sons' death, attributed it to some ill behaviour of Tamar, and therefore secretly determined not to marry Shelah to her. For the present, however, he put the matter off, by intimating that his son was too young, and that he should wait some time longer before he allowed them to marry.

V. 14—16. Tamar could not think this a probable way of forwarding her marriage with Shelah; but perhaps she concluded that Judah never intended it. It is supposed, that, according to the custom of the times, she was considered as Shelah's wife, and could not be married to another in such circumstances. Some think, that she was ambitious of being brought into the line of Christ's ancestors, and of having children by some of Jacob's family; and perhaps some intimation had been given, that our Lord should spring from Judah: not expecting therefore to be married to Shelah, she saw no other way but the very criminal one which she adopted. If this was her motive, though it by no means excuses or palliates her conduct, she certainly obtained her end; for Christ was descended from her by this very incestuous intercourse!—Judah did not discover that she was his daughter-in-law, as she was 17 And he said, 'I will send thee * a kid from the flock: And she said, 'Wilt thou give me a pledge, till thou send it?

18 And he said, What pledge shall I give thee? And she said, 'Thy signet, and thy bracelets, and thy staff that is in thine hand: and he ^u gave it her, and came in unto her, and she conceived by him.

19 And she arose, and went away, and ^v laid by her veil from her, and put on the garments of her widowhood.

20 ¶ And Judah sent the kid by the hand of ^x his friend the Adullamite, to receive his pledge from the woman's hand: but he found her not.

21 Then he asked the men of that place, saying, Where is the harlot, that was [†] openly by the way-side? And they said, There was no harlot in this place.

22 And he returned to Judah, and said, I cannot find her; and also the men of the place said that there was no harlot in this place.

23 And Judah said, Let her take it to her, ^y lest we ^z be shamed: behold, I sent this kid, and thou hast not found her.

24 And it came to pass about three months after, that it was told Judah, saying, Tamar thy daughter-in-law hath ^x played the harlot; and also behold, she ^x is with child by whoredom: and Judah said, Bring her forth, and ^a let her be burnt.

25 When she was brought forth, she sent to her father-in-law, saying, By the man whose these are, ^b am I with child: and she said, ^b Discern, I pray thee, whose ^b are these, the signet, and bracelets, and staff.

26 And Judah acknowledged them, and said, ^c She hath been more righteous than I; ^d because that I gave her not to Shelah my son; ^e and he knew her again no more.

27 ¶ And it came to pass in the time of her travail, that behold twins were in her womb.

28 And it came to pass when she travailed, that the one put out his hand; and the midwife took and bound upon his hand a scarlet thread, saying, This came out first.

29 And it came to pass as he drew back his hand, that behold his brother came out; and she said, 'How hast thou broken forth? this breach be upon thee: therefore [†] his name was called [†] Pharez.

30 And afterward came out his brother, that had the scarlet thread upon his hand; [‡] and his name was called Zarah.

veiled: and he took her for a harlot, because she sat by the way-side.

V. 17. Pledge.] Ἀπάλων, Sept. which is rendered earnest in 2 Cor. i. 22. v. 5. Eph. i. 14.

V. 18. Signet, bracelets, and staff.] These were probably of considerable value, and would afford Tamar an opportunity of exposing Judah; yet he was so infatuated as to entrust them with a supposed harlot!

V. 21. Where is the harlot?] By the answer returned to this question, we learn that these practices were neither so common, nor so shameless, among the Canaanites, as they are now in general among nominal Christians.

V. 23. Lest we be shamed.] For the whoredom, and for the folly connected with it.

V. 24. Some suppose, that Judah only meant to brand Tamar with a mark of infamy. If he meant to burn her to death, though pregnant, it shews, not only that he considered her as betrothed to Shelah, and an adulteress; but also that he was actuated by excessive severity, and dislike to Tamar.—In those days, when a general civil government was not established through the country, but different tribes and families were ruled by their several heads; the injured party, if a principal person, seems to have been both accuser, judge, and frequently the executioner; as in the case of murder, the nearest relation was the avenger of blood.

V. 25. He who had been the adviser of the sale of Joseph, and of sending his coat to Jacob, with this taunting message, "Know now whether this be thy son's coat or no;" was at length taunted in a similar manner, "Discern, I pray thee, whose are these!" (Marg. Ref.)

V. 26. Judah had intentionally committed only fornication, while Tamar had been guilty of incest: yet, conscious of being the occasion of her crime by withholding Shelah, and of excessive severity in the harsh sentence which he had uttered against her, and perhaps being truly penitent, he condemned himself more than her: "and he knew her again no more." Though he was yet young, it does not appear that he married again.—It cannot be supposed, that Tamar was after this married to Shelah; but probably she lived the rest of her days in widowhood.

V. 27—30. By a hard labour, Tamar was corrected for her crime. From these twins, the offspring of so much sin, descended the principal part of the tribe of Judah, from whom the whole nation are to this day called Jews, or Judeans; and who had little cause to boast that "they were not born of fornication."—Some make the singular circumstances of this birth emblematical of the Jews and r Ez. xvi. 33.

a Heb. a kid of the goats.

u 24, 25. Prov. xx. 16. Luke xvi. 8.

v Jer. xxii. 24. Luke xv. 22.

v 25, 26 Hos. iv. 11.

v 14. 2 Sam. xiv. 2. 5.

x Judg. xiv. 20. 2 Sam. xiii. 3. Luke xxiii. 12.

† Or, in Enajim. 14.

y Prov. vi. 33. Rom. vi. 21. 2 Cor. iv. 2. Eph. v. 12. Rev. vii. 15.
z Heb. became a contempt.

x xxxiv. 31. Judg. xix. 2. Jer. ii. 23. iii. 1. 6. 8. Ez. xvi. 15. 28. 41. xxii. 5. 19. 44. Hos. ii. 5. iii. 8. iv. 15.

a Lev. xx. 10. xxi. 9. Deut. xxii. 21. —27. 2 Sam. xii. 5. 7. Jer. xxix. 22, 23. Matt. vii. 1—5. Rom. ii. 1, 2.

b xxxvii. 32. Ps. 1. 21. Jer. ii. 26. Rom. ii. 16. 1 Cor. iv. 5. Rev. xx. 12.

c 1 Sam. xxiv. 17. 2 Sam. xxiv. 17. Ez. xvi. 52. Hab. i. 13. John viii. 9. Rom. iii. 19. d 14.
e Job xxxiv. 31. 32. xl. 5. Matt. iii. 8. 1 Pet. iv. 2, 3.

† Or, Wherefore hast thou made this breach against thee?

† xvi. 12. Num. xxvi. 20. 1 Chr. ii. 4. ix. 4.—Neb. xi. 4. 6. Perez. Matt. i. 3. Luke iii. 35. Pharez.

‡ That is, a breach. 1 Chr. ix. 6. Zerah. Matt. i. 3. Zara.

CHAP. XXXIX.

Joseph is bought by Potiphar, and preferred in the family, 1—6; tempted by his mistress, but overcomes the temptation, 7—12; accused by her, and imprisoned by Potiphar, 13—20; favoured by the Lord's presence, and advanced by the keeper of the prison, 21—23

^d xxxvii. 35. xlv. 4. Ps. cv. 17. Acts vii. 9.

^e xxxvii. 25. 28. c 21. 22. xxviii. 15. 1 Sam. iii. 19. xvi. 18. Ps. xlv. 7. 11. 1. viii. 9. 10. xli. 10. xliii. 2. Jer. xv. 20. Matt. i. 23. Acts vii. 9. 10. Rom. viii. 31.

AND Joseph ^a was brought down to Egypt: and Potiphar an officer of Pharaoh, captain of the guard, an Egyptian, bought him of the hands of ^b the Ishmaelites, which had brought him down thither.

2 And ^c the LORD was with Joseph, and he was a prosperous man: and he Gentiles: the Jews, like Zarah, seemed marked for priority in the church of Christ, yet they drew back; and the Gentiles, like Pharez, have got the birthright: yet, in due time, the Jews shall again find admission, and share the same privileges.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—11.

What a melancholy view do these records give us of Jacob's family, of the trouble which he had with his children, and of the state of religion in the visible church of God!—Is this "Judah, whom his brethren shall praise!" Rather let us praise God for his patience with him; and that "where sin had abounded, grace" as we have reason to conclude, "much more abounded" in his salvation.—The friendship of those, who flatter young persons, and assist them in gratifying their licentious inclinations, is often much valued, and their company courted and preferred before that of pious friends and relations: but it corrupts good manners and principles, and makes bad ones worse. Though, all things considered, it is best for most men to marry early in life; yet surely not when they are incapable of judging for themselves, and will not be counselled or directed by their parents and friends; but are influenced by those who fear not God, to form connexions with others of the same character. Indeed, parents themselves frequently lead their children into the mistakes and sins, of which they themselves have been guilty; and are instrumental in their ruin, temporal and eternal.—The Scriptures sparingly hint at those vile practices, which, being done in secret, are a shame to be spoken of: this suffices to shew, that the Lord notices and abhors them, and will bring to light all the lasciviousness, of which it is to be feared multitudes are guilty in heart and life, who stand fair in the world's esteem. Then the secret history of every individual, who hath not truly repented, and washed away his sins in the blood of Christ, will be written with an impartial pen, and published to the world of men and angels: every mouth will be stopped; and God's righteousness, in the condemnation of sinners, manifested to the whole universe.

V. 12—30.

Mirth, festivity, and vain company, furnish fuel to VOL. I.

was in the ^d house of his master the Egyptian.

3 And his master ^e saw that the LORD was with him, and that the LORD made all that he did to prosper in his hand.

4 And Joseph ^f found grace in his sight, and he served him: and he made him ^g overseer over his house, and all that he had he put into his hand.

5 And it came to pass from the time that he had made him overseer in his house, and over all that he had, that the LORD blessed the Egyptian's house for Joseph's sake: and the blessing of the LORD was upon all that he had, in the house, and in the field.

^d 1 Cor. vii. 20—24.
^e xxi. 22. xxvi. 24. 28. xxx. 27. 30. 1 Sam. xviii. 14. 29. Zech. viii. 23. Rev. iii. 9.
^f 23. Josh. i. 7. 2 Chr. xxvii. 5. Neh. ii. 20. Ps. i. 3. 1 Cor. xvi. 2.
^g 21. xviii. 3. xix. 19. xxxii. 5. xxxiii. 8. 10. Neh. ii. 4. 5. Prov. xvi. 7. 22. xv. 2. xxiv. 2. xli. 40. 41. Prov. xiv. 35. xvii. 2. xxvii. 18. Acts xx. 28.
^h xii. 2. xix. 25. xxx. 27. Deut. xxviii. 3—6. Acts xxvii. 24.

licentious inclinations, and opportunity inflames the heart; then interest, credit, and conscience are sacrificed, and the wisest of men act as if bereft of common sense: for "wine and whoredom take away the heart," and stupify the conscience.—What need have we then to "watch and pray, that we enter not into temptation!" Unthought of consequences will soon prove the folly of those, who give licence to their lusts; and they, who fear shame before men, more than condemnation before God, often find the very thing come upon them which they feared, notwithstanding all their care to prevent it.—Injurious suspicions and unjust treatment frequently drive those to evil practices, who were not previously disposed to them; but miserable and infatuated beyond expression are they, who barter chastity, reputation, and even their souls, for the paltry reward of sin. Nor are any more hardened against compassion, or more disposed to treat others with unrelenting severity, than they who are most indulgent to themselves, and heedlessly continue in unrepented wickedness. Yet it is hopeful, when being put to shame before men produces conviction of guilt, humiliating confessions, and renunciation of the sin thus exposed, never more to return to it.—But while we compassionate pious Jacob, thus wounded on every side by the misconduct of his family; let us admire the sovereign purpose and grace of God, who, by all these events, was preparing for the manifestation of his Son in human nature. Our Redeemer sprang from Judah by Tamar, and from Pharez: for his excellency was personal; and, though himself sinless, it suited the end of his appearance, for him to be "made in the likeness of sinful flesh."

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXIX. V. 2—6. Joseph was not only favoured with the comforting presence of the Lord, and with seasons of peculiarly sweet communion with him; but he was so remarkably furnished with wisdom from above, and prospered in all his undertakings, that it was evident, even to Potiphar himself, that the Lord was with him, assisting and succeeding them. Thus, though a slave, he was had in reputation; and, being diligent in his business, he became a favourite with his master, who greatly countenanced and confided in him. Potiphar, no doubt, would hear

j 4. 8. 23.

6 And he ^lleft all that he had in Joseph's hand; and he knew not ought he had, save the bread which he did eat: and Joseph was ^ka goodly person, and well favoured.

k xii. 14, 15. xxix. 17. 1 Sam. xvi. 12. Acts vii. 20.

7 ¶ And it came to pass after these things, that his master's wife ^lcast her eyes upon Joseph; and she said, ^mLie with me.

i vi. 2. Job xxxi. 1. Ps. cxix. 37. Ez. xxiii. 5, 6. 12-16. Matt. v. 28. 2 Pet. ii. 14. 1 John ii. 16. m 2 Sam. xiii. 11. Prov. vii. 13. Jer. iii. 3.

8 But he ⁿrefused, and said unto his master's wife, Behold, my master wot-teth not what is with me in the house, and he hath committed all that he hath to my hand.

n Prov. i. 10. ii. 10. 16-19. vi. 20 -25. 32. 33. vii. 25-27. ix. 13-18. xxii. 14. xxiii. 25-28. o Neh. vi. 11. Luke xii. 48. 1 Cor. iv. 2. Tit. ii. 10.

9 There is ^onone greater in this house than I; neither hath he kept back any thing from me, but thee, because thou art his wife: ^phow then can I do this great wickedness, and ^qagainst God?

p xx. 3. 6. Lev. xx. 10. 2 Sam. xi. 27. Job xxxi. 9-12. Jer. v. 8. 9. 1 Cor. vi. 9. 10. Gal. v. 19-21. Heb. xiii. 4. Rev. xxi. 8. xxiii. 15.

q Num. xxxii. 23. 2 Sam. xii. 13. Neh. v. 15. Ps. li. 4. Jer. xxviii. 16. 1. 7.

10 And it came to pass as she spake from Joseph, (who, it is evident, avowed his religion, and refused to join in idolatry,) many things concerning JEHOVAH, the God whom he worshipped: and finding all his affairs prospered, and that Joseph ascribed this to the Lord's special blessing, he might be convinced, (as Laban had been concerning Jacob,) that the Lord blessed him for Joseph's sake; indeed, it seems to have been evident to all concerned. Thus at length Potiphar, having full confidence in his integrity, prudence, and good success, left all his concerns to his management; and, without anxiety, enjoyed his abundance. Considering Potiphar's rank, it is not probable that Joseph was preferred to so important a station, till his ability and fidelity had been fully proved. About thirteen years elapsed, from the time when he was sold into Egypt, to that of his standing before Pharaoh. Some years he was confined in prison: but probably more elapsed during his continuance in Potiphar's family, before his imprisonment; where he would have large opportunity of acquiring that kind of knowledge and address, which his future elevated station required.—Joseph's comeliness is spoken of, in the very terms before used in the original concerning his mother Rachel. (xxix. 17.)

V. 7. Lie with me.] The disparity in rank betwixt Potiphar's wife and Joseph, and the observation of his modesty, as equal to his other virtues, probably made her despair of inveigling him by distant hints: and, considering how much it was his interest to oblige her, and how dangerous to give her offence, and hurried on by her criminal passions, she was not ashamed to address him in this impudent manner, not greatly fearing a repulse.

V. 8—10. Attending to the circumstances before mentioned, and considering Joseph as a single man in the vigour of youth, the importunity with which he was assaulted, and the opportunity and privacy afforded him; we cannot too much admire this glorious victory of chastity, the power of divine grace displayed in it, and the excellence of him who was hated of his brethren. Comparing to Joseph day by day, that he hearkened not unto her, to lie by her, ^ror to be with her.

Prov. i. 15. v. 8. 1 Cor. vi. 18. xv. 33. 1 Thes. v. 22. 2 Tim. ii. 22. 1 Pet. ii. 11.

11 ¶ And it came to pass about this time, that Joseph went into the house to do his business; and there was ^snone of the men of the house there within.

Job xxiv. 15. Jer. xxiii. 24. Mal. iii. 5.

12 And she ^tcaught him by his garment, saying, Lie with me: ^uand he left his garment in her hand, and fled, and got him out.

Prov. vii. 13. Ec. vii. 24. Ez. xvi. 30-34. u 1 Sam. xv. 27. Prov. i. 5. Mark xiv. 51, 52.

13 And it came to pass, when she saw that he had left his garment in her hand, and was fled forth, x 17. x. 21. xiv. 13. xl. 15. y Is. li. 7. liv. 17. Matt. v. 11. xxvi. 59. Luke xliii. 2. 2 Cor. xi. 8. 1 Pet. ii. 20. iii. 14-18. iv. 14-19. z Heb. great.

14 That she called unto the men of her house, and spake unto them, saying, See, he hath brought in ^xa Hebrew unto us to mock us: ^yhe came in unto me to lie with me, and I cried with a ^zloud voice.

his conduct with that of Judah, Reuben, and the other sons of Jacob, it must be allowed, that he had justly the preference in his father's esteem.—Nor was this refusal more worthy of admiration, than the manner of it. The calmness of his spirit, the force of his arguments, the generosity and delicacy, as well as piety, of his sentiments, are most beautiful.—His master's kindness to him, the honourable station which he held in his family, the peculiar relation in which his tempter stood to his generous benefactor, the greatness of the injustice and ingratitude to him;—but above all, the greatness of the wickedness in the sight of God, whose authority and displeasure he was not ashamed to mention to this adulterous woman:—these were the topics on which he insisted; and had not her vile passions stupified and hardened her heart, surely she must have been reclaimed, or even converted to his God, and induced to embrace that religion, which he so adorned and recommended by his conduct!—While she assailed him day by day continually, no doubt Satan, as far as permitted, would paint to his imagination in lively colours the advantages of compliance, and the consequences of refusal: but all was in vain; for the grace of our Lord was sufficient for him. And when he found her deaf to the remonstrances of duty, conscience, gratitude, honour, and the fear of God, and that he could not reclaim her, he avoided her company as much as possible; being distrustful of himself and fearful of being overcome, if he parleyed with the temptation.

V. 13—16. The base affection of this wicked woman, being finally disappointed, was changed for the most rancorous enmity; and she seems to have exulted in the opportunity of being revenged upon Joseph. When therefore the men came in, she addressed them in the affected language of rage and disdain; alluding to Potiphar, in language which seemed to charge him as accessory to the indignity, which she pretended to have received. She called Joseph a Hebrew, in contempt of his original and 15 And it came to pass, when he heard that I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his garment with me, and fled, and got him out.

^z Jer. iv. 22. ix 3 -5. 16 And she ² laid up his garment by her until his lord came home.

^a 14. Ex. xx. 16 xxxiii. 1. 1 Kings xxii. 9-13. Ps. lv. 3. cxv. 3, 4. Prov. xix. 5. 9. 17 And she spake unto him according to these words, saying, ^a The Hebrew servant which thou hast brought unto us, came in unto me to mock me.

18 And it came to pass, as I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his garment with me, and fled out.

^b Job xxix. 16. Prov. xviii 17. xxix. 12. Acts xxv. 16. 19 And it came to pass, when his master ^b heard the words of his wife, which she spake unto him, saying,

After this manner did thy servant to me; that ^c his wrath was kindled.

religion: and added, that he left his garment with her; intimating, that when she called aloud for help, he hasted to escape; upon which seizing hold of his garment, she had in vain endeavoured to retain him till they came to apprehend him.

V. 17. To mock me.] To insult and treat me in a base, unworthy manner.

V. 19, 20. Joseph did not attempt to speak in his own defence: perhaps he was not permitted; or he might not be inclined, sensible it would be in vain. Doubtless, however, he would say, as David did, "Thou shalt answer for me, O LORD, my God." Potiphar was no doubt blameable, for so hastily crediting this accusation against a person of approved excellence: yet, considering the absolute authority which masters possessed over the lives of their slaves, the vehement rancour of his accuser, that accuser his master's wife, and the baseness of the crime very plausibly laid to his charge; it must be ascribed to a special interposition of God, that he was not immediately put to death. Instead of this, he was cast into the prison where the king's prisoners were confined: in which circumstance also the hand of the Lord should be noticed; for in any other prison probably Pharaoh would never have heard of him.

V. 22. He was the doer of it.] Through the wisdom and fidelity which Joseph manifested, he soon acquired the confidence of the keeper of the prison; and though at first severely treated, (Note, Ps. cv. 18,) yet he afterwards became both comfortable and useful. No doubt, the prisoners were used by him with singular humanity, and probably benefited by his pious counsels, excellent example, and winning benevolence.

V. 23. Because the Lord, &c.] This was so evident that the keeper of the prison noticed it; and was influenced, perhaps even converted, by what he observed. Thus, in all respects, Joseph was a blessing. (xii. 2.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS

V. 1-10.

Our enemies may strip us of external distinctions and ornaments, but wisdom and grace cannot be taken from 20 And Joseph's master took him, and put him ^d into the prison, a place where ^e the king's prisoners were bound: and he was there in the prison.

^f See on 2. 21 ¶ But ^f the Lord was with Joseph, and ^g shewed him mercy, and ^h gave him favour in the sight of the keeper of the prison.

ⁱ committed to Joseph's hand all the prisoners that were in the prison: and whatsoever they did there, he was the doer of it.

23 The ⁱ keeper of the prison looked not to any thing that was under his hand; ^k because the LORD was with him: and that which he did, the LORD made it to prosper.

us: they may banish us from our friends, relatives, and country; but they cannot deprive us of the presence of the Lord: they may even exclude us from the benefits of common providence, rob us of our liberty, and confine us in dungeons; but they cannot shut us out from the throne of grace, or bereave us of the blessings of salvation.—The ordinances of God and the society of his people are very useful, and, in some sense, almost necessary, to the life of faith and growth of grace, especially in young converts; so that parents and ministers are justly fearful lest their beloved children or people should be secluded from them: but if, contrary to our inclination, we should be deprived of these advantages, His gracious presence can supply the deficiency, and even make our souls like a watered garden, rendering us comfortable, respectable, prosperous, and useful.—Had Potiphar purchased Joseph with half the substance of his house, he would have made an advantageous bargain; and, till imposed upon, he learned his value by experience, and treated him accordingly. Yet how little do many Christians understand the worth of such servants as fear God, who will always be most faithful, industrious, and successful! But we must allow, on the other hand, that mere pretenders to religion, of character and conduct exactly the reverse of Joseph, occasion this prejudice, among those who cannot or will not discriminate, between the humble Christian, and the noisy hypocrite.—When the Lord pleases he can easily give his servants favour, even among strangers, and no one was ever a loser by being kind to them. In general, they who accommodate themselves to a low and laborious situation, will get forward, and acquire confidence. But alas! prosperity draws on temptation: and personal accomplishments are often snares to others, as well as to the possessor, who has therefore no cause to glory in them; nor ought any one to envy or covet them. Through the force of human depravity, those amiable qualities, which should command esteem, attract the attention of the licentious eye, and excite the licentious passions; which, having acquired the ascendancy, scorn restraint and regard to modesty and decency. Thus "when lust is conceived, it bringeth forth sin;" and the infatuated wretch, rushing

CHAP. XL.

Pharaoh's chief butler and chief baker being imprisoned, Joseph is charged with them, 1—4. He interprets their dreams, and offers a petition to the chief butler, 5—19. The dreams are accomplished, and the chief butler forgets Joseph, 20—23.

AND ^a it came to pass after these things, ^b that the butler of the king of Egypt and ^c his baker had offended their lord the king of Egypt.

^c 2 And Pharaoh was wroth against two of his officers, against ^d the chief of the butlers, and against the chief of the bakers.

^e 3 And he put them in ward in the headlong to destruction, turns seducer, and becomes the factor for Satan, in tempting others to wickedness. Nor is any thing more to be dreaded than such a tempter, or more to be shunned than such temptations; so that if we do not mean to commit iniquity, we ought to "flee as a bird from the snare of the fowler, and as a roe from the hand of the hunter." Let us not, however, rest satisfied with admiring Joseph, in the honourable victory which he acquired; but let us consider him as a bright example proposed to our imitation, and an illustrious proof of the energy of divine grace. Trusting to that grace, we may hope to be more than conquerors, not only if exposed to the fiery trial of persecution, but even if assaulted in the far more dangerous manner that Joseph was. But, would we stand stedfast in the day of trial, we must have our minds armed with gratitude, justice, fear of God, faith, love, abhorrence of evil, contempt of worldly pleasure or gain, and readiness for the cross: we must learn also to judge of every sin, and of licentious indulgences especially, not in that slight manner which the world does; but as enormous crimes, "for the sake of which the wrath of God cometh upon the children of disobedience." And, that importunity may not prevail over us, nor secrecy encourage us, we should endeavour to have our minds habitually possessed, with a sense of our obligations unto God, his all-seeing eye upon us, and the approaching discoveries of the day of judgment.

V. 11—23.

If Satan cannot induce us to sin, he will do his utmost to distress us: and we must expect the embittered resentment of those, whose wicked inclinations we disappoint; and to be accused of the very crimes which we abhor, yea, because we abhor them. It is, however, far "better, if the will of God be so, that we suffer for well-doing, than for evil-doing:" a clear conscience and the presence of a merciful God, will support us, not only under our trials, but under the most injurious calumnies: and we need not use much labour to vindicate ourselves; for in due time, the Lord will vindicate us, and clear off every aspersion.—The more meekly and patiently we suffer, the less bitterness shall we experience in our trials, and the more consistent will our conduct be with the Christian house of the captain of the guard, into the prison, ^e the place where Joseph ^e v. xvix. 20 was bound.

^f 4 And ^f the captain of the guard ^f xxxix. 1. 21—23. charged Joseph with them, and he served them; and they continued a season in ward.

^g 5 ¶ And ^g they dreamed a dream ^g xx. 3. xxxvii. 5. 10. xli. 1—7. Judg. vii. 13. Dan. ii. 1—3. iv. 5. 9. 19. both of them, each man his dream in one night, each man according to the interpretation of his dream; the butler and the baker of the king of Egypt, which were bound in the prison.

ⁱ 6 And Joseph came in unto them in the morning, and looked upon them, ⁱ and behold they were sad.

i 8. Dan. iv. 5. v. 6.

character. By all these things, the Lord is training up his people for glory: perhaps for better scenes, and important services, in this present world: and, if we are not in a wrong spirit, or out of the path of duty, we can never be out of the way either of comfort or usefulness.—But let us not forget, through Joseph, to look unto Jesus, who "suffered being tempted," yet without sin; who was calumniated and persecuted, but without cause; "who was led as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth" to recriminate, or to vindicate himself; and who by the cross ascended to the throne. May we be enabled, and contented, to follow in the same path of submissive suffering, to the same place of glory.

NOTES.

CHAP. XL. V. 3. Potiphar was "captain of the guard:" and it seems this state-prison was adjoining to his house, and entrusted to his care; so that the keeper of the prison probably was his deputy. (xxxvii. 36.)

V. 4. Joseph at first was not only closely confined, but severely treated in the prison. (Note, Ps. cv. 18.) Yet, after some time, Potiphar's resentment seems to have cooled: and, considering the whole of Joseph's prudent and excellent conduct, he perhaps began to suspect that he had been maliciously accused. He however connived at the kindness shewn to Joseph, and, being sensible of his abilities, was not unwilling he should be trusted, and prove serviceable in that situation. Being thus employed, he gave the king's butler and baker, as prisoners of rank, all the attendance required.—'O! how many little incidents of which the parties at the time think nothing, do some of the greatest events depend! If they had gone to another prison, Joseph might have died where he was, and no provision been made for the seven years of famine; and Jacob and his family, with millions of others, have perished for want; and so all the promises of their becoming a great nation, and of the Messiah springing from among them, and all nations being blessed in him, would have been frustrated. But he that appoints the end, appoints all the means which lead to it.' Fuller.

V. 6. The prisoners, considering their dreams as supernatural, were very melancholy; for their situation, and per-

7 And he asked Pharaoh's officers that were with him in the ward of his lord's house, saying, ^k Wherefore ^{*} look ye so sadly to day?

k 2 Sam. xiii. 4. Neh. ii. 2. Luke xxiv. 17. * Heb. are your faces evil?

8 And they said unto him, We have dreamed a dream, and there is no interpreter of it. And Joseph said unto them, ^l Do not interpretations belong to God? tell me them, I pray you.

l xli. 15, 16. Is. viii. 19. Dan. ii. 11, 23, 47. v. 11. —15. 1 Cor. xii. 10, 11.

9 And the chief butler told his dream to Joseph, and said unto him, In my dream, behold, ^m a vine was before me.

m xxxvii. 6—10. Judg. vii. 13—15. Dan. ii. 31. iv. 10, &c.

10 And in the vine were three branches: and it was as though it budded, and her blossoms shot forth; and the clusters thereof brought forth ripe grapes.

11 And Pharaoh's cup was in my hand: and I took the grapes, and pressed them into Pharaoh's cup, and I gave the cup into Pharaoh's hand.

n xli. 25. Dan. ii. 39, &c. iv. 13, &c.

12 And Joseph said unto him, ^o This is the interpretation of it: ^o The three branches are three days.

o xli. 26. Judg. vii. 14. Matt. xxvi. 26. 1 Cor. x. 4. Gal. iv. 25. p 2 Kings xxv. 27. Ps. iii. 3. Jer. liii. 81.

13 Yet within three days ^p shall Pharaoh [†] lift up thine head, and restore thee unto thy place: and thou shalt deliver Pharaoh's cup into his hand, after the former manner when thou wast his butler.

† Or, reckon. 19, 20. marg.

14 But ^z think ^q on me when it shall be well with thee, and ^r shew kindness, I pray thee, unto me; and make mention of me unto Pharaoh, and bring me out of this house:

z Heb. remember me with thee. q 1 Sam. xxv. 31. Luke xxiii. 42. 1 Cor. vii. 21. r Josh. ii. 12. 1 Sam. xx. 14, 15. 2 Sam. ix. 1. 1 Kings ii. 7.

15 For indeed I was ^s stolen away out of the land of ^t the Hebrews: and here also have I ^u done nothing that they should put me into the dungeon.

s xxxvii. 28. Ex. xxi. 16. Deut. xxiv. 7. 1 Tim. i. 10. t xiv. 13. xli. 12. u xxxix. 20. 1 Sam. xxiv. 11. Ps. lix. 3, 4. Dan. vi. 22. John x. 32. xv. 25. Acts xxiv. 13 —21. xxv. 10, 11. 1 Pet. iii. 17, 18. x 1, 2.

16 ¶ When ^x the chief baker saw that the interpretation was good; he said unto Joseph, I also was in my dream, and behold, ^y I had three ^z white baskets on my head.

Or, baskets full of holes.

17 And in the uppermost basket there was of all manner of [†] bake-meats for Pharaoh; and the birds did eat them out of the basket upon my head.

Heb. meat of Pharaoh, the work of a baker, or cook.

18 And Joseph answered and said, This is the interpretation thereof: [†] The three baskets are three days.

See on 12.—xli. 26. 1 Cor. x. 4. xi. 24.

19 Yet ^z within three days shall Pharaoh ^{*} lift up thy head from off thee, and shall ^a hang thee on a tree: ^b and the birds shall eat thy flesh from off thee.

z 13. Or, reckon thee and take thy office from thee. a 22. xli. 13. Deut. xxi. 22, 23. Josh. viii. 29. x. 26. 2 Sam. xxi. 6. Gal. iii. 13. b 17. 1 Sam. xvii. 44, 46. 2 Sam. xxi. 10. Ex. xxxix. 4. c Matt. xiv. 6. Mark vi. 21.

20 ¶ And it came to pass the third day, which was Pharaoh's ^c birth-day, that he made a feast unto all his servants: and he [†] lifted up the head of the chief butler, and of the chief baker, among his servants.

Or, reckoned. 13. 19. Marg. Matt. xviii. 23—25. Luke xvi. 1, 2.

21 And he restored the chief butler unto his butlership again; and he ^d gave the cup into Pharaoh's hand:

d 13. Neh. ii. 1

22 But ^e he hanged the chief baker: as Joseph had interpreted to them.

e 8. 19. xli. 11—13. 16. Dan. ii. 19—23. 30. v. 12.

23 Yet did not the chief butler remember Joseph, ^f but forgot him.

f Job xix. 14. Ps. xxxi. 12. Ec. ix. 15, 16. Am. vi. 6.

haps conscious guilt, caused them to forebode the worst. Indeed, it must have appeared very extraordinary, that each of them should have so significant a dream at the same time.

V. 7. This is a beautiful specimen of that attentive tenderness and sympathy, by means of which God gave Joseph favour with every one whom he approached.

V. 8. The prisoners could not consult the diviners, in whom they placed confidence; and this added to their anxiety.—Joseph's apposite question intimates, that he had before discoursed with them concerning the true God, and endeavoured to draw them off from those lying vanities to his worship and service. It also precluded them from giving him the honour of the interpretation.

V. 9—13. The rapid budding and blossoming of the vine, and ripening of the grapes, seems to have fixed the interpretation to three days, rather than weeks, months, or years: and the actual delivery of the cup into Pharaoh's hand obviously denoted a prosperous event.—“The three branches are three days” (12). “This is my body.”

V. 14, 15. Joseph desired, by an appeal to Pharaoh, to obtain his liberty; but he had no further request to present. He did not say by whom, or in what manner, he was stolen, and sold for a slave; for he was not disposed to criminate or reproach: neither did he so much as accuse his wicked mistress, or at all reflect on Potiphar, or express any resentment for his false imprisonment.—It seems that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, with large families and in flourishing circumstances, had so long sojourned in the southern part of Canaan, that it had become known in the adjacent countries as “the land of the Hebrews.”

V. 16—19. The bake-meats, eaten by the birds and not brought to Pharaoh, was the unfavourable presage. The bad dream would not admit of a good interpretation; nor could Joseph, without unfaithfulness, conceal the truth, however it might pain him to speak it. The baker might be benefited by the warning, if he prepared to meet the predicted event.

V. 20—22. The anniversary of Pharaoh's birth-day being observed as a season of festivity, these officers were enquired after; and either through the merits of their

CHAP. XLI.

Pharaoh has two dreams, which the magicians cannot interpret, 1—8. The chief butler recommends Joseph, who is sent for, and interprets the dreams to foretel seven years of great plenty and seven of as great scarcity, 9—32. He gives counsel to Pharaoh; and is highly preferred, 33—44; and married, 45. The seven years of plenty, and Joseph's wise management, 46—49. The names of his two sons, 50—52. The seven years of scarcity begin, and the Egyptians are relieved by Joseph, 53—57.

^a xxxvii. 5—10.
xi. 5. Esth. vi. 1.
Dan. ii. 1—3. iv.
5, &c. Matt.
xxvii. 19.
^b Deut. xi. 10.
Ez. xxix. 3. 9.

AND it came to pass at the end of two full years, ^a that Pharaoh dreamed, and behold he stood by ^b the river.

2 And behold, ^c there came up out of ^{c 17—27.} the river seven well-favoured kine, and fat-fleshed; and they fed in a meadow.

3 And behold, seven other kine came up after them out of the river, ill-favoured, and lean-fleshed; and stood by the other kine, upon the brink of the river.

4 And the ill-favoured and lean-fleshed kine did eat up the seven well-favoured and fat kine. So Pharaoh awoke.

5 And he slept and dreamed the second time: and behold, seven ears cause, or the caprice of their sovereign, they were thus differently disposed of.

V. 23. Neither the kindness shewn by Joseph, nor the interpretation of his dream thus remarkably verified, nor the discourses which doubtless he had heard concerning religion, nor the excellent conduct of Joseph which adorned it, made any lasting impression on the chief butler, when he was again possessed of the emoluments of his office, and enjoying the pleasures of the court!

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

High stations are slippery places; and from the presence-chamber to the dungeon is, in many earthly courts, only a short step: but a place in the favour of God, who will not forsake his true servants, is of unspeakable value.—In the voluntary actions of men, who know not God and pay no regard to him, we may discern his hand; and perceive how his purposes unfold, and his counsels slowly, but surely, work towards an accomplishment. While we are encouraged by the gracious dealings of the Lord towards his afflicted servant, let us mark how he resembled Christ; and may we, through the grace of God resemble and imitate him, in fidelity, humanity, compassion, unaffected piety, and humility; in repressing the pride and resentment, which agitate our hearts, embitter our spirits, and sometimes disgrace our conversation, when we meet with injurious treatment, or speak of that which we have met with; and in modestly pleading our own cause, without needlessly mentioning or exposing the faults, even of our most malignant enemies.—The foresight of sinners, however attained, reaches but a few days forward; but, by faith, the believer looks through the sufferings of time, and anticipates the glories of eternity.—Though we ought not in general to expect information from dreams, and need not regret the want of an interpreter: yet, to be favoured with a wise and faithful interpreter of God's providences and oracles, especially in seasons of affliction, is an inexpressible mercy. (Note, Job xxxiii. 19—26.) Here also “interpretations belong to God;” from him we must seek them, and to him give the praise, whatever instruments he employs. But the same faithful interpretation, which encourages one man, will contain an awful warning to another of a contrary character: yet, even this is of salutary tendency; for blessed be God, if we discover our danger, we need not long seek in vain for a refuge.—Temporal deliverances must generally be longer waited for by the Lord's servants, than by others, that they may have them with the fullest advantage, and be previously prepared for them: and he will teach them to cease from man, before they obtain their best blessings.—The festive observation of birth-days by men, who are exceedingly desirous of living in this world, seems rather incongruous: for, in fact, they thus celebrate, with every indication of joy and gladness, the decease, as it were, of one year after another of their uncertain span; nor are the two instances of this vanity, recorded in Scripture, suited to recommend the practice. (Mark vi. 16—29.) A Christian, however, may properly observe his birth-day, with praise and thanksgiving to God for giving him life, and with gladness of heart that he approaches the conclusion of sin and sorrow, and the completion of his felicity. He may also take occasion, at these returning seasons, to bless the Lord for the mercies of the past year, to humble himself for the sins which he has committed, and to seek the divine assistance and blessing in all he shall undertake during the year on which he then enters.—We must not complain or be discouraged, if we are forgotten, or ungratefully requited, by those whom we have served. Ingratitude is, alas! the fault of our nature; and we as well as others are guilty of it, especially in our base forgetfulness of God.—But let us remember the sufferings, promises, and love of our Redeemer; and mark in this narration of Joseph, a type of Jesus, in the depth of his humiliation, mercifully assuring one of the malefactors, who hung beside him, of immediate and eternal felicity; and with awful justice leaving the other to hardness of heart and eternal perdition.

NOTES.

CHAP. XLI. V. 1. Joseph must have been a considerable time in prison, before he would be so far trusted, as to have the two state-prisoners under his charge; they were confined for some time, and yet two years more elapsed without any tokens of approaching deliverance! Surely he would often be ready to say, “LORD, how long?”—But it was the will of God, that his servant should receive liberty, and preferment also, not as an obligation conferred on an indigent person; but for the benefit of others, and in the character of a benefactor to the king and people of Egypt.—The scene of Pharaoh's dreams is laid at the river Nile, the annual overflowing of

THE RIVER NILE UNDER ITS USUAL APPEARANCE.

THE NILE, AS IT APPEARS AT THE PERIOD OF ITS OVERFLOW.

* Heb. fat. Deut. xxxi. 14. of corn came up upon one stalk, * rank and good.

d Ez. xvii. 10. xix. 12. Hos. xliii. 15. 6 And behold, seven thin ears and ^d blasted with the east-wind sprang up after them.

7 And the seven thin ears devoured the seven rank and full ears: and Pharaoh awoke, and behold it was a dream.

e xl. 6. Dan. ii. 1-3. iv. 5. v. 6. vii. 28. viii. 27. Hab. iii. 16. f Ex. vii. 11. 22. viii. 7. 18. 19. ix. 11. Lev. xix. 31. xx. 6. Deut. xxiii. 9-14. Is. viii. 19. xix. 3. xlvii. 12, 13. Dan. ii. 2. iv. 7. v. 7. 11. g Matt. ii. 1. Acts vii. 22. h Job v. 12, 13. Ps. xxxv. 14. Is. xix. 11-13. xxxix. 14. Dan. ii. 4-11. 27. 23. 1 Cor. iii. 18-20. i xl. 1-3. 14. 23.

8 And it came to pass in the morning, that ^e his spirit was troubled; and he sent and called for all the ^f magicians of Egypt, and all ^g the wise-men thereof: and Pharaoh told them his dream; and ^h there was none that could interpret them unto Pharaoh.

j xl. 5-8. 9 ¶ Then spake the chief butler unto Pharaoh, saying, ^j I do remember my faults this day.

k xxxvii. 36. xxxix. 1. 20. 10 Pharaoh was wroth with his servants, and put me in ward in the captain of the guard's house, both me, and the chief baker.

11 And we ^j dreamed a dream in one night, I and he: we dreamed each man according to the interpretation of his dream.

l xl. 12-19. 12 And there was there with us a young man, an Hebrew, ^k servant to the captain of the guard; and we told him, and he ^l interpreted to us our dreams: to each man according to his dream he did interpret.

m xl. 20-22. Jer. i. 10. Ez. xliii. 3. n 1 Sam. ii. 8. Ps. cv. 19-22. cxlii. 7, 8. o Ex. x. 16. Dan. ii. 25. 13 And it came to pass, as he interpreted to us, so it was: ^m me he restored unto mine office, and him he hanged.

p 2 Sam. xix. 24. 2 Kings xxv. 23. Esth. iv. 1-4. v. 1. 1s. lxi. 3. 10. Jer. lii. 32, 33. 14 Then Pharaoh ⁿ sent and called Joseph, ^o and they ^p brought him hastily out of the dungeon; and ^p he shaved himself and changed his raiment, and came in unto Pharaoh.

15 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I have dreamed a dream, and there is none that can interpret it: and ^q I have heard say of thee, ^q that thou canst understand a dream, to interpret it. q 9-13. Dan. v. 16. r Or, when thou hearest a dream, thou canst interpret it.

16 And Joseph answered Pharaoh, saying, ^r It is not in me: God shall give Pharaoh an answer of peace. r xl. 8. Dan. ii. 19-23. 28-30. 47. Acts iii. 12. xiv. 14, 15. 2 Cor. iii. 5.

s 1-7. 17 ¶ And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, ^s In my dream, behold, I stood upon the bank of the river.

t Jer. xxiv. 1-3. 5. 8. 18 And behold, there came up out of the river seven kine, ^t fat-fleshed, and well-favoured; and they fed in a meadow.

19 And behold, seven other kine came up after them, poor and very ill-favoured, and lean-fleshed, such as I never saw in all the land of Egypt for badness.

20 And the lean and the ill-favoured kine did eat up the first seven fat kine.

21 And when they had ^u eaten them up, it could not be known that they had eaten them; but they were still ill-favoured, as at the beginning. So I awoke. u Heb. parts to the inward parts of them. Ez. iii. 3. Rev. x. 9, 10.

22 And I saw in my dream, and behold, seven ears came up in one stalk, full and good.

23 And behold, seven ears ^v withered, thin, ^v and blasted with the east-wind, sprang up after them. v Or, small. u 6. 2 Kings xix. 26. Ps. cxxix. 6. 7. Hos. viii. 7. ix. 16.

24 And the thin ears devoured the seven good ears: and I told this unto the magicians; but there was none that could declare it unto me.

25 And Joseph said unto Pharaoh, The dream of Pharaoh is one: ^x God hath shewed Pharaoh what he is about to do. x See on 16.—1s. xli. 22, 23. xliii. 9. Mark xliii. 23. Rev. iv. 1.

26 The seven good kine are seven which caused the fertility of Egypt; but the failure of it was followed by famine, or at least by scarcity.

V. 2-7. The fat cattle and full ears of corn were apt emblems of plenty; the lean cattle and blighted ears, of famine. "The kine" seem to bear an allusion to the grass for the use of cattle; and "the ears," to the corn for the food of man.

V. 8. The circumstances of Pharaoh's dreams were strange and unnatural, yet they seemed very significant; and they impressed his mind, as a presage of some great events to himself or his kingdom: and God so ordered it, to forward Joseph's advancement, that the magicians and wise men could not make so much as a plausible conjecture at the meaning of them. (Marg. Ref.) It does not appear by what rules they interpreted dreams, or why they declined giving any interpretation on this occasion.

V. 9. My faults.] Either formerly against Pharaoh, or in forgetting Joseph.

V. 16. Thus Joseph spake of the Lord and his "states before kings, and was not ashamed." By this modest and pious answer he tacitly condemned all the pretended skill of the magicians, and endeavoured to draw the king himself "from these lying vanities unto the living God:" at the same time, he renounced all pretensions to superior sagacity, expressed his good will to Pharaoh, and intimated a confidence that the dream and interpretation would prove beneficial to his kingdom.

V. 25-27. Both dreams had one meaning; the same years; and the seven good ears are seven years: ^y the dream is one.

^y See on xl. 12.
^z ii. 24. Ex. xxvi. 6. 1 John v. 7.

27 And the seven thin and ill-favour- ed kine that came up after them, are seven years; and the seven empty ears blasted with the east-wind, shall be seven years of famine.

28 This is the thing which I have spoken unto Pharaoh: ^a What God is about to do, he sheweth unto Pharaoh.

^a See on 16. 25.

29 Behold, there come seven years of great plenty, throughout all the land of Egypt.

30 And there shall arise after them ^b seven years of famine, and all the plenty ^c shall be forgotten in the land of Egypt: and the famine shall ^d consume the land.

^b 27. 2 Sam. xxiv. 13. 1 Kings xvii. 1. 2 Kings xviii. 1. Luke iv. 25. Jam. v. 17.
^c 21. 31. Prov. xxxi. 7. 15. lxx. 16.
^d xlvi. 13.

31 And the plenty shall not be known in the land, by reason of that famine following: for it shall be very ^e grievous.

^e Heb. Acary. 1 Sam. v. 6. 15. xxiv. 20.
^f xxxvii. 7. 9. 2 Cor. xiii. 1. Num. xxiii. 19. Is. xiv. 24—27. xlv. 10. 11. Matt. xxiv. 35.
^g Or, prepared. 15. xxx. 33. Matt. xxv. 34. 41. Mark x. 40. 1 Cor. ii. 9. Rev. ix. 15.
^h Dan. iv. 27. Ex. xviii. 19—22. Deut. i. 13. Acts vi. 3.
ⁱ Or, overseers. Prov. vi. 6—8. xxiii. 3. xxvii. 12.

32 And for that the dream was ^f doubled unto Pharaoh twice; ^g it is be- cause the thing is ^h established by God, and God will shortly bring it to pass.

33 Now ⁱ therefore let Pharaoh ^j look out a man discreet and wise, and set him over the land of Egypt.

34 Let Pharaoh do this, and let him appoint ^k officers over the land, ^l and take up the fifth part of the land of Egypt in the seven plenteous years.

35 And let them ^k gather all the food ^l of those good years that come, and lay up eorn under the hand of Pharaoh, and let them keep food in the cities.

^k 48. 49. 56. xlv. 6, 7.

36 And that food shall be for store to the land, against the seven years of famine, which shall be in the land of Egypt: ^m that the land ⁿ perish not through the famine.

^m xvii. 13—25.
ⁿ Heb. be not cut off. 30.

37 And ^m the thing was ⁿ good in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of all his servants.

^m Prov. x. 20. xxv. 11. Acts vii. 10. n Josh. xxii. 30. 2 Sam. iii. 36. 1 Kings xxi. 2. margins.

38 And Pharaoh said unto his ser- vants, Can we find such a one as this is, a man ^o in whom the Spirit of God is ^p?

^o Num. xxvii. 18. Dan. iv. 8. 15. v. 11. 14. P See on 16. 25 28. 33.

39 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Forasmuch as ^p God hath shewed thee all this, there is none so discreet and wise as thou art.

40 Thou ^q shalt be over my house, and according unto thy word shall all my people ^r be ruled: only in the throne will I be greater than thou.

^q xxxix. 4—6. Ps. cv. 21. 22. Prov. xxii. 29. Dan. ii. 38. vi. 3.
^r Heb. be armed, or kiss. 1 Sam. x. 1. Ps. ii. 12—

41 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, ^s See, I have set thee over all the land of Egypt.

^r 41. Esth. x. 3. Dan. iv. 2. 3. Matt. xxviii. 18. Phil. iii. 9—11.
^s Esth. iii. 10. 12. vi. 7—12. viii. 2. 8. 10. 15. x. 3. Dan. ii. 46, 47. v. 7. 29. Luke xv. 22.

42 And Pharaoh took off ^t his ring from his hand, and put it upon Joseph's events being represented under two emblems.—The seven good kine and the seven good ears, “were seven years,” or denoted seven years: a very common mode of expression; though in a single instance multitudes have inferred things absurd and impossible from one similar to it; viz. “This is my body.”—(See xl. 12.)

V. 28—32. Thus Joseph emphatically intimated to Pharaoh, that the fertility of Egypt, or the contrary, was entirely the work of JEHOVAH; and that the overflowing of the Nile, and its failure, were second causes, entirely directed and ordered by the God of heaven.

V. 33—36. Joseph presumed to offer Pharaoh this counsel, as the practical inference from the revelation which God had afforded him; for that was intended to forewarn the king, that he might make preparation. There could be no risk in following this advice; as corn was not to be reserved, except as it could be well spared from the regular consumption.—Besides all the corn which Pharaoh should lay up, it might be supposed that many of the wealthy Egyptians would provide private granaries; and that an immense quantity would, in different ways, be collected during the years of plenty.

V. 37. Under the present impression of Joseph's inter- pretation of the dream, not only Pharaoh, but his coun- sellors likewise, approved Joseph's advice as undeniably good; perhaps not without each expecting, for himself or his friend, this lucrative and honourable employment.— Thus God gave Joseph favour, as well as wisdom.

V. 38. Spirit of God.] This conclusion probably sprang from the remainder of a traditional opinion, that the high- est and noblest wisdom was derived from the inspiration of the Spirit of God: and the judgment of Pharaoh concern- ing Joseph was doubtless formed, not only from the inter- pretation, as excelling all the skill of the magicians; but also from his purposed plan, as equally superior to all the sagacity of his counsellors. All parties were silent on the occasion, and it may well be ascribed to God's overawing their minds, that no opposition was made, when we con- sider how propense human nature is to envy, and that Jo- seph was a stranger and a slave!

V. 40. Thus was Joseph made chief minister, and ruler in every department of government; as well as placed over the business of collecting corn: a station, which no man on earth could have held, with equal advantage to all con- cerned, and with less danger to any; for in this Joseph was an especial type of our perfectly wise, righteous, faith- ful, and compassionate Mediator and King.

Be ruled.] פָּרַע; be armed, kiss. (marg.)—Notes, 1 Sam. x. 1. Ps. ii. 10—12.

V. 41—43. Perhaps Joseph was modestly disposed to decline so weighty and exalted a station, and intimidated at the difficulty and danger of it; and therefore he needed hand, and arrayed him in vestures of fine linnen, and put a gold chain about his neck.

43 And he made him to ride in the second chariot which he had; and they cried before him, Bow the knee: and he made him ruler over all the land of Egypt.

44 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I am Pharaoh, and without thee shall no man lift up his hand or foot in all the land of Egypt.

45 And Pharaoh called Joseph's name Zaphnath-paaneah; and he gave him to wife Asenath the daughter of Poti-pherah priest of On: and Joseph went out over all the land of Egypt.

46 And Joseph was thirty years old when he stood before Pharaoh king of Egypt. And Joseph went out from the presence of Pharaoh, and went throughout all the land of Egypt.

47 And in the seven plenteous years the earth brought forth by handfuls.

48 And he gathered up all the food of the seven years which were in the land of Egypt, and laid up the food in the cities: the food of the field which was round about every city, laid he up in the same.

49 And Joseph gathered corn as the sand of the sea, very much, until he left numbering: for it was without number.

50 And unto Joseph were born two sons before the years of famine came: which Asenath, the daughter of Poti-pherah priest of On, bare unto him.

51 And Joseph called the name of the first-born Manasseh; for God, said he, hath made me forget all my toil, and all my father's house.

52 And the name of the second called he Ephraim: for God hath caused me to be fruitful in the land of my affliction.

53 And the seven years of plenteousness, that was in the land of Egypt, were ended.

54 And the seven years of dearth began to come, according as Joseph had said: and the dearth was in all lands; but in all the land of Egypt there was bread.

55 And when all the land of Egypt was famished, the people cried to Pharaoh for bread: and Pharaoh said unto all the Egyptians, Go unto Joseph; what he saith to you, do.

56 And the famine was over all the xxii. 17. Judg. vii. 12. 1 Sam. xiii. 5. 1s. lxxviii. 27. Jer. xxxiii. 22.

xvii. 20. xviii. 5.

4s. xvi. 20.

Or, prince.

xlviii. 5. 13. 14. 18-20. Dent. xxxiii. 17.

That is, Forgetting. See on 30. —Ps. xiv. 10.

xxix. 32-35. xxx. 6-13. 1. 23.

That is, Fruitful. xlviii. 16. 19. xlix. 22.

Ps. cv. 17, 18. Ann. vi. 6. Acts vii. 10.

23-31. Ps. lxxiii. 20. Luke xvi. 25.

Ps. cv. 16. Acts vii. 11.

l. xlv. 11. xlvii. 13.

2 Kings vi. 25-29. Jer. xiv. 1-6. Lam. iv. 3-10.

40. 41. Matt. iii. 17. xvii. 5.

Ps. xxiii. 17. Zech. v. 3. Luke xxi. 35. Acts xvii. 26.

Or, silk. Prov. i. 9. Cant. i. 10. Ez. xvi. 11. Dan. v. 7. 16.

Or, Tender father. xlv. 8. Heb. Abreck.

xiii. 6. 30. 33. xiv. 8. 26. Acts vii. 10.

Ex. xi. 7.

Or, prince. Ex. ii. 16. marg. 2 Sam. viii. 18. xx. 26. Heb.

xxxvii. 2. Num. iv. 3. 2 Sam. v. 4. Luke iii. 23.

1 Sam. xvi. 21. 1 Kings xii. 6. Prov. xxii. 29. Dan. i. 19. Luke xxi. 36. Jude 24.

xxvi. 12. Ps. lxxii. 16.

35, 36. xlviii. 21.

repeated assurances to encourage him.—By these several tokens, the king publicly avowed his appointment, and shewed that it would be at the peril of any one who dared to oppose it.—Chariot (43). This is the first time, that a chariot or any carriage is mentioned in Scripture.—Bow the knee.] See the margin.

V. 44. I am Pharaoh.] 'As sure as I am king of Egypt, I will stand by thee; so that no man shall do any thing contrary to thy command and allowance.'

V. 45, 46. Some interpret Zaphnath-paaneah to signify The preserver of the land: but others suppose it to mean, in the Egyptian tongue, a revealer of secrets: or 'the man to whom secrets are revealed.'—Poti-pherah is a different name from Potiphar, and another person than Joseph's master is meant. As priest, or prince, of On or Heliopolis, he was some great lord of the court, or at least had been; for perhaps he was dead, and his daughter a ward of Pharaoh.—Joseph immediately went over all the land to take surveys, build granaries, and make preparations for the execution of his grand design.—Thirty years old.] Notes, xxvii. 1. xxxix. 2-6.

V. 47. By handfuls.] An uncommon and vast increase.

V. 49. Perhaps the fifth before mentioned was imposed as a publick tax; and Joseph might also buy large quantities, when corn was cheap, which he stored up near the spot: thus consulting both ease and convenience, and giving the people a pledge that it was laid up for them, not taken from them.—Some think, that the grain, or a considerable part of it, was preserved in the straw, in stacks; that so the straw might be food for the starving cattle, the produce of the first years of plenty being used in the beginning of the scarcity.

V. 51. Manasseh.] Causing to forget. God had made Joseph forget all his toil and his father's house, by the prosperous event of his captivity, slavery, and imprisonment. Perhaps, when he sought enlargement through the chief butler, he had thoughts of returning home, out of regard to his father and family: but, being now settled and engaged otherwise in Providence, he had relinquished this design.—It must be ascribed to the peculiar disposal of God, that he was kept from sending to enquire about his father, or to inform him of his advancement.

V. 54. In all lands.] In all the countries adjoining to Egypt.

V. 55. Famished.] The private stores of the Egyptians were after a time exhausted; and then they had in general, no other resource but the publick granaries, without which a desolating famine must have ensued.—The coincidence of events, with Joseph's predictions, would greatly increase his influence both with prince and people.

V. 56, 57. Joseph does not seem to have opened the publick granaries, till the private stock was nearly ex-face of the earth: and Joseph opened [†] all the store-houses, and [‡] sold unto the Egyptians: and the famine waxed sore in the land of Egypt.

57 And [†] all countries came into Egypt to Joseph for to buy corn; because that the famine was so sore [†] in all lands.

CHAP. XLII.

Jacob sends ten of his sons to Egypt to buy corn, 1—5. Joseph, who knows them but is unknown to them, imprisons them as spies, 6—17. They betray before Joseph remorse for their cruelty to him; he conceals his sympathy; retains Simeon, and sends the rest home, with provisions, requiring them to bring their younger brother, 18—25. They find their money in their sacks' mouths, and are alarmed: they report the matter to Jacob, who complains, laments, is affrighted, and refuses to send Benjamin, 26—38.

Now ^a when Jacob ^b saw that there was corn in Egypt, Jacob said unto his sons, ^c Why do ye look one upon another?

2 And he said, Behold, I have heard that there is corn in Egypt: ^d get you

^a xii. 54. 57. Acts vii. 12.
^b 2. 1 Kings xix. 3. Hos. v. 13. Gal. ii. 7.
^c Josh. vii. 10. 2 Kings vii. 3, 4. Ezra x. 4. Jer. viii. 14.

^d xliii. 2. 4.

hausted. This measure would tend to frugality, and subvert his design both of enriching the publick treasure, and preventing the horrors of famine in that and the adjacent countries.—“Face of the earth” (56). Or, “Of the land,” or, “the country (ארצה).”

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—38.

The Lord in his appointed time will bring his people out of trouble, purified as gold from the furnace; but seldom according to their expectations, either as to the way or the season of their deliverance; and not until he hath brought them off from other dependences, to a simple trust in him and submission to him.—“In the multitude of dreams there are divers vanities,” and in general they are neither worth repeating, nor capable of any useful interpretation: yet, so absolutely is our imagination, sleeping as well as waking, in the Lord’s hand, that without supposing any thing prophetic, (as in Pharaoh’s dreams,) he may by a dream leave an impression upon the mind, of the most important consequences to ourselves and others.—We should not deem those expectations frustrated which are not immediately answered; nor that seed of the word thrown away, which does not immediately spring up: as the most negligent and forgetful may hereafter remember, and be humbled for their present inattention.—Deliverances, both from temporal and spiritual distress, often surprise the praying soul when least expected, so that a man at once becomes “like them that dream:” and as God frequently pours contempt upon princes, and takes pleasure in abasing the haughty; so he delights as much in advancing the humble “from the dunghill, to make them inherit the throne of glory.”—Humility and a regard to the glory of God are requisite, in order to behave suitably in prosperous circumstances; and an answer of peace may be expected, when those are consulted “in whom is the Spirit of God,” by those, who sincerely desire to know his truth and will.—To honour those who honour him, the Lord frequently “confounds the wisdom of the wise, and brings to nothing the understanding of the prudent;” and when he pleases to give wisdom and favour, he can conciliate the affections of all, or overawe their spirits; and prevent opposition from the jarring counsels and selfish passions of the ambitious and envious.

V. 39—57.

Important trusts, however unexceptionably obtained and managed, are an encumbrance rather than an advantage to the possessor; who might be more comfortable, though not so useful, in a more obscure situation. Indeed, all worldly prosperity, like the years of plenty, is fleeting away, and will soon be forgotten and swallowed up, in the afflictions which are coming upon the wicked. In Joseph however, we still see a bright example of fidelity, activity, and equity; and an instance of the extensive good, which in some circumstances may be done by one man, who is called forth, qualified, and prospered by the Lord.—The knowledge of future temporal events might in some instances be useful, yet would seldom be pleasant; but the knowledge of the future state and eternal world will be both useful and pleasant, if we do but “labour for that meat, which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give us; for him hath God the Father sealed.” He is the great Anti-type of Joseph.—Risen, ascended, and exalted on the throne of glory, all power is vested in him as Mediator: he is the Revealer of secrets, and the Saviour of the world. Through the whole earth the souls of men are perishing without resource, save in him, “the Bread of Life,” whose fulness is inexhaustible. To him the Father bears testimony, “This is my beloved Son, hear ye him;” “Go to Jesus, and what he bids you, do.” To those who attend to this voice and apply to him, he will open his treasures, and will satisfy the hungry soul in every age and nation, and that “without money and without price.” But they who slight this provision must starve; and they who bow not the knee before him, and “will not that he should reign over them,” will be inevitably destroyed, as enemies to him and his cause.

NOTES.

CHAP. XLII. V. 1, 2. Jacob learned, not only from report, but from those who had actually procured supplies, that in this time of general scarcity there was abundance of corn in Egypt, which was sold to other nations.—When he said, “Why do ye look one upon another?” it implied that already they were reduced to great distress, and scarcely knew what to do: and if this was the case in Jacob’s family, after the first or second year of the famine, how terrible must have been the case of multitudes, before the seven years were expired!

down thither, and buy for us from thence; ^e that we may live, and not die.

3 And Joseph's ^f ten brethren went down to buy corn in Egypt.

4 But ^g Benjamin, Joseph's brother, Jacob sent not with his brethren: for he said, ^h Lest peradventure mischief befall him.

5 ¶ And the sons of Israel came to buy corn among those that came: ⁱ for the famine was in the land of Canaan.

6 And Joseph was the ^k governor over the land, and ^l he it was that sold to all the people of the land: and Joseph's brethren came, and ^m bowed down themselves before him, with their faces to the earth.

7 And Joseph saw his brethren, and he knew them, but made himself strange unto them, and spake ^{*} roughly unto them; and he said unto them, Whence come ye? And they said, From the land of Canaan to buy food.

8 And Joseph knew his brethren, ⁿ but they knew not him.

9 And Joseph ^o remembered the dreams which he dreamed of them, and said unto them, ^p Ye are spies; to see the ^q nakedness of the land ye are come.

10 And they said unto him, Nay, ^r my lord, but to buy food are thy servants come.

11 We are all one man's sons: we are ^s true men, thy servants are no spies.

12 And he said unto them, Nay, but to see the nakedness of the land ye are come.

13 And they said, 'Thy servants are twelve brethren, the sons of one man in the land of Canaan; and behold, the youngest is this day with our father, and ^t one is not.

14 And Joseph said unto them, ^u That is it that I spake unto you, saying, Ye are spies.

^e xliii. 8. Ps. cxviii. 17. Is. xxxviii. 1. Matt. iv. 4.

^g xxxv. 16—19.

^h 28. xxxiii. 1, 2. xliii. 14. 29. xlv. 20—22. 27. —54.

ⁱ xii. 10. xxvi. 1. xli. 57. Acts vii. 11. xi. 24.

^k xli. 40. 41. xlv. 8. 26. Ps. cv. 16. —21. Acts vii. 10.

^m xxxvii. 7. xlii. 14. Rev. iii. 9.

^{*} Heb. hard things with them. 14—17. 19, 20. Matt. xv. 23—26.

ⁿ Luke xxiv. 16. John xx. 14. xxi. 4.

^o xxxvii. 5—9

^p 9. 6. 30, 31. 34. Num. xiii. 2. 16. —20. Josh. ii. 1. vi. 23. Judg. i. 24. 1 Sam. xxvi. 4. Luke xx. 20. Heb. xi. 31.

^q Ex. xxxvii. 25.

^r xxxvii. 29. 37. xxxvii. 8. xlv. 9. 1 Sam. xxv. 17. 1 Kings xviii. 7.

^s 19. 33, 34. John vii. 18. 2 Cor. vi. 8.

^t 11. 32. xliii. 7.

^u 36. 38. xxxvii. 30. xlv. 20. 28. xlv. 26. Lam. v. 7. Matt. ii. 18. x. 9—11. Job xiii. 24. xix. 11. Matt. xv. 21—28.

V. 3. All Jacob's sons seem to have been married, and to have had families, at this time: perhaps the wealth of the family being thus divided, and by the badness of the times exceedingly diminished, they had parted with most of those servants of whom we before read: and probably they disposed of the rest, previously to their going to reside in Egypt; for no further mention is made of servants, or of any that went down, besides Jacob and his descendants, with their wives.—Camels, of which Jacob had formerly possessed very many, (xxxi. 17. xxxii. 15,) would have been more suited to fetch corn upon, than asses: but all of these seem to have been previously disposed of, probably to raise money, with which to purchase food, in this emergency. (xlv. 11.) For none are afterwards mentioned among his possessions, or those of his sons.

V. 4. Lest... mischief, &c.] As Jacob supposed had befallen his beloved Joseph.

V. 6. Bowed, &c.] Joseph's dreams at length began to be accomplished: his brethren's sheaves bowed to his sheaf; for his was full, and their's were empty.—Probably a peculiar vigilance was on this occasion exercised respecting foreigners, lest any should come for bad purposes; and all, who were any way remarkable, were brought before Joseph in person. Thus his brethren would be introduced to him; for it must be supposed, that he employed deputies in selling the corn in different parts of the land.

V. 7, 8. It is evident that Joseph did not behave thus from resentment; for in the whole transaction he exceedingly denied himself, and put a powerful restraint on his own inclinations. No doubt he was unwilling to augment his father's grief, and would rather have rejoiced to set his heart at ease by an immediate message; yet his behaviour had for a time a contrary tendency. It is most probable that the whole transaction, from Joseph's first advancement to Jacob's descent into Egypt, was conducted by some intimations from God to Joseph, in order to accomplish his purposes respecting Jacob and his posterity.—It would not indeed have been proper for Joseph immediately to receive his brethren into favour, till it appeared that they were sensible of their guilt, and shewed some symptoms of remorse. Now, by being concealed, he had a fair opportunity of discovering the real state of their mind, from time to time: and by virtue of his authority, he was able not only to make strict trial of them, but to employ means exactly suited to produce that state of mind which he wished to see; by exciting a beneficial remorse of conscience, and repressing their pride and stoutness of heart. By his own experience he knew the good effects of severe and long continued troubles, and was willing to try the same remedy upon them. At the same time he seems to have been very solicitous to obtain information concerning the state of the family; especially as he did not see Benjamin among his other brethren.—Joseph was seventeen when sold into Egypt; he was now about thirty-eight; and he might be more altered in the space of above twenty years than his elder brethren. This would concur with his rank and state, to prevent their knowing him.

V. 9. Joseph now experienced in part the accomplishment of his dreams, of which perhaps he had sometimes been ready to despair.—To effect his purposes, he charged his brethren with being spies, sent by some foreign prince who intended to invade Egypt, that they might spy out the most defenceless quarter for an attack; and he urged that they only covered their real business under the pretence of buying corn.

V. 11—13. It was not likely that one man would venture ten sons in the hazardous employment of spies.—

y Deut. vi. 13
 1 Sam. i. 26
 xvii. 65. Matt.
 v. 33-37. xxiii.
 16-22. Jam. v.
 12.
 z 20. 34. xliii. 8.
 xlv. 20-34.

15 Hereby ye shall be proved: ' by the life of Pharaoh ye shall not go forth hence, ' except your youngest brother come hither.

* Heb. bound.
 a 7. 12. 30.

16 Send one of you, and let him fetch your brother, and ye shall be ' kept in prison, ' that your words may be proved, whether there be any truth in you: or else by the life of Pharaoh surely ye are spies.

† Heb. gathered.
 Is. xxiv. 22
 Acts v. 19.
 h xl. 4. 7. xli. 10.
 Lev. xxiv. 12.
 Acts iv. 3. Heb.
 xii. 10.
 c xx. 11. Lev.
 xxv. 43. Neh. v.
 9. 15. Luke
 xviii. 2. 4.

17 And he ' put them all together into ' ward, three days.

18 And Joseph said unto them the third day, This do, and live: for ' I fear God.

d xl. 3. Is. xliii. 7.
 22. Jer. xxxvii.
 15.
 e 1. 2. 26. xliii. 1.
 2. xiv. 23.

19 If ye be true men let one of your brethren be bound in the ' house of your prison: go ye, ' carry corn for the famine of your houses.

f 15. xliii. 8. xlv.
 23.
 g 26. vi. 22. John
 ii. 5.
 h xli. 9. 2 Sam.
 xl. 13. 1 Kings
 xvii. 18. Job
 xxxiii. 27, 28.
 xxxiv. 31. xxxvi.
 8, 9. Hos. v. 15.
 Mark ix. 44. 46.
 48. Luke xvi. 28.

20 But ' bring your youngest brother unto me: so shall your words be verified, and ye shall not die. ' And they did so.

21 And ' they said one to another, We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that ' we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us; and we would not hear: therefore is ' this distress come upon us.

xxxvii. 23-29.
 Judg. i. 7. Prov.
 xxi. 18. xxiv. 11,
 12. xxviii. 17.
 Jer. xxxiv. 17.
 Matt. vii. 2
 Jam. ii. 13.
 k Prov. i. 27, 28

22 And Reuben answered them, saying, ' Spake I not unto you, saying, ' Do not sin against the child; and ye would not hear? therefore behold also, ' his blood is required.

l xxxvii. 21, 22
 29, 30. Luke
 xxiii. 51. Rom.
 ii. 15.

23 And they knew not that Joseph understood them; for ' he spake unto them by an interpreter.

m iv. 10. ix. 5, 6.
 1 Kings ii. 32.
 2 Chr. xxiv. 22.
 Is. ix. 12. Ez.
 iii. 18. Luke xi.
 50, 51. Acts
 xxviii. 4.

24 And he turned himself about from them, and ' wept; and returned to them again, and communed with them, and took from them ' Simeon, and bound him before their eyes.

† Heb. an interpreter was between them.

n xliii. 30. Luke:
 xix. 41. Rom.
 xii. 15. 1 Cor.
 xii. 26.
 o xxxiv. 25. xlix.
 5-7.

25 Then Joseph ' commanded to fill their sacks with corn, and to restore every man's money into his sack, and ' to give them provision for the way: ' and thus did he unto them.

p xlv. 1, 2. Is. lv.
 1.

26 ¶ And they laded their asses with the corn, and departed thence.

q xlv. 21. Matt. vi 33.
 r Matt. v. 44. Rom
 xii. 17-21.

27 And as one of them opened his

Thus Joseph drew from them the information which he wanted: but what must have been his feelings when they said, "One is not!"

V. 15. It is painful to censure so high a character as Joseph. But the expression "by the life of Pharaoh," could be no other than a sort of court-oath, and a profane flattery of the prince, which Joseph should not have sanctioned by his example. It may be supposed, that he did not customarily use it, but only now assumed it as a more effectual blind; but still it was, at best, "doing evil, that good might come." "Let your communication" (that is, in ordinary conversation,) "be yea yea, nay nay; for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil." An oath by any creature is virtually an act of idolatry; and even the outward concurrence, in such a case, should be strictly avoided.

V. 17. Considering Joseph's authority, the nature of the crime of which he professed to suspect the strangers, and the roughness of his behaviour; they perhaps expected little else during these three days, than to be put to death.—They seem to have been unwilling to comply with his requirement; or they could not agree who should be the messenger of ill tidings to Jacob: and they were therefore confined till they submitted, and came to a determination.—Three days.] "The third day" (18).—Compare Matt. xx. 19. xxvii. 63, 64.

V. 18. I fear God.] This expression might surprise, and perhaps encourage, Joseph's brethren: but his chief design seems to have been this; by declaring that he, a supposed Egyptian, feared God, and would not do injustice, he meant to awaken their remorse; who, though educated in the true religion, had not been restrained by the fear of God from cruelly treating their brother.

V. 20. They did so.] They consented to the proposal

V. 21, 22. Joseph's brethren at length felt a keen remorse, though perhaps insensible before, or at least not deeply convinced of their heinous crime: and considering how the fear of God influenced an Egyptian, as they supposed, their unrelenting malice to their brother recurred to their remembrance; and they were unable any longer to conceal their convictions, but began to speak their thoughts one to another on the subject.—The anguish of Joseph, and his earnest and pathetic intreaties for mercy, when his brethren were about to sell him for a slave, or to kill him, are not mentioned in the narrative, but are here introduced with great effect: and they were ready to conclude, that God was about to take vengeance upon them for that cruelty. Reuben had remonstrated at the time with his brethren, but they would not hear, and now he reproached them, and seemed to denounce their doom. Thus will conscience at length reproach and torture those, who at present neglect its warnings. In this respect Reuben could plead not guilty; but his conscience would condemn him in another matter, respecting which his brethren could plead not guilty. (xxxv. 22. Notes, xlix. 3, 4. Rom. ii. 12-16.)

V. 23. They knew not.] Thus Joseph was favoured with an encouraging token of the success of his plan, to support his mind till he should witness the final effect.

V. 24. Simeon was one of the murderers of the Shechemites, and probably of a daring, hardy spirit. It is not unlikely, that he was peculiarly vehement against Joseph when he was sold, or that he seemed at this time the least affected; and therefore Joseph allotted him this additional discipline.

V. 27. Imm.] Probably this was nothing more than a • xliii. 21 Ex. iv

24 Luke ii. 7. x.
34 sack to give his ass provender in *the inn, he espied his money: for behold it was in his sack's mouth.

28 And he said unto his brethren, My money is restored; and lo it is even in my sack; and *their heart *failed them, and they were afraid, saying one to another, *What is this that God hath done unto us?

29 And they came unto Jacob their father, unto the land of Canaan, and told him all that befell unto them, saying,

30 The man who is the lord of the land spake [†]roughly to us, and took us for spies of the country.

31 And we said unto him, We are true men; we are no spies.

32 We be twelve brethren, sons of our father: one is not, and the youngest is this day with our father in the land of Canaan.

33 And the man, the lord of the country, said unto us, Hereby shall I know that ye are true men; leave one of your brethren here with me, and take food for the famine of your households, and be gone.

shelter provided for travellers, to which every one brought his own provisions.

V. 28. The sons of Jacob, expecting no favour from the Egyptians, regarded this as a snare laid for them; and were afraid of being pursued, and prosecuted as thieves. (Notes, xlv. 2—16.) This was doubtless the effect, which Joseph intended to produce, in order to augment their convictions and humiliation. As they had before escaped when guilty, they were ready to conclude, that they should now suffer for a crime, of which they were innocent; and they acknowledged the hand of God in it.

V. 36. Probably, Jacob suspected a fallacy in the relation, and feared lest his sons had really committed some base crime, which was the cause of Simeon's being left behind; and perhaps that they had some design upon Benjamin: at least he charged the blame upon them, in language implying such distrust.—All these things lay as a heavy burden upon him, which he thought his sons but little felt. Jacob made this lamentation, when, had he known all, his heart would have exulted with joy.—Me have ye bereaved, &c.] It is probable that concurring circumstances, and their conduct in other respects, made him suspect the truth of their report concerning Joseph.

V. 37. Reuben (as the first born) was the only one who brake silence on this occasion; and probably he intended principally, to divert the discourse from Joseph: but his proposal was very rash and absurd! What right had he over the lives of his children? and what satisfaction could the murder of two grand-children give Jacob for the loss of Benjamin?—Moreover, Reuben engaged to bring back 34 And bring your youngest brother unto me: then shall I know that ye are no spies, but that ye are true men: so will I deliver you your brother, and ye shall *traffick in the land.

35 And it came to pass as they emptied their sacks, that behold, [†]every man's bundle of money was in his sack: and when both they and their father saw the bundles of money, they were afraid.

36 And Jacob their father said unto them, *Me have ye bereaved of my children. Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away: *all these things are against me.

37 And Reuben spake unto his father, saying, [†]Slay my two sons, if I bring him not to thee: deliver him into my hand, and I will bring him to thee again.

38 And he said, My son shall not go down with you; for [†]his brother is dead, and he is left alone: if mischief befall him by the way in the which ye go, then shall ye [†]bring down my grey hairs with sorrow to the grave.

Benjamin without so much as adding, 'By the blessing of 'God,' or 'If the Lord will:' as if his puny arm could both defend and uphold him. Jacob, in other respects, seems to have placed but little confidence in him. (Notes, xliii. 8, 9. xlix. 8, 9.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—20.

When the Lord rendereth a "fruitful land barren for "the wickedness of them that dwell therein," he seldom proceeds to extremities. Though much misery is endured, there is some redress and respite; one country supplies the deficiencies of another, and one year furnishes a redundancy to help out the scarcity that follows or precedes it: for in the other world alone will happiness or misery be unmixed; no scarcity in the Canaan above, no redress in hell beneath.—In distress or danger, we should not stand looking one at another, desponding and inactive; but, having discovered where help may be had, we ought to apply for it without delay, and without shrinking from labour, or grudging expense; especially in the dangers to which our immortal souls are exposed. There is provision in Christ, and to him we must come, and from him we must diligently seek it; even though in obtaining it we be called to "deny ourselves, take up our cross, and forsake "all that we have."—When we or our friends go from home, we should commend ourselves and them to the divine protection; for we know not what unexpected dangers may be in the way: and, when returned in safety, we should not forget our tribute of grateful praise; for many † Lev. xxvi. 36.

Deut. xxviii. 65.
1 Kings x. 5.
Cant. v. 6. Luke
xxi. 26.
* Heb. veni forth.
† Is. xlv. 7. Lam.
ii. 17. iii. 37.
Am. iii. 8

† Heb. with us hard things. 7—20.

x xxxiv. 19, 21.
1 Kr. 6^o x. 15.
Ea. xlii. 4

y 27, 28.

z xxxvi. 20—35.

a xlv. 28. xlvii. 12.
1 Sam. xxvii. 1.
Job vii. 7. Ps.
xxxiv. 19. Ec.
vii. 8. Is. xxxviii.
10. Rom. viii. 28.
1 Cor. x. 13. 2 Cor.
iv. 17. Jam. v. 7
—11
b xliii. 9. xlv. 32
—34. Mic. vi. 7

c xxx. 22—24.
xxxv. 16—18.
xxxvii. 33. xlv.
20. 27—34.

d xlv. 29. 31.
1 Kings ii. 6.
Ps. lxxi. 19. Is.
xvi. 4

CHAP. XLIII.

Jacob at length is persuaded to send Benjamin, who goes with his brethren into Egypt, 1—15. They are brought into Joseph's house, and are greatly alarmed, but are encouraged by Joseph's steward, 16—25. Joseph is kind to them, enquires about their father, is affected at seeing Benjamin; and they do obeisance to him, 26—29. Joseph retires to weep, and then hospitably entertains them, 30—34.

^a xli. 54—57. xlii. 5. Lam. v. 10. Act. vii. 11—13

AND ^athe famine was sore in the land.

2 And it came to pass when they had eaten up the corn which they had brought out of Egypt, their father said unto them, ^bGo again, buy us a little food.

^b xlii. 1, 2. I Tim. v. 8. vi. 6—8.

3 And Judah spake unto him, saying, The ^cman ^ddid solemnly protest unto us, saying, Ye shall not ^dsee my face, except your brother be with you.

^c xlii. 15—20. xlii. 23. ^d Heb. protesting, protested. Acts vii. 34. ^e 5. 2 Sam. iii. 13. xiv. 32. Acts xx. 27 38.

4 If thou wilt send our brother with us, we will go down and buy thee food.

5 But if thou wilt not send him, we

^e will not go down; for the man said unto us, Ye shall not see my face, except your brother be with you.

^e xlii. 33. xlv. 26. Ex. xx. 12.

6 And Israel said, Wherefore dealt ye so ill with me, as to tell the man whether ye had yet a brother?

7 And they said, The man ^fasked us ^fstraitly of our state, and of our kindred, saying, Is your father yet alive? have ye another brother? And we told him according to the ^gtenour of these words:—

^f Heb. asking, asked us. 3. marg.

^hCould we certainly know that he would say, Bring your brother down?

^g Heb. knowing could we know. 3. marg.

8 And Judah said unto Israel his father, Send the lad with me, and we will arise and go; ⁱthat we may live and not die, both we, and thou, and ^jalso our little ones.

ⁱ xlii. 2. Deut. xxxiii. 6. 2 Kings vii. 4. 13. Ps. cxviii. 17.

9 I ^kwill be surety for him; ^lof my hand shalt thou require him: If I bring him not unto thee, and set him before thee, then let me bear the blame for ever.

^j xiv. 19. 1. 8. 21. Num. xiv. 31. Ezra viii. 21. ^k xlii. 37. xlv. 32. ^l 23. 1. Ps. cxix. 122. Phil. 13. 19. Heb. vii. 22. ^m ix. 5. xxxi. 39. Ez. iii. 18. 20. xxxiii. 6. 8. Luke xi. 50.

meet with terrible disasters.—Though God's purposes slowly unfold, yet they are certainly accomplished, often by the most improbable means; nay, those enemies, who have set themselves to defeat his designs, are made the instruments of their fulfilment!—Neither the guilt nor the consciousness of sin will wear out by time: and though men may commit crimes with unconcern, and remain insensible for many years, conscience being struck dumb and stupified; yet, there may be a time even in this life, when it shall awake, and inspire such terrors as cannot be described. Happy is it when this is the case: otherwise the never dying worm will certainly torment the soul for ever, in another world. In order therefore to awaken serious reflection in the guilty breast, the most afflictive dispensations of Providence are precious blessings; and, in some instances, it is the result of wise love, to treat the proud and careless with roughness and distance; and, as far as equity and the fear of God will allow, to shew them, in our dealings with them, the picture of their conduct to others, in order to bring their sins to remembrance, and excite a salutary remorse. They therefore who are of a very kind and tender disposition, if they would do good, must sometimes disguise their feelings under an assumed sternness; as the humane surgeon probes the wound, or cuts the limb, with firmness and apparent unconcern, while his heart bleeds for the anguish which he occasions.

V. 21—38.

When conscience is once awakened, there needs no acuser; for every circumstance increases the dismay: and under calamities, in which many are involved, the consciousness of having avoided and protested against those crimes, which are thus called to remembrance, affords a singular support.—Many are the troubles of the righteous: yet inagination and a mistaken judgment often magnify them; and many things appear to be against them, which are most effectually conducive to their good. The Lord will make such persons ashamed of their distrustful complaints; and their grey hairs shall not descend to the grave with that sorrow which they have presaged; for the latter end of the upright man shall be peace.—But in this narration let us look unto Jesus. Thus does he conceal himself and his favour: thus does he rebuke and elasten those for whom he hath purposes of love; and by sharp corrections, and humiliating conviction from the spirit of bondage, he breaks the stoutness and subdues the pride of their hearts, and brings them to true repentance: nor will he disclose his reconciled countenance, till he has fully humbled their hearts, perhaps by long continued discouragements; till he has proved their sincerity, and led them to the simplicity of faith and dependence on him: and then by “the Spirit of adoption,” he will manifest himself unto them as their Brother and their Friend. Yet before they fully know him, or taste that he is gracious, he both consults their good and sustains their souls: preserves them from despair, and strengthens them to wait upon him, and wait for him.—Thus may we do continually; never yielding to discouragement, determining to seek no other refuge, and humbling ourselves more and more under his mighty hand; and then in due time he will answer our petitions, and far exceed our expectations.

NOTES.

CHAP. XLIII. V. 1—7. Marg. Ref.

V. 8, 9. Probably Judah, (whom we observed before to have shewn some tokens of repentance,) had acquired more of the confidence of Jacob, than either Reuben or Levi: and he seems to have been sincerely desirous of the welfare of Benjamin, as well as of the family; remembering perhaps with inward anguish his former treatment of ^k xix. 16. 10 For except we had ^k lingered, surely now we had returned ^{*} this second time.

^l 14. Esth. iv. 16. Acts xxi. 14. 11 And their father Israel said unto them, ^l If it must be so now, do this; take of the best fruits in the land in your vessels, and ^m carry down the man a present, ⁿ a little balm, and a little honey, ^o spices, and myrrh, nuts, and almonds.

ⁿ xxxvii. 25. Jer. viii. 22. Ez. xxvii. 17. ^o 1 Kings x. 15. 2 Chr. xxxii. 27. Cant. iv. 10. 14—16. v. i. viii. 14. ^p Rom. xii. 17. 2 Cor. viii. 21. Phil. iv. 8. ^q 1 Thies. v. 21. xlii. 25. 35. 12 And take ^p double money in your hand: and the money that was brought again in the ^q mouth of your sacks, carry it again in your hand; peradventure it was an oversight:

13 Take also your brother, and arise, go again unto the man.

^r xvii. 1. xxxii. 11. 28. Ezra vii. 27. Neh. i. 11. Ps. xxxviii. 5. Prov. xvi. 7. xxi. 1. Acts vi. 10. ^s Or, And I, as I have been, &c. See on 11. 14 And ^r God Almighty give you mercy before the man, that he may send away your other brother, and Benjamin: ^s If I be bereaved of my children, I am bereaved.

15 ¶ And the men took that present, and they took double money in their hand, and Benjamin; and rose up, and went down to Egypt, and stood before Joseph.

16 And when Joseph saw Benjamin with them, he said to ^t the ruler of his house, Bring these men home, and ^t slay and make ready: for these men shall ^u dine with me at noon.

17 And the man did as Joseph bade: and the man brought the men into Joseph's house.

18 And ^v the men were afraid, because they were brought into Joseph's

Joseph. His arguments were very forcible. Unless Benjamin went with them, they must all perish together by famine; and thus even he would be more endangered by staying at home, than by going into Egypt.—Judah's engagement meant, that he would venture or endure any thing to preserve Benjamin; which he fulfilled by the most heroic and generous proposal imaginable. (Note, xlv. 33, 34.)

V. 10. Jacob's refusal to let Benjamin accompany his brethren had already caused them to lose much time; and Judah thus intimated that the whole family was likely to perish, by means of their father's unreasonable care of an individual.

V. 11, 12. The productions of the high and mountainous parts of Canaan would differ greatly from those of Egypt, which is flat, and annually inundated. The dry seasons, which caused a famine, might not prevent the increase of those things which are here mentioned; and no doubt Jacob selected what he knew was likely to be most accept-house, and they said, Because of the money that was returned in our sacks at the first time, are we brought in; that he may ^v seek occasion against us, and fall upon us, and take us for bondmen, and our asses.

19 And they came near to the steward of Joseph's house, and they communed with him at the door of the house;

20 And said, O sir, ^w we came indeed down the first time to buy food.

21 And it came to pass, when ^y we came to the inn, that we opened our sacks, and behold, every man's money was in the mouth of his sack, our money in full weight: and ^z we have brought it again in our hand.

22 And other money have we brought down in our hands to buy food: we cannot tell who put our money in our sacks.

23 And he said, ^a Peace be to you, fear not: your God, and the God of your father, hath given you treasure in your sacks: ^b I had your money. ^b And he brought Simeon out unto them.

24 And the man brought the men into Joseph's house, and ^c gave them water, and they washed their feet, and he gave their asses provender.

25 And ^d they made ready the present against Joseph came at noon: for they heard that they should eat bread there.

26 ¶ And when Joseph came home, they brought him the present which was in their hand into the house, and able to an Egyptian prince. He likewise directed his sons to carry back the money that had been returned, and to take other money with which to purchase corn; perhaps double the sum which they took before, in case the prices should be advanced. Thus they would shew, that they meant to act fairly.—Spices.] (xxxvii. 25.) Some think, that these were brought from India. Marg. Ref. o.

V. 14. Jacob knew, by experience, the influence which the Lord has over every heart, to incline it favourably to his people: and it is observable that in this speech, in which he has recourse to his former method of prevailing with man, by faith and prayer to God, he is dignified with the name of Israel.—The concluding words expressed a humble resignation to the will of God. 'If I be bereaved of my children, be it so; the Lord hath wise reasons for thus dealing with me.'

V. 16—23. Joseph seems especially to have sought time to compose his mind, that his tender feelings respecting Benjamin might not defeat his designs.

bowed themselves to him to the earth.

27 And he asked them of their welfare, and said, Is your father well, the old man of whom ye spake? Is he yet alive?

28 And they answered, Thy servant our father is in good health, he is yet alive: and they bowed down their heads, and made obeisance.

29 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw his brother Benjamin, his mother's son, and said, Is this your younger brother, of whom ye spake unto me? And he said, God be gracious unto thee, my son.

30 And Joseph made haste; for his bowels did yearn upon his brother: and he sought where to weep, and he entered into his chamber, and wept there.

31 And he washed his face, and went out, and refrained himself, and said, Set on bread.

32 And they set on for him by himself, and for them by themselves, and for the Egyptians, which did eat with him, by themselves; because the Egyptians might not eat bread with the Hebrews; for that is an abomination unto the Egyptians.

33 And they sat before him, the first-born according to his birth-right, and the youngest according to his youth: and the men marvelled one at another.

34 And he took and sent messes unto them, from before him. But Benjamin's mess was five times so much as any of their's. And they drank, and were merry with him.

ε xxvii. 29. xxxvii. 7-10. 19. 20. xlii. 6. Ps. xxii. 9. Rom. xiv. 11. Phil. ii. 10, 11.

• Heb. peace. xxxvii. 14. Ex. xviii. 7. Judg. xviii. 15. 1 Sam. xvii. 22. xxv. 5. † Heb. Is there peace to your father? f xlii. 11, 13.

g 28. xxxvii. 9, 10. h Ex. xviii. 7. 2 Sam. i. 2. xiv. 4. 1 Kings i. 16. 2 Chr. xxiv. 17. i xxx. 22-24. xxxv. 17, 18.

k xlii. 13. l xlv. 8. Josh. vii. 19. 2 Chr. xxix. 11. Matt. ix. 2. 22. Mark x. 24. m 1 Kings iii. 26. Jer. xxxi. 20. Phil. i. 8. ii. 1. Col. iii. 12. n xlii. 24. John xi. 33-38. Acts xx. 19, 31. 37. 2 Tim. i. 4.

o xlv. 1. 1e. x'ii. 14. Je. xxxi. 16. 1 Pet. iii. 10.

p xlv. 34. Ex. viii. 26.

q xlv. 12.

r 2 Sam. xi. 8.

s xlv. 22. 1 Sam. i. 5. ix. 22-24. † Heb. drank largely. Cant. v. 1. Hag. i. 6. John ii. 10.

V. 27. Joseph's enquiry was aptly introduced by the present brought to him; and while he, with wonderful propriety, acted in his assumed character, his question expressed the most benevolent and attentive disposition.

V. 28. In thus bowing down at the mention of their father, they, as it were, did obeisance in his name; according to Joseph's second dream. (xxxvii. 9, 10.)

V. 29-31. This union in Joseph of exquisite sensibility, with firmness and entire command of his passions, in every circumstance which required it, is a decided indication of a very superior character.

V. 32. Probably Joseph, as known to be a Hebrew, connived at the superstitious prejudices of the Egyptians; but he would not sit with his brethren, lest it should excite suspicion. The abomination, in which the Egyptians held eating with the Hebrews, has generally been ascribed to the latter eating the flesh of those animals which the former held sacred: therefore shepherds also were an abomination to the Egyptians, though they likewise had flocks and herds. This however is very doubtful; as we have no intimation of the kind in the history, nor any other records of so ancient a date. Indeed national, and even religious antipathies are so common, and so unreasonable; that it is not greatly worth while, to enquire particularly into the occasion of them.

V. 33. No doubt, Joseph's brethren were seated in this order by his appointment, which excited their surprise. But probably, they ascribed it to some extraordinary sagacity, or to divination, which he afterwards mentioned.

V. 34. Five times, &c.] A token of respect customary in those days, which should not be judged of by modern manners. Joseph tried whether his brethren would envy Benjamin this distinction, as they had envied him his coat of many colours. The word (ἠράκη) rendered, were merry, sometimes means, were intoxicated: but it seems to be properly translated; for we cannot suppose, either that in such circumstances they would drink to excess, or that Joseph would have countenanced them in so doing.—Εμεθυσθησαν. Sept. Μεθυσθων. John ii. 10. "Have well drunk."

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1-14.

We should use great caution in forming resolutions, concerning our future measures in things indifferent; for our perseverance so much depends on the events of Providence, that the conduct which we most fully purpose may become impracticable: in most things, therefore, where duty is not concerned, we are best ruled by circumstances as they arise. But if we have formed a rash resolution, to which we cannot with propriety adhere; we must, virtually or explicitly, acknowledge our mistake, and forego our determination: for though firmness is essential to usefulness and comfort, yet obstinacy is both foolish and ruinous.—There may be cases, in which we must refuse obedience to an earthly superior; because it is superseded by a higher obligation: but this should never be done without necessity; and should always be grounded on cogent arguments, and expressed in gentle and respectful language: and even when a refusal is unexceptionable, an impartial judge can seldom approve the manner in which it is given.—When the Lord seems to frown on us, we are prone to blame others; and thus we often rebelliously murmur against the Author of our troubles, by quarrelling with the instruments.—But when all our contrivances are over-ruled, and necessity compels us to say, "It must be so now;" then submission to the will of the all-wise Disposer, and a believing dependence on the almighty Lord, who hath all hearts in his hands, will yield us a seasonable support. While we use every prudent conciliatory means, we shall best prevail with man, by first prevailing with the Lord in fervent prayer; and "Thy will be done" should close every petition for temporal benefits, or against temporal afflictions.—Though men value very highly their gold and silver, and the luxuries which are accounted the best fruits of every land; yet, in a time of famine, they willingly

CHAP. XLIV.

Joseph directs his steward to put the money into the mouths of his brethren's sacks, and his silver cup into that of Benjamin, 1, 2; and afterwards to pursue them and accuse them of theft, 3—6. Their sacks are searched; the cup is found; and in deep distress they return to Joseph, 7—13. They humble themselves before him, 14—17; and Judah makes a most pathetic speech, concluding with a most generous request, 18—34.

* Heb. him, that was over the house, xxiv. 2. xlii. 16. xli. 25.

AND he commanded * the steward of his house, saying, ^a Fill the men's sacks with food, as much as they can carry, and put every man's money in his sack's mouth.

b xlii. 15, 16, 20. Dent. viii. 2, 16. xlii. 3, 2 Cor. viii 8.

2 And put my ^b cup, the silver cup, in the sack's mouth of the youngest, and his eorn-money: and he did according to the word that Joseph had spoken.

3 ¶ As soon as the morning was light, the men were sent away, they and their asses.

4 And when they were gone out of barter them away for bread: how little then will they stand us in stead in the day of wrath! and how ready shall we be, if truly wise, to renounce them all "as loss, for the "excellency of the knowledge of Jesus Christ!"—They who mean sincerely, are apt to engage for more than they can perform: and, if we feel our passions greatly moved, our tongue should be held in as with a bridle; or it may afterwards occasion us much trouble.

V. 15—34.

Terror once excited is increased by every event: yet innocence gives confidence, and supplies the want of eloquence; or rather furnishes that which is the most simple and expressive.—"He that walketh with wise men will be "wise:" and the good and pious words of the Egyptian, Joseph's steward, shew us that a godly man's conversation is never useless; and teach us to abound in that speech, which is good for the use of edifying.—Even they who, inadvertently and by oversight, have got possession of the property belonging to another, are bound to restore it, when they discover the mistake; and, however we acquire honest gain, we ought to look to the Lord as the Giver of it.—His purposes are continually advancing to their full accomplishment: but they who would have his special blessings, must wait for them; and they who desire to do special good, must learn to bridle and conceal their tenderest passions.—In Joseph's conduct, we see that of Jesus, who shews those whom he loves more and more of their extreme necessity; makes them perceive that he is their only Refuge from destruction; and, consulting their future good more than their present comfort, by salutary terrors and troubles overcomes their reluctance, and brings them to himself. Then, in his wise and holy sovereignty, according to that proportion which he sees good, he gives the city, and not yet far off, Joseph said unto his steward, Up, follow after the men; and when thou dost overtake them, say unto them, ^c Wherefore have ye rewarded evil for good?

VOL. I.

5 Is not this it, in which my lord drinketh? and whereby indeed he ^d divineth? ye have done evil in so doing.

6 And he overtook them, and he spake unto them these same words.

7 And they said unto him, ^d Wherefore saith my lord these words? God forbid that thy servants should do according to this thing.

8 Behold, ^e the money which we found in our sacks' mouths we brought again unto thee out of the land of Canaan: 'how then should we steal out of thy lord's house silver or gold?

9 With whom soever of thy servants it be found, ^e both let him die, ^h and we also will be my lord's bond-men.

10 And he said, Now also let it be according unto your words: 'he with

1 Sam. xxiv. 17.
2 Chr. xx. 11.
Ps. xxxv. 12. cix.
5. Prov. xvii. 13.
John x. 32.

Or, make trial.
16. marg.

xxxiv. 25—31.
xxxv. 22. xxxvii.
18—32. xxxviii.
16—18. Josh.
xxii. 22—29.
2 Sam. xx. 20
2 Kings viii. 13.

e xlii. 27. 35.
xliii. 12. 21, 22.

f See on 7.—Jam.
ii. 10, 11.

g xxxi. 32. Job
xxxi. 38—40. Ps.
ii. 3—5. Acts
xxv. 11.

h xliii. 18.
i 17. 33. Ex. xxii.
3. Matt. xviii.
24, 25.

them some taste of his exhilarating love, and welcomes them to the provisions of his house, as earnest of what he further intends for them; yet so as still to prove and try them, with a view to their more complete humiliation.

NOTES.

CHAP. XLIV. V. 2. It may be supposed, that this silver cup had been used at the entertainment. (xliii. 32—34.)—Joseph seems to have been desirous of ascertaining beyond doubt, how his brethren stood affected to Benjamin, Jacob's present favourite, and to their father on his account. Had they envied and hated Benjamin, (the other son of Rachel, Leah's rival,) as they had him; and had they been influenced by the same unfeeling indignation against Jacob as they were formerly, they would on this occasion have discovered it: for when the cup was found upon Benjamin, they would have had a plausible pretence for leaving him to be a slave, and returning home without him. In this case Joseph no doubt would have acted far otherwise than he did, when the event proved them to be so affectionately disposed both towards Benjamin and their father. At the same time this trial was exceedingly calculated to increase their humiliation.

V. 4—6. The abruptness of this unexpected address was well suited to surprise and confuse, and to favour the design.—Joseph probably meant that by divination he had discovered who had stolen his cup (15); which he could not have done, had he divined by means of the cup. and the words might be rendered, "that about which he "hath used divination."—It is not however certain, that divination is meant; as the original word is used sometimes for accurate investigation or diligent observation. (xxx. 27. 1 Kings xx. 33. Heb.)

V. 9. Probably Joseph expected that his brethren, con-whom it is found shall be my servant; and ye shall be blameless.

T

11 Then they speedily took down every man his sack to the ground, and opened every man his sack.

12 And he searched, and began at the eldest, and left at the youngest: and the cup was found in Benjamin's sack.

13 Then they rent their clothes, and laded every man his ass, and returned to the city.

14 ¶ And Judah and his brethren came to Joseph's house, (for he was yet there,) and they fell before him on the ground.

15 And Joseph said unto them, What deed is this that ye have done? wot ye not, that such a man as I can certainly divine.

16 And Judah said, What shall we say unto my lord? what shall we speak? or how shall we clear ourselves? God hath found out the iniquity of thy servants: behold, we are my lord's servants, both we, and he also with whom the cup is found.

17 And he said, God forbid that I should do so: but the man in whose hand the cup is found, he shall be my servant; and as for you, get you up in peace unto your father.

18 ¶ Then Judah came near unto him, and said, O my lord, let thy servant, I pray thee, speak a word in my lord's ears, and let not thine anger burn against thy servant: for thou art even as Pharaoh.

19 My lord asked his servants, saying, Have ye a father or a brother?

20 And we said unto my lord, We have a father, an old man, and a child of his old age, a little one: and his brother is dead, and he alone is left of his mother, and his father loveth him.

21 And thou saidst unto thy servants, Bring him down unto me, that I may set mine eyes upon him.

22 And we said unto my lord, The lad cannot leave his father; for if he should leave his father, his father would die.

23 And thou saidst unto thy servants, Except your youngest brother come down with you, ye shall see my face no more.

24 And it came to pass, when we came up unto thy servant my father, we told him the words of my lord.

25 And our father said, Go again, and buy us a little food.

26 And we said, We cannot go down: if our youngest brother be with xliii. 33.

1 26-32. xlii. 36-38. xliii. 14.

m xxxvii. 29. 34. Num. xiv. 6. 2 Sam. i. 2. 11. xlii. 19.

n xliii. 16. 25

o xxxvii. 7-9. 1. 18. Phil. ii. 10. 11 p 4. 5. iii. 13. iv. 10.

q xxi. 26. xxxix. 8. Ex. xxxii. 1.

* Or, make trial, 5.

r 32. xliii. 8. 9.

s Ezra ix. 10. 15. Job xl. 4. Acts ii. 37.

t xxxvii. 18-28. xlii. 21, 22. Num. xxxiii. 23. Josh. vii. 1. 18. Prov. xxviii. 17. Luke xii. 2 a xviii. 25. xlii. 18. 2 Sam. xxiii. 3. Prov. xvii. 15.

x 10.

y xxxvii. 32. 33.

z xviii. 30. 32. 2 Sam. xiv. 12. Job xxxiii. 31. Acts ii. 23. a Esth. i. 12. Ps. lxxix. 5 b xli. 40. 44. Prov. xix. 12. Dan. iii. 15. 19-23. v. 19. c xlii. 7-10. xliii. 7. 29.

d xxxvii. 8. xliii. 8. e xxxvii. 39-45. xlii. 36. 38. f 27-29. Luke vii. 12.

h 30. xlii. 33.

i xlii. 15-20. xliii. 3

k xlii. 29-34.

l xlii. 2.

m xliii. 4, 5. Luke xi. 7.

scious of their innocence, would make use of such language as this; which favoured his design of proving how they stood affected towards Benjamin. Their money had before been put into their sacks, they knew not how, and they might have suspected somewhat similar on this occasion: their confidence therefore was very imprudent.

V. 12, 13. 'In very agony they rend their clothes.—'As they walk along their thoughts turn on another event. —'It is the LORD.' We are murderers:—divine vengeance suffers us not to live.' Fuller.

V. 14. Now Joseph had, in every sense, the dominion over his brethren, according to their interpretation of his dreams.

V. 15. Wot ye not? &c.] 'What! Could you suppose that I, who foretold the famine seven years before it came, was unable to discover who had stolen my cup?'

V. 16. God hath found out, &c.] Probably Judah inwardly meant, the former guilt of himself and his brethren, which was now visited upon them. Conscious of his own innocence, as to the present concern, he very prudently waved all mention of it; for otherwise he must either have allowed Benjamin's guilt, or reflected on Joseph's equity.

V. 17. Get you up, &c.] At this time the experiment was at the crisis, and no doubt Joseph anxiously expected the event.

V. 18. As Pharaoh.] That is, equally to be respected and feared. The reader should keep the dreams still in mind: Joseph's brethren soon learned what was become of them. (xxxvii. 20.)—Judah, being entrusted with Benjamin, and perhaps more affectionate than the rest both to him and his father; and having conceived the generous design mentioned in the close of the chapter, assumed the office of speaker in the name of the rest; probably with their concurrence. But it was an arduous task to plead with the judge, after sentence had been passed.

V. 20. Joseph had been long dead to his father, and his brethren had been long accustomed to speak of him as dead.—Every word in this verse is simplicity and pathos itself. No man of the least taste or sensibility can read it, without great emotion. Indeed the whole speech is exquisitely beautiful, and perhaps the most complete pattern of genuine natural eloquence, extant in any language. Had Joseph been merely a humane judge, and no relation, and had Benjamin been guilty, such an address must have been irresistibly forcible: with what feelings then must Joseph have heard it!—When we read this generous speech we forgive Judah all the past, and cannot refuse to say, "Thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise." xlix. 8.

V. 26. We cannot, &c.] Judah had said, "We will not;" (xliii. 5;) but he here softened the harshness of that expression.

us, then will we go down: for we may not see the man's face, except our youngest brother be with us.

27 And thy servant my father said unto us, Ye know that ^a my wife bare me two sons.

n xxxix. 18—21. 28. xxx. 22—25. xxxv. 16—18. xvi. 19. c xxxvii. 13, 14.

28 And ^o the one went out from me, and I said, ^p Surely he is torn in pieces; and I saw him not since.

p xlii. 36 38. xliii. 14. Ps. lxxxviii 3, 4.

29 And if ^q ye take this also from me, and mischief befall him, ye shall bring down my grey hairs with sorrow to the grave.

r 17. 31. 34.

30 Now therefore ^r when I come to thy servant my father, and the lad be not with us; (seeing that ^s his life is bound up in the lad's life:)

s 1 Sam. xviii. 1. 2 Sam. xviii. 33.

V. 28. Judah touched on this subject with a kind of trembling hesitation. As a part of his plea it must not be omitted; yet his conscience seems to have made him falter in reporting Jacob's language, which he knew resulted from a deception.—It is surprising that Joseph could refrain on hearing this.

V. 30, 31. Nothing can exceed the tender affection expressed for Jacob in this speech; which confirms the sentiment, that from the discovery of Judah's incest with Tamar, he had been a true penitent, and consequently a more dutiful son than before. It might be feared, that the sad tidings of Benjamin's hopeless bondage would quite overwhelm Jacob, and cause his immediate death. Perhaps Judah considered the former guilt of himself and brethren respecting Joseph, as the cause of this severe visitation; and as the means of rendering it insupportable to Jacob. In deep anguish of conscience, he seems to have apprehended, that he and his brethren would actually be chargeable in the sight of God, with the guilt of murdering their father; as well as of the death or slavery of Joseph and Benjamin.

V. 33, 34. Judah would be as useful a servant as Benjamin; Joseph would be no loser; his father could perhaps survive the loss of him; and he was willing to submit to any hardship, rather than occasion and witness his aged father's death.—What must Benjamin have felt, when he heard his brother conclude his speech with a proposal, which could never have been thought of, if it had not been actually made!—Perhaps the annals of the whole world do not produce an instance of so heroick and disinterested affection in any mere man. Some would even dare to die for a beloved or honoured friend, who nevertheless would not willingly submit to be a slave for life to ransom him. Without exception, this may be considered as by far the most affecting speech that was ever recorded. Either the speakers and writers, in this sacred volume, excelled all other men in native genius and simple eloquence, or they were divinely inspired: for surely, no men ever spake and wrote as they did.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—17.

They who have been guilty of deceit and injustice, must 31 It shall come to pass, ^t when he seeth that the lad is not with us, that he will die: and thy servants ^u shall bring down the grey hairs of thy servant our father with sorrow to the grave.

t 1 Sam. iv. 17, 18. 2 Cor. vii. 10. 1 Thes. iv. 13. u 29. xxxvii. 26. 27. 35. xlii. 21. 23. 36—38. 1 Sam. xxii. 22.

32 For thy servant became ^x surety for the lad unto my father, saying, If I bring him not unto thee, then I shall bear the blame to my father for ever.

x See on xliii. 8.

33 Now therefore, ^y I pray thee, let thy servant abide, instead of the lad, a bond-man to my lord; and let the lad go up with his brethren.

y Ex. xxxii. 32. Rom. v. 7—10. ix. 3.

34 For how shall I go up to my father, and the lad be not with me? ^z lest peradventure I see the evil that shall ^a come on my father.

z 1 Sam. ii. 33, 34. 2 Chr. xxxiv. 28. Esth. viii. 6. Jer. li. 10, 11. Heb. find. Ps. cxvi. 3. cxix. 143. margin.

blame themselves when afterwards suspected without cause, and put upon repeated trials, before they recover the confidence of those whom they have injured: but, if they are sincere, the event will make amends for the severest scrutiny.—Though open and direct measures are generally preferable; yet, in some cases, stratagems are lawful: and never more so, than when they tend to the benefit of the persons for whom they are laid, in order that they may remember and repent of their own treacherous dealings.—To reward evil for good is so evidently base, that nothing can be urged in excuse of it: how then shall we stand in judgment before that God, whom we have so ungratefully requited for his multiplied benefits?—Men think it hard to be suspected of crimes, which are contrary to a few of their outward actions; though they are inwardly conscious of much worse, which they conceal from their fellow-creatures! Yet conscious innocence has no occasion to fear a fair trial: but, as all hearts are totally concealed from us, except our own, we should be cautious in answering for others also: and they, who are most confident in self-justification, may soon have their mouths stopped, and not know what to say.—If, before the powerful of the earth, it is sometimes prudent to wave the question of right, and to appeal to their compassion and generosity; much more should we submit to the righteousness of God, and renouncing all other pleas, cast ourselves upon his infinite compassion: for he is perfectly righteous, and will be acknowledged to be so, by all who would approach him with acceptance.

V. 18—34.

In many cases, undissembled narrations form the most conclusive and affecting arguments. (Acts xi. 1—18.) Such addresses to the tender passions, as are grounded upon evident reason, truth, and fact, and carry with them internal testimony of disinterestedness, generosity, and relative affection, are almost irresistible: and the glow of filial affection, through manly sense and fortitude, has a peculiar beauty and energy.—How careful should children be not to grieve their parents, lest by embittering their infirm age, they should shorten their days, and be indicted now at the bar of their own consciences, or hereafter at

CHAP. XLV.

Joseph makes himself known to his brethren, 1—3; encourages them by shewing them the Lord's merciful purposes in these transactions, 4—8; orders them to fetch his father and family into Egypt; and cordially embraces them, 9—15. Pharaoh confirms the invitation, 16—20. Joseph furnishes his brethren for their journeys, and exhorts them to concord, 21—24. They report the whole to Jacob, who hardly believes the tidings, but is at length revived by them, 25—28.

a xlii. 30, 31. Jer. xx. 9.

b 2 Sam. i. 20. Matt. xviii. 15. Acts x. 41.

* Heb. gave forth his voice in weeping. Num. xiv. 1. 2 Kings xx. 3.

THEN Joseph ^a could not refrain himself before all them that stood by him; and he cried, ^b Cause every man to go out from me: and there stood no man with him, while Joseph made himself known unto his brethren.

2 And he ^{*} wept aloud: and the the judgment-scat of God, for the horrible crime of parricide; which many are guilty of who never suspect themselves, or are suspected by others!—True penitents will shew, that a total revolution has taken place in their principles and practice: were it possible, they would undo their former misconduct; and therefore they will endeavour to make amends for it, and prevent any further ill effects, though in the most self-denying manner: and this will evidence that their sins are pardoned, and prepare the way for their receiving the comfort of forgiveness.—Thus Jesus, the Antitype, proceeds to humble and prove his people, even after they have had some tastes of his loving-kindness: he brings their sins renewedly to remembrance, that they may renew and evidence their repentance; he tries, that he may manifest, their graces: his bowels yearn over them, while his face wears a frown, and his hand holds the rod of correction; and thus by rebukes and chastenings, he prepares them for comfort here and for glory hereafter.

NOTES.

CHAP. XLV. V. 1, 2. It is a remarkable proof of the strength of mind, which united with exquisite sensibility in Joseph's character, that he could so long repress his emotions, and conceal them from all parties; but Judah's most affecting speech and generous proposal entirely overcame him. He would not, however, let the Egyptians learn any particulars of his brethren's guilt; and he still refrained himself, till the former were gone out of the room: but then his restrained passions burst forth with the greater violence.

V. 3. Joseph had doubtless all along been addressed and spoken of, by his Egyptian name, or by his titles of office: so that, though the historian calls him Joseph, probably his brethren had never heard that name before, from any person in Egypt.—It is impossible that the tongue, the pen, or the pencil, can ever do justice to the mixed emotions of surprise, fear, grief, remorse, hope, natural affection, and joy, which must alternately, yet almost at the same instant, have seized upon their minds at this unexpected discovery.—But Joseph evidently perceived, that confusion and terror were likely to predominate, and to Egyptians and the house of Pharaoh heard.

3 And Joseph said unto his brethren, ^c I am Joseph; doth my father yet live? And his brethren could not answer him; ^d for they were [†] troubled at his presence.

c Matt. xiv. 27. Acta vii 13.

d Job iv. 5. xxiii. 15. Zech. xii. 10. Mark vi. 50. Luke v. 8. xxiv. 37. 88. Rev. i. 7. Or, terrified.

4 And Joseph said unto his brethren, Come near to me, I pray you: and they came near: and he said, ^e I am Joseph your brother, whom ye sold into Egypt.

e xxxvii. 28. l. 18. Acts ix. 5. f Is. xl. 1, 2. 2 Cor. ii. 7.

5 Now therefore ^f be not grieved, ^g nor angry with yourselves, that ye sold me hither; for ^g God did send me before you to preserve life.

† Heb. neither let there be anger in your eyes. g 7, 8. xvii. 25. l. 23. 2 Sam. xvi. 19—12. xxvii 14. Job i. 21. Ps. cv. 16, 17. Acts ii. 23. iv. 24—28. vii. 9—15. h xli. 29—31. 54—56. xlvii. 18.

6 For these ^h two years hath the fa-fill them with apprehensions, that he would now avenge the injustice and cruelty, of which they had been guilty.

V. 4. The name of Joseph might have led his brethren to a recollection of his features and voice: yet the mention of their having sold him was necessary, though painful; both to remove all doubts of his being their brother, and also to introduce the kind attempt, which he intended to make, to obviate their fears, and to inspire confidence and comfort.—Perhaps he called them near to him, lest the Egyptians should overhear this part of the conversation.

V. 5. Every passion has its proper boundaries, which it ought not to exceed. The skilful physieian aims to produce an effect: yet, having produced it, he often sees occasion to check, and even sometimes to counteract, his first intention; lest it prove excessive, and expose the patient to the opposite danger. Joseph had designed to humble and to reprove his brethren, to bring their sin to remembrance, to fill them with remorse for it, and to evince that they really repented, and were not disposed to repeat the crime. But he now perceived, from their confusion and dismay, that they were in danger of being overwhelmed by over-much sorrow, and of sinking under despondency: and therefore he endeavoured to comfort and encourage them. (Marg. Ref.)—Not only would the authority of one, whom they had so grossly injured, affright them; but the excellence of his character, the reputation which he had acquired, and the accomplishment of those dreams, as divine predictions, which they had contemptuously opposed, would make their crime appear more horrid than before; and all together might induce them to conclude, that they had sinned beyond the reach of forgiveness.—Though the merciful purpose of God, in sending him into Egypt, in no degree excused their sin, and therefore ought not to prevent their humiliation and repentance; yet it might very properly abate their anguish of spirit, and encourage their hope of pardon from so gracious a God: and it might assure them of Joseph's forgiveness, who clearly saw the wisdom of God, and richly experienced his goodness, in that event.

V. 6. Earing.] That is, plowing, or preparing the ground and sowing it. It appears by this, that the Egyptians, finding Joseph's predictions exactly accomplished mine been in the land; and yet there are five years, in the which there shall neither be¹ earing nor harvest.

^l Ex. xxxiv. 21. D-ut. xxi. 4. 1 Sam. viii. 12. Is. xxx. 24. * Heb. to put for you a remnant. ^k Judg. xv. 18. 1 Chr. xi. 14. Ps. xlv. 4. Acts vii. 35. ^l John xv. 16. Rom. ix. 16.

7 And God sent me before you, * to preserve you a posterity in the earth, and ^k to save your lives by a great deliverance.

^m xli. 39-48. Judg. xvii. 10. Job xxix. 16.

8 So now ^l it was not you that sent me hither, but God: and he hath made me a ^m father to Pharaoh, and lord of all his house, and a ruler throughout all the land of Egypt.

ⁿ 26-28.

9 Haste you, and go up to my father, and say unto him, ^a Thus saith thy son Joseph, God hath made me lord of all Egypt; ^o come down unto me, tarry not.

^o 13. 19, 20.

10 And thou shalt dwell ^p in the land of Goshen, ^a and thou shalt be near unto me, thou, and thy children, and thy children's children, and thy flocks, and thy herds, and all that thou hast.

^p xlv. 34. xlvii 1-6. Ex. viii. 22. ix. 26.

^q John xiv. 2, 3 xvii. 24.

11 And there ^r will I nourish thee; (for yet there are five years of famine;) lest thou, and thy household, and all that thou hast, come to poverty.

^r xlvii. 12. Matt. xv. 5, 6. Mark vii. 9-12

12 And behold, ^s your eyes see, and the eyes of my brother Benjamin, that it is my mouth that speaketh unto you.

^s xlii. 23. Luke xxvi. 29. John xx. 27.

13 And ye shall tell my father of all ^t my glory in Egypt, and of all that ye have seen; and ye shall haste, and ^u bring down my father hither.

^t John xvii. 24. 1 Pet. i. 10-12. Rev. xxi. 23.

^u Acts vii. 14.

14 And he ^x fell upon his brother Benjamin's neck, and wept; and Benjamin wept upon his neck.

^x xxxix. 11. xxxviii. 4. Rom. I. 31.

15 Moreover ^y he kissed all his brethren, and wept upon them: and after that his brethren talked with him.

^y 2 Sam. xiv. 33. Luke xv. 20.

16 ¶ And the fame thereof was heard in Pharaoh's house, saying, Joseph's brethren are come: and [†] it pleased Pharaoh well, and his servants.

[†] Heb. was good in the eyes of Pharaoh. xvi. 6. xx. 15. xlii. 37. Margins.

17 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Say unto thy brethren, This do ye; ^z lade your beasts, and go, get you unto the land of Canaan.

^z xlii. 25, 26. xlv. 1, 2.

18 And take your father, and your households, and come unto me: and I will give you the good of the land of Egypt, and ye shall eat ^a the fat of the land.

^a xxvii. 28. xlvii. 6. Deut. xxxii. 14. Ps. cxlvii. 14. Is. xxxviii. 1. 4.

19 Now thou art commanded, this do ye; take you waggons out of the land of Egypt ^b for your little ones, and for your wives, and bring your father and come.

^b xxxi. 17, 18.

20 Also ^c regard not your ^c stuff: for ^d the good of all the land of Egypt is your's.

^c Heb. let not your eyes spare, &c. Is. xliii. 18. Ez. ix. 5. xx. 17. ^d Matt. xxiv. 17. Luke xvii. 31.

21 And the children of Israel did so: and Joseph gave them ^e waggons, according to the ^f commandment of Pharaoh, and gave them provision for the way.

^e 18. xx. 15. Ezra ix. 12. Is. i. 19. ^f 19. 27. xvi. 5. Num. vii. 3-9. Ez. xxiii. 24. ^g Heb. mouth. Num. iii. 16. Marg. 2 Chr. xxxv. 22. Lam. i. 18. Marg. Judg. xiv. 12. 19. 2 Kings v. 5. 22, 23.

22 To all of them he gave ^g each man changes of raiment: but ^g to Ben-

^g Judg. xiv. 12. 19. 2 Kings v. 5. 22, 23. xliii. 34.

thus far, followed his counsel, and wasted no corn in sowing the land. The entire failure of the accustomed overflowing of the Nile, which probably took place, would in general render agriculture impracticable; yet where it might have been attempted, it was not. (xlvii. 23.)

V. 8. 'No longer confine your thoughts to your own misconduct in that affair: but see and admire the wonderful contrivance of God in it, who sent me hither for such important benefits, especially to you and your families.'— Thus Joseph, by repeatedly pointing out the wisdom and mercy of God in these dispensations, both obviated the desponding conclusions, which his brethren might have been tempted to deduce, and assured them of his cordial forgiveness.—He was made a father to Pharaoh, as the instrument of God in preserving him and his kingdom.

V. 12. Benjamin was so very young when Joseph was sold, that it is not probable he remembered him; but doubtless he had heard much concerning him.

V. 13. Tell my father.] This direction was given, not in ostentation, but to rejoice Jacob's heart, and likewise to induce him the more readily to come into Egypt.

V. 14. Benjamin, having no share in the crimes of his brethren towards Joseph, would have his joy unmingled with those painful feelings, which the rest experienced.

V. 15. Kissed.] As a token of entire reconciliation and endeared affection. This seems to have been the first thing which encouraged them to speak to him.

V. 16. It pleased.] This is a conclusive testimony how highly Joseph was esteemed, and how little he was envied.

V. 17. Pharaoh left all other concerns to Joseph: but here he generously interposed, and gave most liberal orders, about Jacob and his family; which would be very agreeable to the feelings of all parties.

V. 19. Waggons.] No mention has hitherto been made of horses, among the possessions of the patriarchs, or of wheel-carriages, both of which abounded in Egypt at that time. It is probable these waggons were drawn by horses. (Notes, xlvii. 17. Deut. xvii. 16.)

V. 20. Your stuff.] Such furniture, or other property, as could not be conveniently removed so far, should be left behind without concern.

V. 22. To Benjamin.] Thus Joseph still continued the trial of his brethren, to see whether any of them were disposed to envy Benjamin.

jamin he gave three hundred pieces of silver, and five changes of raiment.

23 And to his father he sent after this manner; ten asses * laden with the good things of Egypt, and ten she-asses laden with corn and bread and meat for his father by the way.

24 So he sent his brethren away, and they departed: and he said unto them, ^h See that ye fall not out by the way.

25 ¶ And they went up out of Egypt, and came into the land of Canaan unto Jacob their father;

26 And told him, saying, ⁱ Joseph is yet alive, ^j and he is governor over all the land of Egypt. ^k And [†] Jacob's heart fainted, [†] for he believed them not.

27 And they told him all the words of Joseph, which he had said unto them: and when he saw the waggons which Joseph had sent to carry him, ^m the spirit of Jacob their father revived.

28 And Israel said, ⁿ It is enough: Joseph my son is yet alive: I will go and see him before I die.

* Heb. carrying

^b xxxvii. 22. xlii. 22. Ps. cxxxiii. John xii. 34, 35. Eph. iv. 31, 32. Phil. ii. 2-5. Col. iii. 12, 13. 1 Thes. i. 13.

^k xxxvii. 35. xlii. 36, 38. xlv. 29. [†] Heb. his. [†] Job ix. 16. xxix. 24. Ps. cxxvi. 1. Luke xxiv. 11. 41.

^m Judg. xv. 19. Ps. lxxxv. 6. 1s. lvii. 15. Hos. vi. 2.

ⁿ xlv. 30. Luke ii. 28-30. John xvi. 21, 22.

V. 24. It would be natural for this company, during so interesting a journey, to converse freely concerning their conduct in selling Joseph, and the manner in which they should relate the particulars to Jacob: and as some of them had been much more criminal than others, and as Reuben, in Joseph's hearing, had sharply reproached his brethren; these passions might easily produce altercations, and even quarrels of fatal consequence. But as, after all, Joseph forgave and loved them; so he required them to forgive and love one another.

V. 26. For above twenty years Jacob had been used to consider his beloved Joseph as dead; with what emotions then must he have heard the words, "Joseph is yet alive, and is governor over all the land of Egypt!"

V. 27. This must have been attended by a confession of their own base conduct respecting Joseph; but Jacob had no heart now for reproaches or complaints.

V. 28. It is enough, &c.] 'I shall then account myself to have lived long enough.'—Joseph's glory in Egypt seemed little to Jacob. As he was alive, that thought swallowed up all other considerations.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—8.

In endeavouring to render men sensible of their faults, we should be careful lest we needlessly expose them.—True excellence does not consist in being devoid of passions, but in having them all under the government of reason and conscience; so as to know how to restrain them, and how to yield to them with prudence and expediency: and true wisdom discovers itself, in being able to suit our conduct and conversation to the persons with whom we have to do, and to the circumstances in which they are placed.—In speaking to men about the concerns of their souls, two grand objects should always be kept in view; namely, to awaken the careless conscience to an adequate sense of guilt and danger, and to inspire the burdened and desponding heart with the hope of pardon and peace.—It is very profitable for us to observe the footsteps of Providence, and to note how infinite wisdom and goodness deduce the most beneficial effects from the crimes and follies of men: especially we should study the history of our own lives with this design: we shall not then want proof, that the only wise God hath over-ruled many of our mistakes and sins to our important good; and thus we may also perceive some of the outlines of his plan, "who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will." This review, if duly made, cannot reasonably lead us to entertain a slighter sense of the evil of sin, or better thoughts of ourselves; it cannot encourage us to go on in disobedience, or lessen our humiliation and self-abasement; but, on the contrary, it will convince us the more deeply of our own ignorance and folly, and render us more ashamed of offending against so kind a Benefactor. Yet it will prevent our despairing of forgiveness; check that sorrow, which unfits the mind for duty and damps our gratitude; and excite that admiration, love, and confidence, which produce cheerful obedience.

V. 9—28.

We should ever manifest brotherly love, even to those who have treated us injuriously; and shew a readiness to forgive, and an earnest desire to disperse those fears and jealousies, which the recollection of past offences may excite; by uniting the most compassionate affection, with our faithful attempts to make men sensible that they have offended.—But what haste ought children to make, and what gratification should they account it, to contribute to the comfort of their tender parents! They should check every mean desire, and spur themselves on to every laudable pursuit, with the idea, that the one will grieve, and the other gladden, a kind parent's heart. They ought to value prosperity, especially as enabling them to share it with them; and spare a considerable portion, even of a moderate provision, to requite the cares, toils and anxieties of an aged father and mother. How shamefully unlike Joseph are they, who, in comparative affluence, through pride, covetousness, or self-indulgence, neglect, and leave to languish in indigence, such near relations!—Oh! how it adorns the doctrine of God our Saviour, when believers, by a blameless, useful, and prudent conduct, conciliate the good will of many, and silence the reproaches of all.—If men may without injustice confer unmerited favours on whom, and in what proportion, they please; who shall dare to find fault, if our righteous God, punishing none above their deservings, "has mercy on whom he will have mercy?"—When the reasons of the divine appointments are made known to us, we shall clearly perceive the Lord's wisdom, love, and faithfulness; we shall know that all those things are for us which once we thought

CHAP. XLVI.

Jacob offers sacrifices, and has an encouraging vision, 1—4. He goes with his family into Egypt, 5—7. The names and the number of his descendants, 8—27. He meets and confers with Joseph, who instructs his brethren how to answer Pharaoh, 28—34.

AND Israel took his journey with all that he had, and came to Beer-sheba, and offered sacrifices unto the God of his father Isaac.

2 And God spake unto Israel in the visions of the night, and said, Jacob, Jacob: and he said, Here am I.

3 And he said, I am God, the God of thy father: fear not to go down into Egypt; for I will there make of thee a great nation.

4 I will go down with thee into Egypt; and I will also surely bring thee up again: and Joseph shall put his hand upon thine eyes.

5 And Jacob rose up from Beer-sheba: and the sons of Israel carried Jacob their father, and their little ones, and their wives, in the waggons which Pharaoh had sent to carry him.

6 And they took their cattle, and their goods which they had gotten in the land of Canaan, and came into Egypt, Jacob and all his seed with him: 7 His sons and his sons' sons with him, his daughters, and his sons' daughters, and all his seed brought he with him into Egypt.

8 ¶ And these are the names of the children of Israel, which came into Egypt, Jacob and his sons: Reuben, Jacob's first-born.

9 And the sons of Reuben: Hanoeh, and Phallu, and Hezron, and Carmi.

10 And the sons of Simeon; Jemuel, and Jamin, and Ohad, and Jachin, and Zohar, and Shaul the son of a Canaanitish woman.

11 And the sons of Levi; Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.

12 And the sons of Judah; Er, and Onan, and Shelah, and Pharez, and Zarah: But Er and Onan died in the land of Canaan. And the sons of Pharez were Hezron, and Hamul.

13 And the sons of Issachar; Tola, and Phuvah, and Job, and Shimron.

14 And the sons of Zebulun; Sered, and Elon, and Jahleel.

a xxi. 14. 31. xxvi. 23. 1 Sam. iii. 20.
b iv. 4. viii. 20. xii. 8. xxii. 13. xxxiii. 20. xxxv. 3. 7. Job i. 5. xlii. 8.
c xxi. 33. xxvi. 23. —25. xxviii. 13. xxxi. 42. 53.
d xv. 1. Num. xii. 6. Job iv. 13. xxxiii. 14. 15.
e xxii. 1. Ex. iii. 3. 4. 1 Sam. iii. 4. 10. Acts ix. 4. x. 13.
f xv. 13. xxvi. 2. 3. Is. xli. 10. Jer. xl. 9. Acts xxvii. 24.
g xii. 2. xxxv. 11. Ex. i. 7—10. Deut. i. 10. x. 22. xxvi. 5. Acts vii. 17.
h xxviii. 15. Is. xliii. 1, 2.
i xv. 14—16. l. 13. 24, 25. Ex. iii. 8. k l. 1.

l xxxi. 17. xiv. 19. 27.

m Num. xx. 15. Deut. x. 22. Josh. xxiv. 4. 1 Sam. xii. 8. Ps. cv. 23. la. lii. 4. Acts vii. 15.

n Ex. i. 1—5. 1 Chr. ii. 1, 2. o xxix. 32. xlix. 3, 4. Ex. vi. 14. Num. i. 20, 21. ii. 10—13. xxvi. 5. Deut. xxxiii. 6. 1 Chr. v. 1. 3. p xxix. 33. xxxiv. 25. 30. xlix. 15—27. Ex. vi. 15. Num. i. 23, 23. ii. 12, 13. xxvi. 12, 13.

* Or, Nemuel.
† Or, Jarib.
‡ Or, Zerah.
1 Chr. iv. 24.
q Ex. vi. 16. Num. iii. 17—22. xxvi. 57, 58. Deut. xxxiii. 8—11. 1 Chr. vi. 1—5.

§ Or, Gershom
1 Chr. vi. 16.
r xxxviii. 1—3. 24—30. xlix. 8—12. Num. i. 26. 27. xxvi. 19—21. Deut. xxxiii. 7. Judg. i. 2. 1 Chr. ii. 3—5. iv. 1. v. 2. Ps. lxxxviii. 68. Matt. i. 1—3. Heb. vii. 14. Rev. v. 5.
s xlix. 14, 15. Num. i. 28, 29. xxvi. 23—25. Deut. xxxiii. 18. 1 Chr. xii. 32.

|| Or, Puah.
* Or, Jashub.
1 Chr. vi. 1.
t xlix. 13. Num. i. 30, 31. xxvi. 26. 27. Deut. xxxiii. 18, 19.

against us, and that our murmurs sprang from ignorance and unbelief; we shall say, "It is enough," "I am now satisfied;" and therefore in the exercise of faith we should endeavour to anticipate that discovery.—Here also we behold Jesus, manifesting himself as a Brother and Friend to those, who once were his despisers, his enemies, and, in some sense, his murderers, having previously humbled them in true repentance; preventing most kindly their dismay and confusion; assuring them of his love, and of the provisions of his grace; explaining to them the mysteries of his cross, and the designs of the Father in his sufferings and glory; admitting them into sweet fellowship with himself; bidding them go, and inform others of his love and grace, that they may come and share it also; commanding them to lay aside envy, anger, malice, and contention, and live in peace with each other; teaching them willingly to renounce the world for him and his fullness; giving them earnestness of his love, and supplying all that is needful to bring them home to himself, that "where he is, there they may be also." And though, when he sends for his people by death as his messenger, they may at first feel some discouraging apprehensions; yet the thoughts of seeing his glory, and being with him, will enable them at length to say, "It is enough;"—"I am willing to die, and go to see, and be with, the Beloved of my soul."

NOTES.

CHAP. XLVI. V. 1. Perhaps Jacob chose Beer-sheba for his solemn sacrifices, either as having been frequently the scene of his father's communion with God, or because it was the last place in Canaan, which he was now leaving never to see again. He spoke at first with rapture of going to see Joseph; but it had been revealed to Abraham, that his posterity would be durably oppressed in Egypt; and Isaac had been forbidden to go thither. Perhaps, recollecting these things, Jacob hesitated about leaving Canaan, till he had sought direction and protection from God.—Nothing is recorded concerning sacrifices, from this time till Israel's deliverance from Egypt.

V. 4. God would surely bring Jacob back again to Canaan, in his posterity, of which his burial in Canaan was an earnest; and Joseph would be with him in his dying moments, to perform the last offices of filial affection, and to close his eyes. Thus the Lord assured him, that his beloved Joseph would survive him, and that no heavy calamities would come on his seed during his life.

V. 7. His daughters, &c.] Jacob had but one daughter (15); but perhaps his sons' wives were intended. His sons' daughters are also mentioned; yet only one of them is named (17); and it does not appear on what account she was distinguished from the rest.

V. 12. Judah was the fourth son of Leah, and Joseph was born when Jacob had been married about seven years: (xxix. 35. xxx. 24, 25:) consequently Judah might be about three or four years older than Joseph; yet he could not be above forty-four at this time, for Joseph was only forty.—His two sons Er and Onan had been married to Tamar, and a considerable time after their death had elapsed 15 These be the sons of ^a Leah, which she bare unto Jacob in Padan-aram, with his daughter Dinah: all the souls of his sons and his daughters were thirty and three.

16 And the ^v sons of Gad; ^{*} Ziphion, and Haggai, Shuni, and [†] Ezbon, Eri, and [‡] Arodi, and Areli.

17 And the sons of [§] Asher; Jimnah, and Ishuah, and Isui, and Beriah, and Serah their sister: And the sons of Beriah; Heber, and Malchiel.

18 These are the sons of ^{||} Zilpah, whom Laban gave to Leah his daughter: and these she bare unto Jacob, even sixteen souls.

19 The sons of [¶] Rachel, Jacob's wife; [°] Joseph, and Benjamin.

20 And unto Joseph in the land of Egypt were born [Ⓢ] Manasseh and Ephraim, which Asenath the daughter of Potipherah [Ⓣ] priest of On bare unto him.

21 And [Ⓤ] the sons of Benjamin were Belah, and Becher, and Ashbel, Gera, and Naaman, [Ⓡ] Ehi, and Rosh, [Ⓢ] Muppim, and [Ⓣ] Huppim, and Ard.

22 These are the sons of Rachel, which were born to Jacob: all the souls were fourteen.

23 And the sons of [Ⓛ] Dan; [Ⓚ] Hushim.

24 And the sons of [Ⓛ] Naphtali; [Ⓜ] Jahzeel, and Guni, and Jezer, and Shillem.

^a xxx. 32-35. xxx. 17-21. xxxv. 23.
^v xxx. 11. xlix. 19. Num. i. 24, 25. Deut. xxxiii. 20, 21.
^{*} Or, Zephon.
[†] Or, Ozni.
[‡] Or, Arod. Num. xxvi. 15-17.
[§] xlix. 20. Num. i. 40, 41. xxvi. 44-46. Deut. xxxiii. 24. 1 Chr. vii. 30, 31.
^{||} xxxix. 24 xxx. 10.
[¶] xxxix. 18. xxx. 24. xxxv. 16-18. 24. xlix. 27.
[°] xxxvii. xxxix. xi-xiv. xlviii. xlix. 22-27. i. 1, &c. Num. i. 36, 37. xxvi. 38-41. Deut. xxxiii. 12-17.
[Ⓢ] xli. 51, 52. xlviii. 4. 13, 14. Num. i. 32-35. xxvi. 29-37.
[Ⓣ] Or, prince. xli. 45, 50. marg.
[Ⓤ] 1 Chr. vii. 6-12. viii. 1-7.
[Ⓡ] Num. xxvi. 38. Ahiram.
[Ⓢ] Num. xvi. 39. Shupham. 1 Chr. vii. 12. Shuppim.
[Ⓣ] Num. xxvi. 39. Hupham.
[Ⓛ] xlix. 16, 17. Num. i. 38, 39. Deut. xxxiii. 22.
[Ⓚ] Num. xxvi. 42, 43. Shuham.
[Ⓛ] xlix. 21. Num. i. 42, 43. xxvi. 48-50.
[Ⓜ] 1 Chr. vii. 13. Jahziel.

25 These are the sons of ⁿ Bilhah, which Laban gave unto Rachel his daughter, and she bare these unto Jacob: all the souls were seven.

26 All the souls that came with Jacob into Egypt, which came out of his ^o loins, besides Jacob's sons' wives, all the souls were threescore and six.

27 And the sons of Joseph which were born him in Egypt, were two souls: all the souls of the house of Jacob, which came into Egypt, were [°] threescore and ten.

28 ¶ And he sent ^p Judah before him unto Joseph, ^q to direct his face unto ^r Goshen; and they came into the land of Goshen.

29 And Joseph made ready ^s his chariot, and went up to meet Israel his father to Goshen; and presented himself unto him: and he ^t fell on his neck, and wept on his neck a good while.

30 And Israel said unto Joseph, ^u Now let me die, since I have seen thy face, because thou art yet alive.

31 And Joseph said unto his brethren, and to his father's house, ^x I will go up and shew Pharaoh, and say unto him, My brethren, and my father's house, which were in the land of Canaan, are come unto me:

32 And the men are ^y shepherds, for ^z their trade hath been to feed cattle;

ⁿ xxix. 29 xxx. 4-8. xxxv. 25.
^o Heb. thigh. xxxv. 11. Ex. i. 5. marg.
^p Deut. x. 22. Acts vii. 14.
^q xliii. 8. xlix. 16-34. xlix. 8.
^r xxxi. 21.
^s 34. See on xlv. 10.
^t xli. 43. xlv. 19, 21.
^u xxxiii. 4. xlv. 14. Luke xv. 20. Acts xx. 87.
^v xlv. 28. Luke ii. 29.
^w xlv. 16-20. xlvii.
^x y iv. 2. xxxi. 18. xxxvii. 2. xlvii. 3. Ex. iii. 1. 1 Sam. xvi. 11. xlvii. 15. 1s. lxxviii. 70-72. 1s. xl. 11. Zechi. xiii. 5. Heb. they are men of cattle. 34.

before Pharez was born. (xxxviii.) It can then hardly be conceived, that this event took place much before Judah was forty years old. So that Pharez could not be more than four or five years old at this time. The heads of families, therefore, which were born in Egypt during Jacob's life, seem to have been included.

V. 15. Thirty and three.] When Er and Onan are deducted, the whole number amounts only to thirty-two; but Jacob himself must be added to complete the number.

V. 21. The marginal references shew, that several of these were Benjamin's grand-children. It is evident that Benjamin was born after Dinah had been defiled, and she was about Joseph's age: supposing her therefore but in her fourteenth year at that time, Benjamin could not now be more than twenty-five or twenty-six years old: we can then scarcely conceive, that he could have several grand-children.—It is therefore most probable, that the historian mentions some born in Egypt during Jacob's life-time, who afterwards became heads of families in Israel, as it was before intimated. (Note, 12.)

V. 27. Threescore and six were before mentioned (26); so that Joseph and his two sons, together with Jacob himself complete the seventy persons here enumerated; and the numbers stated in verses 15. 18. 22. 25. amount to seventy.—The Septuagint, adding some of the descendants of Ephraim and Manasseh, who became heads of families in these tribes, makes the number seventy-five: and perhaps St. Luke took the number as it stood in this version, in recording the speech of Stephen before the council. Other methods, however, have been devised for reconciling the sacred historians. (Note, Acts vii. 14.)

V. 28. To direct.] To give Joseph notice of his arrival, that he might meet him in Goshen. This region lay near the entrance of Egypt, bordering on Arabia.—Judah seems to have been selected on this occasion, as having acted nobly in Joseph's presence before.

V. 29. As a prince, Joseph went forth to meet his father in a chariot, shewing him proper respect: but for Jacob, always a plain man and now in years, he sends a convenient, but less splendid conveyance; as the varied term evidently implies.

V. 32-34. 'It is observable, how careful Joseph is to keep his brethren clear of the snares of Egypt...He is more concerned for their purity than their outward dignity...If we wish to destroy our souls, or the souls of our children, let us seek for ourselves, and for them,

^a xv. 19. *and they have brought their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have.

33 And it shall come to pass when Pharaoh shall call you, and shall say, ^a xlvi. 3, 4. Jon. i. 8. ^b 32. xxxiv. 5. xxxvii. 12. *What is your occupation?

34 That ye shall say, ^b Thy servants' trade hath been about cattle, from our youth even until now, both we and also our fathers: that ye may dwell in the land of Goshen; ^c for every shepherd is an abomination unto the Egyptians. ^c xliii. 32. Ez. viii. 26.

CHAP. XLVII.

Joseph presents, first his brethren, and then his father, to Pharaoh; with the conference between them, 1—12. The terms on which Joseph dealt out corn to the Egyptians: and the compact which he finally settled between Pharaoh and his subjects; with their grateful acknowledgements, 13—26. Jacob on the approach of death calls Joseph, and gives orders concerning his burial, 27—31.

^a xlv. 16. xlv. 31. THEN ^a Joseph came and told Pharaoh, and said, My father and my brethren, and their flocks, and their herds,

'great things; but if not, it becomes us, having food and raiment, therewith to be content.' Fuller.—Abomination (34). Note, xliii. 32. This would more effectually keep them distinct and separate from the Egyptians.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

In those events and undertakings, which appear most joyful, there are probable consequences involved, which may remind us to "rejoice with trembling;" and warn us not to proceed without seeking counsel, assistance, and a blessing from the Lord. Attending on his ordinances, and receiving the pledges of his covenant-love, we may expect his presence and that peace which it confers: and when we are satisfied that we are his people, and in the path which he marks out to us, being assured of his supports and consolations, we may not only enter into the iron furnace of bondage and oppression, but into the fiery furnace of persecution.—In all our removals, we need to be reminded of our removal out of this world: and though it is desirable to be surrounded at the eve of life with our beloved friends and children; yet nothing can encourage us to fear no evil, when "passing through the valley of the shadow of death," but the presence of Jesus Christ to receive our souls.—Be our families never so large, God's providence can with perfect ease support them: and be repenting sinners never so numerous, "the unsearchable riches of Christ" are sufficient, and in Heaven there is room enough, for them all.—However generous our friends may be, it is prudent to be modest, and not to give them any ground to suspect us of encroaching, or to complain that we are burdensome. In general the further from courts, the nearer to Canaan; and however obscure and despised our lot be, if it prove advantageous to our souls, and favourable to communion with God, we ought to be and all that they have, are come out of the land of Canaan; and behold they are ^b in the land of Goshen.

2 And he took some of his brethren, even five men, ^c and presented them unto Pharaoh.

3 And Pharaoh said unto his brethren, ^d What is your occupation? And they said unto Pharaoh, Thy servants are shepherds, both we and also our fathers.

4 They said moreover unto Pharaoh, ^e For to sojourn in the land are we come; for thy servants have no pasture for their flocks, ^f for the famine is sore in the land of Canaan: now therefore, we pray thee, ^g let thy servants dwell in the land of Goshen.

5 And Pharaoh spake unto Joseph, saying, Thy father and thy brethren are come unto thee:

6 The land of Egypt ^h is before thee; in the best of the land make thy father and thy brethren to dwell, in the land

^b xlvi. 10. xlv. 29. Ex. viii. 22. ix. 26.

^c 2 Cor. iv. 14. Col. i. 28. Jude 24.

^d xlvi. 33, 34. Am. vii. 14. 5. Jon. i. 8. 2 Thes. iii. 10.

^e xii. 10. xv. 13. Deut. xxvi. 5. Ps. cv. 23. 1s. lii. 4. Acts vii. 6. f xliii. 1. Acts vii. 11.

^g xlv. 34.

^h xlii. 9. xx. 15. xxxiv. 10. xlv. 18—20.

thankful for it. Our lives are in the Lord's hands, whatever we wish and desire; and though we should be willing to die, yet we should be also willing to wait his time. In the mean while, if even the abhorrence of the world keep us separate from it, we have cause to rejoice and be glad on that account.

NOTES.

CHAP. XLVII. V. 2. Joseph, by thus presenting his brethren, both shewed respect to Pharaoh, and intimated that he would do nothing without his knowledge and approbation: he also put honour upon them, manifesting that he was not ashamed of them, though now his inferiors; and that he did not harbour resentment against them.

V. 3. Pharaoh took it for granted, that Jacob's sons had some peculiar occupation; and, though a shepherd was had in abomination among the Egyptians, they did not attempt to conceal their employment. Thus they shewed a hearty concurrence with Joseph, in choosing to remain in their obscure, but more safe and advantageous employment. (Note, xlv. 32—34.)

V. 4. Probably, Jacob and his sons only meant to continue in Egypt till the famine was over; but, meeting with kind treatment, they remained there: at length another king arose; and they were detained in bondage, contrary to their intention, but according to the purpose and prediction of God.

V. 6. Pharaoh seems to have been fully sensible of Joseph's excellent services, and very grateful for them. He would, however, have none but men of activity advanced even as shepherds. It does not seem to have been the custom at that time, for kings to prefer the dependents of great statesmen, out of compliment to them, whether fit for preferment or not. It is at least evident, that Joseph of Goshen let them dwell: and if thou knowest any men of activity amongst them, then make them rulers over my cattle.

1 1 Sam. xxi. 7.
1 Chr. xxvii. 29
—31. 2 Chr. xxvi.
10. Prov. xxii.
29.

7 ¶ And Joseph brought in Jacob his father, and set him before Pharaoh: and Jacob blessed Pharaoh.

κ See on 10.

8 And Pharaoh said unto Jacob, How old art thou?

* Heb. How many are the days of thy life? 9.

9 And Jacob said unto Pharaoh, The days of the years of my pilgrimage are an hundred and thirty years: few and evil have the days of the years of my life been, and have not attained unto the days of the years of the life of my fathers, in the days of their pilgrimage.

1 1 Chr. xxix. 15.
Ps. xxxix. 12.
cxix. 19-54. Heb.
xi. 9-16. xiii.
14. 1 Pet. ii. 11.
m Job xiv. 1. Ps.
xxxix. 9. lxxxix.
47. 48. xc. 9-12.
Jam. iv. 14.
n 28. v. 27. xl. 11. 24.
25. xxv. 7. xxxv.
28. l. 26. Ex. vii.
7. Deut. xxxiv.
7. Josh. xxiv. 29.
2 Sam. xix. 32-
35. Job xlii. 16.
17.

did not require, and Pharaoh did not propose, neither did the sons of Jacob expect, such advancement: they only desired pasturage for their flocks. If the rich and great are disposed to overlook and neglect their poor relatives; these on the other hand are often equally culpable, in expecting such things from them, as it would be very improper to confer. The cattle of the Egyptians, as it appears from the subsequent history, were very numerous, and highly valued; (16. Ex. ix. 3-6. 19-21;) nor is there any intimation, that they did not use them for the same purposes as other nations did; or that at so early a period they worshipped them. Perhaps shepherds were held in abomination in Egypt, only as a low and vulgar set of men, compared with princes, sages, and soldiers.

V. 7. With the gravity of old age and the piety of a believer, and even with the authority of a patriarch and a prophet, Jacob pronounced a blessing upon Pharaoh: that is, he solemnly supplicated the Lord to bestow his blessing upon him. Thus he acted in character, as not ashamed of his religion, and as desirous of expressing his gratitude to the benefactor of himself and family, and of recompensing him in the only way in which he was able. And though Jacob thus in some sense assumed the superiority, Pharaoh seems to have been well pleased with this token of his regard; having, in the character and usefulness of Joseph, abundantly experienced the value of the blessing of Jacob's God, and perhaps being himself favourably disposed to his worship.

V. 8. Pharaoh observed somewhat peculiarly venerable in the aspect of Jacob; and conceiving perhaps that he was older than he really was, (to which appearance his various hardships and trials might contribute,) he was curious to know his age.

V. 9. We have here a very uncommon answer to a very common question; but it is an answer full of pertinent instruction and admonition. Jacob calls his life a pilgrimage; that is, the sojourning of a stranger in a foreign country, or his journey home to his own country; intimating that he was not at home on earth, and that his habitation, his inheritance, and his treasures were in heaven, whither he was daily journeying, in the bent and 10 And Jacob blessed Pharaoh, and went out from before Pharaoh.

o xiv. 19. Num. vi.
23-27. Dent.
xxxii. 1. Ruth
ii. 4. 2 Sam. viii.
10. xix. 30. Pa.
cxix. 46. cxxix.
8. Heb. vii. 7.

11 And Joseph placed his father and his brethren, and gave them a possession in the land of Egypt, in the best of the land, in the land of P Rameses, as Pharaoh had commanded.

p Ex. i. 11. xii.
37.

12 And Joseph nourished his father and his brethren, and all his father's household with bread according to their families.

q Matt. xv. 4-6.
Mark. vi. 10-13.
1 Tim. v. 4. 8.

13 ¶ And there was no bread in all the land: for the famine was very sore, so that the land of Egypt and all the land of Canaan fainted by reason of the famine.

t Or, as a little child is nourished. Heb. according to the little ones. 1 24.
1 Thes. ii. 7.

14 And Joseph gathered up all the r xli. 30. 1 Kings

xviii. 5. Jer. xiv.
1-6. Lam. ii.
19. 20. iv. 9.
s Jer. ix. 12. Joel
i. 10-12.
t xlii. 55.

desires of his heart, and the tenour of his conduct. "For they which say such things confess that they seek a better country, that is, a heavenly." (Note, Heb. xi. 13-16.) He also numbers his life by the days of his years: it consisted of a few years, each year composed of a few days. One day goes, and another, and soon a year is gone: and thus year after year imperceptibly glides away, till life, with its many sorrows and scanty pleasures, comes to an end; just as a wearisome journey gradually is finished, and we arrive at home. Though Jacob had now lived a hundred and thirty years, yet he accounted them but few, in comparison of the lives of his forefathers; and as nothing compared with eternity. They were evil also; not only as the lives of others are, but in that he had had an uncommon share of troubles.—Such an answer, from so venerable a person, could not fail to impress the mind of Pharaoh, and almost to extort the reluctant sigh, by reminding him of the insufficiency and short continuance of all human prosperity and felicity; and that after a life of vanity and vexation, man goes down into the grave, from the throne as well as from the cottage; and that nothing can make him happy, but the prospect of an everlasting home in heaven, after the close of his short weary pilgrimage on earth.

V. 11. Those parts of Egypt which lay low, might perhaps afford good pasturage, especially in the plains near the Nile; though the upland countries, and most parts of Canaan especially, were totally burnt up during the years of famine.—'There was more grass in the marshes and fenny parts of Egypt, when the Nile did not overflow enough to make plenty of corn.' Augustine.

V. 12. Besides pasturage for the flocks and herds, Joseph supplied the several branches of his father's family with corn, by a stated allowance, according to the number of their households.

V. 13. Fainted.] A strong metaphor, taken from the fainting or languor of an individual for want of sustenance, and applied, in a manner emphatically descriptive, to the distress of the whole nation. This was about the end of the third year of the famine.

V. 14. Into Pharaoh's house.] None of it being appropriated to Joseph's own use, or given in presents or pen money that was found in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, for the corn which they bought: and ^u Joseph brought the money into Pharaoh's house.

^u Luke xvi. 1, 2. 10—12. 1 Cor. iv. 2. 1 Pet. iv. 10.

15 And when money failed in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, all the Egyptians came unto Joseph, and said, ^v Give us bread: for why should we die in thy presence? for the money faileth.

^v 19. Ps. xxxvii. 3. 1s. xxxiii. 16. Matt. vi. 11.

16 And Joseph said, Give your cattle; and I will give you for your cattle, if money fail.

17 And they brought their cattle unto Joseph: and Joseph gave them bread in exchange ^x for horses, and for the flocks, and for the cattle of the herds, and for the asses; and he ^y fed them with bread, for all the cattle, for that year.

^x Ex. ix. 3. 1 Kings x. 26. 1s. xxxvi. 1.

^y Heb. led them.

18 When that year was ended, they came unto him the second year, and said unto him, ^z We will not hide it from my lord, how that our money is spent, my lord also hath our herds of cattle; there is not ought left in the sight of my lord, but our bodies and our lands.

^z 2 Kings vi. 28

19 Wherefore shall we die before thine eyes, both we and our land? ^a Buy us and our land for bread, and we and our land will be servants unto Pharaoh: ^b and give us seed, that we may live and not die, that the land be not desolate.

^a Neh. v. 2, 3. Job i. 4. Lam. v. 6. 9. Matt. xvi. 26. Phil. iii. 8, 9.

^b See on 23

20 And Joseph bought all the land of Egypt for Pharaoh; for the Egyptians sold every man his field, because the famine prevailed over them: so the land became Pharaoh's.

21 And as for the people he removed them ^b to cities, from one end of the borders of Egypt, even to the other end thereof.

^b xli. 48.

22 Only the land of the ^c priests bought he not: ^d for the priests had a portion assigned them of Pharaoh, and did eat their portion which Pharaoh gave them; wherefore they sold not their lands.

^c Or, princes. xli. 45, 50. marg. ^d Ezra vii. 24.

23 Then Joseph said unto the people, Behold, I have ^e bought you this day, and your land, for Pharaoh: lo, ^f here is seed for you, and ye shall sow the land.

^e xli. 27. xlv. 6. Ps. cvii. 36, 37. Prov. xii. 11. xiii. 23. 1s. xxviii. 24. 25. lv. 10. 2 Cor ix. 10.

24 And it shall come to pass in the increase, that you shall give ^g the fifth part unto Pharaoh, and four parts shall be your own, for seed of the field, and for your food, and for them of your households, and for food for your little ones.

^g xlii. 34. Lev xxvii. 32. 1 Sam. viii. 15—17. Ps. cxli. 5.

25 And they said, ^h Thou hast saved our lives: ⁱ let us find grace in the sight of my lord, and we will be Pharaoh's servants.

^h xlii. 45. marg. xlv. 6—8. Prov. xi. 25, 27. ⁱ xxxiii. 15. Ruth ii. 18.

26 And Joseph made it a law over the land of Egypt unto this day, that Pharaoh should have the fifth part; ^j except the land of the ^k priests only, which became not Pharaoh's.

^j 22. ^k Or, princes.— See on 22.

27 ¶ And Israel dwelt in the land of Egypt in the country of Goshen: and they had possessions therein, and ^l grew, and multiplied exceedingly.

^l xliii. 16. xxvi. 4. xxviii. 14. xlv. 3. Ex. i. 7. Ps. cvii. 38. Zech. x. 8. Acts vii. 17.

sions to his family.—Thus the people were sustained during the fourth and fifth years.

V. 17. Horses.] This is the first time that horses are mentioned in scripture. The patriarchs, as far as we can learn, had no horses, nor are any mentioned among the possessions of Israel when they left Egypt. (Ex. xii. 38.)

V. 19. Give us seed.] As this was the seventh year of the famine, and as every particular had hitherto accorded to Joseph's prediction, the people fully expected an end to the calamity. Probably, the Nile had begun again to overflow; and therefore they wanted corn for seed, as well as for bread.

V. 21. This verse may only mean, that Joseph removed the people from the distant villages to the cities, where the corn was stored up, in all parts of the land, for the convenience of supplying them with food: but, if the common interpretation be adhered to, the state of affairs in Egypt might require this regulation, as conclusive to publick tranquillity, and to the more equitable distribution of property.

V. 22. Priests.] This word is sometimes translated princes; and seems here used, not only for the ministers of the superstitious worship of the Egyptians, but for the officers of state, and for their wise men and diviners, who, having their maintenance from Pharaoh, were not under the necessity of selling their lands.

V. 23—26. Adverting to the words of the people, Joseph says, "I have bought you:" but it is evident he took no advantage of this part of the agreement. It does not appear, that even their political liberty was materially abridged in consequence: but they held their lands, either their former estates, or others assigned to them, by a new tenure; on condition of paying one-fifth of the clear produce as a constant tax to Pharaoh: and this was made a law, which remained in force when Moses wrote his history, probably above two hundred years after. This reserve

28 And Jacob lived in the land of Egypt ¹ seventeen years: so ² the whole age of Jacob was an hundred forty and seven years.

¹ xxxvii. 2.
² Heb. the days of the years of his life. 8. marg. 9. Ps. xc. 10. 12. cxix. 84.

29 And the time drew nigh that Israel ^m must die: and he called his son Joseph, and said unto him, If now I have found grace in thy sight, ⁿ put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh, m 9. 1. 24. Deut. xxxi. 14. 2 Sam. vii. 12. xiv. 14. 1 Kings ii. 1. Job vii. 1. xiv. 14. xxx. 23. Heb. ix. 27.

n See on xxiv 2 and ^o deal kindly and truly with me; ^p bury me not, I pray thee, in Egypt.

o xxiv. 49.
p l. 25. Acts vii. 15. 16. Heb. xl. 22.
q xxiii. 19. xxv. 9. xlix. 21-32. l. 5. —14. 28. m. xix. 87. 1 Kings xiii. 22. Neh. ii. 3. 5.

30 But I will ^q lie with my fathers, and thou shalt carry me out of Egypt, and bury me in their burying-place. And he said, I will do as thou hast said.

31 And he said, Swear unto me: And he sware unto him. ^r And Israel bowed himself upon the bed's head.

r xviii. 2. 1 Kings i. 47. Heb. xi. 21.

seems to have been made instead of all other taxes, and it does not appear to have been at all oppressive; it is indeed evident, that the people did not consider it as a hardship, but the contrary.—The absurd opinion, that Joseph reduced the Egyptians to personal slavery, is contrary to the whole tenour of the narration, and not the least trace of it can be discerned in the subsequent history. But it seems to have originated with those, who are glad of any pretext to criminate approved characters of Scripture, as their only way of answering the arguments which demonstrate it to be divinely inspired.—Joseph was raised up by the Lord for this very service, and he is every where commended in it, and no where censured: the friends of revealed truth should, therefore, be very cautious, how they start objections to his conduct, of which at this distance of time and place they cannot be competent judges. The customs and maxims of different regions and ages are exceedingly dissimilar. No doubt, the government of Egypt, both before and after this transaction, was far more arbitrary than Britons would approve. It is manifest however, that the Egyptians were entirely satisfied with Joseph's management, both at the time and long after; and regarded him with the warmest gratitude as a publick benefactor. And though we may not perceive the reason of some arrangements; yet the whole transaction is strongly marked with such equity, benevolence, disinterestedness, and impartiality, as have seldom, if ever, been equalled. Joseph acted between Pharaoh and his subjects in the fear of God, and without any undue attachment to the interests of his brethren, or even of his own children. (Note, xviii. 5.)—It was also necessary that the corn should be sold, not given; nay, that it should be sold at a high price: otherwise it would have been improvidently used; and in that case a destructive famine must have followed, before the end of the seven years; and to complete the misery, the seed to sow the land might not have been reserved. Raising the price of corn, in a real scarcity, by increasing the difficulty of obtaining it, reduces a nation to short allowance, and so preserves the inhabitants from destruction.—Joseph, by giving the Egyptians seed, encouraged them to cultivate their land, and sanctioned, in his prophetic character, their expectation of a crop.—In Egypt the harvest follows the seed-time much more closely than in this country; so that hope now dawned on the afflicted inhabitants.

V. 29, 30. Jacob was sensible that death was speedily approaching, and he greatly desired the presence of his beloved Joseph, who lived at court, while himself was at a considerable distance; for not even affection to his parent could induce Joseph to relax his unremitting attention to the important duties of his station.—Jacob's dying request, "not to be buried in Egypt," evidenced his belief of the Lord's promise concerning Canaan, of which land he would thus take and keep possession. It also intimated, that he desired to have his lot after death, not with the Egyptians, but with his fathers Abraham and Isaac, in that heavenly rest which Canaan typified.

V. 31. Israel bowed, &c.] In an act of solemn worship, yet in feebleness thus supporting himself, and expressing his full satisfaction and his willingness to leave the world. (Note, Heb. xi. 21.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—10.

The kindness of liberal benefactors, so far from encouraging us to encroach upon them, should remind us to shew them all proper attention and deference: and in attending to some peculiar relative duties, we should look round upon the whole circle, and so proportion them as not to entrench upon others.—When Joseph selected five from his eleven brethren to present before Pharaoh, he doubtless had good reasons for his conduct, though not made known to us, nor probably to them. Thus the Lord Jesus, in dispensing his special benefits as he sees good, acts in perfect wisdom, though we are not acquainted with the grounds of his distinguishing grace: and thus, neither despising our meanness, nor ashamed even in his highest exaltation "to call us brethren," nor resenting our past misconduct, however base, he presents us, when we submit and believe in him, for acceptance before his Father's throne.—Industry in any honest employment is always creditable; and indeed all, who are not in some way diligent, are worthless encumbrances on the community. Nor ought a man, in compliance with fashion or prevalent notions, to be ashamed of the lowest useful occupations; for nothing that is not sinful is disgraceful, in the sight either of God, or of wise and good men.—It is generally best to abide with God in our own calling; for what the world calls mending ourselves, is frequently little better than renouncing peace, content, and a situation favourable to the prosperity of our souls, for gilded cares, encumbrances, and manifold temptations.—Indeed, our life is but a pilgrimage: few and evil are the days of it; and provided they be spent with God, and to his glory, the rest is of very little consequence. If we have a prospect that, when we go hence and are no more seen, we shall go home to our Father's house, we shall not want, and ought not to desire, the paltry interests of the world; why then should we burden ourselves with unavailing cares and sorrows? Why covet riches, shortly to be left behind? Why engage in projects to be left unfinished? or aspire at distinctions which death will terminate? We do not act thus on a journey, when our heart is at home: the conveniences or inconveniences, which we

CHAP. XLVIII.

Jacob being sick is visited by Joseph with his two sons, 1, 2. He adopts Joseph's sons as his own children; with an affectionate mention of Rachel's death, 3—8. He blesses Joseph and them, prophetically preferring the younger to the elder, 9—20. He predicts the return of his family to Canaan, and assigns a portion there to Joseph, 21, 22.

AND it came to pass after these things, that one told Joseph, Behold, ^a thy father is sick: and he took with him ^b his two sons, Manasseh and Ephraim.

^a John xi. 3.

^b xli. 50—52. xlvii. 20. 1. 23. Job xlii. 16. Ps. cxxv. ii. 6.

2 And one told Jacob, and said, Behold, thy son Joseph cometh unto thee: and Israel ^c strengthened himself, and sat upon the bed.

^c Deut. iii. 28. 1 Sam. xxiii. 16. Neh. ii. 16. Ps. xlii. 3. Prov. xxiii. 3. Eph. vi. 10.

3 And Jacob said unto Joseph, ^d God Almighty ^e appeared to me at ^f Luz in the land of Canaan, and blessed me, ^d xvii. 1. xxviii. 3. xxxv. 11. Ex. vi. 3. Rev. xxi. 22. ^e xxviii. 12—19. xxxv. 6, 7. 12. Hos. xii. 4.

4 And said unto me, Behold, ^g I will make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, and I will make of thee a multitude of peomeet with, but little affect us to retard our progress; we do not want to erect stately mansions, or to lay up wealth, in a country which we are leaving, and to which we shall return no more; nor do we encumber ourselves with those things which we are not in need of, and which must be left behind when we embark for our native country.—“Godliness with contentment is great gain: for we brought nothing into this world; and it is certain we can carry nothing out; and having food and raiment, let us be therewith content.” But oh! how miserable are they, who have all their good things during the few and evil days of this present life, and whose last comfort must expire with their dying breath!—Let us then “give diligence to make our calling and election sure;” and, as our days are likely to be so much fewer than Jacob's, let us often ask ourselves seriously, how old we are: that our life may not vanish unimproved, nor death approach while we are unprepared for it. “A hoary head is a crown of glory,” only “when it is found in the way of righteousness;” and they whose consistency of character will bear them out, need neither be ashamed nor afraid to bear testimony for God before the greatest princes, who, if wise, will highly value their pious prayers.

^f Judg. i. 23. ^g xii. 2. xlii. 15. 16. xxiii. 17. xxv. 4. xxviii. 13.

V. 11—31.

They who have been exalted, cannot too carefully avoid the appearance of despising their former equals; and they who have been injured, the appearance of resenting former ill treatment: and when we receive kindness from men, we should acknowledge the kindness of God in raising up such friends.—A useful life consists in a constant succession of duties: exalted stations, properly filled, call for unremitting labour and attention; and they who occupy them need great wisdom, firmness, disinterestedness, and impartiality, to ward off envy, to silence reproach, and to keep a clear conscience; rendering to God, to the prince, and to the people, their respective dues. But if Providence calls a man to such a station, he ought to seek grace sufficient for it, and expect that God will bestow it upon him.—If withholding the rain from heaven, or other customary advantages, so soon reduces the most opulent nations to poverty and distress; how absolute must our dependence be upon Him, whom we so often wantonly offend and foolishly forget! And if Joseph extorted this confession from the Egyptians, “Thou hast saved our lives;” what multitudes will gratefully say to Jesus at last, “Thou hast saved our souls from the most tremendous ‘destruction, and in the season of uttermost distress!’—The Egyptians were willing to part with all their property, and even their liberty, for the saving of their lives: can it then be too much, for us to count all but loss, and part with all, at his command and for his sake, who will thus both save our souls, and give us a hundred fold even in this present world? And surely, if saved by Christ, we shall willingly become the devoted servants of him and his Father, whose glory he consults in harmony with our salvation.—Yet they who lived on Joseph's provision, and even Jacob who was so dear to him, must die; but Jesus gives us the true Bread, that we may eat and live for ever. To him then let us apply, and devote ourselves to his service; and when we draw near to death, he who supported us through life, will meet us, and assure us of an everlasting inheritance. Then, on the very bed of death, we may bow down and worship with joyful hearts, and breathe out our spirits into his faithful hands, with the most entire composure and satisfaction.

NOTES.

CHAP. XLVIII. V. 1. As Jacob did not appear to be immediately in the state of a dying person, Joseph had returned to his important employments: but being informed by a messenger of his relapse or increasing sickness, and expecting his death, he went to visit him, and took his two sons, Manasseh and Ephraim, with him; either by Jacob's express desire, or in hopes that the solemn scene, together with the dying benediction and discourse of the venerable Patriarch, would make a useful impression upon their minds. They were at this time above twenty years of age.

V. 2. Strengthened himself, &c.] Jacob, being animated by the presence of Joseph and his sons, exerted all his strength to improve this last opportunity. He was also endued with inward strength, and raised above himself by the Holy Spirit, that he might utter those prophecies with which he was inspired.

V. 3, 4. Jacob had called Luz by the name of Beth-el. (xxviii. 19.) The Lord had twice appeared to him there; but he especially referred to the time when he fled from Esau. That unexpected visit of a gracious God, in his extreme distress, could never be erased from his memory: and, as he had already experienced in a great degree the fulfilment of the promises then made to him, he mentioned them with much thankfulness, before he pronounced the subsequent blessings on his posterity.

ple; and will give this land to thy seed after thee for an^h everlasting possession.
 5 And now thy ⁱ two sons, Ephraim and Manassch, which were born unto thee in the land of Egypt, before I came unto thee into Egypt, ^k are mine; as ^l Reuben and Simeon, they shall be mine.

6 And thy issue which thou begettest after them, shall be thine, and shall be called after the name of their brethren in their inheritance.

7 And as for me, when I came from Padan, ^m Rachel died by me in the land of Canaan, in the way: when yet there was but a little way to come unto ⁿ Ephrath: and I buried her there in the way of Ephrath, the same is Bethlechem.

8 ¶ And Israel beheld Joseph's sons, and said, Who are these?

9 And Joseph said unto his father, They are ^o my sons, whom God hath given me in this place: And he said, Bring them, I pray thee, unto me, and I will ^p bless them.

h xvii. 8.
 i xli. 50-52. xlvii. 29. Josh. xiv. 4. xvi. xvii.
 k Lev. xx. 26. 1s. xliii. 1. Ez. xvi. 8. Mal. iii. 17. 2 Cor. vi. 18. Eph. i. 5. 1 Chr. v. 1, 2.

m xxxv. 9. 16-19.

n Ruth i. 2. 1 Sam. i. 1. xvii. 12. Mic. v. 2.

o xxx. 2. xxxiii. 5. Ruth iv. 11-14. 1 Sam. i. 20. 27. ii. 20, 21. Ps. cxvii. 3, 18. viii. 18. lvi. 3-5. p xxvii. 4. 28, 29. 34-40. xxviii. 3. 4. xlix. 28. Deut. xxxiii. 1. Heb. xi. 21.

10 (Now ^q the eyes of Israel were ^r dim for age, so that he could not see.) And he brought them near unto him; and he ^s kissed them, and embraced them.

11 And Israel said unto Joseph, ^t I had not thought to see thy face; and lo, God hath shewed me also thy seed.

12 And Joseph brought them out from between his knees, and he ^u bowed himself with his face to the earth.

13 And Joseph took them both, Ephraim in his right hand toward Israel's left hand, and Manasseh in his left hand towards Israel's right hand, and brought them near unto him.

14 And Israel stretched out his right hand, and ^v laid it upon Ephraim's head, who was the younger, and his left hand upon Manasseh's head, ^w guiding his hands wittingly; for Manasseh was the first-born.

15 And he ^x blessed Joseph, and said, God, before whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac ^y did walk, the God q xxvii. 1. 1 Sam. iii. 2. iv. 10. Heb. hebr. 1a. vi. 10. lix. 1.

 r xxvii. 27. xxxi. 55. xiv. 15. 1 Kings xix. 20.
 s xxxvii. 23. xlii. 36. xiv. 26.

t xxvii. 2. xxx. 1. xxxii. 7. xxxdiii. 3. xlii. 8. Ez. xx. 12.

u Num. viii. 10. 18. Deut. xxxiv. 9. Matt. xix. 13. 15. Mark vi. 5. xvi. 18. Luke iv. 40. xii. 13. Acts vi. 6. viii. 17-19. xii. 8. 1 Tim. iv. 14. v. 22. x. 19. y Heb. xi. 21. x v. 22-24. vi. 9. xvii. 1. xxiv. 40. Jer. viii. 2. Col. ii. 6. 1 Thes. ii. 12.

V. 5. Thus Jacob adopted Ephraim and Manasseh, that being numbered with his own sons, they might, as heads of distinct tribes, have a proportionable share in the inheritance of Canaan. This he spake by the Spirit of prophecy.—Considering Joseph's rank and prospects in Egypt, a carnal mind would have regarded this remote inheritance, with the rest of Jacob's sons, as a very inconsiderable matter. But it does not appear that Joseph either purchased estates, or amassed wealth in Egypt, for his sons; and this, not only because he was disinterested, but because he was a believer, and was unwilling to attach his children to Egypt; desiring, on the contrary, to lead their thoughts to Canaan, and to the inheritance of the children of Israel, as their proper portion. Jacob also wished them to consider, that to be numbered with his sons, who was the heir of the promises made to Abraham and Isaac, and who had been named Israel, because he prevailed with God, and would certainly prevail with man, was far more honourable and desirable, than to be the richest of Pharaoh's courtiers. Probably, this led them to unite interests with the Israelites, and to adhere to the worship of God, in preference to the Egyptians and their superstitions, with which, in their station, they were peculiarly in danger of being infected.—Reuben and Simeon were the two eldest sons of Jacob.

V. 6. It does not appear, that Joseph had any other children; but, according to this limitation, if he should have, they must be incorporated with the tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh.

V. 7. The manner, in which this is introduced, intimates how much Jacob laid that stroke to heart. He seemed still to feel the anguish of it, and to assign it as a reason of his peculiar attachment to Rachel's posterity. This tender mention to Joseph of his beloved parent must have been peculiarly affecting.—The circumstance of Rachel's dying in child-birth, while on a journey, explained the reason, why she was not buried in the cave of Machpelah, where Jacob desired to be buried with the rest of his family; and it was introduced no doubt for that purpose.

V. 8. Jacob could discern that two persons besides Joseph were present; but he was so dim sighted, that he could not certainly tell who they were (10).

V. 9. "Whom God hath given me, in this place," whither I was sold as a slave, where I was long imprisoned, and where I have received so many mercies.—The piety of this language should not pass unnoticed.

V. 12. He bowed, &c.] Joseph thus shewed, that his external greatness did not render him forgetful of the respect due to his father, or of the veneration to which his age and piety entitled him; and evinced the high value which he put upon the adoption of his children, to be partakers of the promised blessings.

V. 14. Though Manasseh was the first-born, and Jacob knew it; yet under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, he by this token gave Ephraim the preference.—'God was wont from the beginning to prefer the younger. . . to shew that divine benefits were not confined to the order of nature, but dispensed freely, according to God's most wise goodness.' Theodore.—Laying on of hands is here first mentioned in Scripture. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 15. Jacob first blessed Joseph, and then his sons;

^a xxxvii. 20. Ps. xxxvii. 3. Ec. ii. 24. 25. v. 12. 18. vi. 7. Is. xxxiii. 16. Matt. vi. 25—34. 1 Tim. vi. 6—10.
^b xvi. 7—13. xxxviii. 15. xxxi. 11—13. 24. Ex. iii. 2—6. xxxii. 20. Judg. ii. 1—4. vi. 21—24. xlii. 21. 22. Ps. xxxiv. 7. Hos. xii. 4. 5. Mal. iii. 1. Acts vii. 30—35.
^c Matt. vi. 13. John xvii. 15. Rom. viii. 23. 2 Tim. iv. 18. Tit. ii. 14. d 5. xxxii. 28. Deut. xxxviii. 10. Jer. xiv. 9. Am. ix. 12. Acts xv. 17.
^e Heb. as fishes increase. i. 21, 22.
^f Ex. i. 7. Num. xxvi. 28—37. Deut. xxxiii. 17. Josh. xvii. 17.
^g Heb. was evil in his eyes. xxxviii. 6. Num. xxxi. 34. marg. 1 Kings xvi. 25.
^h xix. 18. Ex. x. 11. Matt. xxv. 9. Acts x. 14. xi. 8.

which ^a fed me all my life long unto this day,

16 The ^b Angel which ^c redeemed me from all evil, bless the lads; and let ^d my name be named on them, and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac; and let them ^e grow into ^f a multitude in the midst of the earth.

17 And when Joseph saw that his father laid his right hand upon the head of Ephraim, it ^g displeased him: and he held up his father's hand to remove it from Ephraim's head unto Manasseh's head.

18 And Joseph said unto his father, ^h Not so, my father: ⁱ for this is the first-born; put thy right hand upon his head.

19 And his father refused, and said,

^h I know it, my son, I know it; he also shall become a people, and he also shall be great: but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become ^a a multitude of nations.

20 And he blessed them that day, saying, In thee shall ⁱ Israel bless, saying, God make thee as Ephraim, and as Manasseh: ^k and he set Ephraim before Manasseh.

21 And Israel said unto Joseph, ^l Behold, I die: but ^m God shall be with you, and bring you again into the land of your fathers.

22 Moreover, I have ⁿ given to thee one portion above thy brethren, which I took out of the hand of ^o the Amorite with my sword and with my bow.

h xvii. 20, 21. xxv. 23. Num. i. 33—35. ii. 19—21. Deut. xxxiii. 17. Is. vii. 17. Ez. xxxvii. 10.
 i Heb. fulness.
 i xxiv. 60. Ruth iv. 11, 12.
 k Num. ii. 18—21. vii. 48. 54. x. 22. 23. xiii. 8. 11. 16.
 l 11. 24. Ps. cxlvi. 3. 4. Zech. i. 5. 6. Acts xiii. 36. Heb. vii. 3. 8. 22—25.
 m xxxviii. 15. xlv. 4. Deut. xxxi. 8. Josh. i. 5. 9. iii. 7. Ps. xviii. 46.
 n xxxiii. 19. Josh. xxiv. 32. 1 Chr. v. 2. Jolin iv. 5. o xv. 16. xxxiv. 28. Josh. xvii. 14—18.

or he blessed Joseph in blessing his sons.—Abraham and Isaac walked before God, by habitually through faith, maintaining communion with him in his ordinances, devoting themselves to his service, acting as under his eye, depending on his protection, and rejoicing in his loving kindness and mercy. (Note, v. 21—24.)—Jacob had often been in outward straits, and especially with his numerous posterity had been in great distress by famine; but God had always provided for him, and had sent Joseph before-hand to make preparation for him in Egypt. There God had fed him seventeen years in his infirm old age by Joseph, just as long as he had fed Joseph by Jacob's hand in his infancy and youth; thus enabling the son to requite his parent.—This divine interposition was therefore very properly introduced: and as Jacob had been fed, he did not complain, though he had not been enriched, but greatly impoverished.

V. 16. Jacob here called “God, before whom Abraham and Isaac had walked,” and who had “fed him all his life long,” “the Angel.” As God does not give his glory to the creatures, we may be sure that such things were not spoken of a created angel. This is one proof therefore among many, that he, who is by Malachi called “the Messenger,” or Angel, “of the Covenant,” even Jesus Christ, was known by the Patriarchs to be distinct from the Father, yet One with him; and that as such he manifested himself to them, and was worshipped by them. (Notes, xxxii. 30. Hos. xii. 3—6.) The deliverances from misery and danger of sinful men, who believe in him, according to his word, by the interposition of God, coming through the ransom of the blood of Christ, are frequently in Scripture entitled redemptions. Jacob, now closing his eyes in death, joyfully considered himself as “redeemed from all evil;” and therefore expected henceforth good, and nothing but good.—He prayed for his grandsons, that they might stand in the place, inherit the privileges, and walk in the steps, of their progenitors; but especially, that his new name, ISRAEL, “might be named on them.”

(Rev. ii. 17. iii. 12.) This would be a NAME of nobler import than any which Egypt could afford.

V. 17—20. Joseph was not satisfied with his father's conduct; supposing that he was influenced by a groundless partiality, and not by the guidance of the prophetick Spirit.—The pre-eminence belonged to Manasseh by general custom, and thus it was afterwards commanded in the law: yet in many parts of Scripture we have instances of the younger being preferred to the elder. The law teaches us what is just and proper for us to do; but a sovereign God, in conferring unmerited favour, claims an indisputable right of “doing what he will with his own.” He however always exercises it in perfect equity, faithfulness, and wisdom.—Jacob blessed the sons of Joseph in faith, and in consequence of an immediate revelation; and the prediction was fully accomplished in their subsequent history. (Note, xlix. 22—26.)

V. 22. Jacob first bought this piece of ground of Hamor: but probably after the slaughter of the Shechemites, the Amorites seized upon it; and afterwards he recovered it by force of arms, in a way, and at a time, of which we are not informed. Though it does not appear that he or his sons, at this time or long after, had any advantage from it; yet in faith he bequeathed it to Joseph, as an accession to the portion which would be assigned by lot to his posterity, when put in possession of Canaan.—Here Joseph's bones were at length deposited. (Josh. xxiv. 32.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—8.

The death-beds of eminent believers often afford most instructive lessons. “This is the end of all men, and the living will lay it to heart;” and such scenes, with the prayers and counsels of dying persons, are so suited to make serious impressions on the young, the gay, and the prosperous, that we do well in taking our children with us on these occasions, when it can be done with propriety.—It is very desirable, if the Lord please, to bear our dying testimony to the truths of God, to his faithfulness, and to the pleasantness of his ways. One would wish to be strengthened at such a solemn season, to render our last service to our survivors; and we should have regard to this in our whole conduct, that we may so live as to give energy and weight to our dying exhortations: yet, after all, the Spirit dispenseth in this matter severally, as he willeth. Abraham and Isaac died in faith and in peace, yet we have no record of their dying testimony; but Jacob spoke with great copiousness and energy. All true believers are blessed at their death; but all do not depart equally full of spiritual consolation, nor are all alike edifying to the spectators.—The joint inheritance of the promised blessing with the true Israel of God, let who will despise it, is infinitely preferable to the sole inheritance of all the kingdoms of the world: and the best expression of particular affection for our children and relatives consists in recommending to them our God and our religion; and in seeking for them his grace by earnest prayers, that they may be his adopted children and heirs, according to the promise. Though we cannot bless them in Jacob's Spirit of prophecy, yet we may with his spirit of faith; and humbly hope that our prayers for them will be answered, and our exhortations followed, even after we are dead. But alas! too many parents, who profess themselves Christians, act in direct opposition to the example of Joseph, by anxiously and covetously, if not dishonestly, heaping up wealth for their children; as if they meant to teach them to forget the promised land, or to prefer a plenteous portion of this present world!

CHAP. XLIX.

Jacob calls his sons together to receive his prophetic benediction, 1, 2. He addresses each of them by name, and utters predictions concerning their posterity, 3—28. He gives them a charge respecting his burial, and dies, 29—33.

V. 9—22.

There is nothing more comfortable to the dying believer himself, or more edifying and affecting to those around him, than to reflect upon and speak of the promises of God, and his experience of their faithful accomplishment; to be mindful of his Bethels and Peniels, and to acknowledge that, notwithstanding his trials and troubles, all hath been done wisely and graciously. In this view, even temporal mercies and deliverances, yea, our daily bread, when considered as the gift of the great "Angel of the covenant," the purchase of his redemption, and earnest of better things reserved for us, become most precious blessings. And when a dying man can consider himself with confidence as "redeemed from all evil;" as pardoned and sanctified; and about to have done with conflict, labour, sin, temptation, darkness, sorrow, and the danger of any more offending or dishonouring God; and having good, and nothing but good, before him to all eternity; with what comfort may he "walk through the valley of the shadow of death!" And though flesh and heart fail, though the eyes grow dim, and nature sink in decay, how may he triumph in that God, who is "the Strength of his heart, and his Portion for ever!" Having experienced, that the Lord hath been better to him, not only than his desponding fears, but even than his most sanguine hopes,

AND Jacob called unto his sons, and said, ^a Gather yourselves together, that I may tell you that which shall befall you in ^b the last days.

2 Gather yourselves together, and he may cheerfully descend into the grave, leaning on the tried faithfulness of God to his promises.—But would we thus die the death of the righteous, we must "walk before God in the land of the living;" and, in the exercise and obedience of faith, bear the name and tread in the steps of these ancient believers: then, though our comforts are dying all around us, our heavenly Father will be with us, to countervail all losses, and to fulfil his largest promises.—Whatever we think while we live, we shall at death know, that to be "fed all our life long," is all that we can have in this world. Little indeed can those possessions profit us, about which there are so many cares and contentions: and though it may be proper, to adjust with exactness every thing respecting them, lest we bequeath discord to our posterity; yet soon a burying place will be all that the amplest patrimony can afford us.—How poor then are they, who have no other riches! and how miserable is a death-bed to those, who have no well-grounded hope of good, but dreadful apprehensions of evil, and nothing but evil for ever! Let us then fear being put off with a portion in this world, or with a hypocritical religion and a presumptuous hope, which will at last leave us in despair. Rather, whatever we lose or go without, let us "choose that good part, which shall never be taken from us;" and then poverty, pain, reproach, and death itself, will be as so many favourable gales, to waft us to the haven of eternal bliss.

^a Deut. xxxi. 12. 28, 29. xxxiii. 1. Am. iii. 7. Rev. iv. 1. Num. xxiv. 14. Deut. iv. 30. Is. ii. 2. Jer. xxiii. 20. Dan. ii. 28. Acts. ii. 17. 1 Tim. iv. 1. 2 Tim. iii. 1. Heb. i. 2.

NOTES.

CHAP. XLIX. V. 1, 2. All Jacob's sons were still living; and now at his command they collected round his bed, perhaps with their children, to hear his dying words. The repetition of this call might intimate his desire, that they should keep together, and live in harmony as one family, without intermingling with the Egyptians.—This dying address to them should not at all be considered as the expression of his private affection, or resentment, or partiality; but as the language of the Holy Spirit, declaring the purpose of God, respecting the character, circumstances, and situation of the several tribes descended from them, in the last times, or in after ages: for the prophecy evidently looks forward beyond the coming of Christ, and some of it seems to be yet unaccomplished. In this and in some other passages, such as Noah's prophecy, (Notes, ix. 24—27;) and Moses blessing the tribes, (Notes, Deut. xxxiii;) there is so large an extent of prediction comprised in a few words, that brevity will allow us to adduce but a small part of what might properly be said, by way of elucidating them. In many instances, we have only the scriptural history to proceed upon, if we attempt to illustrate the prophecy by its accomplishment: and this mentions but little concerning several of the tribes. Had we a more particular account of the distinguishing character, situation, and success of each tribe, we should probably c Ps. xxxiv. 11. hear, ye sons of Jacob; and °hearken unto Israel your father.

 Prov. l. 8, 9, iv. 1—4. xxiii. 22.
 d xxix. 32. xlviii. 16 Num. i. 20. 1 Chr. v. 3.
 e Deut. xxi. 17. Ps. lxxviii. 51. cv. 36.
 f Jam. i. 6—8. 2 Pet. ii. 14. iii. 16.
 * Heb. do not thou excel.
 g xxxv. 22. Deut. xxvii. 20. 1 Chr. i. 1.
 † Or, my couch is ‡ xxxii. 33, 34 xxxiv. 25—31. Prov. xviii. 9.
 3 ¶ Reuben, thou art^d my first-born, my might, and the beginning of my strength, the excellency of dignity, and the excellency of power.
 4 † Unstable as water, * thou shalt not excel, ‡ because thou wentest up to thy father's bed; then defiledst thou it: ‡ he went up to my couch.
 5 ¶^h Simeon and Levi are brethren:

* instruments of cruelty are in their habitations.
 6 † O my soul, ^k come not thou into their ^l secret; unto their assembly, mine ^m honour, be not thou united: for in their anger they slew ⁿ a man, and in their self-will they ⁱ digged down a wall.
 7 Cursed °be their anger, for it was fierce; and their wrath, for it was cruel: ^p I will divide them in Jacob, and scatter them in Israel.
 i Judg. v. 21. Ps. xliii. 5. 11. xlviii. 5. ciii. 1. Jer. iv. 19. Luke xii. 19. k xxxiv. 30. Ps. xxvi. 4, 5. xxviii. 3. cxxix. 20. 21. cxxix. 19. Prov. i. 11. l Deut. xxvii. 24. Ps. lxiv. 2. m Ps. xvi. 9. xxx. 12. lvii. 8. n xxxiv. 26, 26. ‡ Or, houghed oxen. o 2 Sam. xiii. 22—28. Prov. xxvii. 24, 25. xxvii. 3. p Josh. xix. 1—9. xxi. 1 Chr. iv. 24—31.

perceive a more striking exactness in all these predictions, than we now discern in any of them.

V. 3, 4. Reuben, being Jacob's eldest son, might expect the precedency: as "the excellency of dignity, and the excellency of power," the larger portion of the inheritance, and the principal authority among his brethren, properly belonged to him. But he had incurred a forfeiture; and therefore his father, as it were, arrayed him with the insignia of royalty, that he might the more solemnly and judicially degrade him.—The word rendered unstable, seems to denote especially a haughty, arrogant disposition, which, like swelling waters, overflows or breaks through all restraints, and renders a man altogether unworthy of confidence, and unfit for useful services. Or it may mean an inconstant spirit, which turns this way or the other, at the impulse of every temptation, as water driven by the wind.—(Marg. Ref.)—Some think the word means licentious, but that is not clear. It is used in the following passages, and not elsewhere: Judg. ix. 4. Jer. xxiii. 32. Zeph. iii. 4.—Probably an insolent self-preference, on account of his primogeniture, concurred in emboldening Reuben to commit incest with Bilhah, his father's concubine, as in some respects laying a claim to the inheritance. (2 Sam. xvi. 21. 1 Kings ii. 17. 21, 22.) But, by that very action, he forfeited all the privileges of the distinction which so elated him. Reuben's incest had been committed forty years before, and probably was repented of, and pardoned as to its eternal punishment: yet, being a crime of so infamous a nature, it was on this occasion remembered, and his tribe was degraded on account of it; to testify not only Jacob's, but the Lord's, abhorrence of such abominable practices, for a warning to the Israelites, and to others in all future ages. Thus children actually do suffer for their parents' crimes in this world: but this is for wise, equitable, and merciful reasons; namely, to warn them not to imitate their sins, lest they both be punished themselves, and entail misery on their beloved offspring.—The descendants of Reuben seem to have resembled him in character; and, according to this prediction, his tribe never had the pre-eminence in any respect: nor is any mention made in the subsequent history, of either judge, king, prophet, or renowned person, descended from Reuben; except of Dathan and Abiram, who, according to the character here described, proudly rebelled against Moses and against God; and of Adina, one of David's captains. (1 Chr. xi. 42.)

V. 5—7. Simeon and Levi, the next in seniority, were degraded also, and with still deeper abhorrence of the crime which they had committed. They were brethren, not only descended from the same parents, but as being of the same fierce and untractable disposition. The swords, those "instruments of cruelty" with which they massacred the Shechemites, remained in their houses, as monuments of their odious crime; or rather, "Their compacts are the instruments of cruelty:" for thus the clause may be rendered, perhaps more properly than it is either in the text, or in the margin of our version. They made a treacherous agreement with the Shechemites, in order to execute their fierce and bloody revenge. (Notes, xxxiv. 14—28.)—Perhaps Jacob had been suspected of allowing their treacherous revenge, but he here entered his dying protest against it.—'No,' says he, 'my soul would have abhorred so villainous a project; and had I been admitted into their secret, I would have immediately divulged it.' His honour also was intimately connected with that of his religion, and the glory of God: he therefore adds, 'Let it never be imputed to me, that I was one of this scandalous confederacy: it would not only be a disgrace to my character; but it would discredit the worship of JEHOVAH, in future ages and in distant nations, were it said, that Israel, "who had power with God and prevailed," was guilty of such a crime. Let then Simeon and Levi, though my own sons, bear the blame; and let the degraded state of their tribes still proclaim my abhorrence, yea, my God's abhorrence, of their wickedness.'—In their rage against Shechem, they slew him; but they scorned to lay hands on him alone, and therefore slew Hamor his father, and many others with him. (Esth. iii. 6.) And they were too self-willed and headstrong, either to ask or take any wholesome counsel; but proceeded likewise to desolate and plunder the city, and, as some render it, to "hough the oxen," or to maim and treat cruelly the innocent animals.—Jacob therefore execrated, and called on all men to detest, their fierce anger and cruel wrath. He did not, however, curse them; nay, he is said to have blessed all his sons, but he pronounced a prophetic sentence upon them in the name of God, that they should be divided from each other, and one part of their descendants from the rest, in Jacob and Israel: for, though degraded from the pre-eminence, they would share in the land promised to his posterity, in the ordinances of God, and in the benefits of the covenant made with their fathers.—Accordingly, the tribe of Simeon had only a portion within the lot of Judah, where being straitened, part of them went in quest of new settlements, and were thus divided in Jacob. Tradition also reports, that numbers of this tribe were dispersed among the other tribes, as instructors of children, for their

7 xxix. 35. xlv. 16-34. Deut. xxxiii. 7. 1 Chr. v. 2. Heb. vii. 14. 8 ¶ Judah, thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise; thy hand shall be in the neck of thine enemies: thy father's children shall bow down before thee.

9 Judah is a lion's whelp; from the prey, my son, thou art gone up; he stooped down, he couched as a lion, support. The sentence in Levi's case was not reversed, but converted into a blessing, in consequence of the service which his descendants performed, in their zeal against the worshippers of the golden calf; (Notes, Ex. xxxii. 27-29. Deut. xxxiii. 9, 10;) so that being consecrated to God, as the priestly tribe, they were honourably and profitably divided and scattered in that character throughout Israel.—But the tribe of Simeon, being deeply criminal in the matter of Baal-peor, were not so favoured. (Num. xxv. 14. Note, Num. xxvi. 14.)

of Judah, to rule over his people; and made a covenant with him concerning the perpetuity of the kingdom in his family, which evidently prefigured the everlasting kingdom of Christ. Accordingly, David and his son Solomon ruled over all Israel, with great prosperity and renown; Judah was praised and had in honour; "his hand was in the neck of his enemies, and his father's children bowed down to him.—He was a lion's whelp; he went up from the prey; he stooped, he couched down as a lion, and as a lioness; who shall rouse him up?"—After Solomon's death, this glory was in some degree eclipsed by the revolt of the ten tribes. Yet the kingdom of Judah, for above 400 years, was governed by his descendants in lineal succession. The tribe of Benjamin and that of Levi, with numbers from the other tribes, united themselves to Judah, from whom the whole kingdom was called Judah; and the land was distinguished as the land of Judah. This kingdom was far more prosperous than that of the ten tribes. Above half of their kings were pious men, and many of them very zealous in the cause of God; their reigns were remarkably long in proportion; and consequently religion prospered much more in Judah than in Israel. While their pious princes adhered to the worship of God, their most powerful and haughty foes were intimidated, or subdued: and even when the nation, for idolatry, was given up for a time into the hands of their assailants, they soon returned to the Lord, and were restored and prospered. During the last contest with the Chaldeans, their power and courage were very conspicuous, in the long struggle which they made against the victorious and potent Nebuchadnezzar.—After the captivity, the Jews alone, as a nation, returned; while the Israelites were either finally scattered, or incorporated with them. From this period all the remainder of Jacob's descendants have been called from Judah, Jews or Judeans, and the distinction of tribes gradually fell into disuse; and this is the name by which they are at this day known all over the earth: a most remarkable event, that the people should neither be called after Abraham, nor Isaac, nor Jacob, nor one of his three elder sons; but from Judah, his fourth son. Thus it is manifest, that Judah has been unspeakably more known and celebrated than any other of Jacob's sons; his brethren have praised and honoured him; they have bowed down to him, and have preserved their most valued distinctions, by standing related to him and bearing his name.—His has been, in all respects, the conquering and the ruling tribe, though more especially distinguished by giving birth to Christ, the Lord of all and the King of glory.—Indeed, the power and reputation of the Jews after the captivity, never equalled their preceding eminence: yet the stand which they made against the Syrian kings, especially the successes of the Maccabees, (who, though Levites, were closely united with Judah,) against Antiochus Epiphanes, and afterwards against the Roman generals, especially before the last destruction of Jerusalem, proves that they were very powerful and formidable. Many of the other

V. 8, 9. "Judah" signifies Praise.—Leah thus called her son, as expressing her admiring gratitude to God for his goodness; but Jacob alluded to the name, with reference to Judah himself. (xxix. 35.) There was nothing praise-worthy in the former part of Judah's life: but he acted most nobly and disinterestedly, in his conduct before Joseph respecting Benjamin, and was entitled to the praises of all his brethren. (Notes, xlv. 18-34.) Yet Judah personally was not so much intended as his descendants, especially Christ, whom all his brethren shall praise for ever.—This clause implies, that the other tribes would deem it an honour to stand related to that of Judah; and that Judah personally would be applauded by them, as well as his tribe distinguished among them. Had Jacob been influenced by human passions, he would probably have set Judah aside, as he had his elder brethren; in order to confer the privileges of primogeniture exclusively on his beloved Joseph, the son of his beloved Rachel, to whom, as the single wife whom he intended to marry, this precedence might be supposed due: but he spake by the Spirit of prophecy, as the events predicted completely demonstrate. Under this guidance he foretold, that the descendants of Judah would be victorious over their enemies, and rule over their brethren of the other tribes, as their willing subjects.—Their character also, as courageous, but not ferocious; victorious, but not tyrannical; willing to live in peace, yet terrible to those who provoked them; is represented under the well known emblem of the lion, who rules over the beasts of the forest; and of the lioness, as the word (לִיאָוֹן) rendered old lion may signify, and who is still fiercer when enraged.—Now all this has certainly been fulfilled in the most circumstantial manner, even to this present day.—In every age the tribe of Judah was more honoured than any of the other tribes; unless, perhaps, some may think a few years of Saul's reign an exception. The Lord assigned it the precedence in the encampments of Israel in the wilderness; (Note, Num. ii. 3;) and in presenting the oblations at the sanctuary. (Num. vii. 12.) It had the first lot in Canaan, even in preference to Ephraim, Joshua's own tribe. (Josh. xv.) After Joshua's death, "the children of Israel asked the Lord, saying, "Who shall go up for us against the Canaanites first, to fight against them? And the Lord said, Judah shall go up." (Judg. i. 1, 2.) Othniel, the first judge, was of this tribe, and Caleb also, who almost equalled Joshua in reputation.—At length the Lord chose David, of the tribe and as an old lion; who shall rouse him up?

10 The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a law-giver from between his feet, until Shiloh come, and tribes joined with them, and frequently possessed authority, and headed their armies; but the body of the people descended from Judah, and the whole was called by his name. And though Jerusalem was situated in the lot of Benjamin, yet the tribe of Judah inhabited part of that city: the throne of David and his descendants was placed in Jerusalem; there the family of Judah ruled over their brethren; and thither the other tribes resorted to the courts of justice, as well as for the worship of God. It is therefore undeniable that events, even to this day, during more than 3000 years, have, with astonishing exactness, corresponded to this ancient prediction, in a manner which no human sagacity could have foreseen or conjectured.

V. 10. The word here translated "sceptre," properly signifies a rod or staff; though sometimes it is rendered a tribe: and it simply denotes the exercise of dominion or authority, of which the rod or sceptre was the badge. Judah was at this time merely the head of a family; for Israel, properly speaking, was no more divided into tribes, than governed by kings: but it was thus prophetically intimated that Judah would shortly acquire authority, not only as a distinct tribe, but likewise over his brethren.—The word rendered "lawgiver," in general signifies a ruler or judge; and implies, that rulers and magistrates, descended from Judah, or called by his name, would succeed each other for a length of time. This authority in Judah, however assailed, or changed as to external form, should not finally depart till SHILOH came, on whom the legislative and judicial authority would devolve; and in this, compared with the preceding part of the prophecy, it is implied, that the regal dominion would be exercised by SHILOH however previously interrupted: for as Shiloh, to whom "the gathering of the people would be," was to descend from Judah; the meaning evidently is, that the authority would remain with Judah, till he came, whose right it was, and with him it would thenceforth remain for ever. "As to the time of his coming, it is foretold clearly, that it should be before the sceptre and lawgiver should depart from Judah, or about that time. And it is at least hinted that it would not be long before that departing of civil policy from Judah; and that it would be after its departure from the other tribes: for if it was to continue with them, as well as with Judah, till Shiloh came, the patriarch's words would not be suitable to the obvious design of them." Maclaurin. We have seen how the sceptre and the authority remained with Judah till the captivity.—Even in Babylon the Jews seem to have been under some internal government, exercised by the family of David. After their return from Babylon, Zerubbabel, of David's race, was their leader; and the tribe of Judah, and those who incorporated with them, had regular magistrates and rulers from among themselves, under the kings of Persia and Syria, and afterwards under the Romans.—The Sanhedrim, constituted in great measure of the tribe of Judah, and the other courts dependent on it, possessed great authority till the coming of Christ, according to the concurrent testimony of ancient writers. The tribe of Judah likewise was preserved distinct, and could trace back its genealogies without difficulty. In all respects, the sceptre, though gradually enfeebled, did not depart; nor was the exercise of legislative and judicial authority, though interrupted, finally suspended, till after that event.—The word SHILOH may mean, He who is sent, or The Seed, or the Peaceable, or Prosperous One; but all allow that the Messiah was intended, who was sent into the world, as the promised Seed, to be "the Prince of Peace." Till his coming, Judah possessed considerable authority: but shortly after his crucifixion, this authority was vastly abridged; and within that generation, according to his express predictions, Jerusalem was destroyed, the whole civil and ecclesiastical state was subverted, and all distinctions among the poor harassed remnant were confounded; they were scattered abroad over the face of the earth; and to this day, after almost 1800 years, they have been more destitute of sceptre and lawgiver, than even during the Babylonish captivity. This consideration so perplexed a learned Jew, above 700 years ago, that he wrote thus to his friend: "I would fain learn from thee, out of the testimonies of the law, and the prophets, and other Scriptures, why the Jews are thus smitten in this captivity wherein we are; which may be properly called, the PERPETUAL ANGER OF GOD, because it hath no end. For it is now above 1000 years since we were carried captive by Titus; and yet our fathers who worshipped idols, killed the prophets, and cast the law behind their back, were only punished with a seventy years' captivity, and then brought home again; but now there is no end of our calamities, nor do the prophets promise any." S. Moraccamus, in Ep. Patrick.—This enquiry must press the Jews, if they duly consider it, more and more every century. Compared with the astonishing prophecy before us, it undeniably shews that SHILOH is come; that JESUS the Son of Mary was he; and that the Jews filled up the measure of their national guilt by crucifying Him, and have ever since been left, as wretched outcasts dispersed through the nations, to be a living demonstration, that "the Scriptures cannot be broken."—The inspired Patriarch added, "To him shall the gathering of the people be."—If we understand this of Judah, its exact accomplishment has been already shewn. The other tribes gathered to that of Judah, during their encampments in the wilderness; they collected themselves as one body to make David king; and afterward they came from all the other tribes, to attend his courts, and form his armies, and those of his son Solomon. After the revolt of Jeroboam and Israel, vast multitudes from other tribes left their possessions to join themselves to Judah. The people gathered to Judah, both in serving under the kings of David's race, attending on the courts of justice, and even in celebrating their solemn feasts. After the captivity, many out of the other tribes joined the Jews, and were gradually incorporated among them; and the whole nation has ever since been called after Judah.—But the clause seems more immediately to refer to SHILOH. After his coming, when the sceptre departed from Judah, the gathering both of Jews and Gentiles was to Him, as their Prince and Saviour. It has continued to be so even b 1a. li. 2. xi. 10. unto him shall ^b the gathering of the

xi. 8, 4. xlix.
6, 7. 22, 23. lv.
4, 5. lx. Ez. xxi.
27. Hag. ii. 7.
Zech. ii. 11. viii.
20—23. Matt.
xxv. 32. Rom.
xv. 12. 2 Cor. v.
10. people be.
 11 Binding ^c his foal unto the vine,
 and his ass's colt unto the choice vine;
 he washed his garments in wine, and his clothes in the blood of grapes.
 12 ^d His eyes shall be red with wine, and his teeth white with milk.
 13 ^e Zebulun shall dwell at the haven of the sea: and he shall be for an haven of ships; and his border shall be unto Zidon.

e xxx. 20. Deut.
xxxiii. 18, 19
Josh. xix. 10—16.

14 ¶ ^f Issachar is a strong ass, couch-ing down between two burdens.
 15 And he saw that ^g rest was good, and the land that it was pleasant; and he bowed his shoulder to bear, and became a servant unto tribute.
 16 ¶ Dan ^h shall judge his people,
 as one of the tribes of Israel.
 17 Dan ⁱ shall be a serpent by the way, an adder in the path; that biteth the horse-heels, so that his rider shall fall backward.

i xxx. 18. Deut.
xxxiii. 18. Josh.
xix. 17—23.
Judg. v. 19. 25
1. 1 Chr. xii. 32.
k Josh. xiv. 15.
Judg. iii. 11.
2 Sam. vii. 1.
l Ps. lxxxi. 6. Ez.
xix. 18. Matt.
xxiii. 4.
m xxx. 6. Num. x.
25. Deut. xxxiii.
22. Judg. xiii. 2.
24, 25. xv. 20.
xviii. 1, 2
n Judg. xiv. xv
xvi. 22—30.
xviii. 22—31.
1 Chr. xii. 35.
Heb. an arrow-snake.

to this present time; and we are taught to expect that this will be the case, more and more, till "the earth shall be filled with his glory;" and that the very Jews, now without prince or sceptre, will ere long be gathered to him as his willing people. (Note, Hos. iii. 4, 5.) But, "when the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all his holy angels with him, then shall he sit on the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations." And, finally, the unnumbered millions of the redeemed shall be gathered to him into his heavenly kingdom, to behold his glory, and to rejoice in his love for ever.—Some render the clause, "To him shall the obedience of the people be:" and if this translation should be preferred, it may easily be seen, that the accomplishment in all respects has answered the prediction in this sense, as well as in the other. Indeed, for what purpose did the people gather either to Judah, to David and his royal race, or to Jesus Christ, but in order to submit to them, and render them willing, loyal, and cordial obedience?—Before the coming of Christ, the Jews, under their greatest difficulties, had a government of their own: but since that time, they have had none; except as Christ, of the tribe of Judah, is the Prince of Peace and the King of Glory, to whom both Jews and Gentiles are required to yield obedience. The actual success of the Gospel, and the vast multitudes who have, through many revolving centuries, bowed in willing subjection to the Saviour's authority, is as striking an accomplishment of this part of the prophecy, as the present state of the Jews is of the other.

V. 11, 12. These verses relate to the lot of Judah in Canaan, and the advantages which they would enjoy, along with the other tribes, until the coming of SHILON. It was foretold, that Judah's inheritance should abound in vines so strong, that they would tie their young asses to them, and so fruitful, that their garments would be stained with the juice of the grape.—They would have plenty of wine for exhilaration, which would sometimes be abused in intemperance, so that their eyes would be "red with wine;" and "their teeth white with milk," with which also their lot should abound, the pasture-ground being very fertile and luxuriant.—We have seen much of the preceding prophecy applied to Christ, the "Lion of the tribe of Judah," terrible to his obstinate foes, but merciful to those who submit: and we may also observe that he is "the true Vine;" that wine is the appointed symbol of "his blood, which is drink indeed," as shed for sinners and applied in faith; and that all the blessings of his gospel, are "wine and milk, without money and without price," to which every thirsty soul is welcome.

V. 13. According to this prediction, the tribe of Zebulun had a portion assigned to it, which extended nearly, if not entirely, from the sea of Galilee to the Mediterranean sea, on which some think, it had sea-ports. The maritime situation in which this tribe was placed, tended greatly to enrich it, both by fisheries and commerce; (Note, Deut. xxxiii. 18, 19;) and its inheritance reached to the borders of that country, of which Zidon was the capital.—As the land of Canaan was long after this divided by lot, it was the more surprising, that Jacob should thus exactly describe the situation of the tribes. Zebulun was younger than Issachar, yet Jacob mentions him first; and accordingly his inheritance was first allotted to him. (Josh. xix. 10—17.)

V. 14, 15. Issachar is described under the emblem of a strong ass, as Judah had been under that of a fierce lion. This implied that the tribe of Issachar would be industrious and unambitious; bearing labour or tribute peaceably, of which burdens others grievously complained. The expression, "couching down between two burdens," is variously interpreted; but it certainly denotes a quiet, persevering industry. He was sensible that rest, not from labour, but from war and contention, was profitable; and, being satisfied with the pleasantness of a remote part of the country, he little intermeddled with the affairs of the state, or of war; or with maritime affairs as Zebulun did.—Accordingly, this tribe is seldom mentioned in the subsequent history. There is, however, one remarkable exception. (1 Chr. xii. 32.)

V. 16, 17. Dan signifies judgment: and Jacob foretold that, though he was the son of one of his concubines, and the first of them whom he mentions, he should be the head of a separate tribe, and have a share in publick affairs; even as if he had been descended from Leah or Rachel.—What follows is a sketch of the character of the Danites, as subtle and mischievous, like serpents and vipers; and of their success in stratagems: and the propriety of these emblems would probably appear to us far more striking, if we knew their history.—Samson was of this tribe, who unexpectedly buried the Philistines in the ruins of the temple of Dagon; as the viper, which lies on the sandy road, causes the horse to throw his rider: and indeed all his previous successes had been obtained in the same unexpected and extraordinary manner. The tribe of Dan, in general, seems to have excelled more in stratagems than in open war.

o Ps. cxlix. 166. 174 cxxx 5. Ia. xxv. 9. xxvi. 8. Luke ii. 25. 30. Rom viii. 25 Gal. v. 5. 1 Thes. i. 10.
 p xxx. 11. Deut. xxxiii. 20, 21. 1 Chr. v. 11—22. 25.
 q xxx. 13. Deut. xxxiv. 24, 25.
 r xxx. 8. Deut. xxxiii. 23. Judg. iv. 6. 10. v. 18. Matt. iv. 16, 16. Nephtaliim.
 s xxx. 24. xli. 52. xlviii. 16. Deut. xxxiii. 17. Josh. xvii. 14—17.
 * Heb. daughters.
 t xxxvii. xxxix. xlii. 21. Pa. lxiv. 3. cxviii. 13.
 u Neh. vi. 9. Pa. xxxvii. 14. Col. i. 11. 2 Tim. iv. 17.
 x Job xxix. 20. Pa. xxxvii. 15.

18 I have °waited for thy salvation, O LORD.
 19 ¶ Gad, a troop shall overcome him: but he shall overcome at the last 20 ¶ Out of °Asher his bread shall be fat, and he shall yield royal dainties.
 21 ¶ Naphtali is a hind let loose: he giveth goodly words.
 22 ¶ Joseph is °a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well; whose °branches run over the wall.
 23 The °archers have sorely grieved him, and shot at him, and hated him.
 24 But °his bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands °were made v xxxv. 10, 11. Ex. iii. 6. Pa. cxxxii. 2, 5. z xlv. 7. xlvii. 12 l. 21. Num. xxvii. 16—18. Deut. xxxiv. 9. Josh. i. 1—9. Ps. lxxx. 1. a Ps. cxviii. 22. b Ps. cxviii. 16. Zech. iii. 9. 1 Pet. ii. 4—8. c xxxviii. 18. xliii. 23. Deut. xxxiii. 13, 17. d xvii. 1. e Deut. xxviii. 2 —12. Ps. lxxxiv. 11. Eph. i. 3. 1 Tim. iv. 8. f xxxvii. 27—29. 30, 40. xxxviii. 3, 4. g Deut. xxxiii. 15. Jon. ii. 6. Hab. iii. 6. h xxxvii. 28. Pa. cv. 17—22.

strong, by the hands of °the mighty God of Jacob: (from thence is °the shepherd, °the stone of Israel.)
 25 Even by °the God of thy father, who shall help thee, and by °the Almighty, who shall bless thee, with °blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under, blessings of the breasts and of the womb.
 26 The blessings of thy father °have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors, unto the utmost bound of the °everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that °was separate from his brethren.

V. 18. Many expositors imagine, that Jacob here meant to offer up his prayers, with reference to the conflicts and victories which he had predicted: but it is far more natural to suppose, that being exhausted with speaking to his sons, he here paused, and spake unto the Lord, by way of refreshing his spirits in the recollection of the near approach of that complete salvation, for which he had so long waited. (Note, xlviii. 16.) Mr. Henry on the passage observes, 'That the pious ejaculations of lively devotion may sometimes appear incoherent, but ought never to be censured as impertinent.'—'Old age is the time for "the patience of hope" to bear its richest fruits: and a pleasant thing it is to see this and other graces in full bloom, while the powers of nature are falling into decay.' Fuller.

V. 19. Gad signifies a troop; and both the character and situation of this tribe are here described. The Gadites were renowned for valour: (1 Chron. xii. 8:) and, having their inheritance beyond Jordan eastward, they lay open to incursions from troops of Ammonites, Moabites, Syrians, and others, by whom doubtless they were frequently annoyed: but they maintained their ground, gained decisive victories, and under David and his posterity they subjugated their enemies.—This blessing aptly describes a Christian's conflict: he is overcome in many combats, but is more than conqueror in the final event of the war.

V. 20. Asher signifies blessed; and Jacob, by the Spirit of prophecy, assigned him a plentiful country, yielding abundance for himself and others; even royal dainties, to supply the table of kings, at home and abroad. His inheritance bordered on Carmel, which was fruitful to a proverb. (Josh. xix. 24—26. Is. xxxv. 2.)

V. 21. This may be considered as a sketch of the character of this tribe. Unlike the laborious ox and ass; affecting ease and liberty; insinuating and affectionate; active but volatile; more noted for dispatch, than for steady labour and perseverance; and more disposed to exult in national blessings, than to fight in defence of them; like the hind which flees from the enemy, not like the lion who faces and overcomes him; like the suppliant, who with goodly words craves mercy, not like the warrior who disdains to ask or even accept of quarter; yet in this way maintaining his ground, as the hind stands firm even on the craggy and steep rocks.—Barak and many of his soldiers were of this tribe, and, though at last they fought successfully, at first they were very timorous. I recollect no other warriors of this tribe. (Notes, Judg. iv. v.)

V. 22—26. Part of what Jacob says concerning his beloved Joseph is historical, and relates to his past life, much however is prophetic.—He is here called "a fruitful bough," or young tree planted by the water-side: he had no more than two sons, yet from them sprang two very numerous tribes; but his prosperity was preceded by base injuries and heavy afflictions. "The archers," or such as were most skilful in the use of the bow, "had sorely grieved him, shot at him, and hated him." His brethren pursued him with unrelenting envy and enmity, and spared his life only to sell him for a slave. Potiphar's wife tempted and then slandered him; Potiphar condemned and imprisoned him; and though we do not read of it, it is a singular case indeed, if some of the Egyptians did not revile and envy him. This part may likewise be considered as prophetic of the terrible wars, which his descendants waged, especially with the kingdom of Judah.—His weapons, however, in this warfare failed him not, as a broken or weakened bow would have done: and his hands and arms, notwithstanding the most fatiguing exertions, were strengthened to use them by the power of the God of Jacob; who in providence outwardly protected and prospered him, and by his Spirit endued him inwardly with such strength of faith and of grace, as produced invincible courage, resolution, and perseverance: and thus he was enabled to stand his ground, and to repel every attack of his enemies. His life was preserved, his reputation was cleared, his integrity remained unimpeached: when he rose superior to all opposition, his brethren sued to him, and became dependent on him; and all his enemies bowed before him and sought his favour. By the divine assistance and blessing, and through all these trials and troubles, he at length became "the shepherd of Israel," to sustain his father and family, and to take care of them with all their flocks and herds; and "the stone of Israel," the foundation and strong support of their interests. In these respects, as in many other things, he was a remarkable type of the good Shepherd, and tried Corner-Stone, of the whole church of God.—Indeed, though the royal dignity, and the honour of being the progenitor of Christ, were h xxxv. 18. Deut. 27 ¶ Benjamin shall raven as a wolf: in the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil.

xxxiii. 12. Judg. iii. 15—29. xx. 1 Sam. xi. 4 —11. xiv. xv. Acts vii. 3, ix. 1. Phil. iii. 5. Jer. v. 6. Ez. xxii. 25, 27. Zeph. iii. 3. Matt. vii. 15. x. 16 Acts xx. 29 Esth. viii. 11. Ez. xxxix. 10. Zech. xiv. 1—7

1 Num. xxiii. 24.

28 ¶ All these are the twelve tribes of Israel: and this is it that their father spake unto them, and blessed them; every one according to his blessing he blessed them.

m Ex. xxxiii. 21. 1 Kings xviii. 31. Acts xxvi. 7. Jam. i. 1. Rev. vii. 4.

conferred on Judah, yet Joseph was the especial type of the Saviour among Jacob's sons; and all that is here spoken of him ought to be considered as descriptive of the great Antitype. He too was greatly grieved, shot at, and hated; but his bow abode in strength: and, by the power of the Holy Spirit, he will not fail nor be discouraged, till his enemies are put under his footstool, and his brethren are brought to be with him where he is, to behold and share his glory.—Thus Joseph, being helped by the God of his father Jacob, was personally, and in his posterity, triumphant over all his enemies.—It was also predicted, that God would bless his posterity with a temperate climate, a fruitful soil, the treasures that are dug from the bowels of the earth, a numerous and healthful progeny, and extensive and durable blessings of every kind; being like the mountains, which shall endure as long as the earth itself, and as precious as their most desirable productions. All these benefits were typical of the vast and everlasting blessings, that are conferred upon the spiritual seed of Christ.—Thus Jacob blessed all his sons, more particularly, copiously, and clearly, than Abraham and Isaac had done: the promises also drew nearer to their accomplishment, and his Seed were multiplying very fast. But especially he blessed Joseph, “who was separated from his brethren,” not only as sold by them into Egypt, but as possessing eminent dignity, and as far more excellent than they. The words may be rendered, “a Nazarite from among his brethren,” one devoted unto God; and the expression, “on the crown of the head,” may refer to the Nazarite's vow, which seems to have subsisted before the giving of the law, and only to have been regulated by it. (Notes, Num. vi.) In this also, he was a type of Him, who “was holy, undefiled, and separate from sinners.”—If we compare this prophecy with that contained in the preceding chapter, we shall readily perceive, that, according to the words of the dying patriarch, Ephraim and Manasseh would be the heads of two distinct tribes in Israel, and that the descendants of Ephraim would be more numerous, powerful, and renowned, than those of Manasseh. This accordingly took place in after ages. No one of Jacob's other sons was the progenitor of two distinct tribes; yet each of these was as numerous and illustrious as any of the other tribes of Israel, Judah excepted.—When the Israelites were first numbered in the wilderness, the descendants of Joseph amounted to 72200, and those of Judah to 74600, which was a vast proportion out of 600000.—At the second numbering, they amounted to 85900, or 9400 more than Judah. At this period, Ephraim was so decreased, as to be above 20000 less than Manasseh: yet, when Moses blessed them just afterwards, he confirmed Jacob's prophecy, saying, “They are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh;” and it is evident from the whole history, that the Ephraimites were shortly increased to an immense multitude, and in all respects exceeded the Manassites. For while the two divisions of Manasseh, on each side Jordan, belonged to the kingdom of Israel, the political influence of Ephraim so vastly preponderated, that the whole kingdom was called Ephraim, as distinguished from Judah, during the whole term of its continuance.—It is well known, that Joshua, the conqueror of Canaan, was an Ephraimite; but, instead of taking measures to advance his own tribe, he rejected the application of both Ephraim and Manasseh, when they requested a larger inheritance, because they “were a great people, and the Lord had blessed them hitherto.” (Josh. xvii. 14—18.) In the days of Jephthah, the Gileadites slew 42000 Ephraimites at once, which might have been supposed sufficient to annihilate their political importance; yet they were so increased, that it seems to have had no effect in that respect; and the prophecy was evidently and undeniably fulfilled. In short, through revolving centuries to this day, the names of Judah and Joseph have been far more celebrated, than those of Jacob's other sons; which in the history, as well as in this prophecy are comparatively obscure. The tribes of Judah and Ephraim have eclipsed all the other tribes, by giving names to the two grand divisions of the nation; and Ephraim has been far more illustrious than Manasseh. This is precisely what might have been supposed, even on a cursory reading of these chapters as prophecy: and how can it be accounted for, that events, through remote futurity, should so accord to this ancient book, if it had not been divinely inspired? Let those who deny or doubt its divine inspiration solve this difficulty if they are able.

V. 27. According to the emblem here used, the character of this tribe would be fierceness and cruelty; which especially appears in the history of the Levite's concubine; when after the wickedness was committed, the Benjamites singly withstood all the other tribes, and had the advantage in two battles; nor did they yield till almost entirely destroyed. (Notes, Judg. xix. xx.) Ehud, the second judge, and Saul the first king, were of this tribe.—In the former part of the history, we read frequently of the Benjamites as a warlike people; and in the latter times they joined themselves to the tribe of Judah, and thus divided the spoil, and shared with them in their privileges.—Paul was of this tribe, who, as it were, in the morning of his life, ravened as a wolf, and devoured the prey in persecuting the Christians; but in the evening of his days, as a preacher of the gospel, he shared the blessings with Judah's Lion, assisted in his victories, and thus divided the spoil.—Benjamin was peculiarly dear to Jacob, yet little is spoken of him in this blessing; and there is nothing of the tender and fervent affection, which marks the blessing pronounced on Joseph: for Jacob spake by the Spirit of prophecy.—The tribe of Benjamin did not join itself to the descendants of his brother Joseph; but to those of Judah.

V. 28. Every one, &c.] That is, according to the blessing, which God intended in after times to bestow upon them.—Though some of Jacob's sons were reprov'd and disgrac'd, yet none of them were excluded (as Ishmael and

^{d xv. 15. xxv. 8.} ^{17. xxxv. 29.} ^{Heb. xii. 23.} ^{o xvii. 30. 2 Sam. xix. 37.} 29 And he charged them, and said unto them, I am to be ⁿ gathered unto my people; ^o bury me with my fathers, in the cave that is in the field of Ephron the Hittite,

^{p xxiii. 16—20. 1. 13. Acts vii. 16.} 30 In the cave that is in the field of Machpelah, which is before Mamre in the land of Canaan, ^p which Abraham bought with the field of Ephron the Hittite, for a possession of a burying-place.

^{q xxiii. 19. xxxv. 9. xxxv. 29.} 31 There ^q they buried Abraham and Sarah his wife; there they buried Isaac and Rebekah his wife: and there I buried Leah.

32 The purchase of the field, and of the cave that is therein, was from the children of Heth.

^{r 1. 24—26. Josh. xxiv. 27—29. Heb. xi. 22.} 33 And when Jacob had ^r made an end of commanding his sons, he gathered up his feet into the bed, ^s and yielded up the ghost, and was gathered unto his people. ^{s xxv. 8. 17. xxxv. 29. Job v. 26. xxx. 23. Luke ii. 29. Heb. xi. 13 —16.}

Esau had been) from the promised land, and the peculiar privileges of Abraham's seed; and when we compare their situation with the Gentile nations, it clearly appears that they were all indeed blessed with most invaluable blessings.

V. 29, 30. Jacob charged all his sons in this matter, as he had done Joseph before. One design seems to have been, to draw off their thoughts from Egypt, to weaken their attachment to that country, and to lead them to fix their hearts upon Canaan, as their promised inheritance.

V. 31. By burying Leah, and wishing to be buried himself, not where his beloved Rachel lay, but where Abraham and Isaac lay, Jacob expressed his faith in the God of Abraham and Isaac, and his desire of having his portion with them beyond the grave. (Notes, xxiii.) Of Leah's death and burial, nothing further is recorded.

V. 33. Thus Jacob, having been enabled to finish all for which he wished to live, lay down and died with the utmost serenity and composure.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS

V. 1—7.

The gracious consolations and aids of the Holy Spirit can make men forget pain, raise them above the feeling of an exhausted frame, and enable them to speak on a death-bed, with pleasure to themselves and profit to others. But views into futurity, except as they respect the felicity of heaven, would afford us little satisfaction. Had not Jacob looked forward to the coming of SHILOH, and "waited for his salvation," he could have rejoiced but little in these prophetic benedictions of his family, with respect merely to this present world: so vain is the best state of earthly bliss!—Whatever therefore tends to draw off our affections from things below, and raise them to things above; whatever tends to cement our union with the people of God, and to disunite us from the world; must be good for us. And such in general is the tendency of the admonitions, and even rebukes, of pious parents, especially at the close of life, and when mixed with prayers for their children's welfare.—Sins long since committed, if not washed away in the blood of Christ, will at last rise up against us to our condemnation: and, even when repented of and pardoned, we may be reminded of them, by the correction of our merciful Father, the rebukes of kind friends, and the upbraidings of unkind enemies; and in many ways be made to bear the reproach, and to "possess the iniquities of our youth," in our circumstances, constitutions, and reputations. We should therefore remember them for our humiliation, and that we may bear such rebukes with patience and meekness: for if our violations of the divine law do not exclude us from heaven, we shall have great cause for thankfulness; and if we be truly penitent, our very sufferings will be converted into blessings to ourselves and others.—Those who are of eminence in the profession of religion, should be peculiarly steadfast in protesting against the wickedness of other professors; and in wiping away every suspicion of conniving at their sins, though it should leave infamy upon their nearest relations: for it is far better that they should bear the reproach, than that it should rest upon the gospel.—Revenge or sensual pleasure may be sweet at the time, but will leave a lasting sting behind: such men as are unstable, insolent, and arrogant, will never be eminent either in the world, or in the church: and they who are self-willed, commonly make themselves and others miserable.

V. 8—33.

In severely animadverting on the sins of atrocious criminals, we must take care neither to condemn whole families or collective bodies indiscriminately, nor to magnify every offence into a crime of deep malignity. Notwithstanding defects, some persons merit our commendation: and though all are not of the same disposition or alike prosperous, God dispensing to men variously as he pleases; yet he blesses all with many unmerited mercies; and especially those who live under his ordinances, and enjoy the means of grace.—But praise is chiefly due to him who sprang from Judah, in whom the most opposite excellencies harmonize. As "the Lion of the tribe of Judah," he will terribly avenge upon his enemies his slighted love; and, as "the Lamb of God," "by the sacrifice of himself" "he taketh away the sin of the world." He stretches forth his sceptre of grace from the mercy-seat, and invites us perishing sinners to draw near, and accept of his salvation, that we may not feel the stroke of his iron rod: and "if his wrath be kindled, yea, "but a little, blessed are all they who trust in him." Assuredly, the Messenger of Peace is come, and unbelieving Jews without sceptre or governor are his unwilling witnesses.—But may they and the fulness of the Gentiles be gathered unto him, and with us enjoy blessings, incomparably better than the richest fruit of the vine and the corn-field, and all royal dainties; than treasures dug from mines, gained by commerce, or seized by conquest; blessings more firmly secured, than the foundations of the hills, and more durable than creation itself; even everlasting felicity. With the earnest of this happiness comforting our hearts, "his yoke will be easy, and his burden light;" nor will the hardest service, or the heaviest tribute, which

CHAP. L.

Jacob mourned for, and embalmed, 1—3. Joseph requests Pharaoh that he may go and bury his father, and obtains leave, 4—6. Jacob is buried in Machpelah, 7—13. Joseph and his brethren return to Egypt; their suspicious fears of him; and his kindness to them, 14—21. Joseph's age, posterity, prophecy, and charge concerning his bones; his death, and interment, 22—26.

AND Joseph ^a fell upon his father's face, and ^b wept upon him, and kissed him.

^c 2 And Joseph commanded his servants the physicians to embalm his father: and the physicians ^c embalmed Israel.

^e 3 And forty days were fulfilled for him, (for so are fulfilled the days of those which are embalmed;) and the Egyptians ^e mourned for him ^d three-score and ten days.

^f 4 And when ^e the days of his mourning were past, ^f Joseph spake unto the house of Pharaoh, saying, If now I have he imposes, prevent our finding rest for our souls; his grace will be sufficient for us; so that we shall conquer our most powerful, and supplant our most subtle foes. We may indeed be grieved and galled by the arrows of temptation and slander, but "no weapon formed against us shall prosper, and every tongue that ariseth against us in judgment, we shall condemn;" because Jacob's God will be on our side.—Under the care of the Shepherd of Israel, we shall lack nothing: built upon the Rock of salvation, we shall abide immoveable, until our work be finished; and then, breathing out our souls into his hands, for whose salvation we have waited, we shall depart in peace, and leave a blessing on our children after us.

NOTES.

CHAP. L. V. 2, 3. The Egyptians were eminent for the art of preserving dead bodies from putrefaction, by the skilful use of spices and drugs. Several of these bodies remain to this day, and are called Egyptian Mummies, being preserved as great curiosities; and some of them have probably continued in this state above 2000 years.—The same persons, who were consulted as physicians for the living, embalmed the dead bodies; and at least forty days were requisite to complete the process. These physicians were generally retained as servants, in the courts of princes, and in the families of great men; and Joseph, in his high station, had several of them in his household. As therefore the custom was not sinful, and as in the case of Jacob's body, which was to be buried at a distance, it was very expedient; Joseph complied with it on this occasion: and for similar reasons the survivors afterwards embalmed his body (26).

found grace in your eyes, speak, I pray you, in the ears of Pharaoh, saying,

^g 5 My father ^g made me swear, saying, ^h Lo, I die: in my grave which ⁱ I have digged for me in the land of Canaan, there shalt thou ^k bury me. Now therefore ^l let me go up, I pray thee, and bury my father, and I will come again.

^m 6 And Pharaoh said, Go up, and bury thy father, according as he made thee swear.

ⁿ 7 And Joseph went up to bury his father: ⁿ and with him went up all the servants of Pharaoh, the elders of his house, and all the elders of the land of Egypt.

^o 8 And all the house of Joseph and his brethren, and his father's house: ^o only their little ones, and their flocks, and their herds, they left in the land of Goshen.

^p 9 And there went up with him both ^p chariots and horsemen: and it was a very great company.

V. 4. The days of publick mourning, or, as we should say, court-mourning, were past; but the mourning of Joseph and his brethren could not be supposed to terminate till after the funeral (10).—Perhaps it was not allowed to come into the presence of the king in mourning: (Note, Esth. iv. 2;) or Joseph wished to make his request to Pharaoh with all the modesty and decorum possible; and, in sending his message by the courtiers, he at once shewed his respect to him and to them.

V. 5. Joseph did not choose to appear weary of application to business, or negligent of the interests of Egypt and of Pharaoh, in thus requesting leave of absence: he was therefore careful to represent the matter, not so much as his own inclination, as the dying request of his father, who was so earnest in it, that he laid him under the solemn obligation of an oath, to bury him in Canaan.—The cave at Machpelah seems to have been large, with many separate burying places in it; so that Jacob, in addition to those before prepared, had previously formed one for the reception of his body at his decease.

V. 6. The king would not have Joseph violate an oath for his sake.—^q Such heathen kings will rise up in judgment against those Christian princes, who make a jest of 'their oaths.' Bp. Patrick.

V. 7—9. Perhaps it would be difficult to find any funeral, either in ancient or modern times, more distinguished by the numerous attendance of great and eminent persons than this of Jacob: yet he was neither monarch, nor conqueror, nor lawgiver; but a plain shepherd to the end of his days!—As this distinguished honour was conferred on Jacob, principally for the sake of his son, it shews in what esteem Joseph was held in Egypt: and serves to prove that, whatever modern adversaries may say

10 And they came to the threshing-floor of Atad, which is beyond Jordan, and there they mourned with a great and very sore lamentation: and he made a mourning for his father ^p seven days.

^p 4. 1 Sam. xxxi. 13. Job ii. 13.

11 And when the inhabitants of the land, ^q the Canaanites, saw the mourning in the floor of Atad, they said, This is a grievous mourning to the Egyptians; wherefore the name of it was called ^{*} Abel-mizraim, which is ^r beyond Jordan.

^q x. 15—19. xlii. 7. xliiv. 3. xxxiv. 31.

^{*} That is, The mourning of the Egyptians.

^r Deut. iii. 25, 27. xi. 30.

^q xvii. 29—31. xlix. 29—32. Acts vii. 16.

12 And his sons did unto him ^a according as he commanded them.

13 For his sons carried him into the land of Canaan, and buried him in ^t the cave of the field of Machpelah; which Abraham bought with the field for a possession of a burying-place, of Ephron the Hittite, before Mamre.

^t xxiii. 16—18. 2 Kings xxi. 18.

14 And Joseph returned into Egypt, he and his brethren, and all that went up with him to bury his father, after he had buried his father.

15 ¶ And when Joseph's brethren saw that ^u their father was dead, they said, ^x Joseph will peradventure hate us, and will certainly requite us all the evil which we did unto him.

^u xxvii. 41, 42. ^x xliii. 17. Lev. xxvi. 36.

16 And they [†] sent a messenger unto Joseph, saying, Thy father did command before he died, saying,

[†] Heb. charged

17 So shall ye say unto Joseph, ^y Forgive, I pray thee now, the trespass of thy brethren, and their sin; for ^z they did unto thee evil: and now we pray thee forgive the trespass of the ^a servants of the God of thy father. And Joseph ^b wept when they spake unto him.

^y Matt. vi. 12. 14. 15. xviii. 35. Luke xvii. 3. 4. Eph. iv. 32. Col. iii. 13. ^z 20. Job xxxiii. 27, 28. Prov. xxvii. 13. Jam. v. 16. ^a xxxi. 42. xlix. 25. Matt. xxv. 40. Philem. 8—20. ^b xlii. 21—24. xlv. 4, 5, 8.

18 And his brethren also went and ^c fell down before his face: and they said, Behold, we ^b thy servants.

^c xxxvii. 7—11.

19 And Joseph said unto them, ^d Fear not: ^e for am I in the place of God?

^d Matt. xiv. 27. Luke xxiv. 37, 38.

^e xxx. 2. Deut. xxxii. 35. Job xxxiv. 29. Rom. xii. 19. Heb. x. 30.

20 But as for you, ^f ye thought evil against me; ^g but ^h God meant it unto good, to bring to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive.

^f xxxvii. 4. 18—20. ^g xlv. 5—8. Ia. lxvii. 10. cv. 16, 17. Is. x. 7. Acta ii. 23. iii. 13—15. 26. Rom. viii. 28.

^h xlv. 10, 11. xlvii. 12. Matt. v. 44. Rom. xii. 20, 21.

21 Now therefore fear ye not: ^h I of his conduct, he was considered at the time, as the great benefactor and deliverer of the country.

V. 10, 11. Moses wrote or revised his history on the east side of Jordan; and therefore in his five books, beyond Jordan means west-ward of Jordan: in other parts of Scripture it generally means east-ward.—During seven days Jacob's sons performed solemn funeral obsequies, as it seems, before they came to the cave of Machpelah; perhaps because the place which they chose was more convenient for the encampment of so large a company. The inhabitants of Canaan naturally called them all Egyptians, as coming out of Egypt; though some of them must know to whom the sepulchre belonged.

V. 14. Various motives concurred to induce the descendants of Jacob to continue in Egypt, notwithstanding Abraham's prophetic vision of their bondage there. Some might forget it, or disregard it if remembered; others might submit, and not deem themselves allowed to move without command from God; while fear, interest, love of ease and plenty, and similar inducements, would concur in detaining them, and effecting the purpose of God. At this time, however, Joseph had engaged to return; he could not have done otherwise without the greatest impropriety and ingratitude; and both he and his brethren had left their families and possessions in Egypt, to which they must return. (Ex. x. 9—11. 24.)

V. 15—18. Joseph's brethren perhaps supposed, that tenderness to Jacob had hitherto restrained him from inflicting punishment on them, which they were conscious they had merited: and judging of him from the general temper of human nature, they apprehended, that he would now avenge himself on them; and, not being able to resist or flee away, they attempted to soften him by intreaties. A deep conviction of their criminality, in their conduct to him, rendered them unreasonably suspicious; but their fears and submissions were calculated still more to humble and soften them, as well as to accomplish the purposes of God.—They first sent messengers to Joseph; but afterwards they were encouraged to go in person. They did not say, "our father," but more pathetically, "thy father." They urged the dying words of Jacob, who doubtless had given them some injunction to this purpose, that he might render them more deeply sensible of their guilt; and they pleaded with Joseph for pardon, in the character of the servants of Jacob's God. This shews with what care and prudence they had concerted the business; and we need not wonder that Joseph was greatly affected, at witnessing this most exact accomplishment of his dreams.

V. 19. It belongs to God to execute vengeance, and Joseph did not intend to usurp his prerogative. Thus he instructed his brethren, not to fear him, but to fear God; to humble themselves before God, and to seek his forgiveness.

V. 20. Joseph's brethren, in selling him to the Ishmaelites, had acted with extreme malice and wickedness; and they intended that he should live and die a destitute slave. But God, in permitting it, "meant it unto good" to Joseph, to Jacob, to his brethren, to their families, to Egypt, to Canaan, and to the neighbouring nations; nor can we number up all the important purposes answered by it, to the church and to the world; or calculate how many important events depended on it, through all succeeding will nourish you, and your little ones. And he comforted them, and spake kindly unto them.

* Heb. to their hearts xxiv. 3. Is. xl. 2. marg.

22 ¶ And Joseph dwelt in Egypt, he, and his father's house: and Joseph lived an hundred and ten years.

l Num. xxxii. 33. Josh. xvii. 1. Job xlii. 16. Ps cxxviii. 6. † Heb. born.

23 And Joseph saw Ephraim's children, of the third generation: the children also of Machir, the son of Manasseh, were brought up upon Joseph's knees.

k xxx. 3.

24 And Joseph said unto his brethren, I die: and God will surely visit you, and bring you out of this land, unto the land which he sware to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob.

l xvi. 1. Ex. iv. 31. m xv. 14—16. xxvi. 3. xxxv. 12. xlvi. 4. Ex. iii. 16, 17.

25 And Joseph took an oath of the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you, and ye shall carry up my bones from hence.

n xlvi. 29—31.

26 So Joseph died, being an hundred and ten years old: and they embalmed him, and he was put in a coffin in Egypt.

o Ex. xlii. 39. Josh. xxiv. 32. Acts vii. 16. Heb. xi. 22. xlvii. 9. 29. Josh. xxiv. 29.

generations.—The same is observable in many other instances in Scripture; and we cannot possibly account for the dispensations of Providence, without admitting, that God leaves evil men and evil spirits to themselves to commit wickedness, as far as he intends to over-rule it for good, but no further. They are influenced only by a desire of gratifying their own wicked and hateful passions, and are therefore justly condemned; but He, in omniscience and infinite wisdom, purposing most extensive and durable good, is on that very account worthy of all adoration and praise.

V. 22. An hundred and ten years.] Joseph survived Jacob about fifty-four years, and probably continued in authority to the last.

V. 23. Upon Joseph's knees.] Thus he expressed his affection, and the pleasure which he took in them.

V. 24—26. “By faith Joseph, when he died, made mention of the departing of the children of Israel; and gave commandment concerning his bones.” He fully expected that the promise of God would be verified, and desired to have his lot beyond the grave with the Israelites, and not with the Egyptians. It is probable, that he required, not only his brethren, but the chief persons in their several families, to take this oath: yet he did not order his body to be carried directly to Canaan for burial, but to remain in Egypt until God should visit them. It was therefore embalmed, and kept in a coffin in Egypt, most likely by the Israelites; and this circumstance would keep alive the expectation of a speedy departure from Egypt, and preserve Canaan continually in their mind. It would also tend to attach Joseph's posterity to their brethren, and to prevent them from incorporating with the Egyptians.—It is not expressly said, how long each of the other sons of Jacob lived, or where they were buried; but it is generally thought that their bones likewise were carried to Canaan by the Israelites: (Note, Acts vii. 15, 16.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—14.

Though our pious friends have lived to a good old age, and we are confident that they are gone to glory, we may well regret our own loss, and should pay respect to their memory by lamenting for them: for grace does not destroy natural affection; but purifies, moderates, and regulates, all our passions.—Others, besides relatives, have cause to mourn the death of eminent believers: for as their prayers, example, and influence were a publick benefit, so is their death a publick loss. But alas! such mournings in general are a mere compliment; and men are scarcely in earnest about any thing, but the pursuits of ambition, wealth, or pleasure.—The attention paid to the dead, though commonly the effect of custom or superstition, should result from faith in the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and the resurrection of the body. Our deceased friends still live, and we shall meet again; though separated from the body, a re-union shall certainly take place. Therefore we commit the body, with decent respect, unto the ground, ‘in sure and certain hope of the resurrection to eternal life’ of all true believers; and whatever our hopes or fears may be, God is the only infallible Judge, who are, and who are not, true believers.—We ought scrupulously to observe the last will and dying requests of our deceased friends; and much more should we most religiously reverence the oath of God. But, in the most exact attention to necessary affairs, we should consult in what manner to do them; that we may give as little umbrage as possible, and interfere with other duties no more than cannot be avoided.

V. 15—26.

“There are many devices in the heart of man, but the counsel of the LORD, that shall stand:” and while men are often influenced by the worst of motives, God, by means of them, effects his own most righteous purposes.—How guilt dismays the heart in times of danger! It would however, be well, if it excited us to as diligent and humble endeavours to obtain forgiveness from God, as it often does to appease the displeasure of man, and to avert temporal calamities.—True religion will teach us, not only to forgive those who are conscious of having injured us, and whom we have in our power; but effectually, by kind actions as well as words, to obviate their fears, assure them of our forgiveness, and exhort them to seek pardon from him to whom vengeance belongs.—But the kindest friends, and the most durable of our earthly comforts must die: let us then look off even from Joseph, that we may look unto Jesus, who ever liveth to bless those who trust in him. Notwithstanding former crimes, and present unbelieving injurious suspicions, he acknowledges for his brother every humble sinner, who supplicates his mercy; and as such he will comfort his heart, provide for his wants, and receive him to glory. Let us then, seek his favour, rely on his mercy, and submit to his will; and when we come to die, give him charge of both soul and body: so shall we find him faithful and “able to keep that which we have committed to him,” until the great decisive day, so that “when Christ, who is our Life, shall appear, we shall also appear with him in glory.”

THE SECOND BOOK OF MOSES,

CALLED

EXODUS.

IN the Hebrew Bible this book is called SHEMOTH, or, Names, from the clause (שמות) with which it begins: but the Translators of the Old Testament, into that Greek Version called the Septuagint, entitled it EXODUS, or The Departure: because the departure of Israel out of Egypt is the grand subject recorded in it. A general view is indeed given of the circumstances of the Israelites in Egypt, from the death of Joseph to that event, which took place about a hundred and forty-four years after; but the sacred historian dwells very fully on all the particulars, which made way for this grand catastrophe, and which attended or immediately followed it. The subject is introduced by Moses with an account of his own parentage, birth, perilous exposure, marvellous preservation, education in Pharaoh's court, espousing the cause of his enslaved brethren, fleeing into Midian, living there as a shepherd, and at length being expressly commissioned and instructed by JEHOVAH, to lead Israel out of Egypt. He then records the miraculous plagues, by which proud Pharaoh was compelled to liberate the enslaved Israelites, and the manner in which the Red Sea was divided, and they were led through it as on dry land; while Pharaoh and his army were overwhelmed by its waters, and perished. We are next informed, how JEHOVAH miraculously conducted his people in the wilderness, notwithstanding their murmurings and rebellions; and how he spake the moral law to them from the fiery summit of Sinai, and delivered many parts of the judicial and ceremonial law to Moses; entered into covenant with the nation, appointed the Aaronic priesthood, commanded the erection of a Tabernacle, and instituted his worship among them; notwithstanding the interruption of these gracious plans, by the idolatry of the golden calf.—It is worthy of peculiar notice, that the events recorded in this book, are constantly referred to both in the Old and New Testament, as matters of undoubted certainty and notoriety, and with many express quotations from it, both by the sacred historians, in the Psalms, by the prophets, and by our Lord and his apostles: and this, in such language, as implies most evidently, not only that they regarded this narrative as the genuine work of “Moses, the servant of the LORD,” but as divinely inspired; so that the miracles recorded are constantly referred to, as actually wrought by a divine power, to prove the laws promulgated and the doctrines established, to be the oracles of God himself. The Reader, by consulting the marginal references, may easily satisfy himself that this remark is well grounded.—This book likewise contains some prophecies, which were fulfilled before or soon after the death of Moses, and also others which were verified in after ages: especially that which is given in these words, “Neither shall any man desire thy land, when thou shalt go up to appear before the LORD thy God, thrice every year;” which the whole history shews to have been exactly accomplished. (Note, xxxiv. 24.) Indeed the Types, with which it abounds more than any book in Scripture, were real prophecies; the exact accomplishment of which after 1490 years, in the great Antitype, is a divine attestation that this book was written under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit.—Learned men have also sufficiently shewn, that many of those fables, with which ancient profane history uniformly begins, were nothing more than distorted traditions of those events which Moses plainly relates, blended with various imaginations suited to the corrupt taste of mankind; and that pagan writers had heard some reports of the transactions, of which we have here an authentick history.—Having therefore so firm ground for our confidence, that the narrative before us is the infallible word of God; let us read it with reverence and attention, and we shall find it replete with most important instruction, as to the real nature and effect of true religion.

CHAP. I.

The names of Jacob's sons, 1—5. The death of that generation, and the vast increase of their posterity, 6, 7. The politick, but vain attempts of the king of Egypt to check their increase, 8—14. His cruel orders to the midwives, and their pious disobedience accepted by the Lord, 15—21. Pharaoh commands his subjects to destroy the male infants, 22.

v. 14—16. Gen. xxix. 32—35. xxx. 1—21. xxxv. 18. 22—26. xlii. 8—26. xlix. 3—27. 1 Chr. ii. 1, 2. Rev. vii. 4—8.

NOW *these are the names of the children of Israel, which came into Egypt, every man and his household came with Jacob.

2 Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah, 3 Issachar, Zebulun, and Benjamin, 4 Dan, and Naphtali, Gad, and Asher.

5 And all the souls that came out of the *loins of Jacob, were ^b seventy souls: for Joseph was in Egypt al-ready.

* Heb. thigh. Gen. xli. 26. Judg. viii. 30. Marg. Gen. xli. 26, 27. Deut. x. 22.

6 And *Joseph died, and all his brethren, and all that generation.

c Gen. 1. 26. Acts vi. 14—16. d Gen. 1. 20. 23. ix. 1. xii. 2. xiii. 16. xv. 5. xvii. 16. xxii. 17. xxvi. 4. xxxiii. 14. xxxv. 11. xvi. 3. Deut. xxvi. 5.

7 And the children of Israel were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty; and the land was filled with them.

8 ¶ Now there arose up *a new king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph.

e Ez. ii. 18, 19. ix. 15. Acts vii. 9.

9 And he said unto his people, Behold, 'the people of the children of Israel are more and mightier than we.

f Ps. cv. 24, 25. Prov. xiv. 28.

10 *Come on, let us deal ^hwisely with them: lest they multiply, and it come to pass, that when there falleth out any war, they join also unto our enemies and fight against us, and so get them up out of the land.

g Ps. x. 2. lxxxiii. 3, 4. Prov. i. 11. h Job 7. 13. Prov. xvi. 25. xxi. 30. Acta vii. 19. 1 Cor. iii. 18—20. Jam. iii. 15—18.

11 Therefore they did set over them task-masters, 'to afflict them with their ^kburdens. And they built for Pharaoh treasure-cities, Pithom and 'Raamses.

iii. 7. Gen. xv. 13. Deut. xxvi. 6. k ii. 11. v. 4. 5. Pa. lxxxii. 6. l Gen. xlvii. 11.

12 †But the more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and grew. And they were ^mgrieved because of the children of Israel.

† Heb. And as they afflicted them, so they multiplied.

13 And the Egyptians made the children of Israel to serve with rigour.

m Job v. 2. Prov. xxvii. 4. Jolin xii. 19. Acts iv. 2—4. v. 28—35.

NOTES.

CHAP. I. V. 5. Notes, Gen. xli. 27. Acts vii. 14.

V. 7. The energetick expressions of this verse, being varied and accumulated, and some of them taken from the immensely rapid increase of insects, and of fishes, or other aquatick animals, are admirably suited to excite the reader's attention, to the unparalleled multiplication of the Israelites in Egypt, according to the repeated promises of God to their ancestors; and also to shew that they were as remarkably strong and healthy. It is computed, that the number of the Israelites was doubled every fourteen years, from the going down of Jacob and his family into Egypt, until the Exodus. Thus their multitude and power became so great, that they became very formidable to the Egyptians.

V. 8. This must have been some years after Joseph's death, perhaps not less than sixty. Whether this king sprang from another family, or was a descendant of Joseph's patron, is not certain; but having no personal knowledge of Joseph, he had no regard to his memory, esteem for his excellency, or sense of the benefits which Egypt had received from him: and therefore he preferred his own supposed political interests to the claims of honour and gratitude, after the too general maxims of kings and rulers.

V. 9, 10. Pharaoh took occasion, from the great increase of the Israelites, compared with that of the Egyptians, to excite suspicions of them in his subjects, and thus to cover his intentions of enslaving them. As if he had said, 'In order to keep them under, let us begin without delay, or they will become too powerful.'—For when he afterwards expressed his apprehension, lest they should "get them up out of the land," he discovered, that he feared nothing but missing his opportunity of subjugating them, and of enriching himself by their labours.—He had probably heard, that the Israelites sometimes spoke of an approaching season, when they should leave Egypt, to take possession of their promised inheritance; and this would the more excite his fear of losing such a number of useful subjects.—There are several intimations in Scripture, that the Israelites generally conformed to the idolatry of the Egyptians, for which they were thus chastised by them. (Josh. xxiv. 14. Ez. xx. 7, 8. xxxiii. 8.)

V. 11. Various labours seem to have been exacted of the Israelites, as a kind of tax, but in a degree which reduced them to slavery; and the task-masters were Egyptians, appointed over them by publick authority, to enforce these iniquitous exactions.—By this policy the Egyptians seem to have intended not only to enrich themselves, but to break the spirits of the Israelites, that they might not affect liberty, or aspire after dominion; and also to prevent their too rapid increase, by embittering domestick life.—The cities which they builded, were either intended (after the pattern which Joseph had set them) for granaries to lay up corn in store against a year of scarcity; or they were fortified places. They were however useful works, and as Israel's toil saved both the labour and the purses of the Egyptians, we may be sure these would favour the oppression.

V. 12. It exceedingly chagrined the Egyptians to find their schemes prove abortive; and excited alarms in their minds, lest in process of time the Israelites should resent and revenge the inhuman treatment which they had received. Thus Egypt's persecution could not prevent Israel's increase, but Israel's increase could disturb Egypt's comfort; for such is the warfare betwixt the Seed of the woman, and the seed of the serpent.

n ii. 23. vi. 9.
 Num. xx. 25.
 Deut. iv. 20.
 Ruth i. 20.
 Ps. lxxvii. 13.
 Nah iii. 14.

14 And they made ^a their lives bitter with hard bondage, ^o in mortar, and in brick, and in all manner of service in the field; all their service wherein they made them serve, ^p was with rigour.

p 13. v. 7-21.
 Lev. xxv. 43-46.
 53. Is. xiv. 6 li.
 23. lii. 5. lviii. 6.
 Jer. i. 33, 34.
 Mic. iii. 3.

15 ¶ And the king of Egypt spake to the Hebrew midwives, (of which the name of one was Shiprah, and the name of the other Puah:)

16 And he said, When ye do the office of a midwife to the Hebrew women, and see them upon the stools; if it be a son, ^q then ye shall kill him, but if it be a daughter, then she shall live.

q 22. Rev. xii. 4.

17 But the midwives ^r feared God, and did not as the king of Egypt commanded them, but saved the men-children alive.

r Gen. xx. 11.
 xlii. 18. Neh v. 15. Prov. xvi. 6
 Dan. iii. 16-18
 vi. 13. Hos. v. 11. Mic. vi. 16.
 Matt. x. 28.
 Acts iv. 19. v. 29

V. 14. In the field.] That is, in cultivating the ground, digging trenches to convey the waters of the Nile, carrying out the dung to manure the land, and other mean and laborious services.—The Egyptians treated the Israelites with rigour, both in the excess of their labours, and the severity of their punishments.—Many have supposed, that, besides the useful works here mentioned, the Israelites were employed in building those enormous piles called the pyramids, which remain to this day, and probably will continue till the end of the world; monuments, not so much of the greatness and wisdom, as of the folly, caprice, exorbitant power, and cruel tyranny, of the monarchs who projected them. It cannot indeed be denied, that the skill, by which they were planned, equals the vastness of the labour with which they were completed: but then, it is evident that they never could be useful, in any degree adequate to the toil and expense with which they were erected. The supposition, however, is entirely groundless: for the Israelites were employed in making bricks, while it is well known that the pyramids were built of hewn stone.—But whatever were the works, in which the Israelites were compelled to serve; the Egyptians could give as good reasons for thus cruelly oppressing them, as any at this day can urge in favour of the detestable slave-trade: for all the arguments adduced on the subject, when fairly weighed, mean nothing more, than that without this oppression, men could not amass so large estates, nor gratify their sensual appetites with such refined excess.

V. 15-17. These midwives, who feared God, seem to have been Hebrew women, and not Egyptians, appointed to this office, as some have conjectured.—Pharaoh might think that he could awe or bribe them into compliance, even to so inhuman and treacherous a conduct towards their own nation: for princes are not often refused in such cases. We may consider these two as the chief of the midwives, whose conduct would influence that of the others; for there must have been many more.—Pharaoh and his servants did not fear female slaves, however numerous, out accounted them their riches.

V 19. Through the peculiar blessing of God, we may 18 And the king of Egypt called for the midwives, and said unto them, ^s Why have ye done this thing, and have saved the men-children alive?

s Ec. vii. 4.

19 And the midwives ^t said unto Pharaoh, Because the Hebrew women are not as the Egyptian women: for they are lively, and are delivered ere the midwives come in unto them.

t Josh. ii. 4.
 2 Sam. xvii. 19, 20.

20 Therefore ^u God dealt well with the midwives: and the people multiplied and waxed very mighty.

u Ps. xii. 1, 2
 Prov. xi. 18. Ec. viii. 12. Is. iii. 10. Heb. vi. 10.

21 And it came to pass, because the midwives feared God, that he ^x made them houses.

x 1 Sam. ii. 35.
 2 Sam. vii. 11-13.
 27-29.
 1 Kings ii. 24.
 xi. 38. Ps. cxxvii. 1.

22 And Pharaoh charged all his people, saying, ^y Every son that is born ye shall cast into the river, and every daughter ye shall save alive.

y vii. 19-21. Acts vii. 19. Rev. xvi. 4-6.

suppose, that this was generally the case; yet not so but that the midwives might have had many opportunities of murdering the infants, had they been so disposed.—Provided we do not speak falsehood, the strictest veracity does not at all times require us to speak all that we know, though our silence should lead men into error; provided such error be no injury to them, or to others: and silence must still more evidently be allowable, when it prevents the commission of sin.—When, however, a measure of infirmity or error undesignedly attends the conduct of those, who uprightly fear God, and aim to do his will; he graciously pardons what is defective, and recompenses what is good: for in this case, there is no intention of “doing evil that good may come.”

V. 21. God rewarded the midwives, for their concurrence in the increase and prosperity of Israel, by the increase and prosperity of their own families.

V. 22. Probably Pharaoh proposed considerable rewards for these services.—Thus the land would be filled with mercenary informers and murderers: numbers of infants would doubtless be slain in the arms, and before the eyes, of their distressed and almost distracted mothers; and had not he, who says to the swelling ocean, “Hitherto shalt thou go and no further,” undertaken for the increase of Israel, they must have been desolated.—Pharaoh at this time, (as Herod did long after,) proved his relation to that great dragon, who sought to destroy the man-child as soon as it was born. (Rev. xii. 4.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1-7.

The very titles of these first two books in the Bible remind us, that the history of man is little more than a narrative of his beginning, and of his departure. Thus one generation is swept away after another, and nothing remains except the names of a very few, and some of them covered with infamy! Happy they, whose names are written in the book of life; and enrolled there as true Israelites, and heirs of Heaven!—How soon may the sun of prosperity be darkened, by the deepest cloud of adversity;

CHAP. II.

Moses is born, and exposed in an ark among the flags, 1—4. He is found by Pharaoh's daughter, 5, 6; who employs his own mother to nurse him, and brings him up as her son, 7—10. He visits his brethren, slays an Egyptian who had injured one of them, and flees into Midian, 11—15. The priest of Midian entertains him, and gives him his daughter, of whom Gershom is born, 16—22. The king of Egypt dies, and the Lord regards the cry of the Israelites, 23—25.

a vi. 16—20. Num. xxvii. 59. 1 Chr. vi. 1—3. xxiii. 12—14.

AND there went a man ^a of the house of Levi, and took to wife a daughter of Levi.

and the place of our refuge become the scene of our misery! our best friends succeeded by enemies, and our best services repaid with ingratitude! We should therefore trust the Lord alone: for as nothing can hasten the accomplishment of his purpose, before the appointed time; so nothing can retard it, when that season arrives.—For the space of above two hundred years, while Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and their families, lived at liberty, in peace, and in prosperity and affluence, they only increased to seventy persons: but afterwards in about the same number of years, under galling oppression and cruel bondage, they multiplied into a large nation! Nor did their most rapid increase commence, till after the death of Joseph, their chief friend; for God will secure to himself the glory of fulfilling his own promises. Thus was the Christian church more especially increased after the death of Jesus; and thus hath vital religion, in all ages, most prospered under the pressure of severe persecutions. By this the Lord covers his enemies with confusion, and teaches his people “not to fear them who kill the body, and after that have “no more that they can do.”

V. 8—22.

It is an old practice of “the accuser of the brethren” and his servants, to vindicate their cruel treatment of God's people, by aspersing their characters, pretending to suspect them of bad designs, or averring that their increase would be dangerous to the state: they therefore should endeavour, by well-doing and patient suffering, to confute such calumnies, and prove themselves quiet and useful members of society. But though we may suffer unjustly from men, God is just in all that he inflicts upon us by their hands: and it is a singular favour to be kept from sinful compliances, or conformity to the world, even by severe corrections.—The word of God frequently calls that deceit, injustice, cruelty, yea folly, which men account acting “wisely;” for such “wisdom is earthly, sensual, “devilish,” and such politicians are eventually “taken in “their own craftiness.”—There is no degree of treachery and inhumanity, to which the spirit of persecution will not prompt; and they who are actuated by it, seldom fail of finding instruments as destitute of honour and conscience as themselves. But if they meet with those who truly fear God, neither bribes nor terrors will prevail upon them to sin against him; and he will plead their cause, and recompense their conscientious disobedience to the uniafeful commands of men.—But as we see, in this history, the church of God groaning under persecution; so we may, by viewing the object in another light, see the miserable condition of Satan's wretched bond-slaves, who are so enslaved to their lusts that they never can deliver themselves, however miserable or affrighted, until the Lord sends them redemption by his word and powerful grace. Nor should we here forget, that this enemy, who by Pharaoh aimed to destroy the church in its very infancy, is equally busy to stifle the first risings of serious reflections in the heart of man; and thence to “take away the seed “of the word, lest we should believe and be saved;” and lest these feeble beginnings should increase, and we grow strong enough to renounce his service. Let them therefore who would escape, “take more earnest heed to the “things which they hear;” be afraid of sinning against the testimony of their consciences; and without delay cry fervently to the Lord for deliverance, and continue to pray with persevering constancy.

2 And the woman conceived, and bare a son: and when ^b she saw him ^b that he was a goodly child, she hid him three months. b Acts vii. 20. Heb. xi. 23.

3 And when ^c she could not longer hide him, she took for him ^d an ark of bulrushes, and daubed it ^e with slime and with pitch, and put the child therein; and she laid it in the flags by the river's brink. c l. 22. Matt. ii. 13. 16. Acts vii. 19. d Is. xviii. 2. e Gen. vi. 14. xi. 3. wiv. 10.

4 And ^f his sister stood afar off, to wit what would be done to him. f xv. 20. Num. xii. 1—15. xx. 1. xxvi. 59. Mic. vi. 4.

NOTES.

CHAP. II. V. 2. Miriam, Moses's sister, must have been at least ten years older than he, as it is evident from the history in this chapter: and Aaron was three years older than Moses: but it does not appear that his preservation was attended with any peculiar difficulty; and from this we may infer, with some degree of probability at least, that the last bloody edict was not then enacted. Aaron was born eighty-three years before the Exodus, and Joseph died about a hundred and forty-five years before that event: the edict therefore could not be passed less than sixty-two years after the death of Joseph. But it is not known, how long that prince, “who knew not Joseph,” had reigned before the edict was made.—Moses when born appeared to be a goodly child; and the notice taken of this in several places, indicates that something extraordinary was observed in him, which was considered as an intimation of his future greatness. His mother therefore hid him three months, which the apostle informs us was done in faith. (Heb. xi. 23.) Either she had some peculiar assurance given her of his preservation, or believing in general the promises of deliverance to Israel, she was encouraged to conceal her infant, in dependence on God, though perhaps at the hazard of her own life.

V. 3, 4. It is probable, that the mother of Moses had received some intimation, that she was discovered, and expected that the executioners would come and murder the child in the house before her eyes. She therefore took for 5 And the daughter of Pharaoh came down to wash herself at the river, and her maidens walked along by the river's side: and ^gwhen she saw the ark among the flags, she sent her maid to fetch it.

^g 1 Kings xvii. 6. Ps. x. vi. 1. xxvi. 10. Prov. xxi. 1. Jon. i. 17. ii. 10.

6 And when she had opened it she saw the child: and behold the babe wept. And ^hshe had compassion on him, and said, This is one of the Hebrews' children.

^h 1 Kings viii. 50. Neh. i. 11. Ps. cvi. 46. Acts vii. 21.

7 Then said his sister to Pharaoh's daughter, Shall I go, and call to thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for thee?

8 And Pharaoh's daughter said unto her, ⁱGo. And the maid went and called the child's mother.

ⁱ Ps. xxvii. 10. Is. xvi. 3, 4. Ez. xvi. 8.

9 And Pharaoh's daughter said unto her, Take this child away and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages. And the woman took the child, and nursed it.

10 And the child grew, and she brought him unto Pharaoh's daughter, ^kand he became her son. And she called his name ^{*}Moses: and she said, ^lBecause I drew him out of the water.

^k Gen. xlvii. 5. Acts vii. 21, 22. Gal. iv. 5. 1 John iii. 1. ^l That is, Drawn out.

11 ¶ And it came to pass in those days, when ^mMoses was grown, that he went out unto his brethren, and looked on their ⁿburdens: and he spied an Egyptian smiting an Hebrew, one of his brethren.

^m Gen. iv. 25. xvi. 11. 1 Sam. i. 20. Matt. i. 21. B. C. 1533. ⁿ Acts vii. 23. Heb. xi. 24—26.

12 And ^ohe looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he slew the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand.

^o i. 11. iii. 7. v. 9 —14. Is. lviii. 6. Matt. x. 28. Luke iv. 18.

him an ark, or a small basket, formed of rushes, and made water-proof, by being coated with a kind of bitumen and pitch within and without. (Note, Is. xviii. 2.) Expecting some providential interposition in his behalf, and under the secret guidance of the Lord, she placed Moses in this ark, concealed it among the flags on the side of the river, and set his sister to watch it. This expedient did not seem likely to answer for any time; as the infant must at length have perished, or been devoured by the crocodiles with which the Nile abounds, if Pharaoh's servants had not found him. But she acted in faith, and the Lord answered her expectation.—Perhaps she intended to take him home in the evening, if nothing had intervened; and to carry him out again in the morning, so that if sought after he might not be found.

V. 5—9. Had any other persons found the exposed infant, they would scarcely have dared to preserve its life, even if they had been disposed to do so: but Pharaoh's daughter, with her attendants, passing near that part of the river, in going to some convenient place for bathing, (which was customary, not only for refreshment, but as a religious observance,) she discovered the ark, and sent for it. The beautiful babe weeping excited her compassion, so that she determined to bring him up: and when his sister, (probably after some delay, and observing that the company was at a loss how to proceed,) offered to fetch a Hebrew woman to nurse the child, she was sent for one: thus his own mother was employed to nurse him, and well rewarded for her pains!—The manner in which the great Ruler of the world accomplishes his secret purposes, without at all interfering with the free agency of his rational creatures, by imperceptibly leading them, in following their own inclinations and judgments, to such measures as coincide with his plans, is very observable in all these circumstances.—With what admiring joy and gratitude must Moses's mother have engaged in her delightful office! And how must she have adored the hand of God, in so marvellously answering, and far exceeding, her believing expectations!—A great variety of traditions are handed down to us concerning these events: but as there is no certainty in any of them, and they are neither interesting nor edifying, they may very properly be omitted. The narration as we have it is beautifully simple and concise.

V. 10. After Moses had continued a proper time with his mother, (from whom he no doubt learnt whose son he was, and received the general principles of true religion,) he was educated and provided for, as the adopted son of Pharaoh's daughter. Tradition reports that she was Pharaoh's only child, and had no offspring of her own, and that Moses was looked upon as presumptive heir to the crown; but all this is very doubtful.—We know however from better authority, that "he was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds." He was certainly much trusted and employed; and in Egypt he acquired those accomplishments, which were afterwards requisite for him, in the important services of standing before Pharaoh, and governing Israel.

V. 11, 12. (Note, Heb. xi. 24—26.) During forty years Moses seems to have lived as an Egyptian, and as men of high rank generally do, and not particularly to have regarded his oppressed brethren; but at this time "it came into his heart to visit them," under a firm persuasion that "God by his hand would deliver them," and supposing they would thus understand it. He likewise deliberately purposed to renounce the honours, wealth, and pleasures of his rank among the Egyptians; to cast his lot among Abraham's seed, and to participate in their privileges, especially their relation to the promised Saviour; for the sake of which he was willing to share in the reproach and affliction which they endured as the people of God. We suppose that his mother had informed him of his real descent, and he would naturally feel an attachment to his people: but he was now made a partaker of that "faith which overcomes the world;" and, supremely valuing the blessings of the new covenant through the Redeemer, he was willing, not only to risk, but to renounce and suffer all for his sake; assured that Israel was the people of God, and that the promises made to them would certainly be accomplished. He therefore went out to seek an opportunity of delivering Israel: perhaps he intended openly to 13 And when he went out the second day, behold, two men of the Hebrews strove together: ^pand he said to him that did the wrong, Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow?

14 And he said, ^qWho made thee a prince and a judge over us? Intendest thou to kill me, as thou killedst the Egyptian? And ^rMoses feared, and said, Surely this thing is known.

15 Now when Pharaoh heard this thing, he sought to slay Moses. But Moses ^sfled from the face of Pharaoh; and dwelt in the land of ^tMidian; and ^usat down by a well.

16 Now the ^vpriest of Midian had seven daughters: and ^wthey came and drew water, and filled the troughs to water their father's flock.

17 And ^xthe shepherds came and drove them away: but Moses stood up and helped them, and watered their flock.

18 And when they came to ^yReuel their father he said, How is it that you are come so soon to day?

19 And they said, ^zAn Egyptian p Cor. vi. 7. 8.

q Gen. xix. 9. xxxvii. 8-11. 19. 20. Num. xvi. 3. 13. Ps. ii. 2-6. Matt. xxi. 23. Luke xii. 14. xix. 14. 27. Acts vii. 26-28. 35.
r Heb. a man, a prince.
s Prov. xix. 12 xxix. 25.
t iv. 19. 1 Kings xix. 1-3. 13, 14. Jer. xxvi. 21-23. Matt. x. 23. Acts vii. 29.
u Gen. xxv. 2. 4.
v Gen. xxiv. 11. xxix. 2. John iv. 6.
w Or, prince. Gen. iv. 18. xli. 45. Marg.
x Gen. xxiv. 14-20. xxix. 6-10. 1 Sam. ix. 11.
y Gen. xxi. 25. xxvi. 15-22.

z iii. 1. iv. 18. xviii. 1-12. Jethro. Num. x. 29. Raguel.
a Gen. i. 11.

delivered us out of the hand of the shepherds, ^band also drew water ^benough for us, and watered the flock.

20 And he said unto his daughters, And where is he? Why is it that ye have left the man? ^cCall him that he may eat bread.

21 And Moses was ^dcontent to dwell with the man: and he gave Moses ^eZipporah his daughter.

22 And she bare him a son, and he called his name Gershom: ^ffor he said, I have been a stranger in a strange land.

23 And it came to pass ^gin process of time, that ^hthe king of Egypt died; and the children of Israel ⁱsighed by reason of the bondage, and they cried; and their ^kcry came up unto God, by reason of the bondage.

24 And ^lGod heard their groaning, and God ^mremembered his covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob.

25 And God ⁿlooked upon the children of Israel, and God ^ohad respect unto them.

c Gen. xxiv. 3-33. xxix. 18. xxxi. 54. xliii. 25.
d 10. Gen. xxxi. 38-40. Phil. iv. 11, 12. 1 Tim. vi. 6. Heb. xi. 25. xiii. 5. Janu. i. 10.
e iv. 20-25. xviii. 2-6. Num. xii. 1.
f 10. xviii. 3. Acts vii. 29. Heb. xi. 13.
g vii. 7. Act. vii. 30.
h iv. 19. Matt. ii. 19, 20. Act. xii. 23, 24.
i Gen. xvi. 11. Num. xx. 16. Deut. xxvi. 7. Ps. xii. 5.
k iii. 7-9. xxii. 28-27. Gen. iv. 10. xviii. 20, 21. Deut. xxiv. 15. Is. v. 7. Jam. v. 4.
l vi. 5. Judg. ii. 18. Ps. lxxix. 11. cii. 20.
m Gen. xv. 14-18. xxvi. 3. xlv. 4. Neh. ix. 8, 9. Ps. cv. 8-11. 42. cvii. 45. Luke i. 72, 73.
n iv. 31. 1 Sam. i. 11. 2 Sam. xvi. 12. Job xxxiii. 27. Luke i. 25.
o Heb. knew. iii. 7. Ps. i. 6. Matt. vii. 23.

join their interests, expecting that they would cordially welcome him, and concur with him in suitable measures; and, considering himself as acting under a divine commission, in defence of the oppressed, he took an opportunity of executing just punishment on one cruel oppressor. In this he seems to have acted rather prematurely; for the spirits of the Israelites were sunk, their dispositions become servile, and faith and hope were almost extinguished among them.

V. 13-15. When Moses had entered on the execution of his design, he seems to have intended daily to proceed in it: but he was discouraged by finding that his brethren, in their quarrels with each other, were no more disposed to submit to his authority or award, than the Egyptians were; and discovering that his conduct, in slaying the Egyptian, was known, he was aware that the Egyptians would deeply resent it. Perceiving also that the Israelites would not stand by him, and learning soon after that the king sought to slay him, his faith and courage failed him, and he too hastily concluded, that his only safety lay in leaving the country.—Thus the deliverance of Israel was delayed forty years, because they rejected their deliverer. In the mean time Egypt filled up, and Canaan was filling up, the measure of their iniquities; the Israelites were rapidly increasing; and Moses was learning to endure hardship, to exercise faith, patience, and meekness; and to walk with God in the lowly and retired life of a shepherd.

V. 16. Priest.] Or prince. (Marg.) Probably Reuel (18.) was prince of a small district upon the eastern shore of the Red Sea; and, still retaining among his people some knowledge of the true God, and regard to his worship, he acted also as a priest over them. The Midianites were the descendants of Abraham by Keturah. (Gen. xxv. 2.)

V. 17. Perhaps these shepherds were the servants of some other neighbouring person, who was rich in flocks and herds.—The scarcity of water, in those hot and sandy regions, gave occasion to these contentions.

V. 21. Content.] This was a singular example of one, brought up as Moses had been, submitting cheerfully to so laborious a business, and to be a servant also in that employment. Yet without doubt these forty years were the happiest of his life.—The events of a long period are here very briefly touched on.—Probably Moses had lived a considerable time with Reuel, before he gave him his daughter; or else he was long married before Zipporah had any children; for after forty years one of his sons seems to have been very young. (iv. 25.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1-10.

We should take occasion from reading of the cruel scenes, which these Hebrew parents witnessed, and the bitter sorrows which they felt, to be thankful that we can bring up our children with security and comfort. Still however they are exposed to so many perils, that the heart of a tender parent must often heave with anxious sighs about them: except as enabled, by the prayer of faith, to commit them to the care of the Almighty; and to use all means for their welfare, temporal and spiritual,

CHAP. III.

Moses feeds the flock of Jethro, 1 God appears to him in a flame of fire in a bush; and sends him to deliver Israel, 2—12. Moses enquires, and is told, the name of God, 13, 14. He is instructed what to speak to Israel, and to Pharaoh, whose decided opposition is foretold, 15—19; and is assured that at last the people shall leave Egypt greatly enriched, 20—22

NOW Moses ^a kept the flock of Jethro ^b his father-in-law, the priest of Midian: and he led the flock to the ^a Ps. lxxvii. 70—72. Am. i. 1 vii. 14. Matt. iv. 13. Luke ii. 6. ii. 16. xviii. 1—6. Num. x. 29. Judg. iv. 11.

in dependence upon his providence and grace. Then, indeed, we are prepared for every event: for if the Lord have any service for them to perform, he will preserve their lives; though in the midst of dangers; and surely every Christian parent would rather resign the dearest infant to death, than wish it to live wicked, mischievous, and miserable. And methinks our gracious God says to the believer, when presenting his infant-offspring to him in baptism, or pouring out his prayers in its behalf: "Take home this child, and bring it up for me, and I will pay thee thy wages." In obedience then to his command and in expectation of his blessing, let us bring up our children "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," and cheerfully leave the event with him.—Even among the blood-thirsty Egyptians, we meet with a beautiful example of humanity, which will rise up in judgment against numbers, who live under the light of revelation, and are called Christians; but who are so far from compassionating the children of others, that they are indolently and negligently cruel to their own offspring!—They who carefully watch the conduct of God's providence, experience many signal interpositions in their favour, which excite their admiration and gratitude, strengthen their faith, and encourage their hope for the future, and thus well recompense their attention. They frequently find their wants supplied, perhaps even from their very enemies, and their sharpest trials end most comfortably: and God takes care in his providence to qualify both them, and their's, for whatever service or situation he intends for them. For he very often furnishes the minds of those whom he means to employ, even while inattentive to religion, with those acquisitions of knowledge, which afterwards prove very useful in fitting them for the services to which they are appointed; but which they would neither have had leisure nor inclination to attain, had they previously minded "the one thing needful."

V. 11—25.

How powerful a principle is true faith! How it overcomes the love of the world and the fear of the cross, even when they oppose it with their utmost force! The favour of God, an interest in Christ, and an inheritance among his people, are the pre-eminent objects of every believer's desire: this, joined to the love of Christ and attachment to his cause, prepares him for making every requisite sacrifice; and that faith which refuses to do this is not genuine.—But they, who boldly enter upon services for God, must not only expect fierce opposition from his avowed enemies; but great discouragement from the lukewarmness, contempt, cowardice, and ingratitude of his professed servants. And while contentions among brethren disgrace and weaken the common cause of religion; he that would "set them at one again," however gently, must expect to be reproached, as taking too much upon him: and this perhaps by both parties, but assuredly by the party which is most in the wrong, and which is always the most impatient of controul. These disappointments, however, help to correct the forwardness and self-sufficiency of hasty zeal, and to prepare men for their work in its due season.—But our impatience is apt to interpret delays, as denials; to yield to discouragement, when we should only be humbled; and from rash impetuosity to sink into unbelieving negligence: and perhaps it requires stronger faith, to be contented in obscurity and neglect, cheerfully to labour without any prospect of applause, and patiently to prepare and wait for future opportunities of service, without despondency; than to face danger, out-brave reproach, and suffer persecution in some eminent sphere of usefulness.—The providence of God will find a refuge, and raise up friends, for his people; communion with him sweetens every solitude and trial; and it is our wisdom to inure ourselves to self-denial, that we may be fit for whatever is before us.—To assist the weak, and vindicate the oppressed, to shew kindness and use hospitality, and requite those who have been serviceable to us, are always becoming; nor is modest diligence, in any business useful or lawful, a disgrace to the daughters either of a prince or a priest.—When assistance appears to us most distant, and deliverance most improbable, they are often near at hand. To God all things are easy, and his whole plan lies before him: he remembers his holy covenant; and, for the purposes of his own glory, he will appear for his people, notwithstanding their sins. Even their groans, extorted by oppression, have a share of his compassionate attention; and in the darkest night of affliction, when they begin to cry to him, the day of deliverance will speedily dawn.—Finally, if Satan's work ceases not, for want of a succession of instruments; the Lord in answer to our prayers, will certainly furnish labourers for his harvest, in all ages, unto the end of the world.

NOTES.

CHAP. III. V. 1. Some expositors are of opinion, that Reuel, or Raguel, was grandfather to Zipporah, that Jethro was her father, and that Hobab, afterwards mentioned, was her brother: others suppose that Reuel was her father, and that Jethro was her brother, and brother-in-law to Moses, which the word may signify: but the Septuagint use the names Reuel and Jethro, indiscriminately, for the father-in-law of Moses. (ii. 18. Num. x. 29.)—Horeb was called "the mountain of God" by way of anticipation; as Moses wrote for those, who knew it by that title after the law had there been given.—Sinai and Horeb are supposed to be two summits of a mountain, which had the same base. It was situated in the interior parts of the desert, at some considerable distance from Jethro's habitation; and probably Moses led the flock thither for better pasturage. 'Moses was taken from the sheep-fold, (as David in after times,) to be ruler of God's people: 'for as hunting of wild beasts,' says Philo, back-side of the desert, and came to the mountain of God, even to ^d Horeb.

c 5. xviii. 5. x.x.
8. 11. Kings
xix 8.
d xvii. 6. Deut. 1
6. iv. 10. Ps. cvi
19. Mal. iv. 4.
e 4. 6. Gen. xlvii. 7
—13. xxiii. 15.
16. xlviii. 16.
Deut. xxxiii. 16.
Is. lxiii. 9. Hos.
xii. 4. b. Mal. iii
1. Acts vii. 39—
35.
f Gen. xv. 13—17.
Deut. iv. 20. Ps.
lxxi. 12. Is. xliii.
2. Dan. iii. 27.
2 Cor. i. 8—10.
g Ps. cxi. 2—4.
Acts vii. 31.

2 And the Angel of the LORD appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: and he looked; and behold, the bush ^f burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed.

3 And Moses said, I will now turn aside, ^g and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt.

4 And when the LORD saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, ^h Moses, Moses. And he said, Here am I.

5 And he said, ⁱ Draw not nigh h Gen. xxii. 1. 11.

xvi. 2. 1 Sam.
iii. 10. Acts ix.
4. x. 3. 13.
i xix. 12. 21. Lev.
x. 3. Heb. xii.
20.

“ is proper to men of a martial genius, and fits men to be captains and generals of armies: so the feeding of sheep is the best exercise and preparation for a kingdom, and the gentle government of mankind.” Bp. Patrick.—These governors were also types of the “ Good Shepherd who laid down his life for the sheep.”

V. 2. This Angel is afterwards called JEHOVAH, and God (4. 6).—“ God called to him out of the midst of the bush;” and he said, “ I AM THAT I AM.” With what propriety can this language be used, in a revelation expressly intended to instruct men in the knowledge and worship of the true God, and to withdraw them from idolatry of every kind; if we do not allow the doctrine of the coequality and deity of the Son of God, and that he is the Speaker in this place?—Fire is a scriptural emblem of the divine holiness and justice; of that vengeance which, in his righteous indignation, God inflicts on sinners; of the afflictions and trials by which he proves and purifies his people, whether immediately, or by instruments; and even of that baptism of the Holy Ghost, by which the dross of sinful affections is consumed, and the soul transformed into its own nature and image. (Note, Matt. iii. 11, 12.)—This fire was seen in a bush, not in a cedar. A bramble or thorn bush is prickly, and of little use except for fuel, but easily and speedily burnt; yet the bush was not consumed. The emblem was primarily intended to describe the state of Israel in Egypt; their meanness and unworthiness, their extreme distress, and their marvellous preservation by the power and presence of God: but Israel was in this a type of the Church, exposed to persecution; and of a believer, grievously harassed by temptations and afflictions. It has also been thought, that the fire in the bush represented the manner in which the law would be given from the adjacent mountain; the nature of that law as given to sinners; and the deliverance of the people from the destruction to which they were thus exposed.—The name Sinai seems derived from the word (סני) rendered a bush, either with reference to this bush, or to the bushes which grew upon it.

V. 4, 5. No appearance of the Lord is recorded since Jacob’s descent into Egypt, above two hundred years before; and Moses, when addressed by name, must have been as much surprised by what he heard, as by what he hither: ^k put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground.

6 Moreover he said, ^l I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses ^m hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God.

7 And the LORD said, ⁿ I have surely seen the affliction of my people which are in Egypt, and have heard their cry, by reason of their task-masters: for I know their sorrows.

8 And ^o I am come down to ^p deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that k Gen. xxviii. 16.

17. Josh. v. 15.
Ec. v. 1. Acts vii.
35.
l 15. Gen xvii. 7.
8. xxviii. 13.
1 Kings xviii. 36.
Matt. xxii. 32.
Acts vii. 32.
m Gen. xvii. 3.
1 Kings xix. 13.
Job xlii. 5, 6. Is.
vi. 1—5. Dan. x.
7, 8. Matt. xvii.
6. Heb. xii. 21.
Rev. i. 17.
n ii. 25. Gen. xxix.
32. 1 Sam. ix. 16.
Ps. cvi. 44. Is.
lxiii. 9. Heb. iv.
15.
o Gen. xl. 5. xviii.
21. Ps. xviii. 9.
Is. lxiv. 1. John
iii. 13. vi. 38.
p vi. 6—8. Gen.
xv. 14. l. 24.

saw.—He might reverently at a distance contemplate the object before him, for his instruction and encouragement; but he must not presume to gratify his curiosity, by a nearer approach, or by particular examination. He was also directed to put off his shoes, as an external token of humble reverence; for the spot became holy ground by this vision of the Almighty, and should thus be regarded by him. Probably, this was, at that time and in those countries, a customary expression of reverence and veneration. (Note, Josh. v. 13—15.)—It is supposed by many learned men, that the priests officiated barefoot in the tabernacle and temple: but we meet with no express command enjoining it.

V. 6. JEHOVAH was the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, being the Object of their worship, confidence, love, and obedience; and their Salvation, Portion, and everlasting Felicity in body and soul. But this declaration was intended, to remind the Israelites of the promises made to their fathers, especially with reference to the land of Canaan: for JEHOVAH was the God of Israel, as a nation; and not the God of the Ishmaelites and Midianites, though descended from Abraham, or of the Edomites, though descended from Isaac. Amram, Moses’s father, is also supposed to be personally included, as a believing descendant of Abraham.

V. 7. “ I have surely seen,” or, “ Seeing I have seen,” (that is, with attention and compassion,) “ the afflictions of my people.”—Notwithstanding the ignorance, idolatry, and wickedness of the Israelites, the Lord acknowledged them as his people, because of their relation to Abraham, because they constituted the visible Church, and because there was a remnant of true believers among them.—The severity of the task-masters extorted their bitter cries, which in most of them were merely the expression of distress, not of faith; the prayer of nature, not of grace: yet the Lord noticed and pitied their sorrows. Perhaps they almost universally despaired of deliverance; and Moses, having been forty years a shepherd, probably expected and desired nothing more, than to live and die in that situation, and had given up all thoughts of delivering Israel: yet then the very time was come.

V. 8. Come down.] This was spoken after the manner

q xlii. 5. xxxiii. 2, 3. Gen. xv. 18. Num. xlii. 27. xiv. 7. 8. Deut. 1. 7. 25. viii. 7—9. vi. 9. xxvi. 9—15. Neh. ix. 25. Jer. xl. 5. xxxvii. 22. Ez. xx. 6
 r Gen. xv. 18—21. Deut. vii. 1. Josh. ix. 1. Neh. ix. 8

9 Now therefore behold, the cry of the children of Israel is come unto me: and I have also seen the oppression wherewith the Egyptians oppress them.

10 Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth my people the children of Israel out of Egypt.

11 And Moses said unto God, Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, of men, and expressed with energy the intent of JEHOVAH'S appearance to Moses. (Marg. Ref. o.)

V. 11. Moses had before deemed himself in a measure competent to this service, which he had some intimations that he was to perform; and he set about it probably with undue haste, and not without some improper dependence on his rank, influence, and reputation among the Egyptians: but now, when he was unspeakably better qualified with heavenly wisdom, experience, patience, meekness, stedfastness, humility, and piety; and was, without competition, the most proper person on earth for it; he was also become conscious of his insufficiency! This was in a great measure the effect of increasing knowledge of God and of himself: but there was also a deep sense of the vast difficulty of the business, not without some culpable fear of Pharaoh and the Egyptians, and of contempt and opposition from Israel. Before, self-confidence mingled with, and assumed the appearance of, strong faith and great zeal: but now, some degree of sinful distrust of God was associated with deep humility; and induced him timidly to shift, as well as humbly to decline, the important service.—So very defective are the strongest graces, and the best duties, of the most eminent saints!

V. 12. Certainly I, &c.] All objections, expressed or implied, were thus answered at once: 'As I send thee, I will certainly go with thee; and then all thy insufficiency, and all possible difficulties, can form no hindrance at all.' (Note, Matt, xxviii. 19, 20.)—The token annexed was made not to sense, but to faith; and therefore the sign was consequent to the event confirmed by it: as if God had said, 'I promise to meet thee and Israel at this mountain: this promise is thy assurance of success: depend on my power and faithfulness, and go fetch them forth nothing doubting.' (Marg. Ref.)—It was also a private token to Moses, and not intended as a sign to Israel or to Pharaoh.

V. 13. Moses had seen enough in Egypt, forty years before, to convince him of his people's ignorance and ungodliness; and he was not sanguine in his expectations of finding them more favourably disposed towards him, than they had been. He was therefore afraid, that they would scarcely understand much less believe him, when he spake to them of "the God of their fathers." He had before been scornfully asked, "Who made thee a ruler and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?

12 And he said, 'Certainly I will be with thee; and this shall be a token unto thee, that I have sent thee; when thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain.'

13 ¶ And Moses said unto God, Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say unto them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, 'What is his name? what shall I say unto them?'

14 And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: And he said, Thus shalt

"and a judge over us?" and he was not prepared to answer the question: therefore he desired at this time, to have fuller instructions and better authenticated credentials. The patriarchs had received revelations from God; but Moses seems to have been the first, after the deluge, who was expressly sent to speak to others in his name.

V. 14. I AM THAT I AM, (or, I WILL BE THAT I WILL BE,) signifies, I am he that exists; and implies, self-existence, independence, unchangeableness, incomprehensibility, eternity, and consummate perfection. "I am, and there is none else beside me." All else have their being from God, and are entirely dependent on him.—There is a majestick simplicity and an expressive dignity in this language, which disgraces beneath contempt the high-sounding, pompous titles, which mortals have been proud to arrogate to themselves.—JEHOVAH, (a name of similar signification,) thus distinguished himself from the idols of the nations, which are nothing in the world; and from all creatures, which have only a derived, dependent, mutable, existence, in him and from him. Thus he proposed himself as the only Object of his people's worship, the sure Foundation of their hopes, and the all-sufficient Fountain of their felicity. I AM THAT I AM. Not I was, but I am, and will be. With him the past, the present, and the future are all one, as alike open to the view of his omniscience.—Let us not here forget him, whom the apostle declares to be "The same yesterday, to day, and for ever:" whom another apostle introduces saying, "I am Alpha, and Omega, the first, and the last;" and who, dwelling in human flesh, said, with a noble disregard to the rules of human language, "Before Abraham was I AM." This evident assumption of the title, I AM THAT I AM, the unbelieving Jews at that day fully understood, and for it attempted to stone him; though modern unbelievers cannot or will not perceive it! There is no doubt, however, but the Speaker is the same in both places; for "no man hath seen God, at any time; the only-begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him."—When the Lord subjoined "I AM," or HE THAT EXISTS, (ὁ ὢν, Sept.) "hath sent me unto you," it was intended to give authority to the message, and to ensure the accomplishment of his purpose, by his incomprehensible power and perfection.

thou say unto the children of Israel, ^a I AM hath sent me unto you.

^a vi. 3. Ps. lxxviii. 4. Eccl. 2. Is. xliv. 6. Matt. xxviii. 20. xxviii. 20. John viii. 58. Heb. xiii. 8. Rev. i. 4, 8, 17. b. 6. iv. 5. Gen. xvii. 7, 8. Deut. i. 11. 35. iv. 1. 2 Chr. xxviii. 9. Matt. xxiii. 32. Acts vii. 32. c. Ps. cxxxv. 13.

15 And God said moreover unto Moses, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, ^b The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath sent me unto you: ^c this is my name for ever, and this is my ^d memorial unto all generations.

^d Ps. cii. 12. Nos. xii. 5.

16 Go and gather the ^e elders of Israel together, and say unto them, The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, appeared unto me, saying, I have surely ^f visited you, and ^g seen that which is done to you in Egypt.

^e iv. 29. xxviii. 12. xxiv. 11. Gen. i. 7. Matt. xxvi. 3. Acts xi. 30. xx. 17. 1 Pet. v. 1.

17 And I have said, ^h I will bring you up out of the affliction of Egypt, ⁱ unto the land of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, unto a land flowing with milk and honey.

^f iv. 31. Gen. xxi. 1. 1. 24. Luke i. 68. xix. 44. Acts xv. 14. 1 Pet. ii. 12. ^g Gen. xv. 13—21. xvi. 4.

18 And ^j they shall hearken to thy voice: ^k and thou shalt come, thou and

^h See on 8

ⁱ iv. 31. 2 Chr. xxx. 12. Ps. cx. k v. 1—3.

the elders of Israel, unto the king of Egypt, and ye shall say unto him, ^l The LORD God of the Hebrews hath ^m met with us; and now let us go, we beseech thee, ⁿ three days' journey into the wilderness, ^o that we may sacrifice to the LORD our God.

^l vii. 16. ix. 1. 73. x. 3. ^m iv. 24. v. 3. Num. xxiii. 3. 4. 15, 16. Is. lxv. 5. ⁿ viii. 27. ^o 12. vii. 16. viii. 25—28. x. 24—25.

19 And I am sure that the king of Egypt will not let you go, ^p no, not by a mighty hand.

^p Or, but by a strong hand. vi. 1. Ps. cxxxvii. 11, 12. Is. lxviii. 12.

20 And I will ^q stretch out my hand, and ^r smite Egypt with all my wonders which I will do in the midst thereof: and ^s after that he will let you go.

^q vi. 6. vii. 5. ix. 16. Ez. xx. 33. ^r vii. 3. xi. 9. Deut. iv. 34. vi. 22. Neh. ix. 10. Ps. cv. 27. cva. 22. cxxxv. 8, 9. Is. xix. 22. Jer. xxxii. 20, 21. Acts vii. 36.

21 And I ^t will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians: and it shall come to pass, that when ye go, ye shall not go empty.

^t xi. 8. xii. 31. 39. x. 3. xii. 36. ^u Gen. xxxix. 21. Neh. i. 11. Ps. cvi. 46. Prov. xvi. 7. Acts viii. 10.

22 But ^v every woman shall borrow of her neighbour, and of her that sojourneth in her house, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment: and ye shall put ^w them upon your sons, and upon your daughters; and ye shall ^x spoil ^y the Egyptians.

^v xi. 2. xii. 35. Gen. xv. 14.

^w Job xxvii. 16. 17. Prov. xiii. 22. Is. xxxiii. 1. Ez. xxxix. 10. ^x Or, Egypt.

V. 15. The title of JEHOVAH, the God of Abraham, &c. would remind the Israelites of his relations and engagements to them, as the descendants of these illustrious patriarchs.—The Lord had before declared his name, as signifying eternal self-existence; and he here adds his covenant-relation to the seed of Abraham, as the perpetual memorial of his former mercies, and security of future blessings to his Church. The title “The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ,” is the same to us, under the Christian dispensation, as the Name here expressed was to Israel.

V. 18. Such a willingness to be delivered, as would induce the Israelites to use the means, encounter the difficulties, and face the dangers, requisite for that purpose, was so contrary to their dispirited and desponding frame of mind, that it could only be effected by the powerful influence of God upon their hearts: but he here engaged to Moses, that he would thus prepare them in due time, to concur decidedly in his efforts for their deliverance.—The Elders seem to have been the more aged and distinguished persons in the several tribes and families; but it does not appear that they were invested with any authority.

V. 19, 20. The Lord, when he engaged for Israel's willingness, warned Moses of Pharaoh's obstinate and final unwillingness, that he might know what to expect.—Pharaoh reluctantly consented, when under the terror of imminent destruction; but he retracted that consent, and perished in opposing Israel's departure.

V. 21, 22. The circumstances, in which the Egyptians were placed, were over-ruled to induce multitudes of them to favour Israel; while others were hardened to their destruction.—The Israelites were directed to borrow, or rather to ask, of the Egyptians, their richest furniture and ornaments: and he who is the great Proprietor of all things, and giveth to all men as he pleases, seeing the Egyptians enriched by oppressing the Israelites, thus constrained them to refund, and to pay them the wages which their labour justly deserved. (Notes, xi. 2, 3. xii. 35, 36. Gen. xxxi. 10—16.)—The word borrow suggests the idea of fraud in the transaction; which the original word does not imply. It means to ask, whether as a gift, or a loan.—A great part of this gold and silver was afterwards used in building and furnishing the tabernacle.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—6.

When the Lord exercises the faith and patience of his servants, they should rest assured, that he acts in wisdom, faithfulness, and mercy; and that when the best time is come, their expectation shall be abundantly answered: but such is the human heart, that the best of men generally need preparing, by a long course of humiliating discipline, for behaving, when greatly prospered, in a manner honourable to God and religion. It is therefore “good that a man should both hope, and quietly wait for the salvation of the LORD.” But quietness and patience must be distinguished from indolence: for the Lord always requires his servants to be employed, and meets them at their employments; and the meanest honest labour is more reputable to the greatest characters, than inactivity.—The discoveries of himself, which God vouchsafes us, in his holy word and in his works, should be regarded with reverent

CHAP. IV.

The Lord assures Moses of his effectual assistance, by miraculous signs and gracious promises, 1—12; and is angry at his backwardness to the service; yet appoints Aaron to assist him, 13—17. Moses leaves Jethro, and sets out in his journey; and is charged with a message to Pharaoh, 18—23. He is rebuked by the way; Zipporah circumcises her son: Aaron meets Moses, and they are welcomed by the Israelites, 24—31.

AND Moses answered, and said, But behold, "they will not believe me, nor hearken unto my voice: for they will say, The LORD hath not appeared unto thee." a 31 ii. 14. ih. 18. Acts vii. 25.

attention, at an equal distance from contemptuous indifference, and bold curiosity.—Whatever stands in relation to God is consecrated and made holy; and though "bodily exercise profiteth little," yet it is proper to express our inward reverence and adoration by such external tokens, as are customary and significant. A decent exterior behaviour indeed may be hypocritical; but the neglect of it betrays a heart, not properly impressed with awe of the majesty and purity of God, nor suitably humbled under the sense of its own meanness and unworthiness: and the condescending kindness of the Lord should not abate, but increase, this holy awe.—In accommodation to our infirmities, God very graciously condescends to address our senses, as well as understandings: and by the burning bush he teaches us many useful lessons. We need not tremble for the Church of God in its lowest estate, though it appear contemptible to the carnal eye, and seem ready to be consumed by the flames of persecution; for the Lord is in the bush, and it cannot be injured. Never was bush so honourable as that in which JEHOVAH dwelt, though it was on fire: and since the Son of God dwelt in frail human nature, and passed through the hottest fire of Satan's temptations, of the world's hatred, and of the wrath of God for our sins; we need not be apprehensive about any poor burning bush, in which JEHOVAH dwells. This is the privilege and security of every true Christian, with whom, when afflicted and tempted, we should sympathize; but we need not be anxious about the event.—While men are strengthened to maintain the conflict, and to persevere in the path of duty, they are not deserted by God, whatever their fears or feelings may be; nor can the fire, however hot, consume any thing but the dross of remaining sinful inclinations.—But let the mere professor of the gospel tremble, even when exempt from temptation, opposition, or conflict; these he escapes because he "walks according to the course of this world," with which he will be condemned. And let the careless and presumptuous sinner also take warning; for he is proper fuel for the fire of God's vengeance, which will burn for ever, but never consume those who finally sink under it.

V. 7—12.

Oppressors and prosperous tyrants should remember, that however they may elude or out-brave human justice, and however God may defer to take vengeance, yet all their crimes are noted in his book; that their measure of iniquity is filling up; and they will speedily be made to disgorge the prey which they have ravenously devoured, and to experience the vengeance of the Almighty; unless repentance and fruits meet for repentance prevent their doom. (Luke xix. 8, 9.)—And let the oppressed recollect, that God is their peculiar Patron; that he counts their sighs and groans; and if he answers the mere cry of distress,

"shall he not avenge his own elect, who cry day and night to him, though he bear long with them? Yea, he will avenge them speedily." But when he comes to avenge his people on their oppressors, "will he find faith on the earth?" Alas, "hope deferred maketh the heart sick:" and though true faith will not totally fail; yet at such times it will often be very feeble, and expectations even of promised blessings extremely languid.

V. 13—22.

Let us be careful not to distrust and dishonour the power, faithfulness, and love of God. He is the great I AM; "a thousand years with him are but as one day:" he remembers his holy covenant; he deals with his people according to the abundance of his mercies; he forgives the multitude of their transgressions; and he sends deliverance in its appointed season.—When God employs any one in his service, he will certainly go with him: but "before honour is humility;" and success is frequently delayed or denied, to instruments otherwise qualified, because they do not possess a humble spirit.—Yet nothing good is unalloyed in man, and the most unaffected humility may prove an occasion to irresolution, or reluctance to the work which the Lord requires of us.—They who would be useful, must depend upon God to make their endeavours acceptable to their brethren; especially where such benefits are intended, as require men to exert themselves, to endure hardship, and to face danger: and, if we go in this dependence, he will secure our success with some; while we deliver our message to all, "whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear."—But in Pharaoh's tyranny, and Israel's oppression, we see a picture of the sinner's miserable and abject submission: however galled with the yoke of Satan, he still drudges on, till the Lord sends redemption. With the invitations of his gospel, he communicates the life-giving, drawing, and teaching influences of his Spirit; and thus men are made willing to seek and strive for deliverance: then Satan loses his power to retain them; they come forth with all they have and are, and consecrate the whole to the glory of God and the service of his Church.

NOTES.

CHAP. IV. V. 1—5. The Lord had expressly assured Moses, that the people should hearken to him, (iii. 18.) so that his objection was unreasonable, and a proof that his faith was wavering. Yet it was proper he should be informed, that the Lord would authenticate his commission by miracles, both to Israel and to Pharaoh.—The rod in his hand was probably a common staff, or shepherd's crook; but it was now consecrated to God, to be the token of his presence and operation, and was therefore afterwards

2 And the LORD said unto him, What is that in thine hand? And he said, ^b A rod.

b 17. 20. Lev. xxvii. 32. Ps. cx. 2. Is. xi. 4. Mic. vii. 14
c vii. 10—15. Am v. 19.

3 And he said, Cast it on the ground; and he cast it on the ground, and ^e it became a serpent: and Moses fled from before it.

d Ps. xci. 13. Mark xvi. 18. Luke x. 19. Acts xxviii. 3—6 e John ii. 5.

4 And the LORD said unto Moses, Put forth thine hand, and take it by the tail. ^e And he put forth his hand and caught it, and it became a rod in his hand.

f 1. iii. 18. xix. 9. John v. 36. xi. 15. 42. xx. 31.
g iii. 15.

5 That ^f they may believe that ^g the LORD God of their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath appeared unto thee.

6 And the LORD said furthermore unto him, Put now thine hand into thy bosom; and he put his hand into his bosom; and when he took it out, behold, his hand was ^h leprous as snow.

h Num. xii. 10
2 Kings v. 27.

7 And he said, Put thine hand into thy bosom again: and he put his hand into his bosom again, and plucked it out of his bosom, and behold, ⁱ it was turned again as his other flesh.

i 2 Kings v. 14
Matt. viii. 3.

8 And it shall come to pass, ^k if they k 30, 31. Is. xxviii. 10. John xii. 37.

will not believe thee, neither hearken to the voice of the first sign, that ^l they will believe the voice of the latter sign.

l Deut. xxxii. 30.
2 Kings v. 7. Job v. 18.

9 And it shall come to pass, if they will not believe also these two signs, neither hearken unto thy voice, that thou shalt take of the water of the river, and pour it upon the dry land: and the water which thou takest out of the river, ^m shall become ⁿ blood upon the dry land.

* Heb. shall be, and shall be.
m 1. 22. vii. 19—25. Matt. vii. 2. John ii. 8—11. Rev. xvi. 3—6.

10 And Moses said unto the LORD, O my Lord, I am not ^o eloquent, neither ^p heretofore, nor since thou hast spoken unto thy servant: but I am ^q slow of speech, and of a slow tongue.

† Heb. a man of words. 1 Cor. ii. 1—4. 2 Cor. x. 10. xl. 6.
‡ Heb. since yesterday, nor since the third day.
n vi. 12. Jer. i. 6. Acts vii. 22.

11 And the LORD said unto him, ^r Who hath made man's mouth? or who maketh the dumb, or deaf, or the seeing, or the blind? have not I the LORD?

o Ps. li. 15. xciv. 9. Is. xxxv. 5, 6. Ez. iii. 26, 27. xxxiii. 22.

12 Now therefore go, and ^p I will be with thy mouth, and teach thee what thou shalt say.

p Is. xlix. 2. 1. 4. Jer. i. 9. Matt. x. 19, 20. Mark xiii. 11. Luke xii. 11, 12. xxi. 14, 15. Eph. vi. 19.

13 And he said, O my Lord, ^q send I pray thee, by the hand of him whom thou ^r wilt send.

q 1 Kings xix. 4. Jer. xx. 9. Ez. iii. 14, 15. Jon. i. 3.

14 And ^r the anger of the LORD was † Or, shouldst.

r Luke ix. 59, 60. Acts xv. 38. Phil. ii. 21.

called "the rod of God." When waved by the hand of Moses or Aaron, it was a token to Israel of guidance, encouragement, and protection; but to Egypt, it was the appointed token of desolating judgments, like the mortal bite of the most poisonous serpent.—In this it was also a type of the gospel, "the rod of the Redeemer's strength" (Ps. ex. 2), which is a savour of life to some and of death to others.—Though Moses was greatly affrighted at the serpent thus miraculously produced, which seems to have been very formidable; yet his faith was so far strengthened by the sign, that he ventured at God's command to seize it by the tail, and it again became a harmless rod. This was intended to shew him, that the performance of a similar miracle before his people, would convince them that the Lord had sent him.

V. 6, 7. This sign denoted, that God could easily remove Israel's sin, though they were unclean as the leprous hand; that he could employ Moses's ministry, though feeble and unworthy in itself, and by him inflict his plagues on Egypt, or remove them as he pleased; and that he could effect the deliverance of his people by the most unlikely means, notwithstanding the most powerful opposition.—It is very probable that the absurd story, mentioned by Josephus, of Moses and the Israelites being driven out of Egypt, because infected with leprosy, was derived from some distorted tradition of this miraculous sign.

V. 10. Moses supposed that great eloquence would be requisite, both to persuade Israel, and to plead before Pharaoh: and he objected, that in the Egyptian court he had, at all former times, been defective in the gift of a ready and graceful elocution; and that even since the Lord had spoken to him, he had experienced no alteration in this respect. We read, however, that he "was mighty in words" as well as deeds: and so was St. Paul, though he affected no eloquence, and was deemed by some "in speech contemptible." They both could speak with energy and to the purpose, though not with the enticing words and delusive charms of human oratory.

Slow of speech.] ἰσχυροφωνος. Sept.—Of a slender voice, or speaking with hesitation and interruptions of voice.

V. 11, 12. The Lord alone originally gave to Adam and his posterity the inexplicable power of articulate speech; and he is the sole Author of the disparity, which subsists among men in these and other endowments: could he not therefore easily remove from Moses this impediment, if he saw that a more fluent and graceful utterance was requisite for him?—It may be useful to compare JEHOVAH's promise to Moses, with our Lord's words to his disciples, "I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay, or resist." Can any but God "give a mouth and wisdom?" (Note, Luke xxi. 12—19.)

V. 13. 'Send by any one else, only excuse me as incompetent.' (Notes, Is. vi. 5—8.)

V. 14. Moses's unbelief, and reluctance to engage in this arduous and dangerous service, excited the divine displeasure; which probably was shewn by some sensible kindled against Moses ; and he said, Is not Aaron the Levite thy brother? I know that he can speak well. And also behold, he cometh forth to meet thee : and when he seeth thee, he will be glad in his heart.

27. 1 Sam. x. 1
-7. Mark xiv.
13-15. 2 Cor.
ii. 13. vii. 6, 7.
1 Thea. iii. 6, 7.

15 And thou shalt speak unto him ; and put words in his mouth : and I will be with thy mouth and with his mouth, and he will teach you what ye shall do.

t vii. 1, 2. 2 Sam.
xiv. 3. Is. li. 16.
lix. 21.
u Num. xxii. 38.
xxiii. 5. 12. 16.
Deut. xviii. 18.
Matt. xxviii. 20.
1 Cor. xi. 23. xv.
1.

16 And he shall be thy spokesman unto the people : and he shall be, even he shall be to thee instead of a mouth, and thou shalt be to him instead of God.

y vii. 1, 2. John x.
34, 35.

17 And thou shalt take this rod in thine hand, wherewith thou shalt do signs.

x vii. 9. 19.

18 ¶ And Moses went and returned to Jethro his father-in-law, and said unto him, Let me go, I pray thee, and return unto my brethren ; which are in Egypt, and see whether they be yet

• Heb. Jether.
See on iii. 1.
• 1 Tim. vi. 1.
b Gen. xlv. 3. Acts
xv. 36.

token, perhaps by the fire in the bush becoming more vehement : yet the Lord did not supersede his commission ; but in condescension to his weakness, and perhaps also as a gentle rebuke, he assigned him an assistant, who should share the danger, the burden, and the honour. Thus Christ sent out his disciples by two and two ; and several of them were brethren.—We are not informed, in what station Aaron had hitherto lived : but he seems to have enjoyed many advantages of education, probably by means of Moses ; and he had become remarkable for eloquence. Perhaps this might occasion his being called “ Aaron the Levite,” as a person of eminence among the descendants of Levi.—The Lord had revealed himself to Aaron, at the same time as he did to Moses, and had directed him to meet him (27). This remarkable concurrence would encourage both of them.

V. 15. With his mouth.] Though Aaron was eloquent, yet he could not speak to any good purpose without the teaching and assistance of the Lord.

V. 16. Moses, though the younger brother, was the superior in this commission : the word of God came first to him ; and he dictated to Aaron what he should speak, as God put his words into the mouth of his prophets.

V. 18. Moses, now resolved to obey the heavenly vision, intimated to Jethro, (who had behaved with great kindness,) that he was about to leave him, as one who asked his permission to visit his afflicted brethren : (Gen. xxxi. 30 :) but it does not appear that he informed him of the particulars. Thus he parted amicably from him, and the mutual affection between them was not interrupted.—The intercourse between nations was at that time very difficult ; and the peculiar circumstances in which Moses was placed, might preclude him from enquiring after, or learning, the condition of his brethren.

alive. And Jethro said to Moses, Go in peace.

c 1 Sam. i. 17.
Luke vii. 50.
Acts xvi. 36.

19 And the LORD said unto Moses in Midian, Go, return into Egypt : for all the men are dead which sought thy life.

d ii. 15, 23. Matt.
ii. 20.

20 And Moses took his wife, and his sons, and set them upon an ass, and he returned to the land of Egypt. And Moses took the rod of God in his hand.

e xvii. 9. Num.
xx. 8, 9.

21 And the LORD said unto Moses, When thou goest to return into Egypt, see that thou do all those wonders before Pharaoh, which I have put in thine hand : but I will harden his heart, that he shall not let the people go.

f vii. 3. 13. ix. 12.
35. x. 1. 20. xiv.
8. Gen. vi. 8.
Deut. ii. 30-33.
36. Josh. xi. 20.
1 Kings xxii. 22.
1s. vi. 10. lxxiii.
17. John xii. 40.
Rom. i. 28. ix.
18. xi. 8-10.
2 Cor. ii. 16.
2 Thea. ii. 10-12.
1 Pet. ii. 8.

22 And thou shalt say unto Pharaoh, Thus saith the LORD, Israel is my son, even my first-born.

23 And I say unto thee, Let my son go, that he may serve me : and if thou refuse to let him go, behold, I will slay thy son, even thy first-born.

g xix. 5, 6. Deut.
xv. 1. Jer. xxxi.
9. Hos. xi. 1.
Rom. ix. 4.
Heb. xii. 23.
h xi. 5. xii. 29. Ps.
lxxxviii. 51. cv.
36. cxxxv. 8.

V. 19. This revelation to Moses in Midian seems to have been distinct from that at Horeb.—A secret dread of Pharaoh and the Egyptians, as incensed against him for his former conduct, was one cause of his reluctance : and it does not appear that the Lord informed him that his enemies were dead, till he had first set about obeying his command.

V. 21. Harden.] God never communicates “ hardness,” or wickedness, to the heart of man, by a positive act ; for he cannot be tempted of evil, neither tempteth “ he any man.” But, when provoked by atrocious crimes, he gives a person up to his own heart’s lusts ; he permits Satan to entice, deceive, and blind him ; and he takes off those providential restraints, by which many are kept from wickedness, because they have not opportunity or power to commit it, or dare not through fear or shame. When a man is thus left, commands, warnings, judgments, and deliverances, every truth in Scripture and every dispensation of Providence, prove the occasion of increasing obduracy and insensibility, pride and presumption.—By this general declaration, Moses was taught to expect and prepare for difficulty and opposition ; and the subsequent history will give an abundant opportunity of stating the several stages by which Pharaoh’s obduracy was induced, and the import of the several words made use of, in this remarkable instance and illustration of the Lord’s dealing with obstinate sinners.

V. 22, 23. Israel was despised by the Egyptians as a contemptible people ; but was honoured of God, being near and dear to him as a child is to his father, and as having that pre-eminence among the nations, which the first-born has among the brethren. Pharaoh therefore might be assured, that God would defend, avenge, deliver, and provide for Israel : and that if he attempted to retain in bond-

24 ¶ And it came to pass by the way in the inn, that ¹the LORD met him, and ^ksought to kill him.

^l iii. 18. Num. xvii. 22, 23. 1 Chr. xxi. 16. Hos. xiii. 8. ^k Gen. xvii. 14. Lev. x. 3 1 Kings xiii. 24. ^l Josh. v. 2, 3 ^o Or, knife. [†] Heb. made it touch.

25 Then Zipporah took ¹a sharp stone, and cut off the fore-skin of her son, and [†]cast it at his feet, and said, Surely a bloody husband art thou to me.

26 So he let him go: then she said, A bloody husband thou art, because of the circumcision.

27 ¶ And the LORD said to Aaron, ^mGo into the wilderness to meet Moses. And he went and met him in ^athe mount of God, and kissed him.

^m 14-16 Acts x. 5, 6, 20. ⁿ iii. 1. xix. 3. xx. 18. xxiv. 15-17. 1 Kings xix. 8. ^o Jon. iii. 2. Matt xxi. 29.

28 And Moses ^otold Aaron all the words of the LORD, who had sent him, and all the signs which he had commanded him.

29 And Moses and Aaron went, and ^pgathered together all the elders of the children of Israel. ^p iii. 16. xxiv. 11

30 And Aaron spake all the words which the LORD had spoken unto Moses, and ^qdid the signs in the sight of the people. ^q 2-9

31 And the people ^rbelieved: and when they heard that the LORD had ^rvisited the children of Israel, and that he had ^tlooked upon their affliction, then they ^ubowed their heads and worshipped. ^r iii. 18. Ps cvi. 12, 13. Luke viii. 13. ^s See on iii. 16. ^t ii. 25. iii. 7. ^u xii. 27. Gen. xix. 3. 1 Chr. xix. 20. 2 Chr. xx. 18.

age that people, who stood related to JEHOVAH, as his first-born son, and forbid them to worship and serve him; he must expect to feel the effects of omnipotent indignation, which would at length slay his eldest son, with all the first-born in the land of Egypt.—True believers are “the church of the first-born, whose names are written in heaven:” and though rulers are entitled to honour and civil obedience from them, they have no right to prohibit them from serving God, according to the dictates of their conscience; and they may expect severe rebukes if they attempt it.

V. 24-26. Either the Lord appeared to his servant, by some external token of his presence, as if about immediately to slay him; or, as some suppose, he inflicted on him a sudden and very dangerous disease. Moses seems, however, to have understood, that he was rebuked for neglecting to circumcise his son; probably from regard to Zipporah who was averse to it. It is supposed that circumcision was in use among the Midianites, as descended from Abraham; and that Zipporah had merely induced Moses to defer the performance of it beyond the appointed time, on account of the journey, or on some other pretence. But he was raised up for an extraordinary service, and it was proper he should set an example of exact obedience in his own conduct, and therefore he was thus sharply rebuked.—As he was either under great perturbation of mind, or dangerously ill, Zipporah immediately circumcised her son, with a knife made of a sharp flint, such knives being common in some countries: and this may intimate the haste in which the rite was performed.—The words which she spake, when she laid the fore-skin of her son at the feet of Moses, are differently understood: some think that she rashly reproached both him and his religion, which required this bloody ordinance; but others are of opinion, that she spake in great affection, as having anew espoused him, by circumcising her son; seeing the blood shed in that rite had been the means of restoring him to her again. For when it had been performed, the Lord delivered Moses and allowed him to prosecute his journey.—It is probable that on this occasion Zipporah returned to Jethro for a time. (Note, xviii. 1-5.) Some render the clause, “So he let him go,” so she left him, as referring to this: but the translation cannot be supported, as the Hebrew text now stands; both words being masculine.

V. 27. The Lord had directed Aaron to meet his brother in the wilderness.—Moses seems to have been retarded by his family-concerns, while Aaron made great haste; and thus he met Moses almost as soon as he had set out upon his journey, which would be a great encouragement to him. Probably, they had not seen or heard of each other for a long time before.

V. 30. Signs.] Moses gave the people this proof of his divine mission, to ensure their concurrence, before he applied to Pharaoh in their behalf.—It is supposed that Moses performed the miraculous signs, while Aaron delivered the message of God to the people (15-17).—“And he did the signs, &c.”

V. 31. Thus the Elders of Israel acknowledged JEHOVAH as the true God, and the God of their fathers, and Moses as his messenger for their deliverance; and they testified their gratitude and expectation, in an act of solemn worship.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1-17.

How indisposed are men to believe the testimony of God! Whether he denounce vengeance upon obstinate offenders, or promise acceptance, assistance, and salvation to the returning sinner, they are always prone to question his veracity; and to act as if his word could not absolutely be depended on, or was not likely to be accomplished! Thus some are hardened in presumption, others sink into despondency, and others are discouraged and faint-hearted in all their endeavours.—But the Lord being slow to anger and of great mercy, deals not with us according to the multitude of our sins; else the strongest believer upon earth, instead of being saved by his faith, might be righteously condemned for his unbelief.—When we shrink from trouble and self-denial, or the reproach or danger of any service; self-love soon suggests some excuse, which appears sufficient to us, however trivial it may be in the judgment of others: and it is no uncommon case for those, who have been rebuked for rashness and precipitation, afterwards to become timidly negligent of their evident duty. But let unbelief, sloth, and cow-

CHAP. V.

Moses and Aaron deliver their message to Pharaoh, who disdainfully rejects it, 1—5. He increases the task of the Israelites, allows them no straw, and silences their complaints, 6—19. They despond and murmur, and Moses complains to the Lord, 20—23.

ardice, start ever so many objections, against our doing the duty of that station to which it hath pleased God to call us; his word furnishes us with answers to them all: and the assurance of his assistance and protection should in every case fully satisfy our minds.—When God gives revelations of new truths, or introduces new dispensations, materially differing from all which have preceded, he always sets his seal to them, and enables his servants to authenticate their mission by some conclusive sign: but they, who are employed to enforce the old authenticated revelation, need not such testimonials; as both their character and doctrines must be tried by the oracles of God, to which they appeal.—The miracles, which he enabled his servants of old to perform, were not doubtful and equivocal, nor merely effects of power to excite wonder; but they were expressive of his justice and goodness, and instructive tokens of his favour to his people, and vengeance on his enemies.—He does not always make it appear, that he hath furnished men for services, till they are actually called to engage in them; but we may depend on him to qualify us for whatever he commands us to do. All knowledge, wisdom, and utterance, with every good gift, are derived from him: but many endowments are supposed needful or useful in the publick service of God and his church, which he pours contempt upon, as mere tinsel; worthless, if not pernicious. Such are all the studied and affected arts of human oratory, which the great apostle would not condescend to employ, “that the faith” of the people “should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in “the power of God.” Yet to this day they are highly valued by most professed Christians and many true Christians; and many seem to think that little or nothing can be done without them. (Notes, 1 Cor. ii. 1—5.)—Even when the Lord is displeased with the sins of his servants, he condescends to their infirmities: and in arduous undertakings, it is a great favour to have helpers, who cordially unite with us; though they should share, or even eclipse, our reputation. But while we censure Moses for shrinking from this dangerous service, let us ask our own hearts, whether we are not neglecting such duties, as are unspeakably more easy and less perilous.

V. 18—31.

In obeying the commands of the Lord our God, we should take care to give no needless offence, and always be ready to give up our own inclinations, rather than prejudice our friends and relatives: yet after all, we shall frequently be constrained to cross the humours, endure the reproaches, and forego the comforts, of our nearest connexions, if we determine not to deviate in any thing from our known duty.—Even sinful omissions will draw upon us severe rebukes: and to neglect the seals and pledges of the new covenant is a sin of no small aggravation; being more replete with contempt of God, and ingratitude

AND afterwards Moses and Aaron went in, and told Pharaoh, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Let my people go, that they may hold a feast unto me in the wilderness.

2 And Pharaoh said, Who is the

^a 1 Kings xxi. 20.
^b Ps. cxix. 46. Ez.
ii. 6. Jon. iii. 3.
4. Matt. x. 18.
28. Acts iv. 29.
^c x. 9. Is. xxv. 6.
1 Cor. v. 8.
iii. 19. 2 Chr.
xxxii. 15. 19.
Job xxi. 15. Ps.
x. 4. xii. 4. xiv.
1.

for his distinguished mercies, than professed Christians generally suppose.—They, who are employed in calling others to trust and obey God, should be careful themselves to set an example of implicit confidence and obedience; and if they, in any remarkable instance, fail of this, they will surely experience some very painful effects from their misconduct. Yet when they are zealous and repent, and attend to their duty, the Lord will return to them in mercy.—The reproaches cast upon religion and its conscientious professors, redound to the lasting disgrace of those who vented them: none can provoke God more, than those, who by terrors or temptations deter or entice his children from his service; nor are scarcely any more in danger of being given up to judicial hardness of heart, than cruel tyrants and persecuting oppressors.—It frequently happens that less difficulty is found, than was expected, in such undertakings as are according to the will of God, and for his glory; and that many are inclined to concur in them, from whom we looked for opposition. Let us then arise and attempt our proper work, and the Lord will be with us and prosper us.—But if Israel welcomed the tidings of temporal deliverance, and worshipped the Lord: how should we welcome the glad tidings of eternal redemption, embrace it in faith, and adore the Redeemer! and “how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?”

NOTES.

CHAP. V. V. 1. Moses and Aaron, having obtained the concurrence of the people, requested an audience of Pharaoh; and were admitted to him as the representatives of the nation, probably accompanied by some of the elders. (iii. 18.) But when introduced, they delivered to him a message from “JEHOVAH, the God of Israel.”—This is the first time this title is given to the Lord, with respect to Israel as a nation; though Jacob erected an altar to El-Elohe-Israel, to God, the God of Israel, referring to the name which he had just before received. (Note, Gen. xxxiii. 20.)—In the name of JEHOVAH, who thus honoured Israel in his low enslaved condition, Moses and Aaron demanded, that the people should be allowed to hold a sacred feast, according to the observances of their religion: and as they could not perform this solemn service in Egypt, surrounded by those who held their sacrifices in abomination; they required permission to retire to a distance into the wilderness, where their worship would not be liable to interruption, and could give no umbrage to the Egyptians.

V. 2. Pharaoh had probably heard some general report of JEHOVAH, as claiming by his servants to be the only “living and true God,” the Creator and Governor of the whole earth: but he and his predecessors had long tyrannized over his professed worshippers; and as they seemed to have derived so little advantage from his favour, he concluded that he had as little to fear from his wrath. He therefore treated the message delivered to him with con-

LORD that I should obey his voice to let Israel go? ^d I know not the LORD, ^e neither will I let Israel go.

^d 1 Sam. ii. 12.
John xvi. 3.
Rom. i. 28.
2 Thes. i. 8.
^e iii. 19. Jer. xiv. 16, 17.

3 And they said, The God of the Hebrews hath met with us: let us go, we pray thee, three days' journey into the desert, and sacrifice unto the LORD our God; lest he fall upon us with pestilence, or with the sword.

^f 2 Kings xvii. 25.
2 Chr. xxx. 8.
Ezra vii. 23.
Zech. xiv. 16—19.

4 And the king of Egypt said unto them, ^g Wherefore do ye, Moses and Aaron, let the people from their works? get you unto your burdens.

^g Jer. xxxviii. 4.
Am. vii. 10.
Luke xxiii. 2.
Acts xvi. 20, 21.
xxiv. 5.

5 And Pharaoh said, Behold, the people of the land now ^h are many, and ye make them rest from their burdens.

^h i. 9—11. Prov. xiv. 28.

6 And Pharaoh commanded the same day ⁱ the task-masters of the people, and their officers, saying, ⁱ 10. 13. 15. 19. Prov. xii. 10.

7 Ye shall no more give the people straw to make brick, as heretofore: let them go and gather straw for themselves.

8 And the tale of the bricks which they did make heretofore, ye shall lay upon them; ye shall not diminish ought thereof: for they be idle; therefore they cry, saying, Let us go and sacrifice to our God.

9 * Let there more work be laid upon the men, that they may labour therein; and let them not regard ^k vain words.

* Heb. Let the work be heavy upon the men.

10 ¶ And the ^l task-masters of the people went out, and their officers, and they spake to the people, saying, Thus saith Pharaoh, I will not give you straw.

^k 2 Kings xviii. 20.
Job xvi. 3. Zech. i. 6. Mal. iii. 14.
Eph. v. 6.
^l i. 11. Prov. xxix. 12.

11 Go ye, get you straw where ye can find it: yet not ought of your work shall be diminished.

12 So the people were scattered temptuous indifference, ranking JEHOVAH among, or rather beneath, the gods of the nations, and especially the gods of Egypt.—His language is very emphatical; ‘Shall I, who as king of Egypt lord it over Israel, obey the God of Israel? No, I scorn to regard him!’—Pharaoh had no knowledge of the Lord, and therefore he set him at defiance. ‘Nor did he desire to know [him]; being so transported with anger, that he would not examine their commission, but only resolved he would not obey it.’ Bp. Patrick. Israel was a numerous people, by whom the wealth of his subjects, and his own greatness, were exceedingly increased: and it would not consist with either his honour or interest, (to speak in the language of politicians,) thus to risk the depopulation of his kingdom. He had been accustomed to tyrannize over them: and shall he now meanly, on such a summons, consent to liberate them? But if he determined not to yield to this, he must crush their first attempts, and not allow them to feel their own strength, or at all to taste the sweets of liberty. Thus pride, ambition, covetousness, and worldly policy engaged him in the contest; and a point of honour, that is, an obstinate determination not to have it said he was overcome, hardened him to persist in it to his destruction.

V. 3. It may be supposed, that Moses and Aaron declared to Pharaoh some of the grand distinguishing particulars of their religion, and spake in general terms of the perfections and works of JEHOVAH. But it does not appear that, on this occasion, they either wrought any miracle, or threatened any punishment; but only stated the danger to which they themselves should be exposed, if they neglected to worship the LORD their God. This gentle and submissive application was suited to illustrate the character of the tyrannical oppressor; for as he disdained such a message, no wonder he raged when he more fully understood the commission, under which Moses and Aaron acted.

V. 4, 5. Pharaoh seems entirely to have disregarded all that had been said, concerning the appearance and commandment of the Lord to Moses and Aaron supposing the whole plan to originate from ambitious, interested views, and that they abused the people's superstition to promote their own selfish designs.—He therefore ordered them to their burdens, as well as the elders who attended them; and it must be ascribed to a divine interposition, that he did not send them to a dungeon, or to execution; considering his character, and the nature of their message.—He also represented them as doing a publick injury to Egypt, and endangering the peace of the community, by taking so large a multitude off from their work, and putting thoughts of another kind into their minds.

V. 7. Some suppose that the straw was cut short, and mingled with the clay in making bricks; the nature of the clay, and the imperfection of their skill, requiring it: and others suppose that they burnt the bricks with it.—But in many places straw is now used in covering the clay before the bricks are formed, and covering the bricks before they are burnt, to defend them from the burning sun or heavy rains; and indeed something of this kind is indispensably necessary.

V. 8, 9. Though the fruits of Israel's industry were many and great, Pharaoh took it for granted, without examining, that the people were not fully employed: and too many of the rich and powerful imitate his example, and act in such matters upon report or conjecture, without enquiry. He therefore determined to fill their hands with work, that they might have somewhat else to think on, than such vain or lying words, as he supposed those of Moses and Aaron to be.

V. 12—14. A large proportion of the people being employed in gathering stubble, part of which they were constrained to fetch from a great distance; it was impossible that the rest could furnish the usual quantity of bricks. Yet the Egyptian task-masters, by Pharaoh's orders, insisted on this being done: and when for two days a deficiency was found, the Israelitish officers, whom the task-abroad throughout all the land of Egypt, to gather stubble instead of straw.

13 And the task-masters hasted them, saying, Fulfil your works, your daily tasks, as when there was straw.

^m Heb. a matter of a day in his day.

14 And the officers of the children of Israel, which Pharaoh's task-masters had set over them, were beaten, and demanded, Wherefore have ye not fulfilled your task in making brick, both yesterday and to-day, as heretofore?

15 ¶ Then the officers of the children of Israel came and cried unto Pharaoh, saying, Wherefore dealest thou thus with thy servants?

16 There is no straw given unto thy servants, and they say to us, Make brick: and behold, thy servants are beaten; but the fault is in thine own people.

^m Matt. xxvii. 8. John vi. 27. 2 Thes. iii. 10. 11.

17 But he said, ^m Ye are idle, ye are idle: therefore ye say, Let us go, and do sacrifice to the LORD.

18 Go therefore now, and work:

for there shall no straw be given you, ⁿ yet shall ye deliver the tale of bricks.

ⁿ Ez. xviii. 18. Dan. ii. 9—13.

19 And the officers of the children of Israel did see that they were in ^o evil case, after it was said, Ye shall not minish ought from your bricks of your daily task.

^o Deut. xxxii. 36. Ec. iv. 1. v. 8.

20 And they met Moses and Aaron, who stood in the way, as they came forth from Pharaoh:

21 And they said unto them, ^p The LORD look upon you, and judge; because ye have made ^q our savour; [†] be abhorred in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of his servants, to put a sword in their hand to slay us.

^p vi. 9. Gen. xvi. 5.

^q Ec. x. 1. Jer. ii. 20. 2 Cor. i. 15, 16. [†] Heb. to stink. Gen. xxxiv. 30. 1 Sam. xiii. 4. xxvii. 12. 2 Sam. x. 6. 1 Chr. xix. 6.

22 And Moses ^r returned unto the LORD, and said, Lord, Wherefore hast thou so evil entreated this people? ^s why is it that thou hast sent me?

^r xvii. 4. 1 Sam xxx. 6. Jer. xii 1.

^s Num. xi. 14, 15. 1 Kings xix. 4. 10. Jer. xx. 7. [†] Ps. cxviii. 26. Jer. xi. 21. [†] Heb. deliver, [†] thou hast not delivered. Is. xxv. 17, 18. xxviii. 16. Heb. x. 36, 37.

23 For since I came to Pharaoh to speak ^t in thy name, he hath done evil to this people; [†] neither hast thou delivered thy people at all.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—9.

The servants of God may be called into very perilous situations: but while they adhere to their instructions, they may "set their faces as a flint;" for he will bear them out against their most haughty and imperious enemies.—The reasonableness of the divine commands always leaves the disobedient without excuse. If we decline from the path of duty when comparatively easy, we shall never confine ourselves to it when greater self-denial is requisite; and if we refuse to devote a portion of our time and substance to the service of God, how shall we obey, should he call us to leave all, to take up our cross, to endure persecution, and to lay down our lives for his sake! Yet unless we are prepared for this, we cannot be Christ's disciples. But sinners are afraid of losing the pleasure or profit, which they derive or expect from transgression; not knowing that 'the service of God is perfect freedom,' a continual feast, and an enduring inheritance.—Without that knowledge of God, which is derived from faith and experience, there is no true fear or love of him: and therefore, they who know him not, habitually disobey him; and often insolently despise him, and presumptuously set him at defiance, when his precepts and denunciations interfere with their ambitious and worldly projects. But this ignorance of God is no excuse; as it arises not so much from want of information, as from men "not liking to retain God in their knowledge."—It is common for the irreligious to treat all the fears, hopes, conscientious scruples, and experiences of true believers, as superstition and enthusiasm; and to censure them as vain words and foolish fancies. It must indeed be allowed that there is much superstition and enthusiasm in the world: yet true religion masters had placed over their brethren to superintend their labours, were severely beaten; and thus an attempt was made to drive them in their own defence, to join in this cruel oppression!

V. 15—23. It seems that the Israelitish officers were informed of Pharaoh's decision, by the Egyptian task-masters (6); and they might suspect that they had misrepresented his words: but their appeal to Pharaoh was answered in that cruel and sarcastical manner, which was calculated to break their spirits, or drive them to desperate measures; as well as to make them conclude, that all their hopes of deliverance from the Lord were groundless. As their prospects were very gloomy, and there is no reason to suppose that many of them were partakers of the courage and patience of faith, it is the less wonderful that they spoke sharply to Moses and Aaron; who, being deeply interested in the concerns of their brethren, were waiting to learn what answer they had received. It must have been a severe trial to them to find, that while Pharaoh reproached them for taking off the people from their work, the officers of Israel complained of them, as if they had intentionally set Pharaoh against them, and given him a pretence for putting them to death, as well as for increasing the burdens of Israel; and that they even called on God to plead their cause against them. Thus while the king of Egypt denied that the Lord had sent Moses and Aaron, the Israelites themselves overlooked the proofs, which they had witnessed of their divine commission!—Yet we may the less wonder at this, as even Moses, when thus tried, was led to murmur against the Lord, for honouring him with this important commission; to forget that he had been forewarned of Pharaoh's opposition; and almost to despair of success!

CHAP. VI.

God encourages Moses, by his name JEHOVAH, and by promises; 1—8. Moses in vain attempts to encourage the Israelites; 9. He and Aaron are charged to go again unto Pharaoh, 10—13. The genealogy of Reuben and of Simeon; and of Levi the ancestor of Moses and Aaron, 14—25. The history is resumed, 26—30.

xiv. 13. Num. xxiii. 23. Deut. xxxii. 39. 2 Kings vii. 2. 19. 2 Chr. xx. 17. 1s. xii. 5.

THEN the LORD said unto Moses, Now shalt thou see what I will do to cannot but be experimental; for it must produce its effects upon the judgment, heart, and conscience, before they can appear in the life and conversation. We should therefore learn to distinguish between “the precious and the vile,” according to the standard of the Holy Scriptures.—It is very common for worldly people to condemn an attention to the ordinances of God, as idleness; and to consider all the time or money, which is expended in religion, as wasted to no purpose. To this day we find numbers disposed to exclaim against some of their neighbours, for spending a few hours, spared from business, in the service of God; crying out, “Ye are idle, ye are idle;” and yet they do not censure, or only with great lenity, those who allot twice the time to dissipation and intemperance! Thus is God despised among men, as if nothing could be so mis-employed, as that which is devoted to him! Nor is it to this day an obsolete device of Satan, to fill men’s hands with business, their heads with projects, and their hearts with cares, in order to divert them from the worship of God, and from attention to “the one thing needful.”

V. 10—23.

The yoke of Satan and of sin is in itself immensely more dreadful, than that of cruel Pharaoh and his task-masters: and when sinners begin to feel their misery, and the Lord is preparing deliverance for them; the discoveries, which they continually make, of the strictness and spirituality of the divine law, the evil of sin, and the strength of their evil propensities, often concur with the temptations of the devil in urging them to conclude, that it is impossible to overcome their corrupt passions and evil habits; for these seem rather irritated than subdued by convictions, while they remain ignorant of the gospel. Then indeed they suppose themselves to be in an evil and a hopeless case; and are ready to wish, they had never attended to that doctrine which has thus disquieted them; nay, to quarrel with the instrument, as if he were the cause of their distress and misery! On this account, as well as others, they who desire to be honoured by God in any publick sphere of usefulness, should well count their cost; and not only expect to meet with opposition from the world, but to experience still more painful trials from the impatience, and even ingratitude and reproaches, of the very persons whose good they are earnestly seeking; and to be accused, not only of those crimes of which they are innocent, but, by men of different characters, of things directly contrary to each other. Such as seem to believe, will “in time of temptation fall away;” and they who really believe, under the Pharaoh: for ^b with a strong hand shall he let them go, and with a strong hand shall he ^c drive them out of his land.

2 And God spake unto Moses, and said unto him, ^d I am the LORD:

3 And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of ^e God Almighty, but by my name ^f JEHOVAH was I not known to them.

b iii. 19, 20. Deut. iv. 34. 1s. lxxxix. 13. cxxxvi. 12. 1s. lxiii. 12. Ez. xx. 33, 34. c. xl. 1. xii. 31—33, 39. d. 6. 8. xiv. 18. xx. 2. Gen. xv. 7. 1s. xlii. 8. xliii. 11. 15. Jer. ix. 24. Mal. iii. 6. e. Gen. xvii. 1. xxviii. 3. xxxv. 11. xlviii. 3. f. iii. 14. Gen. xii. 7. 8. xiii. 18. xxii. 14. 1s. lxviii. 4. JAH. lxxxiii. 18. 1s. xlv. 6. lii. 5, 6. John viii. 58. Rev. i. 4.

pressure of severe trials, often forget all they knew, and distress faithful ministers with their distrust, impatience, and peevish complaints. But indeed the ministers themselves, being conscious how they also dishonour and offend God, and admiring his forbearance and compassion to them, should learn to imitate him in bearing with their brethren. For the most faithful, on some occasions, not at first perceiving the fruits of their labours, or not duly understanding the Lord’s method of preparing sinners for the liberty and consolations of the gospel, by very humiliating and painful experiences; while they return to spread the case before God, are apt to discourage themselves, and impatiently to complain, that they are sent to no purpose, and that he doth not by them deliver the people at all: but this is their sin and their folly, of which at length they will be ashamed.—Let us not however close this chapter, without contrasting our mild and benign government, and the civil and religious liberty which we enjoy, with the cruel tyranny and oppression of Pharaoh: and, uniting gratitude to God and man for such blessings, let us pray for the continuance of them to us and to our posterity, and for the choicest blessings upon those, who are the instruments of God in them: and let us remember how much we are bound to live, (especially under such rulers,) in all godliness and honesty, and in quietness and conscientious submission.

NOTES.

CHAP. VI. V. 1. Moses found, that his interference had only rendered the condition of Israel worse than before; for Pharaoh set JEHOVAH at defiance, and the people were sinking in abject despondency. But at this crisis, the Lord declared that he would display his own power, and effect their deliverance himself, that he might have all the glory of it.—When Pharaoh felt the power of God’s indignation, he not only consented to Israel’s departure, but he and his people urged and hastened it: yet this consent was extorted by force, and was entirely contrary to Pharaoh’s habitual inclinations.—It is not said in what way the Lord spake unto Moses on each of these occasions; but we have reason to believe, that there was, in general, some personal appearance and an audible voice, like that with which the patriarchs had been favoured. (xxxiii. 11. Num. xii. 8.)

V. 2, 3. ‘I am,’ saith God, ‘that unchangeable, and all-perfect Being, who am known by the name JEHOVAH, and always act consistently with that name.’—The Lord was known to the patriarchs, as “God Almighty,” or the all-sufficient God, who possesses all wisdom, power, and g Gen. vi. 18. xv. 18. xvii. 7. 13.

 2 Sam. xxiii. 5. 1s. iv. 3.
 h Gen. xv. 13. xvii. 8. xxiii. 4.
 xxvi. 3. Ps. cv. 12. Acts vii. 5.
 i ii. 24. iii. 7. 1s. lxiii. 9.
 k ii. 24. Gen. viii. 1. ix. 15. Ps. cv. 8. cvi. 45. Luke i. 54. 72.
 l See on 2. Ez. xx. 7-9.
 m iii. 17. vii. 4. Deut. xxvi. 8. Ps. lxxxi. 6.
 n xv. 13. Deut. vii. 8. xv. 15. 2 Kings xvii. 36. 1 Chr. xvii. 21. Neh. i. 10.
 o xix. 5. 6. Gen. xvii. 7. 8. Deut. iv. 20. vii. 6. xiv. 2. xxvi. 18. 2 Sam. vii. 23. 24. Jer. xxxi. 33. Hos. i. 10. 1 Pet. ii. 10.
 p xxix. 45. 46. Deut. xxix. 13. Zech. xiii. 9. Matt. xxii. 32. Heb. xi. 16. Rev. xxi. 7.

4 And I have also ^e established my covenant with them, to give them the land of Canaan, ^b the land of their pilgrimage, wherein they were strangers.

5 And I have also heard the ^l groaning of the children of Israel, whom the Egyptians keep in bondage: and ^k I have remembered my covenant.

6 Wherefore say unto the children of Israel, ⁱ I am the LORD, and ^m I will bring you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians, and I will rid you out of their bondage: and I will ⁿ redeem you with a stretched-out arm, and with great judgments.

7 And I ^o will take you to me for a people, and ^p I will be to you a God: and ye shall know that I am the LORD your God, which bringeth you out

^q from under the burdens of the Egyptians.

8 And I will bring you in unto the land concerning the which I did ^a swear ^r to give it, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob; and I will give it you for an heritage: ^s I am the LORD.

9 And Moses spake so unto the children of Israel: but they ^t hearkened not unto Moses, for ^u anguish of spirit, and for cruel bondage.

10 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

11 Go in, ^v speak unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, that he let the children of Israel go out of his land.

12 And Moses spake before the LORD, saying, Behold ^w the children of Israel have not hearkened unto me;

q Ps. lxxxi. 6.
 r Heb. lift up my hand, Gen. xiv. 22. Deut. xxxii. 40. Ez. xx. 5, 6. 15. 23. 28. 42. xxxvi. 7. xlvi. 14.
 s xxxii. 13. Gen. xv. 18. xxii. 16. 17. xxvi. 3. xxxviii. 13. xxxv. 12. See on 2.—Num. xxii. 19. 1 Sam. xv. 29.
 t v. 21. xiv. 12.
 u Heb. shortness, or, straitness Num. xxi. 4.
 v 29. iii. 10. v. 1. 23. vii. 1.
 w iii. 13. iv. 29—31. v. 19—21.

dominion, to contrive and effect the purposes of his love.—It is most probable, that the latter clause should be read with an interrogation: “And was I not known to them by my name JEHOVAH?” For Moses had constantly used the name JEHOVAH in the preceding history; the patriarchs built their altars, and “called upon the name of JEHOVAH;” Abraham called the place, where he was about to sacrifice Isaac, JEHOVAH-jireh; and God, speaking to Jacob in Bethel, saith, “I am JEHOVAH, the God of Abraham.”—The intention of these words seems to have been this. Moses was discouraged, because the difficulties before him appeared insurmountable; but this was unreasonable: the same glorious God, who revealed himself to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, as Almighty, and who pledged the honour of his name, for the accomplishment of the covenant which he made with them, that he would give to their posterity the land in which “they were strangers;” was indeed JEHOVAH, the self-existent, eternal, and unchangeable God, and was known to them by that name also. No difficulty therefore had arisen, or could arise, but what he foresaw when he made the promises; nor any, which his power was not able to remove. As if he had said, ‘Remember, Moses, who it was that made the promises to the fathers; and assure thyself he is well able to fulfil them.’—Thus Jesus, who is “the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever,” said to Martha over the grave of Lazarus, “Said I not unto thee, that if thou wouldst believe, thou shouldst see the glory of God?” referring to what he had said before, “I am the Resurrection and the Life.” (John xi. 37—40.)—Some however think, that though the patriarchs knew the same JEHOVAH, they were not instructed in this meaning and application of it; and that this is the purport of the passage; especially as Moses was the first, as far as we know, who was sent with a message to others in the name of JEHOVAH, and enabled to confirm that message by publick and incontestable miracles.

V. 5—7. JEHOVAH, the righteous and compassionate Patron of the oppressed, and the covenanted Friend of Israel, was absolutely engaged and determined to put forth his omnipotence, to rescue them from bondage; as a man stretches forth his arm and employs his whole force, to effect any thing about which he is in earnest. And as this had respect to the redemption of the promised Saviour, and would also be accomplished at the price of desolating Egypt; the deliverance was spoken of in language taken from the ransoming of slaves and captives. (Note, Is. xliiii. 3, 4.) He therefore engaged to take them under his especial care and protection, and to maintain his truth and worship among them, while other nations were suffered to walk in their own ways.—“To know the LORD,” is often used in Scripture, for that knowledge of the being, perfections, and omnipotent dominion of God over all his works, which is the effect of experience; whether of his merey and love, or of his righteous vengeance. But, to know him as “the LORD our God,” implies either a spiritual relation to him as our Friend and Father, or at least those religious advantages which are the outward signs and means of so great a blessing. Israel would know that he was the Lord, in the experience of his powerful and faithful loving kindness; and might thus discover that he was justly entitled to all that love and service which his law required.

V. 9. The people were so crushed by oppression, and so filled with anguish by their late distressing disappointment; that, perceiving no sensible tokens of approaching deliverance, but an increase of their oppressive burdens, they quite desponded, disregarded the message of God, and refused to make any further attempts.

For anguish of spirit.] Απο της ολιγοψυχιας, from meanness, or dejection, of spirit. Sept.—1 Thes. v. 14. Gr.

V. 12. Even Moses himself was so discouraged, that his faith almost entirely failed, and he was ready to give up the service as hopeless. He forgot that the Lord had engaged to deliver the people by a strong hand, and not by persuasive words; so that his uncircumcised lips, or want of eloquence, could not prevent his success.—Uncircumcised often denotes unsuitableness and incapacity, through how then shall Pharaoh hear me, who am of ^y uncircumcised lips?

^y 30. iv. 10. Lev. xxvi. 41. Deut. xxx. 6. Is. vi. 5. Jer. i. 6. vi. 10. ix. 26. Acts vii. 51.

13 And the Lord spake unto Moses, and unto Aaron, and ^z gave them a charge unto the children of Israel, and unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, to bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt.

^a 25. Josh. xiv. 1. xix. 51. 1 Chr. v. 24. vii. 2. 7. viii. 6.

14 ¶ These be ^a the heads of their fathers' houses: ^b The sons of Reuben the first-born of Israel; Hanoch, and Pallu, Hezron, and Carmi: ^c these be the families of Reuben.

^b Gen. xlii. 9. xlix. 3, 4. Num. xxvi. 5, 6. 1 Chr. v. 3.

15 And the ^d sons of Simeon; Jemuel, and Janin, and Ohad, and Jachin, and Zohar, and Shaul the son of a Canaanitish woman: these are the families of Simeon.

^c Num. xxvi. 7. Josh. xiii. 15. 23.

16 And these are the names of the ^e sons of Levi, according to their generations: Gershon, and Kohath, and Merari: and the years of the life of Levi were ^f an hundred thirty and seven years.

^d Gen. xlii. 10. Num. xxvi. 12. 13. 1 Chr. vi. 24. Yemuel, Jarib, Zerach.

17 The ^g sons of Gershon; Libni, and Shimi, according to their families.

^e Gen. xlii. 11. Num. iii. 17. 1 Chr. vi. 1. 16.

18 And the ^h sons of Kohath; Amram, and Izhar, and Hebron, and Uzziel: ⁱ and the years of the life of Ko-

^f 18, 20. Gen. xxxv. 28. xlvii. 28. 1. 25.

some defect or impediment; as the carnal heart of man is entirely unsuited to the spiritual service of God, and the purposes of his glory. (Marg. Ref. y)

V. 13. The Lord here absolutely commanded Moses and Aaron, without further objections or delays, to deliver his message to Israel; and also to Pharaoh, to whom they seem to have been directed to speak with more authority than before; and to denounce the vengeance of the Lord upon him if he proved refractory. Indeed, they were not only charged to attempt bringing Israel out of Egypt, but absolutely to effect it; and this charge was calculated to increase their faith, and raise their expectations.

V. 14—20. Before the historian proceeded with his narrative, he digressed from the subject, to give some account of the persons to whom this charge was given.—Reuben was the first-born, and accordingly is first mentioned, to mark the accomplishment of Jacob's prediction; seeing he was passed by, and the deliverer did not spring from him.—For the same reason Simeon also is mentioned, who was the next in seniority; yet the deliverer of Israel did not descend from him, but from Levi, the third son, who, though he had been disgraced, began now to be dignified. (Notes, Gen. xlix. 3—7.)—Levi, though older than Joseph, survived him above twenty years; and his son Kohath attained nearly, and his grandson Amram fully, to the same age. It is not recorded how long the other sons of Jacob lived. Moses was no more than a hundred and twenty when he died: yet his age was deemed extra-bath were an hundred thirty and three years.

19 And the ^k sons of Merari; Mahali, and Mushi: these are the families of Levi, according to their generations.

^k Num. iii. 20. 1 Chr. vi. 19. xxiii. 21.

20 And ^l Amram took him Jochebed his father's sister to wife; and she bare him Aaron and Moses: ^m and the years of the life of Amram were an hundred and thirty and seven years.

^l Il. 1, 2. Num. xxvi. 59.

^m See on 16.

21 And the sons of Izhar; ⁿ Korah, and Nepheg, and Zichri.

ⁿ 24. Num. xvi. 1. 32. xxvi. 10, 11. 1 Chr. vi. 37, 38.

22 And the ^o sons of Uzziel; Mishael, and Elzaphan, and Zithri.

^o Lev. x. 4. Num. iii. 30. B. C. 1530.

23 And Aaron took him ^p Elisheba, daughter of ^q Amminadab, sister of Naashon, to wife; and she bare him ^r Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar.

^p Luke i. 5.

^q Num. i. 7. ii. 3. Ruth iv. 19, 20. 1 Chr. ii. 10. Matt. i. 4.

^r xxix. 1. 9. Lev. x. 1. 2. Num. iii. 2—4. xxvi. 60, 61. 1 Chr. vi. 3. xxiv. 1, 2.

24 And the sons of ^s Korah; Assir, and Elkanah, and Abiasaph: these are the families of the Korhites.

^s 21. Num. xvi. 1. 32. xxvi. 9—11. 1 Chr. vi. 22, 33, 37, 38. Pa. lxxxiv. lxxxv. titles.

25 And Eleazar Aaron's son took him one of the daughters of Putiel to wife; and she bare him ^u Phinchas: these are ^v the heads of the fathers of the Levites, according to their families.

^t i Sam. i. 1. 1 Chr. vi. 23, 27, 28.

^u Num. xxv. 7—13. xxxi. 6. Josh. xxii. 13, 31, 22. Judg. xx. 28. Pa. cvi. 30, 31. v. 14.

ordinary; and he fixes the term of man's life to seventy or eighty years, (Ps. xe. 10.) which from about that time have in general been its appointed bounds.—According to the Septuagint and the Jewish traditions, Jochebed was cousin, not aunt to Amram: but this construction was probably put on the original word, to save the credit of Moses and Aaron; because the marriage of an aunt is afterwards forbidden. (Lev. xviii. 12. 14.) For the meaning of the word here used is fixed by another passage, in which it is said: "The name of Amram's wife was Jochebed, the daughter of Levi, whom her mother bare to Levi in Egypt." Num. xxvi. 59. It is probable that Jochebed was born when Levi was old, and was as young as Amram.—The impartiality of the historian appears, in his recording that he was born of a marriage, which the law afterwards condemned as incestuous; and by his silence in other respects concerning his parents, though there is sufficient ground to conclude that they were pious persons.

V. 23—25. Elisheba is the same as Elisabeth. She was the sister of Naashon, or Nahshon, who was of the tribe of Judah, and an ancestor of Christ. Thus an alliance was formed betwixt the family of the priests and that of the kings; which might shadow forth him, who was both Priest and King in one Person.—It is observable that Moses in this place records nothing of his own descendants, who were left among the ordinary Levites; though he mentions such of the other branches of his ^x 13. 20. Josh. xxiv 5. 1 Sam. xii. 6. 8. 1 Chr. vi. 3. Ps. lxxvii. 20. xcix. 6. Mic. vi. 4. ^v 7. iii. 10, 11. xx. 2. xxxii. 1. 7. 11. Acts vii. 35. ^z armies.

26 These are ^x that Aaron and Moses, to whom the LORD said, ^y Bring out the children of Israel from the land of Egypt according to their ^z armies.

27 These are they which ^a spake to Pharaoh king of Egypt, ^b to bring out the children of Israel from Egypt: these are that Moses and Aaron.

28 ¶ And it came to pass on the day family, as were afterwards in any way distinguished, and especially the descendants of Aaron, the priest of the Lord.

V. 26, 27. The transactions, which Moses was about to record, were exceedingly important in themselves, and in their consequences; and there could be no doubt that other nations and ages would hear the report of them. Accordingly, some traditions concerning them are found in many pagan writers: but they are greatly mis-stated; and especially the parentages, and even the tribe, of Moses are mistaken in them. It was therefore of great importance, in order to give the stamp of authenticity to his history, that a very particular and clear account should be given of the principal persons mentioned. This has frequently been done by other historians, who have on such occasions spoken of themselves in the third person; as Ezra, Daniel, and the apostle John: so that there is not the smallest reason for any objection, on this account, to these books having been written by Moses, according to the general testimony of all antiquity, sanctioned by the express attestations of our Lord himself. (John v. 46, 47.)

Armies. (26.) When the Israelites left Egypt, they marched in good order, without trepidation or confusion: and when the several tribes were regularly encamped, they appeared as so many armies prepared for battle, under the immediate conduct of the Lord of armies himself.

V. 28—30. Having stated the above particulars, the sacred writer resumes his narrative. (Marg. Ref.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—8.

We are most likely to prosper in our endeavours to glorify God and serve our generation, when we are convinced by experience, that we can do nothing of ourselves: for when we can truly say, that our whole dependence is placed on the Lord, and "our expectation is only from him;" we are prepared to mark and to record his works of power and love, and to render him our tribute of adoring, thankful praise. He therefore previously proves and humbles those, whom he loves and employs, and brings them to feel, as well as acknowledge, their insufficiency: but, while he is thus mortifying their pride and ambition, Satan often takes the opportunity of tempting them to discontent, impatience, and discouragement; that "their hands may hang down and their knees wax feeble," and that they may be reluctant to the work assigned them. In such circumstances, they are apt to displease the Lord by unbelieving objections and hesitations; yet he graciously pities and pardons them, and obviates their discouragements. And nothing is more when the LORD spake unto Moses in the land of Egypt,

29 That the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ^c I am the LORD: ^d speak thou unto Pharaoh king of Egypt all that I say unto thee.

30 And Moses said before the Lord, Behold, I am of ^e uncircumcised lips, and how shall Pharaoh hearken unto me?

effectual for this purpose, than discovering to them his immutable perfection, his incomprehensible wisdom and power, his uncontrollable dominion, his condescending compassion, love, and faithfulness; and his oath and covenant, by which he hath engaged to fulfil his largest promises to his church, and to every living member of it. Calling these things to remembrance, and recollecting his wonders of old, the drooping heart revives, faith recovers strength, larger expectations are formed; and the servant of God rises superior to despondency, and patiently proceeds in the work assigned him.

V. 9—30.

Our compassionate Lord regards our groanings under temporal calamities: but when the guilt and power of sin and temptation become our chief complaint, and extort the exclamation, "Oh, wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me?" he particularly notes it, and will certainly perform to us "the oath, which he sware unto ... Abraham, ... that we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, might serve him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life." Luke i. 72—75. When we find, that we cannot deliver ourselves, he will shew us what he can do; and, redeeming us by his strong hand and stretched-out arm, from the power of our enemies, he will take us to be his people, and will be our God. He will guard us safely all the way to that good land, where tears, groans, sins, and enemies are known no more for ever; and there he will give us everlasting felicity. But even these glorious and joyful assurances afford no consolation to the soul which is overwhelmed with present trouble, finds matters apparently grow worse, and has no sensible tokens of the divine favour.—For we are very prone to expect the continuance and increase of such dispensations, as we at present experience. Even universal observation of the mutability of human affairs does not prevent those in prosperity from expecting greater prosperity, and those in adversity from expecting deeper scenes of affliction: and this gives Satan an immense advantage, in attempting to buoy up some men in careless presumption, and to depress others in heartless despondency. If then we would be safe, and walk comfortably in such a world as this, "we must walk by faith, not by sight." For he, and he only, who habitually believes the testimony and relies on the promise of God, will find his heart prepared for humble watchfulness, patient hope, and cheerful submission: while frequent reflections on his own unworthiness, connected with lively prospects of heavenly felicity, tend to silence his complaints, animate his admiring love and gratitude, and ren-

CHAP. VII.

The Lord encourages Moses and Aaron to go unto Pharaoh, 1—6. Their ages are noted, 7. Aaron casts down his rod, which becomes a serpent, and the magicians do the same; but their rods are swallowed up by Aaron's rod: yet Pharaoh's heart is hardened, 8—13. Another message is sent to Pharaoh, and the river is turned into blood, 14—23 The distress of the Egyptians, 24, 25

AND the LORD said unto Moses, See, I have made thee a god to Pharaoh: and Aaron thy brother shall be thy prophet.

2 Thou shalt speak all that I command thee: and Aaron thy brother shall speak unto Pharaoh, that he send the children of Israel out of his land.

3 And I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and multiply my signs and my wonders in the land of Egypt.

4 But Pharaoh shall not hearken unto you, that I may lay my hand upon Egypt, and bring forth mine armies, and my people, the children of Israel, out of the land of Egypt, by great judgments.

5 And the Egyptians shall know that I am the LORD, when I stretch forth mine hand upon Egypt, and bring out the children of Israel from among them.

6 And Moses and Aaron did as the LORD commanded them, so did they.

7 And Moses was fourscore years old, and Aaron fourscore and three years old, when they spake unto Pharaoh.

¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, and unto Aaron, saying,

9 When Pharaoh shall speak unto you, saying, Shew a miracle for you: then thou shalt say unto Aaron, Take thy rod and cast it before Pharaoh, and it shall become a serpent.

10 And Moses and Aaron went in unto Pharaoh, and they did so as the LORD had commanded: and Aaron cast down his rod before Pharaoh, and before his servants, and it became a serpent.

h vi. 6. Prov. xix. 29. Is. xxvi. 9. Ez. xiv. 21. xxv. 11. xxx. 14. 19. Rev. xv. 4. xvi. 7. xix. 2. viii. 10. 22. xiv. 4. 18. Ps. ix. 16. Ez. xxv. 17. xxviii. 22. xxxvi. 23. xxxix. 7. 22. See on iii. 20 k xii. 28. xxxix. 43. xl. 16. Gen. vi. 22. xxii. 19. John xv. 10. 14

l Gen. xli. 46. Deut. xxix. 5. xxxi. 2. xxxiv. 7. Is. xc. 10. Acts vii. 23. 30.

m Is. vii. 11. John ii. 18. vi. 30. x. 38.

n 10—12. iv. 2. 17. 20. ix. 23. x. 13.

o iv. 3. Am. ix. 3. Mark xvi. 18. Luke x. 19.

a xvi. 29. Gen. xix. 21. 1 Kings xvii. 23. 2 Kings vi. 32. Ec. i. 10. b iv. 15. 16. Ps. lxxxii. 6. Jer. i. 10. John x. 35. 36. c vi. 29. Deut. iv. 2. 1 Kings xxiii. 14. Jer. i. 7. 17. Ez. iii. 10. 17. Matt. xxviii. 20. Acts xx. 27. d See on iv. 21. e ix. 16. xi. 9. Deut. iv. 34. vii. 19. Neh. ix. 10. Ps. lxxviii. 43—51. cv. 27—36. cxxxv. 9. Is. li. 9. Jer. xxxii. 20. 21. Mic. vii. 15. John iv. 48. Acts ii. 22. vii. 36. f ix. 3. x. 1. Judg. ii. 15. Lam. iii. 3. g vi. 26. xii. 51.

der him persevering and active in the duties of his place and station.

NOTES.

CHAP. VII. V. 1, 2. Moses, as the ambassador of JEHOVAH, representing him and speaking in his name, possessed and exercised an authority over Pharaoh, and laid injunctions, denounced threatenings, and called for judgments on him, with a power which Pharaoh, proud and great as he was, could not resist, and was unable to despise, or to endure. Thus Moses had a decided superiority over Pharaoh, and did not stand in awe of his authority, but made him tremble before him. All this seems to be implied in this strong expression, "I have made thee a god to Pharaoh:" and, in answer to Moses's objection that he was "of uncircumcised lips," he was assured that Aaron should deliver his message faithfully and properly to Pharaoh, and thus be "his prophet."—The last three verses of the foregoing chapter might be more conveniently placed at the beginning of this.

V. 3, 4. Notes, 13. iv. 21. vi. 26, 27. V. 5. Know.] By the dreadful judgments inflicted on them, especially the destruction of all the first-born, the Egyptians had a full demonstration, that the God of Israel was the great JEHOVAH, "the Lord of the whole earth." (Note, vi. 5—7.) V. 6, 7. At length Moses was delivered from his fears; and being strengthened in faith, he no longer objected, but went about his arduous work with undaunted courage, and proceeded in it with indefatigable perseverance; Aaron also heartily assisting him, in the same courage and constancy of faith.—Being matured in years and experience, and venerable on that account, they were more proper to speak in the name of God, before Pharaoh and his courtiers, than younger men would have been.

V. 9, 10 It is here supposed, that extraordinary divine commissions should be attested by miracles: and, unless brought in proof of such doctrines, as evidently contradict the first grand principles of all religion, or of revealed truth in particular, they may be considered as the seal of Heaven affixed to the prophet's commission; so that open, undeniable, and repeated miracles are a divine attestation, in behalf of the person by whom they are wrought. (John iii. 2. v. 36. vi. 27. x. 38. xiv. 11. xv. 24.) And indeed it cannot be supposed that God will allow his seal to be so counterfeited, as to impose on the attentive, humble, and impartial enquirer; however he may leave the proud and prejudiced to be deceived by delusive appearances. There is likewise a vast difference between miracles wrought publicly before enemies, in proof of a doctrine, which has got no establishment in the world, and which by its very nature, and the circumstances of those who promulgate it, is never likely to succeed, unless the miracles are undeniable, so that the whole cause rests upon them; and miracles, supposed to have been performed in private, or among friends, in proof of a system already established, and supported by the wealthy, the powerful, and the learned, to whom it is the interest of others to pay court. All the miracles wrought by Moses and Aaron were of the former kind: and their success itself, in so extraordinary an undertaking, demonstrates, that they were wrought by the power of God.—Moses delivered the rod to Aaron, who in general gave the 11 Then Pharaoh also called the wise men, and the sorcerers: now the magicians of Egypt, they also did in like manner with their enchantments.

12 For they cast down every man his rod, and they became serpents: but Aaron's rod swallowed up their rods.

13 And he hardened Pharaoh's heart, that he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, token for the performance of the miracles.—The command given to him by Moses before Pharaoh, implied a prediction of the miracle, which tended to render it the more undeniable.

A serpent.] רִמָּה, which the LXX render δράκων, a dragon, as also the plural in the twelfth verse δράκοντες. The word רִמָּה is used before, (iv. 3,) and is rendered by the LXX οφίς.

V. 11, 12. No doubt Pharaoh and his servants were both astonished and alarmed, when they saw Aaron's rod become a terrible serpent before them. But as magicians and sorcerers were in high repute in Egypt, being called wise men, and supposed capable of performing very extraordinary things by their skill in the occult sciences; probably Pharaoh and his courtiers endeavoured to believe, that Moses and Aaron were nothing more than two great magicians, and that the sorcerers and magicians of Egypt were able to contend with them. Accordingly, some of the most renowned among them were called in, of whom we find Jannes and Jambres were the principal: (2 Tim. iii. 8 :) and "they also did in like manner with their enchantments; "for they cast down every man his rod, and they became "serpents."—No doubt many of these professors of sorcery, or magick, were expert in legerdemain, and imposed on the spectators by various artifices: yet they who reverence the Scriptures, will hardly deny, that many of them had a real intercourse with evil spirits, and by their help actually made discoveries, and produced effects, beyond the reach of human power or sagacity. It remains therefore to enquire into the fact here briefly recorded, what it was, and how performed. Some expositors consider it as merely an illusion, by which the magicians made the spectators think that they saw serpents when they did not. Others imagine, that the magicians had contrived to convey serpents thither, concealing their rods, to make it appear as if they were changed into serpents. Others think, that the power of Satan produced appearances like serpents, instead of the rods which were conveyed away. But some expositors are not satisfied with any of these interpretations, because it is expressly said, "they became serpents:" and "Aaron's "rod swallowed up their rods." They therefore conclude, that the rods actually became real living serpents, and in that form were swallowed by the serpent, into which Aaron's rod was changed. We cannot indeed in general assign exact bounds to the power of evil spirits, who, when permitted, seem capable of any thing which created beings can do: yet, creation, in every instance, is commonly supposed to be exclusively the work of God. And on this ac-

Pharaoh's heart is hardened, ' he refuseth to let the people go.

15 Get thee unto Pharaoh in the morning; lo, he goeth out unto the water, and thou shalt stand by the river's brink, against he come: and the rod which was turned to a serpent shalt thou take in thine hand.

16 And thou shalt say unto him, The LORD God of the Hebrews hath sent me unto thee, saying, Let my people go, that they may serve me in count, they who adhere to the literal interpretation conclude, that while the magicians used their enchantments, expecting the interposition of the demons to whom they applied, the Lord himself was pleased to interpose, and to effect a real change of their rods into serpents; and, as they could not certainly know how far the power of their demons extended, they would naturally suppose that this was the effect of their enchantments.—Pharaoh was evidently seeking some pretence for disregarding the miracle which he had witnessed, and proudly disobeying the divine command; and it was the Lord's design to give him up to final obduracy. It does not therefore appear, that there is any thing, on this supposition, inconsistent with the divine perfections, or materially different from his dealings with other haughty and obstinate rebels in similar circumstances. (Notes, 1 Sam. xxviii. 11—19. 1 Kings xxii. 19—23. 2 Thes. ii. 5—12.)—But, however this may be determined, when "Aaron's rod swallowed up their rods;" that is, when the serpent, into which his rod had been changed, swallowed the serpents into which their rods had been changed; and when it again became a rod in Aaron's hand, but their rods were vanished, and were no more found; the event would have satisfied any impartial person, on which side the truth lay: and, had not a previous bias lain upon Pharaoh's mind, this must have convinced him that Moses and Aaron spake and acted by divine authority.

V. 13. He hardened Pharaoh's heart.] Or rather, "Pharaoh's heart was hardened;" for nothing is here said concerning any interposition of God in the case. The same words are afterwards rendered, "Pharaoh's heart was "hardened" (22), and this accords with the subsequent words of God, "Pharaoh's heart is hardened" (14). "The "heart of Pharaoh" became strong, presumptuous, unfeeling. (καλίσχυσεν. Sept.) Probably, he had been at first alarmed and ready to yield: but he would now say, that the magicians had produced serpents also, and that Moses and Aaron were only greater adepts in magick than they; that JEHOVAH had no concern in it; and that there was no occasion to liberate the Israelites. Thus the effect produced, tended to embolden him in rebellion, and to fortify him against conviction. The Lord foresaw, and foretold, that this would be the case, and he formed his whole plan accordingly.

V. 15—20. Moses was the ambassador of JEHOVAH to Pharaoh, and Aaron was appointed to be his assistant: but Pharaoh haughtily rejected the embassy, and demanded their credentials; and he continued obstinate, after having witnessed a menacing but harmless miracle. Moses was the wilderness: and behold, hitherto thou wouldest not hear.

17 Thus saith the LORD, In this ^a thou shalt know that I am the LORD: behold, I will smite with the rod that is in mine hand, upon the waters which are in the river, ^b and they shall be turned to blood.

18 And ^c the fish that is in the river shall die, and the river shall stink; and the Egyptians ^d shall loathe to drink of the water of the river.

19 And the LORD spake unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Take thy rod, and ^e stretch out thine hand upon the waters of Egypt, upon their streams, upon their rivers, and upon their ponds, and upon all ^{*} their pools of water, that they may become blood: and that there may be blood throughout all the land of Egypt, both in vessels of wood, and in vessels of stone.

20 And Moses and Aaron did so, as the LORD commanded: and ^f he lifted up the rod and smote the waters that were in the river, in the sight of Pharaoh, and in the sight of his servants: and ^g all the waters that were in the river were turned to blood.

21 And ^h the fish that was in the river died; and the river stank, and the Egyptians could not drink of the water of the river: and there was blood throughout all the land of Egypt.

22 And the ⁱ magicians of Egypt did so with their enchantments: ^k and Pharaoh's heart was hardened, neither did he hearken unto them: as the LORD had said.

23 And Pharaoh turned and went into his house, ^l neither did he set his heart to this also.

24 And all the Egyptians digged round about the river for water to drink: ^m for they could not drink of the water of the river.

25 And ⁿ seven days were fulfilled after that the LORD had smitten the river.

^a v. 2. vi. 7. 1 Sam. xvii. 46, 47. 1 Kings xx. 28. 2 Kings xix. 19. Ps. lxxxiii. 18. Ez. xxxix. 9. xxx. 8. 19. xxxii. 15. xxxviii. 23. xxxix. 28. Dan. iv. 17. 32. 37. v. 21. 23. ^b i. 22. iv. 9. Ps. lxxviii. 44. cv. 29. Rev. viii. 8. xvi. 3—6. ^c 21. ^d 24. Num. xi. 20. xxi. 5.

^e viii. 5, 6. 16. ix. 22, 25, 33.

^{*} Heb. gathering of their waters. Gen. i. 10.

^f xvii. 5, 6. 9—12. Num. xx. 8—12.

^g See on b. 17.—John ii. 9—11.

^h See on 18. Rev. viii. 9.

ⁱ See on 11.—viii. 7, 8. Jer. xxvii. 18. ^k See on 13.

^l ix. 21. Deut. xxxii. 46. 1 Sam. iv. 20. Marg. Job vii. 17. Ps. lxxii. 10. Prov. xxiv. 32. Marg. xxxix. 1. Is. xxvi. 11. Jer. v. 8. xxxvii. 24. Ez. xl. 4. Am. iv. 7—12. Hag. i. 5. Marg. Mal. ii. 2.

^m v. 21. ⁿ viii. 9, 10. x. 23. 2 Sam. xxiv. 13.

therefore sent to him the very next morning, with his rod in his hand, as denoting the authority by which he acted, and reminding Pharaoh of the preceding miracle.—Some suppose that Pharaoh went to pay his devotions to the river Nile, or to its supposed tutelary deity, and that Moses was directed to take that occasion of addressing him: for perhaps it was not, at this time, easy to find admittance to him in his palace.—Moses was commanded solemnly to renew to Pharaoh the demand, which he had before made in the name of JEHOVAH; and if he still answered, “I know not the LORD, neither will I let Israel go,” he must denounce the dreadful judgment on him and his people, of which smiting the river would be the signal. And, as the warning produced no effect, Moses delivered the rod to Aaron, who smote the river, and stretched out the rod over all the large collections of waters, which were directly converted into blood.—The vessels of wood and of stone, it is probable, were the cisterns, in which the Egyptians preserved the waters of the river: when the annual inundation took place, the water was, by various contrivances, conveyed even to those parts of the country, which were most distant from the river, and there kept in large reservoirs for use, till the next inundation. But this water also was turned into blood.

V. 21. The very sight of such immense quantities of entire blood must have been very horrible; the effects of such a change, distressing and calamitous beyond expression! The Egyptians gloried in the river Nile, by the inundations of which the whole country was enriched; and probably they even then adored it, as one of their principal deities: but now they could not look at it, without horror and dismay! They had cruelly cast the children of Israel into the river; and now the river itself was turned into blood! A great part of their provisions consisted of fish; but now this was generally destroyed; their waters were useless or noxious; the most tremendous consequences might be apprehended from the continuance of this judgment, and it awfully foreboded all the desolations which followed.—The first miracle of Christ turned water into wine, the first plague upon Egypt turned all their water into blood. (Notes, and P. O. John ii. 1—11.)

V. 22, 23. The magicians should have attempted to remove the plague, and to remedy or prevent its fatal consequences, in order to make a fair trial of the efficacy of their art, in opposition to the miracles wrought by Moses: but they only amused Pharaoh, and increased the distress of Egypt, (either in reality or in appearance,) by imitating, or rather apeing, the surprising miracle of Moses; and by pretending at least to turn into blood some of the little water, which the mercy of God had spared. Yet this sufficed to embolden and harden Pharaoh's heart, and to prevent him from acknowledging the hand of God even in this judgment; which, probably, he attributed to the superior skill in magick, that Moses and Aaron had acquired: hoping at the same time, that by further study or new enchantments, his magicians would yet be able to contend with them. Being therefore indignant against Moses and Aaron, and bidding defiance to JEHOVAH, he seemed to be regardless of the distress of his subjects, and careless about the consequences!

V. 25. Seven days.] Thus long the awful calamity continued, and was then it seems removed: for the Lord would give respite to Egypt and to Pharaoh, and make way for other plagues; that his own power and justice, and the obstinacy of Pharaoh and his servants, might be more fully displayed.

CHAP. VIII.

The plague of frogs is threatened and sent, 1—6; is imitated by the magicians, 7; and removed in answer to the prayer of Moses, made at Pharaoh's request, who yet hardened his heart, 8—15. The plague of lice, which the magicians could not imitate, 16—19. The plague of flies, 20—24; Pharaoh relents, the plague is removed, and his heart is hardened, 25—32.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—7.

When the Lord has humbled and proved his servants, and qualified them for their work, he will put honour upon them: and the least of those, who are entrusted with his message, and employed to speak in his name, are, in this delegated character, and while faithfully executing their office, superior to the greatest and haughtiest of those to whom they are sent. They ought therefore to speak with firmness and authority, without fear of the anger, respect of the persons, or desire of the favour, of those who are living in disobedience to God; and in this spirit the prisoner Paul may expect to make even Felix tremble.—But to deliver the message of God to proud persecuting tyrants, requires that strength of faith, that intrepid courage, and that meekness of wisdom, with which very few are endued: and we have cause to be not only satisfied, but thankful, that we are not called to such arduous services.—Indeed gravity, wisdom, experience, fortitude, patience, and meekness, are requisite for all those who, in any circumstances, speak in the name of God, and declare his truth and will: yet they who do not rashly intrude themselves, but are “allowed by him to be put in trust of the gospel,” need not be discouraged by a humble consciousness of their defects. Let them simply trust in his promised teaching and assistance, and observe his directions; and he will bear them out, and carry them through every service to which they are called.—If sinners will not attend to the message of grace and salvation, and so learn to know and love the Lord our God; they will certainly experience the effects of his wrath, and know him as a God of righteous vengeance. How careful then should men be, not to provoke him to give them up to hardness and impenitence! If they would escape that awful judgment, they must neither continue to practise presumptuous sins, nor procrastinate in the great concerns of salvation: they must watch against heedless and proud insensibility under affliction, and insolence in prosperity. They must not turn away their ears from instruction and reproof; or smother convictions of conscience by dissipation, business, or company; by rushing into sin, or by hating and shunning the awakening light of divine truth. For these are some of the steps, by which multitudes proceed to the brink of that awful precipice.

V. 8—25.

No evidence suffices to convince men while left to themselves, that those doctrines are true and divine, which affront the pride of their hearts, and condemn their beloved iniquities: but the least shadow of an argument, though counterbalanced by demonstration itself, induces the belief of those opinions which they wish to find true.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, ^a Go unto Pharaoh, and say unto him, ^a Thus saith the LORD, ^b Let my people go, that they may serve me.

2 And if thou ^c refuse to let them go, behold I will smite all thy borders with ^d frogs.

3 And the rivers shall bring forth

^a Jer. i. 17—19. xv. 19—21. Ez. ii. 6, 7.
^b See on v. i. vi. 16.

^c See on vii. 14. ix. 2.

^d Ps. lxxviii. 45. cv. 30. Rev. xvi. 13, 14.

Thus all mental errors in religion originate, in some degree, from the state of the heart, and from the contrariety of revealed truths to men's prejudices, interests, or inclinations. “Because I tell you the truth, ye believe me not.” John viii. 45.—Our merciful God always accompanies the word with sufficient evidence of its divine authority, were we but suitably disposed to attend to it: but, when men are bent upon disobedience, and inclined to cavil and object, he often permits a snare to be laid, in which they are entangled. Nor are any deceivers more instrumental to the destruction of sinners, than such as resist the truth, in the same manner as the magicians withstood Moses; namely, by amusing men with some resemblance and counterfeit of it: indeed Satan himself is most to be dreaded, when “transformed into an angel of light.”—But “madness is in the heart of man,” or he would never dare to provoke that God, who can so easily turn his choicest comforts into the most dreadful plagues; and who may so righteously render those things, which have been the fuel of men's pride, or the instruments of their cruelty, the weapons of his indignation: and then no human help can avail to alleviate or remove the inflicted misery.—In the mystery of Providence, subjects often suffer through the crimes of their princes; yet for their own sins, which provoke God to send them wicked rulers: and they, for their own profit or pleasure, join their iniquity, and are involved in the punishment.—“The righteous Lord so delights in mercy,” that he proceeds by slow degrees to extremities, even with the most atrocious offenders: but, if neither judgments nor mercies bring them to repentance, destruction will at length overtake them without remedy.—We seldom duly value our comforts, till we are deprived of them: but let us remember, that as the anger of God converts the most valued advantages into scourges, or curses, to his enemies; so the love of Christ renders the most common mercies special blessings to his disciples.

NOTES.

CHAP. VIII. V. 1—6. It is probable, that this message was sent at the end of the seven days, and just about the time when the former plague was removed. The prediction of each judgment was an additional proof, that it was wrought by the power of JEHOVAH, and was not the mere effect of second causes. The plague of frogs must have been peculiarly distressing; as the immense multitudes of them infested every place, harassed all ranks of the Egyptians, night and day, and rendered them incapable of either eating, drinking, or sleeping, in peace and comfort. As it was limited to Pharaoh's servants and people, we may infer, that in this as well as in the preceding miracle, the Israelites were in a great measure, if not entirely, exempted.—Here again Moses issued the man-frogs abundantly, which shall go up and come into thine house, and into thy bedchamber, and upon thy bed, and into the house of thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thine ovens, and into thy kneading troughs.

* Or, dough xii. 34.

4 And the frogs shall come up both on thee, and upon thy people, and upon all thy servants.

e Ps. cvii. 40. Is. xix. 11, 22. xxiii. 9. Dan. iv. 37 Acts xii. 22, 23

5 And the LORD spake unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Stretch forth thine hand with thy rod over the streams, over the rivers, and over the ponds, and cause frogs to come up upon the land of Egypt.

f vii 19

6 And Aaron stretched out his hand over the waters of Egypt: and the frogs came up and covered the land of Egypt.

k Ps lxxvii 45 cv. 30

7 And the magicians did so with their enchantments, and brought up frogs upon the land of Egypt.

l vii. 11, 22. Deut. xiii. 1-3. Matt. xxiv. 24. 2 Thes. ii. 9-11. 2 Tim. iii. 8. Rev. xiii. 14.

8 Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, and said, Intreat the LORD, that he may take away the frogs from me, and from my people; and I will let the people go, that they may do sacrifice unto the LORD.

m v. 2. ix. 28. x. 17. Num. xxi. 7. 1 Sam. xii. 19. 1 Kings xiii. 6. Acts viii. 21. n 25-28. x. 8-11. 24-27. xii. 31. 32. xiv. 5. Ps. lxxvi. 3. Marg. lxxvii. 34-36. Jer. xxxiv. 8-16.

date; and Aaron, who bare the rod, the token of the divine presence and power, gave the signal for the miracle.

V. 7, 8. The magicians succeeded in their attempt to imitate this miracle also, but 'they should rather have shewn their skill in removing the frogs, which, one would think, Pharaoh expected from them... So Aben Ezra observes, 'He called for Moses, because he saw that the magicians had only added to the plague, but could not diminish it.' Bp. Patrick. The continuance of the plague was so intolerable, that Pharaoh, notwithstanding his haughtiness and impiety, was constrained to tremble before the power of JEHOVAH, thus exerted against him; and even to honour Moses and Aaron, by intreating them to intercede for him and his servants. Under the anguish of this most humiliating and disgusting judgment, he seemed inclined to dismiss Israel; but it was an extorted, reluctant consent, and therefore it was not durable, but was soon retracted.

V. 9-11. In order the more fully to convince Pharaoh, that the power of JEHOVAH alone had inflicted the judgment, Moses allowed him to "glory over him," or to have the honour of fixing the time when, in answer to his prayer, the frogs should be destroyed, whether immediately or afterwards: for Moses earnestly desired, that Pharaoh by submitting might escape destruction. 'Ap- point (ταξου) to me when I shall pray for thee.' Sept. The Lord was pleased thus to influence his servant, that all cavils and objections might be the more effectually obviated; the very time of the removal of the plague having been exactly foretold.—But why did not Pharaoh choose 9 And Moses said unto Pharaoh, Glory over me: when shall I intreat for thee and for thy servants, and for thy people, to destroy the frogs from thee, and thy houses, that they may remain in the river only?

† Or, Have this honour over me against when 1 Kings xviii. 25. Heb. to cut off.

10 And he said, To-morrow. And he said, Be it according to thy word: that thou mayest know that there is none like unto the LORD our God.

§ Or, Against to-morrow. Prov. xxvii. 1. Jam. iv. 14.

11 And the frogs shall depart from thee, and from thy houses, and from thy servants, and from thy people; they shall remain in the river only.

o ix. 14. 29. xv. 11. Dent. xxxvii. 31. xxxiii. 26. 2 Sam. vii. 22. 1 Chr. xvii. 20. Ps. lxxxiii. 18. lxxxvi. 8. lxxxix. 6-8. Is. xl. 25. xli. 9. Jer. x. 6 7. p 3. 9.

12 And Moses and Aaron went out from Pharaoh: and Moses cried unto the LORD, because of the frogs which he had brought against Pharaoh.

q See on 8. 25. Is. 33. x. 18. xxii. 11. 1 Sam. xii. 23. Jam. v. 16-18.

13 And the LORD did according to the word of Moses: and the frogs died out of the houses, out of the villages, and out of the fields.

r 24. vii. 21. Is. xxxiv. 3. Ez. xxxix. 11. Joel ii. 20.

14 And they gathered them together upon heaps: and the land stank.

s xiv. 5. Ec. viii. 11. Is. xxvi. 10. Jer. xxxiv. 7-11. Hos. vi. 4.

15 But when Pharaoh saw that there was respite, he hardened his heart, and hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

t See on iv. 21. vii. 13, 14.—Prov. xxix. 1. Zech. vii. 11, 12. Heb. iii. 8. 15. Rev. xvi. 9.

to be delivered from the frogs immediately? He seems to have still indulged some hopes that they would go away of themselves; and then he should not be obliged to Moses, or under the necessity of submitting to JEHOVAH, and letting Israel go; and therefore he would stand out till the next day, that if possible he might escape this most bitter mortification. Perhaps he had learned from the magicians to count some days more fortunate than others: and Moses, knowing this, allowed him to fix his own time, that the power of JEHOVAH might be rendered the more conspicuous; and he preferred the next day, in order to try whether that power could remove the frogs at the appointed time.

V. 14. It thus appeared that they were real frogs, which God in his judgment at first created, and afterwards in mercy destroyed.

V. 15. Pharaoh had now no pretence to question, either the power of JEHOVAH, or the divine mission of Moses. While the plague pressed upon him, he was inclined to submit, for it was insupportable: but when it was removed, and he had, (as the word denotes,) time to take his breath, he mistook a respite for a deliverance. Ambition, pride, and interest again influenced his mind; and thus he was induced to break his promise, and persist in disobedience. Having engaged in the contest, the further he proceeded, the more he was infatuated: that which at first appeared a loss, and a weakening of his kingdom, was now considered as an insufferable degradation of his dignity; and he thought himself engaged in 16 And the LORD said unto Moses, ^{v 5} Say unto Aaron, "Stretch out thy rod, and smite the dust of the land, that it may become lice throughout all the land of Egypt.

17 And they did so; for Aaron stretched out his hand with his rod, and smote the dust of the earth, and it became ^xlice, in man and in beast: all the dust of the land became lice throughout all the land of Egypt.

18 And the magicians did so with their enchantments to bring forth lice, but ^ythey could not: so there were lice upon man, and upon beast.

19 Then the magicians said unto Pharaoh, ^zThis is the finger of God: ^aand Pharaoh's heart was hardened, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

20 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses,

Rise up early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh, (^b lo, he cometh forth ^{b vii. 15.} to the water,) and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

21 Else if thou wilt not let my people go, behold, I will send ^cswarms of flies ^{c Or, a mixture of noisome beasts, &c.} upon thee, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thy houses: and the houses of the Egyptians shall be full of ^cswarms of flies, and also the ground whereon they are. ^{c Ps. lxxviii. 45. cv. 31. 14. vii. 18.}

22 And I will ^dsever in that day the land of Goshen, in which my people dwell, that no swarms of flies shall be there; to the end thou mayest know, ^{d ix. 4. 6. 26. x. 23. xi. 6. 7. xii. 13. Mal. iii. 18.} that I ^eam the LORD in the ^emidst of the earth. ^{e See on 10. vii. 17. Ez. xxx. 19. f Ps. lxxiv. 12. cx. 2.}

23 And I will put ^fa division between my people, and thy people: ^{f Heb. a redemption.} ^gto-morrow shall this sign be. ^{g Or, by to-morrow.}

honour, not to be threatened and forced into submission. This being the state of his mind, judgments and mercies alike combined to increase his obduracy.

V. 16, 17. Had the Lord sent a great number of lions and tigers to devour the Egyptians, or armies of victorious enemies to desolate the land; Pharaoh, though crushed, would have appeared, in his own eyes and in the eyes of others, of some consequence: but it was inconceivably humiliating, and rendered him extremely contemptible, to be thus vanquished by creatures so insignificant and despicable, as frogs, lice, and flies, which however he could neither escape, nor oppose, nor endure.—This judgment seems to have been sent without any previous warning; as an awful declaration, how greatly the Lord was provoked by the recent instance of Pharaoh's prevarication and obstinacy.

V. 18, 19. The Lord allowed the magicians to proceed, till his righteous purposes were answered, and then they could do nothing; to convince them that they had no power against Moses, but "what was given them from above," or exercised by the permission of God. Some suppose from the concluding part of the verse, that they at length attempted to remove the plague, but could not. Probably, the lice harassed the magicians, as well as others; and this extorted from them a confession that it was "the finger of God." They might also intend to vindicate their art and their skill in it, by intimating that no power, but that of God himself, could thus have overcome them. (Note, Dan. ii. 10—13.) Yet this declaration produced no effect on Pharaoh, whom their enchantments had helped to harden; for he was too deeply engaged in the contest, and had too often done violence to his convictions, to be influenced by their opinion. Probably he still endeavoured to believe, that Moses was only a magician of superior attainments; and that his magicians intended, by this concession, to conceal their own deficiency in professional skill.

V. 21. Swarms of flies.] מִזְרָהּ: 'a mixture of noisome beasts.' Marg. Der. from מִזְרָהּ misceri, confundi. The idea of mixture is supposed to be implied in the different modifications of words from this root. מִזְרָהּ a mixed multitude, or mingled people: xii. 38. Neh. xiii. 3.—Insects, however, of different kinds, are generally supposed to be meant.—מִזְרָהּ, a mixture of insects, or of various animals: as wasps, hornets, locusts, beetles.' Robertson's Thesaurus. 'Κυνόψα, the dog-fly.' Sept. The same word is retained in the Hebrew, and translated in the same manner by the LXX, Ps. lxxviii. 45. cv. 31.—Winged insects, most noxious and harassing to mankind, seem intended. The common fly is called מִזְרָהּ: whence Baalzebub. Locusts were afterwards sent as a separate plague; and they keep together in a compact body: we may therefore conclude that they did not form a part of this mixture; and the effects described do not comport with the idea of the larger destructive animals. But immense swarms of winged insects of various kinds, such as have been mentioned, would form a most distressing and mortifying judgment, on this proud monarch and his haughty nobles and people.

V. 22, 23. Perhaps the Israelites, for their correction, had in some small measure felt the former plagues. At least the distinction between them and the Egyptians had not been so particularly noticed, as it would be rendered on this occasion; when the express prediction, and exact accomplishment, would so mark the difference, that it could not be overlooked. Thus it must appear, that JEHOVAH, the God of the whole earth, protected the region inhabited by his worshippers, while he executed judgment on his enemies who dwelt close by them.—The very nature of the plague of flies, which so readily move from place to place, would render the exemption of Israel the more remarkable.—'I will greatly honour (παγαδοξασω) the land of Gesem.' Sept.

24 And the LORD did so: and ^g there came a grievous swarm of flies into the house of Pharaoh, and into his servants' houses, and into all the land of Egypt: ^h the land was ^{*} corrupted by reason of the swarm of flies.

^b See on 4.
^{*} Or, destroyed.

25 And Pharaoh ¹ called for Moses, and for Aaron, and said, Go ye, sacrifice to your God in the land.

¹ See on 8 ix. 27.
—x. 6. xii. 31.
Rev. iii. 9.

26 And Moses said, ^k It is not meet so to do; for ¹ we shall sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians to the LORD our God: lo, shall we sacrifice ^m the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, and will they not stone us?

^k iii. 18. 2 Cor. vi. 14—17.

¹ Gen. xliii. 32. xlvii. 34. Deut. vii. 25, 26. xii. 31.

^m 1 Kings xi. 5—7. 2 Kings xxiii. 13.

27 We will go ⁿ three days' journey into the wilderness, and sacrifice to the LORD our God, ^o as he shall command us.

ⁿ iii. 18. v. 1.

^o x. 26. xxxiv. 11. Lev. x. 1. Matt. xxviii. 20. Hos. x. 2.

28 And Pharaoh said, ^p I will let you go, that ye may sacrifice to the LORD your God in the wilderness; only ye shall not go very far away: ^q Intreat for me.

^q See on 8. ix. 28. x. 17.—1 Kings xiii. 6. Ec. vi. 10.

29 And Moses said, Behold, I go out from thee, and I will intreat the LORD, that the swarms of flies may depart from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people, ^r to-morrow: but let not Pharaoh ^s deal deceitfully any more, in not letting the people go to sacrifice to the LORD.

^r 10
^s 8. 15. Ps. lxvi. 3. Marg. lxxviii. 34 —37. Jer. xlii. 20, 21. Acts v. 3. 4. Gal. vi. 7.

30 And Moses went out from Pharaoh, and intreated the LORD.

31 And the LORD did according to the word of Moses; and he removed the swarms of flies from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people; there remained not one.

32 And ^t Pharaoh hardened his heart at this time also, neither would he let the people go.

^t See on iv. 21. vii. 13, 14.—15. lxxii. 17. Acts xxviii. 26, 27. Jam. i. 13, 14.

V. 24. This plague seems to have been sent, without the token of waving the rod of Moses, or striking the ground with it; perhaps lest Pharaoh should ascribe the effects to some magical virtue in the rod itself, instead of considering it as a token of the divine operation.—When we consider, that flies in general propagate by maggots of one kind or another, we shall perceive the emphasis of the expression, “the land was corrupted by them:” for it would not only be desolated by the flies themselves, but filled with stench and filthiness by their maggots; as no doubt the insects intended were in a state of maturity, however produced.

V. 25—27. Pharaoh was aware, that if the Israelites went into the wilderness to offer sacrifice, they would not readily be brought back again; and he intimated, that if they only meant to sacrifice to JEHOVAH, they might do it in the land, and he would make no farther opposition. But Moses objected, that according to the rites of their religion, they must sacrifice to JEHOVAH “the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes,” who would thus be provoked to stone them. It is well known that the Egyptians in after times worshipped oxen or calves, and other animals; and it seems natural to conclude, that the Israelites had in Egypt imbibed the idea of making an image of God in the form of a calf; and that this worship prevailed there at that time: if so, to offer the very animals as sacrifices, which the Egyptians adored as deities, would be an abomination in their eyes, even as their idolatry was an abomination in itself. It was therefore necessary for the Israelites to retire to a great distance in the wilderness.

V. 29. To-morrow.] In the former instance, Pharaoh had chosen to wait till the morrow for the removal of the plague: and on this occasion he was left to suffer under the rod till the morrow, perhaps to remind him of his folly in that instance; and to warn him not to deal deceitfully any more by breaking his promise, as he had repeatedly done. (8. 15.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—15.

How dangerous is it to provoke that God, who hath such a variety of ways, in which he can inflict dreadful punishment on his rebellious creatures! He can employ the most despicable insects as formidable executioners of his vengeance; he can turn all our pleasures into loathing, our comeliness and decorations into deformity and corruption, and pour contempt on all our pride and self-importance! Nor is there any resistance, or escape, from his tremendous indignation. Yet he still continues merciful; he is ready to forgive every sinner who submits; and he pursues with vengeance such alone as persist in their rebellion. But let us not mistake transient relentings, or hasty determinations of amendment, for that unreserved submission which the word of God requires. Under the weight of incumbent affliction, and the dreadful expectation of still heavier sufferings, the proudest and hardest heart feels some pangs of remorse: the despised and hated servants of the Lord may then perhaps be called for; their prayers requested, and amendment promised; but alas! such appearances are entitled to small regard. Even the evil spirits once besought Christ not to torment them; and experience shews, that prayers offered, under severe sufferings and urgent terrors, frequently spring from no higher principle. For when there is a respite, men again harden their hearts, throw off their assumed and constrained shews of piety, return to their sins, and commonly proceed to more daring ungodliness. But though we must not countenance the delusion of men living in sin, and expecting to die penitent, or give unscriptural encouragement to fallacious appearances; yet, knowing that “nothing is too hard for the LORD,” we should be ready to assist, with our counsel and prayers, even those persons who have been our most injurious enemies; rendering them every kind of service, and shewing them every species of courteousness, (except that of flatter-

CHAP. IX.

The plague of murrain predicted, and sent on the cattle of the Egyptians; while the cattle of Israel are exempted, 1—7. The plague of boils, 8—12. Moses expostulates with Pharaoh, and predicts the plague of hail, which is sent, and causes immense devastation, 13—26. Pharaoh confesses his wickedness, deprecates further judgments, and promises to let Israel go, 27, 28. Moses intercedes, the hail ceases, and Pharaoh continues hardened, 29—35.

THEN the LORD said unto Moses, ^a Go in unto Pharaoh, and tell him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me. ^b For if thou refuse to let them go, and wilt hold them still, ^c Behold, the hand of the LORD is upon thy cattle which is in the field,

^a 13. iii. 18. iv. 22, 23, v. 1. viii. 11. 20, x. 3.
^b iv. 23. viii. 2. x. 4. Lev. xxvii. 14. —16. 23, 24. 27. 28. Ps. vii. 11. 12. lxxviii. 21. 1a. 1. 20. Rom. ii. 8. Rev. ii. 21, 22. xvi. 9.
^c vii. 4. 1 Sam. v. 6—11. vi. 9. Acts xliii. 11.

upon the horses, upon the asses, upon the camels, upon the oxen, and upon the sheep; there shall be a very grievous murrain.

4 And the LORD shall ^d sever between the cattle of Israel, and the cattle of Egypt: and there shall nothing die of all that is the children's of Israel.

5 And the LORD appointed ^e a set time, saying, To-morrow the LORD shall do this thing in the land.

6 And the LORD did that thing on the morrow, and ^f all the cattle of Egypt died: but of the cattle of the children of Israel died not one.

7 And Pharaoh sent, and behold, there was not one of the cattle of the Israelites dead. And ^g the heart of Pharaoh was hardened, and he did not let the people go.

^d viii. 22. x. 23. xii. 18. 1s. lxxv. 13, 14. Mal. iii. 18.
^e 18. viii. 23. x. 4. Num. xvi. 5. Job xxiv. 1. Ec. iii. 1—11. Jer. xxviii. 16, 17. Matt xxvii. 63, 64.
^f 19. 25. Ps. lxxviii. 48.
^g 12. vii. 14. Job ix. 4. Prov. xxix 1. 1s. xlviii. 4. Dan. v. 20. Rom. ix. 18.

ing them in false confidence,) without being wearied of well doing by reiterated disappointments.

V. 16—32.

It is peculiarly necessary to remind such persons, as repeatedly shew tokens of remorse, that on former occasions they relapsed into their evil courses; and to warn them, no longer to deal deceitfully: for the love of sin, and its supposed advantages and pleasures, joined with the pride of the human heart, if not effectually subdued by the grace of God, will certainly prevail against all convictions. Hence, "many seek to enter in, and are not able:" they seem in earnest, but there is some reserve, some Herodias, some beloved secret sin, of which they are ready to say, as Lot of Zoar, "Is it not a little one?" They are unwilling to think themselves exposed to everlasting misery; they hope for some abatement, or some allowance; they propose to make some compromise; they refrain from other sins; they do many things, and give liberally, yea, punish themselves severely: they even abstain at some times, and, as it were, let their sin depart a little way, provided it may remain within call. But finally to divorce Herodias; to sell all, and follow Christ, bearing the cross; alas! if this be the case, they must have longer time to consider; they must postpone, though not forego, the thoughts of eternal life; they are sorrowful, but depart from Christ, determined to keep the world at present, and hoping for some future season, when salvation may be had without such costly sacrifices. Yet the word of God is peremptory: "He is of one mind, and who can turn him?" The expected abatement, the favourable season, is waited for in vain; the conviction wears off, the heart grows hard; and at length the poor sinner is "driven away in his wickedness," and left without hope to execrate his own folly and madness. Would we escape this dreadful end, we must earnestly pray for grace to enable us, "if our right hand, or eye, or foot offend us," resolutely to part with it. Without reserve or delay, we must hearken to the voice of Christ, which bids us finally to break off every sin, and to renounce all that leads to evil; and we must stand prepared, when called to it by his command and in Providence, to forsake all for his sake. Nor let us forget, that they who would serve God must separate from the society of sinners, whose conduct is an abomination to the true Christian, and who reciprocally hold him in abhorrence.—We may also observe for our comfort, that though wicked men and deceivers often "practise and prosper," yet their power is limited; and however they may impose on others, they cannot hurt the servant of God; but in due time shall be constrained to confess that the Lord is with him. And whether God do, or do not, exempt his people from the common afflictions of the world, he will make all at last to "return and discern between the righteous and the wicked; between him that serveth God, and him that serveth him not." Mal. iii. 18.

NOTES.

CHAP. IX. V. 6. No mention is made in the narrative of this miracle of the rod of Moses, probably for the same reason as before. (Note, viii. 24.) The subsequent history shews, that some of the cattle were preserved; but vast multitudes of every kind were suddenly destroyed throughout the whole land of Egypt.—It is supposed that, even at this early period, the Egyptians idolized some kinds of cattle, and represented their deities under images in the shape of them; and this terrible calamity was well suited to expose the stupidity of this practice, as well as to shew the power of God, both in destroying the cattle of the Egyptians, and preserving the cattle of Israel.

V. 7. It does not appear, that Pharaoh had in any former instance sent to enquire, whether the Israelites were involved in the calamities, or not; for he had treated the nation with contempt: yet on this occasion he sent to enquire, and he learned that not one of their cattle had died. But he had so long done violence to his conscience, that it was become callous, as "seared with an hot iron:" so that

S ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, and unto Aaron, ^h Take to you handfuls of ashes of the furnace, and let Moses sprinkle it towards the heaven in the sight of Pharaoh.

9 And it shall become small dust in all the land of Egypt, and shall be ⁱ a boil breaking forth with blains, upon man, and upon beast, throughout all the land of Egypt.

10 And they took ashes of the furnace, and stood before Pharaoh, and Moses sprinkled it up towards heaven: and it became a boil breaking forth with blains, upon man, and upon beast.

11 And the magicians ^k could not stand before Moses, because of the boil: for the boil was upon the magicians, and upon all the Egyptians.

12 And ^l the LORD hardened the heart of Pharaoh, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had spoken unto Moses.

13 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^m Rise up early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

14 For I will at this time send ⁿ all my plagues upon thine heart, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people: ^o that thou mayest know that there is none like me in all the earth.

15 For now I will stretch out my hand, ^p that I may smite thee and thy people with pestilence: and thou shalt be ^q cut off from the earth.

16 And in very deed ^r for this cause have I ^s raised thee up, ^t for to shew in ⁿ vii. 16.

ⁱ Deut. xxviii. 27.
^{35.} Job ii. 7.
Rev. xvi. 2.

^k viii. 18, 19. 1s.
xlvii. 12—14.
2 Tim. iii. 8, 9.

^l See on iv. 21. vii. 13, 14. Ps. lxxxvi. 11, 12. Rev. xvi. 10, 11.

^m i. vii. 15. viii. 20.

ⁿ Lev. xxvii. 18. 21. 28. Deut. xxviii. 15—17. 59—61. xxix. 20—22. xxxii. 29—42. 1 Sam. iv. 8. Jer. xix. 8. Mic. vi. 13. Rev. xviii. 8. xxii. 18.

^o See on viii. 10. p xi. 4—6. xii. 29, 30.

^q xiv. 28, 1 Kings xiii. 34. Prov. ii. 22.

^r Ps. lxxxviii. 17, 18. Prov. xvi. 4. Rom. ix. 22. 1 Pet. ii. 8. Jude 4.

^s Heb. made thee stand.

^t xix. 4. xv. 11—16. xviii. 11. Josh. ii. 10, 11. 1 Sam. iv. 8. Ps. cxxxvi. 10—15.

this marked distinction made no impression on him. (Note, 12.)

V. 8—10. It is thought that these ashes were taken from the furnaces, or kilus, in which the Israelites burnt the bricks; and that this was intended to shew Pharaoh, that he was visited with these sore judgments for his cruel oppression of the people of JEHOVAH.—Instead of waving the rod, as in some former instances, the sprinkling of the ashes by Moses and Aaron in the sight of Egypt's haughty monarch, was made the token of a dire disease, which arose from the state of the air, out of which small dust fell on the people throughout the land, and most dreadful ulcers followed.—The former miracles distressed and impoverished the Egyptians, yet their health and persons had not been touched: but the judgments of God came nearer and nearer; so that their bodies, as well as the poor remains of their cattle, were now visited by the most distressing tokens of divine indignation.

V. 11. The magicians, though baffled, had hitherto it seems persisted in the contest, at least so far as to encourage Pharaoh to stand out in his opposition, as expecting that they would soon be able to overcome Moses and Aaron; but, being visited by this loathsome and painful disorder; they were rendered contemptible, and finally driven away: “their folly appeared unto all men,” and we hear nothing more respecting them in the sacred records; but traditions, both of Jewish Rabbies and of Mohammedans, concerning them, are many, sufficiently contradictory, and absurd.

V. 12. The LORD had declared twice, that “he would harden the heart of Pharaoh” (iv. 21. vii. 3); but this is the first time, in which it is expressly said that “the LORD hardened Pharaoh’s heart:” yet this expression is afterwards several times repeated. Hence we may infer, that as God had before permitted and appointed a variety of events, which had a tendency to augment Pharaoh’s obduracy; so now, in punishment of his presumptuous rebellion, he totally gave him up to his own lusts, and to the power of Satan: nor can we interpret the expression too strongly, if we only remember this one thing, that God did not by his own power create any hardness or wickedness in his heart; “for God is not tempted of evil, neither tempteth he any man.” (Note, Jam. i. 13—15.)—It was his settled purpose that Pharaoh should be finally hardened, for the accomplishment of which he effectually provided, and in which he doubtless was perfectly righteous. “The sentence of destruction was irreversibly denounced against him, and God resolved to dispose things so that he should not repent, but run headlong to his ruin.” Bp. Patrick. Indeed, we may perceive that this proud tyrant and cruel oppressor deserved to be made an example, by the just Judge of the universe: and provided none are punished who do not deserve it, and none above their deserts, there can be no reasonable cause of complaint, or ground of objection.—Hardness of heart is a figurative expression, denoting that insensibility of mind, upon which neither threatenings nor promises, judgments nor mercies, make any abiding impressions; but the conscience being stupified, and the heart filled with insolent pride and presumption, the obdurate rebel persists in determined impenitence, unbelief, and disobedience: not from a natural incapacity of obeying, or as deprived of his understanding; but from enmity of heart, and a determined opposition of his will against the known commands of God. The tendency of our nature to this state of mind is also called the stony heart; and to it is opposed “the heart of flesh,” the broken, contrite, and tender heart.—(Note, Ez. xi. 17—20.)—Though the boil was upon the magicians, yet probably Pharaoh had escaped it, which might conduce to increase his obduracy.

V. 13—16. Pharaoh, even when given up to judicial obduracy, was not at all exempted from obligation to obey God, nor excused in his wilful and insolent disobedience (34). Accordingly Moses was again sent to him, in the name of the LORD, requiring him to “let his people go that they might serve him;” and enforcing the det 1 Chr. xvi. 24. these my power; and 'that my name Pa. lxiv. 9. may be declared throughout all the lxxxiii. 18. 1s. earth.

lxiii. 12-14.
Mal. i. 11. 14.
Rom. ix. 17.

u Job ix. 4. xv. 17 As yet ^u exaltest thou thyself
25. xl. 9. 1s. x. against my people, that thou wilt not
15. xxvi. 11. let them go:
xxxvii. 23, 24.
29. xlv. 9. Acts
xii. 23. 1 Cor. x 22.

x 1 Kings xix. 2 18 Behold, ^x to-morrow about this xx. 6. 2 Kings time, ^y I will cause it to rain a very
vii. 1, 18. grievous hail, such as hath not been v 22-25. in Egypt, since the foundation thereof, even until now.

z Hab. iii. 2. 19 Send therefore now, ^z and gather thy cattle, and all that thou hast in the field: for upon every man and beast which shall be found in the field, and shall not be brought home, the hail shall come down upon them, and they shall die.

a Prov. xxii. 3. 20 He that ^a feared the word of the
Jon. iii. 5, 6. LORD among the servants of Pharaoh,
Mark xiii. 14- made his servants and his cattle flee
16. Heb. xi. 7. into the houses.

* Heb. set not his heart unto. vii. 23. 1 Sam. iv. 20. Marg. 1 Chr. xxii. 19. Job vii. 17. xxxiv. 14. Prov. xxiv. 32. Marg. Ez. xl. 4. Dan. x. 12. b vii. 19. viii. 5. 16.

21 And he that ^{*} regarded not the word of the LORD, left his servants and his cattle in the field.

22 And the LORD said unto Moses, ^b Stretch forth thine hand toward heaven, that there may be hail in all the land of Egypt; upon man, and upon beast, and upon every herb of the field, throughout the land of Egypt.

23 And Moses stretched forth his rod toward heaven, and ^c the LORD sent thunder and ^d hail, and the fire ran along upon the ground; and the LORD rained hail upon the land of Egypt.

24 So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail, very grievous, such as there was ^e none like it in all the land of Egypt, since it became a nation.

25 And the hail smote throughout all the land of Egypt, all that was in the field, both man and beast: and the hail smote every herb of the field, and brake every tree of the field.

26 Only ^f in the land of Goshen, where the children of Israel were, was there no hail.

27 ¶ And Pharaoh sent, and called for Moses and Aaron, and said unto them, ^g I have sinned this time; ^h the LORD is righteous, and I and my people are wicked.

28 ⁱ Intreat the LORD (for it is enough) that there be no more [†] mighty thunderings and hail; and I will let you go, and ^k ye shall stay no longer.

mand with still more awful denunciations of desolating judgments on him, and on his people, who concurred in his rebellion; that he might be effectually convinced of the unrivalled power and majesty of JEHOVAH, above all the imagined gods of the nations, in the whole earth. After many other plagues, the Lord would smite him and his people with the pestilence, which seems to denote the destruction of the first-born. Yet it was implied that Pharaoh himself, while he felt most exquisitely the anguish of that dreadful judgment, would not die by it;” but “be cut off from the earth” by a subsequent stroke. For indeed “the LORD had raised him up” for this very purpose. He “who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will,” knowing the heart of Pharaoh, had placed him on the throne, and established him in great prosperity, at the very time long before appointed and predicted for Israel’s deliverance. (Notes, Gen. xv. 12—16.) God foresaw that Pharaoh’s pride and presumption would induce him to refuse obedience; and that every circumstance would concur in determining him to persist in the contest with desperate obstinacy. Accordingly, the Lord had purposed to leave Pharaoh to be hardened to his destruction; and, in the example of this haughty tyrant and cruel oppressor, to display his almighty power, sovereign authority, and awful justice; that all the nations might hear, and know that the God of Israel was indeed the Lord of the whole earth, for the glory of his name, and for an extensive and durable advantage to mankind. (Notes, Rom. ix. 15—18. 22, 23.)

V. 17. ‘Art thou so infatuated as still to oppose thy feeble arm against that omnipotence, the effects of which thou hast already witnessed?’ In exalting himself against Israel, Pharaoh exalted himself against God.

V. 18, 19. Rain or hail was very rare in Egypt; but such a tremendous storm of rain and hail, with thunder and lightning, as Moses denounced, would be entirely unprecedented.—Warning of this judgment was mercifully given, that individuals, who were not hardened in rebellion, might escape the more ruinous effects of it.

V. 20, 21. When Moses had delivered the message to Pharaoh, the report would doubtless spread swiftly among the people; and some, by what they had seen and heard, were so far influenced as to provide against the approaching storm. But a great part of the people remained almost as obdurate as Pharaoh himself.—This instance aptly illustrates the inseparable connexion between believing and obeying. Some believed that the judgment would come, others did not; and both acted accordingly, obeying or disobeying.

V. 23, 24. This plague must have been inconceivably tremendous, as well as destructive in its effects: few words indeed are used in describing it, but they are peculiarly emphatical.

V. 25. Man.] Hitherto the lives of the Egyptians had 29 And Moses said unto him, As soon as I am gone out of the city, I will ¹spread abroad my hands unto the LORD: and the thunder shall cease, neither shall there be any more hail; that thou mayest know, how ^mthat the earth is the LORD's.

30 But as for thee and thy servants, ⁿI know that ye will not yet fear the LORD God.

31 And the flax, and the barley was smitten: for ^othe barley was in the ear, and the flax was boiled.

32 But the wheat and the rye were not smitten: for they were ^{*}not grown up.

33 And Moses went out of the city from Pharaoh, and spread abroad his hands unto the LORD: ^pand the thunders and hail ceased, and the rain was not poured upon the earth.

34 And when Pharaoh ^qsaw that the rain, and the hail, and the thunders were ceased, he sinned yet more, ^rand hardened his heart, he and his servants.

35 And the heart of Pharaoh was hardened, neither would he let the children of Israel go, ^sas the LORD had spoken ^tby Moses.

¹ 1 Kings viii. 22. 38. 2 Chr. vi. 12. 13. Ezra ix. 5. Job xi. 13. Ps. cxliii. 6. Is. i. 15. ^m Deut. x. 14. Ps. xxiv. 1, 2. 1. 12. xcv. 4, 5. 1 Cor. x. 26. 28.

ⁿ Is. xxvi. 10. ^o Ruth i. 22. ^o 23.

^o Ruth i. 22. ^o 23.

^{*} Heb. hidden, or, dark.

^p x. 18, 19. Jam. v. 17, 18.

^q viii. 15. Ec. viii. 11.

^r 2 Chr. xxxviii. 22. xxxvi. 13. Rom. ii. 4, 5.

^s iv. 21. vii. 3, 4. xi. 9, 10. ^t Heb. by the hand of Moses.

been spared; but this plague first began to destroy them.

V. 30. Moses knew that Pharaoh and his servants would not give up the contest, both as he was made acquainted with the purpose of God, and as he knew the human heart. He was sensible, that Pharaoh's confessions and promises were not the effect of any radical change of mind and heart by special grace; but extorted merely by terror and anguish. He would not, however, leave him the least shadow of excuse for his conduct, and therefore readily complied with his request.

V. 31. Was boiled.] The flax was grown up into stems or stalks; and, as some think, had begun to form pods for the seed. 'The flax was forming seed.' (Τὸ δὲ λινὸν σπερμα-τισόν.) Sept.

V. 32. The wheat and rye were not destroyed, because they were hidden. (Marg.) They were tender and flexible; and, not being yet cared, the hail did not much injure them.—It can hardly be supposed that the barley was in ear, and the wheat not above ground, as our version seems to imply: for this is contrary to known fact, as to the different kinds of grain in those countries.—The LXX read, 'They were late' or 'backward (ὀψιμα γὰρ ἦν).'

V. 33. Moses, assured of the divine protection, expressed this confidence before Pharaoh and his servants, by fearlessly going forth from the city in the midst of this destructive tempest: for it is evident, that he went forth before there was any abatement of the storm (29).

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—12.

"Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil:" and they are emboldened in sin, because God is long-suffering and slow to anger.—But, "evil pursueth sinners;" and, with rapid though often unnoticed steps, approaches nearer and nearer: nor is there any possible escape without repentance, and works meet for repentance.—God hath various methods of impoverishing those who have grown rich by injustice, and depriving men of the things which they have idolized: and if they will not take warning, and submit to him, when he bereaves them of their substance, he can fill their bodies with disease, and their hearts with terror, and at length cut them off in their wickedness.—Satan encourages his servants with hopes of great advantages, but he cannot ensure even their present impunity: and they who wait patiently, shall see the folly of all seducers and deceivers made as manifest, as that of these magicians was. They who perish in rebellion, have none to blame but themselves; as nothing but their own depraved inclinations renders them obstinate in pride and ungodliness, and impels to pervert the bounty and patience of God into an occasion and encouragement to sin: and in whatever way the Lord hardens the hearts of men, he always does it judicially, as a punishment of former sins; and generally of the sin of hardening their own hearts under solemn warnings, deep convictions, severe rebukes, and remarkable deliverances.

V. 13—35.

The haughty and powerful may despise the Lord, and set him at defiance; but they cannot defeat his purposes: and many have been advanced to thrones, and greatly prospered and exalted, in order to manifest the extreme wickedness of their hearts, that the justice and power of God might be displayed in their destruction, for the glory of his great name.—Even in wicked nations, which are ripe for vengeance, some are more destitute of all fear of God, and more daring in sin, than others. But, alas! men in general are vastly more careful of their cattle and property, than of their immortal souls!—Would we escape the threatened vengeance of God, we must notice his warnings, and flee for refuge at his appointment; for they who disregard his word, will be convinced of its truth when it is too late.—Under the prospect of impending destruction, the anguish of suffering, and the dismay of conscience, the proudest sinner is often appalled, and the most humiliating confessions are extorted from him: nay, he may even use the language of piety; not because he thoroughly means it, but because he feels a momentary conviction that it suits his case and situation. These reluctant and transient convictions cannot indeed avail those who remain impenitent; but they are honourable to God, and illustrate his justice in punishing such as, having respite, return to their crimes and are hardened in iniquity.—While all things concur in hastening the obstinate sinner's condemnation, the Lord gives his people safety, amidst storms and tempests; and the most tremendous scenes sometimes fail of disturbing,

CHAP. X.

Moses is sent to denounce the plague of locusts, 1—6. The servants of Pharaoh persuade him to let Israel go, 7; he sends for Moses, treats with him, but drives him away, 8—11. The plague of locusts, 12—15. Moses is sent for, and intreats the Lord; the locusts are removed, and Pharaoh is hardened, 16—20. The plague of darkness; Pharaoh again treats with Moses, but is again hardened, and drives him away with menaces, 21—29.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Go in unto Pharaoh: for ^a I have hardened his heart, and the heart of his servants; ^b that I might shew these my signs before him:

2 And ^c that thou mayest tell in the ears of thy son, and of thy son's son, what things I have wrought in Egypt, and my signs which I have done among them; ^d that ye may know how that I am the LORD.

3 And Moses and Aaron came in unto Pharaoh, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, ^e How long wilt thou refuse to ^f humble thyself before me? Let my people go, that they may serve me.

4 Else if thou refuse to let my people go, behold ^g to-morrow will I bring the ^h locusts into thy coast.

5 And they shall cover the ⁱ face of the earth, that one cannot be able to see the earth: and they shall eat ^j the residue of that which is escaped, which remaineth unto you from the hail, and shall eat every tree which groweth for you out of the field.

6 And they shall ^k fill thy houses, ^l and the houses of all thy servants, and the houses of all the Egyptians: ^m which neither thy fathers, nor thy fathers' fathers have seen, since the day that they were upon the earth, unto this day. ⁿ And he turned himself, and went out from Pharaoh.

7 And Pharaoh's servants said unto him, ^o How long shall this man be a ^p snare unto us? Let the men go, that they may serve the LORD their God: knowest thou not yet, ^q that Egypt is destroyed?

8 And Moses and Aaron were ^r brought again unto Pharaoh: and he said unto them, Go, serve the LORD your God: ^s but ^t who are they that shall go?

9 And Moses said, ^u We will go with our young, and with our old, with our sons, and with our daughters, with our flocks, and with our herds will we go: for we ^v must hold ^w a feast unto the LORD.

10 And he said unto them, Let the LORD be so with you, as I will let you go, and your little ones: ^x look to it, for evil is before you.

11 Not so: go now ye ^y that are men, and serve the LORD, for that ye did desire. ^z And they were driven out from Pharaoh's presence.

a See on iv. 21. vii. 13, 14. ix. 34, 35.

b iii. 20. vii. 4. ix. 16. xiv. 17. 18. xv. 14, 15. Josh. ii. 9, 10. iv. 23, 24. 1 Sam. iv. 8. Rom. ix. 17.

c xiii. 8, 9, 14. Deut. iv. 9. vi. 20—22. Ps. xlv. 1. lxxvi. 18. lxxxviii. 5, 6. Joel i. 3.

d See on vii. 17. Ps. lviii. 11. Ez. xx. 29, 38.

e ix. 17. xvi. 28. Num. xiv. 27. 1 Kings xviii. 21. Prov. i. 22, 24. Jer. xiii. 10. Ez. v. 6. Heb. xii. 25.

f 1 Kings xxi. 29. 2 Chr. vii. 14. xxxiii. 12, 19. xxxiv. 27. Job xlii. 6. Prov. xviii. 12. 1s. ii. 11. Jer. xlii. 18. Jam. iv. 10. 1 Pet. v. 6.

g viii. 10, 23. ix. 5. 18. xi. 4, 5. h Prov. xxx. 27. Joel i. 4—7. ii. 2—11. 25. Rev. ix. 3.

i Heb. eye. 1 ix. 32.

l 14, 15. ix. 24. xi. 6. Joel ii. 2.

m 1. xi. 8. Heb. xi. 27.

n 3. o xxiii. 33. Josh. xxiii. 13. 1 Sam. xviii. 21. Prov. xxix. 6. Ec. vii. 26.

p 1s. xiv. 20. li. 9. Jer. xlviii. 4. li. 8. Zeph. i. 18.

q 16. 24. xii. 31.

t Heb. who and who, &c.

r Gen. i. 8. Deut. xxxi. 12, 13. Josh. xxiv. 18. Ps. cxlviii. 12. 13. Ec. xii. 1. Eph. vi. 4.

s viii. 18. v. 1. 3. viii. 25—28. xiii. 6. Num. xxix. 12. 1 Cor. v. 7, 8.

t 2 Chr. xxxii. 15. Lam. iii. 87.

u 28. v. 4.

even at the moment, the sweet serenity of their souls; for "the work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance for ever."

NOTES.

CHAP. X. V. 1, 2. The Lord here says, "I have hardened his heart, and the heart of his servants:" the servants of Pharaoh had copied his wickedness, and were involved in his punishment (7).—As these awful judgments were inflicted on purpose, that the power and glory of JEHOVAH might be illustrated for the instruction of future generations; it was proper that Moses should again and again go to Pharaoh, and warn him of the approaching plagues, that his obstinate defiance of God might more fully shew the justice of his condemnation.

V. 3. Refuse, &c.] The point in contest was, whether Pharaoh would humble himself before God, or not. Refusing to do this was his ruin; and the case is the same with all impenitent sinners. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 6. The ravages which locusts make in those eastern countries, are frequently extremely terrible. They even darken the earth, by intercepting with their inconceivable multitudes the light of the sun; they turn fruitful countries into desolate deserts, and leave the wretched inhabitants to perish with famine; nor can they by any means be resisted or escaped. But the locusts sent on Egypt were dreadful beyond example and comparison, in size and multitudes, and in the desolations which they occasioned: and the plague was thus foretold, that the hand of the Lord in sending it might be the more evident.—Pharaoh had repeatedly violated his promises; and Moses seems to have left his presence abruptly, without waiting for an answer.

V. 7. Some of Pharaoh's servants were less hardened than others of them, and embraced this occasion of expostulating with him.

V. 10, 11. Let the LORD, &c.] This was either spoken in scorn and contempt, as if Pharaoh would say, 'Let the LORD be with you, and take care of you if he can; but I will not let you go:' or by way of imprecation: 'I would, that the LORD may as certainly cease to be with you any more, as I shall refuse to let you go with all your company; for to this I never will consent.' He intended to keep the ^{x vii. 19.} 12 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, *Stretch out thine hand over the land of Egypt for the locusts, that they may come up upon the land of Egypt, and eat every herb of the land, even all that the hail hath left.

^{y xiv 21. Ps lxxviii. 26. cvii. 25—28. cxlviii. 8. Jon. i. 4. iv. 8} 13 And Moses stretched forth his rod over the land of Egypt, and the LORD brought an ^yeast-wind upon the land all that day, and all that night: and when it was morning, the east-wind brought the locusts.

^{x Deut. xxviii. 42. 1 Kings viii. 37. Ps. lxxviii. 46. cv 34, 35.} 14 And ^zthe locusts went up over all the land of Egypt, and rested in all the coasts of Egypt: very grievous were ^athey; *before them there were no such locusts as they, neither after them shall be such.

^{t Joel i. 6, 7. ii. 1—11. 25.} 15 For ^bthey covered the face of the whole earth, so that the land was darkened; and they did eat every herb of the land, and all the fruit of the trees, which the hail had left: and there remained not any green thing in the trees, or in the herbs of the field, through all the land of Egypt.

^{* Heb. hastened to call.} 16 Then Pharaoh *called for Moses and Aaron in haste; and he said, *I have sinned against the LORD your God, and against you.

17 Now therefore ^dforgive, I pray ^{d 1 Sam. xv. 25.} thee, my sin only this once, *and in-^etreat the LORD your God, that he may take away from me ^fthis death ^{f 2 Kings iv. 42. 2 Cor. i. 10.} only.

18 And he went out from Pharaoh, ^gand intreated the LORD.

19 And the LORD turned ^ha mighty strong west-wind, which took away the locusts, and ⁱcast them into ^hthe Red Sea: there remained not one locust in all the coasts of Egypt.

20 But ^kthe LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, so that he would not let the children of Israel go.

21 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, ⁱStretch out thine hand toward heaven, that there may be ^mdarkness over the land of Egypt, ⁱeven darkness which may be felt.

22 And Moses stretched forth his hand toward heaven: and there was a ⁿthick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days.

23 They saw not one another, neither rose any from his place for three children, and probably the women also, as hostages to ensure the return of the men. Nay, he threatened to punish Moses and Aaron, if they continued to trouble him; and his mad presumption was such, that he certainly would have attempted it, had not God dismayed and restrained him.—Some suppose that he charged them with the design of stirring up the people to a revolt, when he said, “evil is before you.”—As, however, they were not satisfied with his proposal, he drove them with violence from his presence.

That are men. (11.) מַנְּיָם מִן הַזָּכָר vir, masculus, quasi validus. Robertson's Thes. 'Οι ἀνδρες. Sept.

V. 13. East-wind.] ‘Being lifted up by the wind, they fly in the air in a great cloud; . . . people looking on them in great fear, lest they fall down and cover the country.’ Pliny.

V. 16, 17. Pharaoh now had nothing before his eyes, but inevitable death to himself and his people by famine, unless some respite could be obtained; for all vegetation was totally destroyed. He therefore confessed his sins to Moses, craved forgiveness of him, and intreated him to pray for him; but it does not appear, that he confessed his sins unto the Lord, or besought him to forgive him.

V. 19. Red Sea.] “The sea of weeds,” or flags, as it is in the original.—The Greek translators of the Bible call it ‘the Red Sea,’ either from the colour of the waters, the soil, or the weeds, or flags; or from the neighbourhood of the Edomites, whose name signifies red. This is a large arm of the sea, which runs up between Arabia and Idumea on one hand, and Egypt on the other, and separates the continents of Africa and Asia; except as they communicate by the narrow isthmus of Suez, which lies betwixt the end of the Red Sea and the Mediterranean.—The Red Sea in most ancient writers means what is now called the Indian Ocean.

V. 20. Note, ix. 12.

V. 21. Darkness.] It is generally supposed, that some extraordinary fog, which combined in occasioning this plague, extinguished all the lamps of the Egyptians, and left them in total darkness; and that this was felt in the pain which it excited. Certainly it was such a darkness as we have no conception of; and not wholly unlike the “blackness of darkness for ever.”

V. 22. Thick darkness.] חֹשֶׁךְ חֹשֶׁךְ, misty and thick darkness, full of obscurity. (From the radical noun חָשָׁךְ which has a similar signification.)—Σκόλος γνοφός, θυελλα επι, κ. ς. Α Darkness, thick darkness, a tempest upon, &c. Sept.—Γνοφός, και σκόλος, και θυελλη, “to blackness and darkness and tempest.” Heb. xii. 18.

V. 23. It is a tradition of the Jews, that the Egyptians were affrighted with horrible noises, occasioned by evil spirits, and that this is the meaning of the expression of the Psalmist, “He sent evil angels among them.” (Note, Ps. lxxviii. 46—49.) Doubtless their consciences were filled with horror, and inflicted torment upon them, when thus inclosed in this tremendous darkness.—The Israelites might now have marched off unmolested; but it was the Lord's pleasure, that they should go forth, not as abject fugitives, but as triumphant conquerors.

o viii. 22. ix. 4. days: °but all the children of Israel 26. xiv. 20. Josh. had light in their dwellings.

xxiv. 7. 1s. ix. 1. 24 And Pharaoh called unto Moses,
—3. lxxv. 13. 14. and said, p Go ye, serve the LORD: only Mal. iii. 18. 28. q Gen. xxxiv. 23. r let your flocks and your herds be r 10. stayed: °let your little ones also go with you.

25 And Moses said, Thou must give
* Heb into our * us also sacrifices, and burnt-offerings, hands. that we may sacrifice unto the LORD our God.

s xii. 32. 1s. xxiii. 26 Our °cattle also shall go with us;
18. ix. 5—10. there shall not an hoof be left behind:
Hos. v. 6. Acts
ii. 44. 45. 2 Cor.
viii. 5.

for thereof must we take to serve the LORD our God; °and we know not with t Prov. iii. 9. Heb.
what we must serve the LORD, until we xi. 3.
come thither.

27 But the LORD °hardened Pha- u See on iv. 21—raoh's heart, and he would not let them xiv. 4. 6. Rev.
go. ix. 20. xvi. 10.
11.

28 And Pharaoh said unto him, ° Get x 11.
thee from me, take heed to thyself, see my face no more: °for in that day thou y 2 Chr. xvi. 10 seest my face thou shalt die. xxv. 16. Am. vii.
13.

29 And Moses said, Thou hast spoken z xl. 4—8. xii. 30.
well, °I will see thy face again no more. 31. Heb. xi. 27.

V. 24. After the end of the three days, when the darkness terminated, Pharaoh called for Moses to treat again with him.

V. 27. It is worthy of notice, how frequently, in the concluding part of the narrative, the hardening of Pharaoh's heart is unreservedly ascribed to God, (1. 20. xi. 10.) Different language was previously used; which shews, that God's hardening Pharaoh's heart was the punishment of his hardening his own heart.

V. 29. The first three verses of the next chapter may be read as a parenthesis: for Moses seems to have warned Pharaoh of the death of all the first-born, before he quitted his presence at this time; and then he went out purposing never more to see his face.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—11.

The manifestation of his own glory is the ultimate end of all the Lord's dispensations, whether of judgment or mercy; and though we do not at present clearly discern it, yet we shall hereafter behold it in full splendour: and all his servants with joyful acclamations proclaim, that he is "righteous in all his ways and holy in all his works." Then "the wicked shall be silent in darkness;" for "every mouth shall be stopped, and all the world shall become guilty before God."—Again and again he sends to demand of his rebellious creatures, "How long will ye refuse to humble yourselves before me?" But the haughtiness and stoutness of the human heart induce men to defer this mortifying submission, even when severely suffering the effects of their obstinacy, in former instances; when expostulated with for acting in so ruinous a manner to themselves and others; and when nothing but the patience of God keeps them from utter destruction. But "hast thou," O sinner, "an arm like God? and canst thou thunder with a voice like his?"—The examples of severity and goodness, recorded in the sacred Scriptures, were written for our profit; and if we duly regard them, our own experience will prove their extensive and lasting usefulness.—Whatever we learn from the word and works of God, we should point out, and interpret to our children, and shew them his power, wisdom, justice, and love, as displayed in them; for they were intended, not only for our good, but for that of our children also.—We should likewise remember, that Satan and his instruments are extremely averse to our serving God with our sons and our daughters; and that they employ various methods of keeping them from joining in his service. We ought therefore to be very peremptory in this concern, and be careful to initiate them, even when "little ones," in the ways and worship of God; "for of such is the kingdom of heaven." But alas! many apparently religious parents act as if they were of Pharaoh's opinion, and supposed that the service of God was intended for men alone: for they allow their children to stay behind when they go to worship, and permit them to spend their time in dissipation and vanity; as if they would leave them under the yoke of Satan, "the god of this world," as hostages for their own return to his service.—But let young people themselves observe, that the Lord himself says, "Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth;" while Satan and his servants are they, who counsel them to put off the thoughts of God and religion till some future period.

V. 12—29.

It is incumbent on us to serve God, not only with our households, but likewise with all our substance; neither avariciously hoarding any part of it, nor spending it upon our pride and self-indulgence of any kind, but considering the whole as the Lord's property committed to our stewardship. And, not knowing what he may immediately demand, we should be prepared to expend, or part with, any proportion which may be required, without hesitation and reluctance. But if we would sincerely and decidedly serve the Lord, we must learn to disregard the contempt, reproach, and even menaces, of wicked men. They may indeed haughtily affirm that "evil is before us;" but if we simply and faithfully trust and obey God, we need not "fear what flesh can do unto us." For he will be for us; and perhaps they will ere long be constrained to address us with respect, and intreat our prayers or assistance. Assuredly, in the days of adversity, and in the gloomy vale of death, when the wicked are consumed with terrors, and tormented by their own consciences, believers will walk in the light of God's countenance, and rejoice in his salvation: and when the wicked are driven into the blackness of eternal darkness, believers will have an inheritance amongst the saints in light eternal. Let us then "lift up our heads, for our redemption draweth near;" "yet looking diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God:" for the most hardened sinner often trembles, the most insensible is sometimes self-condemned; nay, many that are

CHAP. XI.

The Lord shews Moses that one more plague is coming on Egypt, and directs that the Israelites should ask jewels of the Egyptians, 1, 2. Moses is honoured by the Egyptians, 3. He denounces the death of the first-born, and goes out from Pharaoh, 4—8. The Lord hardens Pharaoh's heart, 9, 10.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, ^a Yet will I bring one plague more upon Pharaoh, and upon Egypt; ^b afterwards he will let you go hence: when he shall let you go, he shall surely ^c thrust you out hence altogether.

2 Speak now in the ears of the people, and let every man ^d borrow of his neighbour, and every woman of her neighbour, ^e jewels of silver, and jewels of gold.

3 And ^f the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians. Moreover, the man ^g Moses was very great in the land of Egypt, in the sight a ix. 14. 1. ev. xxvi. 21. Deut. iv. 24. 1 Sam. vi. 4. Job x. 17. Rev. xvi. 9. xxii. 18. b iii. 20 Gen. xv 14 c xii. 31—33. 30. d iii. 22. xii. 35. 36. Gen. xxxi. 9. Job xxvii. 16. 17. Ps. xxiv. 1. cv. 37. Prov. xiii 22 Hag. ii. 8. Matt. xx. 15. e xxxii. 2—4. 24. xxxv. 22. Ez. xvi. 10—13. Hos. ii. 8. f iii. 21. xii. 36. Gen. xxxix 21. Ps. cxi. 46. Acts vii. 10. g Gen. xii. 2. 2 Sam. vii 9. Esth. ix. 4. 1s. ix. 14. Acts vii. 22. Rev. iii. 9.

of Pharaoh's servants, and in the sight of the people.

4 And Moses said, Thus saith the LORD, ^h About midnight ⁱ will I go out into the midst of Egypt.

5 And all the first-born in the land of Egypt shall die, from ^k the first-born of Pharaoh that sitteth upon his throne, even unto the first-born of the maid-servant that is ^l behind the mill; and all the first-born of beasts.

6 And there shall be ^m a great cry throughout all the land of Egypt, such as there was none like it, nor shall be like it any more.

7 But against any of the children of Israel shall not a ⁿ dog move his tongue, against man or beast; that ye may know how that the LORD doth put ^o a difference between the Egyptians and Israel.

8 And ^p all these thy servants shall come down unto me, and bow down themselves unto me, saying, Get thee

h xii. 23. 29. Job xxxiv. 20. Am. iv. 10. v. 17. Matt. xxv. 6. i 2 Sam. v. 24. Pa. ix. 10. Is. xlii. 13. Mic. ii. 13. Zech. xiv. 3. k iv. 23. xii. 12. xliii. 15. Pa. lxxviii. 51. cv. 36. cxxxv. 8. cxxxvi. 10. Heb. xi. 28. l Judg. xvi. 21. 1s. xlvii. 2. Lam. v. 13. Matt. xxiv. 41. m iii. 7. xii. 30. Prov. xxi. 13. Is. xv. 4. 5. 8. Jer. xxxi. 15. Lam. iii. 8. Zeph. i. 10. Luke xii. 28. Rev. vi. 16. 17. xviii. 18, 19. n Josh. x. 21 o See on vii. 22. x. 23.—Mal. iii. 18. 1 Cor. iv. 7. p xii. 31—33. 1s. xlix. 23. 26. Rev. iii. 9

finally lost, have "been almost persuaded to be Christians." But pride, the love of sin, and aversion to the immediate exercises of piety, with procrastination, as the result of it, form the three-fold cord which men cannot break; and upon persons thus enslaved, all counsel is thrown away, though enforced with the evidence of the most undeniable facts, and the certain prospects of destruction. They would treat about reconciliation; but they will not yield unreservedly to part with every sin, and cast themselves wholly on the Lord's mercy. He therefore rejects their proposals with disdain: and every relenting and respite leaves them still harder; as the winter sun thaws the snow, which, when its beams are withdrawn, congeals into ice. Such persons often use good words, and put the Lord's servants in his place, as if they were gods to them, (vii. 1.) and seem to expect salvation from them: but they do not pray earnestly and constantly for themselves; and therefore sin retains its dominion, and Satan his possession, and "their last state is worse than the first."

NOTES.

CHAP. XI. V. 1. It is probable, this was a secret revelation to Moses, while in the presence of Pharaoh; in order that he might denounce the last dreadful judgment on Egypt, before he went out from him. Moses, no doubt, would be glad to hear that this contest, which desolated Egypt in order to deliver Israel, would so speedily be determined.—'When he shall send you away with every thing, he will cast you out with an expulsion.' (εξβολη. Acts xxvii. 18. Gr.) Sept.

V. 2, 3. The original does not in the least imply, that the Israelites asked the Egyptians to lend them the jewels, or vessels, of gold and silver, as promising to return them; but rather that they requested, or even required them: and the Lord engaged to dispose the Egyptians to comply with their requirement; for the words may be rendered, "And the Lord will give the people favour, &c." (Note, iii. 21, 22.)—The Egyptians revered Moses, as an extraordinary person, of wonderful courage, wisdom, and sanctity; and endued with powers of inflicting judgments, or removing them, at pleasure: and probably many of them were persuaded, that he had justice on his side, and blamed Pharaoh, as the real cause of their calamities. For while oppressors pursue infatuated counsels, and are flattered by hireling courtiers, it often happens that their subjects secretly favour the cause of the oppressed, even where themselves have no personal ground of complaint; considering a measure of liberty as the common right of mankind.

Borrow. (2.) Αιτηστω. Sept.

V. 4. The Lord went out, on this awful occasion, as a mighty Conqueror, to trample down and triumph over his enemies.

V. 5. (Note, xii. 29, 30.)—Behind the mill.] Water-mills and wind-mills were not known till many ages after this time; but the female slaves ground the corn for use, by hand-mills. (Marg. Ref. 1.)

V. 6. 'The calamity, being in every house; it made a general and loud lamentation: men, women, children, and servants, bewailing the loss of the prime person in the family.' Bp. Patrick.

V. 7. Move his tongue.] 'No one shall dare to do the Israelites harm, or to speak any evil of them; but all shall stand in awe of them.'—The expression seems to have been proverbial.

V. 8. Moses thus expressed his abhorrence of Pharaoh's obstinacy, who probably treated this last message with contempt: and he solemnly left him to the judgment of God, as an incurable rebel.

* Heb. is at thy feet. Judg. iv. 10. 1 Kings xx. 10. 2 Kings iii. 9. Marg. Heb. heat of anger. Deut. xxix. 24. xxxii. 24. Ps. vi. 1. Ez. iii. 14. Dan. iii. 19. [†] Rom. ix. 17, 18. ^r See on vii. 8.

out, and all the people that * follow thee: and after that I will go out: and he went out from Pharaoh in ^a a great anger.

9 And the LORD said unto Moses, ^q Pharaoh shall not hearken unto you: that my ¹ wonders may be multiplied in the land of Egypt.

10 And Moses and Aaron did all these wonders before Pharaoh: and ^s the LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, so that he would not let the children of Israel go out of his land.

^s See on iv. 21. vii. 13. 14.—x. 20. 27. Deut. ii. 30. 1 Sam. vi. 6. Job ix. 4. Rom. ii. 4. b. ix. 22.

CHAP. XII.

The month of Israel's deliverance is appointed to be the first of their year, 1, 2. The institution of the passover, and the feast of unleavened bread, 3—28.

V. 9. This may be rendered, "For the LORD had said, &c." (vii. 3.—Note, iv. 21.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

When the Lord has inflicted so many and severe judgments, that man can conceive of nothing worse; he has still more terrible plagues in reserve: yet he generally executes those last, which he denounced first (iv. 23); for "he endures with much long-suffering the vessels of wrath fitted for destruction, that he may shew his wrath and make his power known." (Notes, Rom. ix. 19—23.) But what are all these ten plagues combined, when compared with "the wrath to come," that one plague reserved for all obstinate rebels in another world!—The Lord can make his people "a burdensome stone to all, who burden themselves with them" (Zech. xii. 3); and render all men sensible that it is at their peril they touch them: nay, he is able to give them favour in the sight of those, who have been their enemies.—When he enables his servants to maintain a consistency of character, he will put such honour upon them, as shall silence and confound all those, who slander and despise them; and constrain men in general to approve of their conduct, reverence their persons, and even to bow down before them: and when the people of God shall triumph in his redemption, and their enemies cry out under the anguish of his indignation, the difference will be too evident to remain any longer unnoticed.—They who are employed by him in publick services, may, consistently with the deepest humility, "magnify their office;" and, without deviating from the most exemplary Christian meekness, they may and ought to express deep indignation, as well as sorrow, at the wickedness of mankind; after his example, who looked round with "anger, being grieved for the hardness of their hearts." Such anger against the sin of those, whose good they have perseveringly sought in vain, and for whom their prayers have again and again prevailed, is a terrible indication, and usual fore-runner, of the wrath of God. The Lord, however, will at last be glorified in all his dispensations; and as he hath foretold that his gospel would be slighted and abused, we must not think the worse of it on that account.

The first-born throughout Egypt are cut off at once, 29, 30; the Israelites are sent away in haste, 31—33; they spoil the Egyptians and march out, attended by a mixed multitude, 34—39. The term of their sojourning, and the fulfilment of God's promise to Abraham, 40—42. Further rules respecting the passover, 43—51.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in the land of Egypt, saying,

2 ^a This month shall be unto you the beginning of months: it shall be the first month of the year to you.

3 ^b Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, saying, ^c In the tenth day of this month, they shall ^d take to them every man a ^e lamb, according to the house of their fathers, a lamb for an ^f house.

a xiii. 4. xxii. 15. xxxiv. 18. Lev. xxiii. 5. Num. xxviii. 16. Deut. xvi. 1. Esth. iii. 7. b iv. 30. vi. 6. xiv. 15. xx. 19. Lev. i. 2. c 6. John xii. 1. 12. d Gen. iv. 4. xxii. 8. 1 Sam. vii. 9. John i. 29. 36. 1 Cor. v. 7. Rev. v. 6—13. vii. 9—14. xiii. 8. Or. kid. Lev. v. 6. Num. xv. 11. 2 Chr. xxxv. 7.

NOTES.

CHAP. XII. V. 1. These instructions must have been given to Moses and Aaron, some days before the last message was delivered to Pharaoh, and perhaps before the plague of darkness was inflicted: for the tenth day of the month was not come, when they were given (3); yet the people observed the passover on the fourteenth, which seems to have been the very day, on which Moses went out from Pharaoh (xi. 4).

V. 2. The month called Abib, (which signifies an ear of corn, because the corn was then eared,) and also Nisan. answers nearly to the latter part of our March, and the beginning of April. This had hitherto been reckoned the seventh month; and the Israelites continued afterwards to compute several of their civil concerns by this reckoning, which agreed with that of the surrounding countries: but in remembrance of their deliverance out of Egypt, when they were formed into a nation and a church, and received, as it were, a new kind of existence; it was appointed to be the first month of the year to them, and their sacred institutions were regulated according to it. This new style began the year with the spring, when the face of the creation was renewed.

V. 3—10. It may be supposed, that the people had been ordered to prepare for leaving Egypt at the shortest notice, and had a variety of engagements to occupy their time; yet, amidst them all, they were required to observe a sacred festival. For on this occasion the passover was instituted, to be then celebrated as a token, or means, of their deliverance, and afterwards as a sacramental memorial of it, and a prefiguration of redemption by the promised Saviour. (Note, 11—14.)—The Israelites, though not guilty of the same crimes as the Egyptians, were in many respects deserving of the wrath of God: and this institution was suited to shew them, that they were preserved and renewed, not for their own righteousness, but by the mercy of God through an atoning sacrifice. (Notes, Ez. xx. 5—9.) They were therefore directed, on the tenth day from the new moon, to select a lamb or kid for every one of those households, into which the families of their tribes were subdivided; unless when the small number of persons in the ^c Lev. i. 3. 16. 4 And if the household be too little xxii. 19-24. for the lamb, let him and his neighbour Deut. xvii. 1. next unto his house take it, according

Mal. i. 7, 8, 14. to the number of the souls; every man,
Heb. vii. 26. ix. according to his eating, shall make 13, 14, 1 Pet. i. your count for the lamb.
18, 19.

^e Heb. son of a year Lev. xxiii.
12. 1 Sam. xiii.
1. Marg.

^f Lev. xxiii. 5. 5 Your lamb shall ^e be without blem-Num. ix. 3. ish, a male ^t of the first year; ye shall xxviii. 16, 18. take it out from the sheep or from the Deut. xvi. 1-6. goats.
2 Chr. xxx. 15. Ez. xlv. 21.

^g Is. liii. 6. Matt. 11. Luke xxiii.
xxvii. 20, 25. 1. 18. Acts ii. 23.
Mark xv. 1. 8. iii. 14. iv. 27.

^h 22, 23. Eph. i. 7. ^f And ye shall keep it up until the
Heb. ix. 13, 14. ^f fourteenth day of the same month:
22. x. 14, 29, xl. and ^g the whole assembly of the con-
28. 1 Pet. i. 2. ^g gregation of Israel shall kill it ^t in the evening.

7 And they shall take of the ^h blood, household made it proper to join with some of their neighbours. They were allowed to take either a lamb, or a kid; but, as Christ is commonly represented under the emblem of a Lamb, and never under that of a kid, it is supposed that lambs were generally preferred. This lamb must be "without blemish, a male of the first year," or under a year old; as typifying the "Lamb of God," "without spot and blemish," who was "slain from the foundation of the world."—After four days of preparation, which would afford time leisurely to examine the intended victims, they were slaughtered on the fourteenth by the whole congregation; the head of each household killing the lamb selected for it, as it is probably concluded. This was done, between the two evenings (Marg.); and it is supposed, that the first of these evenings began when the sun had passed the meridian, and that the second ended at sun-set. The paschal-offerings, therefore, seem to have been slain from three o'clock in the afternoon till sun-set; and afterwards the people ate the passover, when the fifteenth day of the month had begun; for they reckoned from sun-set to sun-set.—Learned men are of opinion, that the Lord Jesus, our passover, entered Jerusalem on the tenth of the first month, at the very time when the paschal sacrifices were selected; and the language of the Evangelist may be thus interpreted: for if the three days, after which Christ should rise from the dead, contained only one complete day and part of two others; according to the custom of the Jews in computing time; five days before the passover may mean three whole days and part of two others. (John xii. 1. 12.) It is likewise supposed, by many expositors, that Christ was crucified on the fourteenth day of the month, and expired soon after the ninth hour, or three o'clock in the afternoon, at the very time when the paschal lambs were slain: but the Evangelists expressly state, that he ate the passover at the accustomed time, on the evening of the fourteenth day; and if so, it is certain that he was crucified on the fifteenth. (Matt. xxvi. 17. Mark xiv. 12. Luke xxii. 7.) He was, however, put to death, in the midst of the assembled congregation of Israel, and at their united request; and he expired, just before the hour when the paschal lamb began to be sacrificed, though not on the same day.—The blood of these victims, having been preserved for that purpose, was ordered to be sprinkled, with and strike it on the two side-posts, and on the upper door-post of the houses, wherein they shall eat it.

8 And they shall ^l eat the flesh in that night; ^k roasted with fire, and ^m unleavened bread, and ⁿ with bitter herbs they shall eat it.

9 Eat not of it raw, nor sodden at all with water, ^a but roast with fire: his head with his legs, and with the purtenance thereof.

10 And ye shall let ^o nothing of it remain until the morning: and that which remaineth of it until the morning, ye shall burn with fire.

11 And thus shall ye eat it; with a bunch of hyssop, on the side-posts, and on the upper door-posts, of the houses in which the passover was eaten; and this was the token of the Israelites being preserved when the first-born of Egypt were destroyed: it was also a type of our avowed dependance on the atonement of Christ, while 'we feed on him in our hearts by faith with 'thanksgiving.' But the blood was not sprinkled or poured on the threshold, which would have implied contempt; and this seems to have been intended as a typical caution against apostasy and abuse of the gospel. (Heb. x. 29.)—Leaven is the known emblem of hypocrisy, malice, and wickedness: unleavened bread therefore was the representation of sincerity, truth, and love. (1 Cor. v. 8.)—The bitter herbs might be an emblem of godly sorrow, deep repentance, self-denial, and mortification of depraved passions; and of those outward tribulations which accompany the exercise of living faith in Christ: and the roasting of the lamb by fire, (the emblem of divine wrath,) might prefigure the varied and excruciating sufferings which Christ endured, in bearing our sins, and preparing our blessedness.—It was likewise ordered that the whole of the lamb should be thus prepared and eaten. This might imply that true faith receives the entire salvation of Christ, and depends upon him in every part of his mediatorial character, without any exception: while the annexed order, that if any part of the lamb was left, it should, before the morning, be burned with fire, and not reserved either for food or any superstitious purposes, implied that it was a solemn propitiatory sacrifice of awful import, and not merely a cheerful festival.

Eat not of it raw. (9.) This by no means proves, that the Israelites were accustomed to eat raw flesh at their meals, as some have concluded from the expression: for no other intimation of the kind is any where given in the whole Scripture: but merely that they were not, in this religious service, to adopt any such practice. It is well known, that idolaters have in many instances eaten the flesh of their sacrifices, or part of it, raw, and even drunk the blood of them: but these superstitions must have no sanction in the ordinances of the people of JEHOVAH.

V. 11—14. The Israelites were directed at this time to eat the paschal lamb, in the attire and posture of men, who were setting out on a journey, and in haste to depart.

^p Matt. xxvi. 19, ^q your loins girded, your ^r shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand : and ye shall eat it in haste ; ^r it is the LORD's passover.

^r 12 For I will ^r pass through the land of Egypt this night, and ^r will smite all the first-born in the land of Egypt, both man and beast ; and ^r against all the ^r gods of Egypt I will execute judgment ; ^r I am the LORD.

^r 13 And ^r the blood shall be to you for a token upon the houses where ye are : and when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you, ^r to destroy you, when I smite the land of Egypt.

^r 14 And this day shall be unto you ^r for a memorial ; and ye shall keep it a feast to the LORD throughout your generations : ye shall keep it a feast ^r by an ordinance for ever.

^p Matt. xxvi. 19, 20. Luke xii. 30. Eph. vi. 14. 1 Pet. i. 13. ^q Luke vii. 38. xv. 22. Eph. v. 15. ^r Lev. xxiii. 5. Num. xx. 3. 11. Dent. xvi. 2-6. 1 Cor. v. 7. ^s 23. xi. 4, 5. Am. v. 17. ^t See on 29, 30. xi. 4-6. ^u Num. xxxiii. 4. 1 Sam. v. 3. vi. 5. 1 Chr. xiv. 12. 1s. xix. 1. Jer. xliii. 13. Zeph. ii. 11. ^v Or, princes. xxvii. 23. 1s. lxxvii. 1. 6. John x. 34, 35. ^w vi. 2. 1s. xliii. 11-15. Ez. xii. 16. ^x 23. Gen. xvii. 11. Josh. ii. 12. Heb. xi. 23. ^y Heb. for a destruction. ^z xiii. 9. Num. xvi. 40. Josh. v. 7. Ps. cxi. 4. cxxxv. 13. Zech. vi. 14. Matt. xxvi. 13. Luke xxii. 19. 1 Cor. xi. 23-25. ^a 17. 24. 43. xliii. 10. Lev. xxiii. 4. 5. Num. x. 8. xviii. 1. 1 Sam. xxx. 25. 2 Kings xxiii. 21. Ez. xvi. 14.

^b 15 ^b Seven days shall ye eat unleavened bread, even the first day ye shall put away leaven out of your houses : for whosoever eateth leavened bread, from the first day until the seventh day, ^c that soul shall be cut off from Israel.

^b 16 And in the first day, there shall be ^d an holy convocation, and in the seventh day there shall be an holy convocation to you : ^e no manner of work shall be done in them, save that which every ^e man must eat, that only may be done of you.

^b 17 And ye shall observe the feast of unleavened bread ; for ^f in this self-same day have I brought your armies out of the land of Egypt : therefore shall ye observe this day in your generations, ^g by an ordinance for ever.

^b 18 ^h In the first month, on the four-

^b See on 8. xliii. 6, 7. xxiii. 15. xxxiv. 18. Lev. xxiii. 7. Num. xxviii. 17. Dent. xvi. 3. Acts xii. 3. ^c 19, 20. xxxvi. 14. Gen. xvii. 14. Lev. xvii. 10, 14. Num. ix. 13. Mal. ii. 12. Gal. v. 12. ^d Lev. xxiii. 2, 3. 7, 8. 24, 25, 27. Num. xxviii. 13. 25. xxix. 1, 12. ^e xvi. 23. xx. 10. xxxv. 2, 3. Jer. xvii. 21, 22. ^f vii. 5. xiii. 8. ^g See on a. 14. ^h See on 15.—Lev. xxiii. 5, 6.

It does not appear, however, that the passover was afterwards celebrated in this manner ; and our Lord and his apostles seem to have eaten it, in the posture commonly used at their meals. Indeed several things, required at this institution, were not afterwards observed. No intimation is given, that the lamb, which our Lord used at his last passover, was selected four days before ; and he with his apostles left the house soon after the celebration of it. But the circumstances in which the Israelites were placed, at this time, rendered these observances significant and proper : for they were taught, that it was the "LORD's passover : " that he was about to go through the whole land of Egypt, destroying every first-born of man and beast without exception, triumphing over the idols, as well as the princes, of that country : and that he would respect the sprinkled blood on the doors of the Israelites ; and pass by or over them, nay effectually protect them, at the time of this general desolation. They must therefore be ready to march, on the shortest notice within the course of that night.—The manner and posture in which the passover was then eaten, might represent the Christian's deliverance from the bondage of sin, and his heavenly pilgrimage by faith in Christ.—It is probable, that a devastation of the temples and idols of Egypt was miraculously effected on this occasion ; as Dagon afterwards was broken before the ark of God.—The observance of the passover, by the Israelites in Egypt, was an open avowal of their relation to JEHOVAH as his people ; a profession of their faith in his promises to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob ; a means of grace, and an act of solemn worship and obedience. Most of them, probably, rested in the outward observance, which was connected with their temporal deliverance ; but, had any disobeyed the command, they would have been involved in the judgments executed on the Egyptians. In after ages, it was a memorial of the power and love of God, in delivering Israel, and of the miracles connected with that deliverance. Had not these events taken place, the nation could not possibly have been persuaded, that they were eye-witnesses of them, and induced to adopt such a memorial of them : and if it had not been adopted at the time, when these publick and extraordinary events were said to have occurred ; at what future time could the nation be persuaded, that they had, from age to age, believed and commemorated them ? It was thus a demonstration that Moses spake and acted by divine authority, and that the religion which he established was from God ; while it exceedingly favoured the instruction of the people, and of young persons especially, in the nature and obligation of that religion. (26, 27.)—It was also a prefiguration of Christ our Passover : and believers would discover, from the promises and prophecies, under the teaching of the Holy Spirit, something of the nature of redemption through him, and of all other blessings ; and in them it would not only be a joyful tribute of gratitude for former temporal mercies, but an act of humble faith and dependence on the promised Saviour, even until his coming.—Learned men have indeed pointed out many customs among the pagans, with reference to which they suppose these several circumstances were arranged ; especially in order to keep the Israelites at a distance from the idolatrous worship of their neighbours : but it may be questioned, whether the origin of those customs was not of much later date, than the institution of the passover.

I will pass over you. (13.) Σκεπασω υμας.—(I will cover, or, shelter you.) Sept.

V. 15—18. From the evening of the fourteenth day of the first month, till the evening of the twenty-first, the Israelites were forbidden to eat any leaven : and every person who violated this precept was sentenced to be "cut off from Israel." It does not appear, that the magistrate was required to put the offender to death, even if his offence were known ; but the Lord himself threatened to inflict punishment on him, however secretly he violated the command.—It is not agreed, what is meant by this teenth day of the month at even, ye shall eat unleavened bread, until the one and twentieth day of the month at even.

19 Seven days shall there be no leaven found in your houses : for whosoever eateth that which is leavened, even that soul shall be cut off from the congregation of Israel, whether he be a stranger or born in the land.

20 Ye shall eat nothing leavened : in all your habitations shall ye eat unleavened bread.

21 ¶ Then Moses called for all the elders of Israel, and said unto them, Draw out and take you a lamb according to your families, and kill the passover.

22 And ye shall take a bunch of hyssop, and dip it in the blood that is in the bason, and strike the lintel, and the two side-posts, with the blood that is in the bason : and none of you shall go out of the door of his house until the morning.

23 For the LORD will pass through to smite the Egyptians, and when he seeth the blood upon the lintel, and on the two side-posts, the LORD will pass over the door, and will not suffer the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you.

24 And ye shall observe this thing for an ordinance to thee, and to thy sons for ever.

25 And it shall come to pass, when ye be come to the land, which the LORD will give you according as he has promised, that ye shall keep this service.

26 And it shall come to pass, when your children shall say unto you, What mean ye by this service?

27 That ye shall say, 'It is the sacrifice of the LORD's passover, who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt, when he smote the Egyptians, and delivered our houses. And the people bowed the head and worshipped.

28 And the children of Israel went away, and did as the LORD had commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

29 ¶ And it came to pass that at midnight the LORD smote all the first-born in the land of Egypt, from the first-born of Pharaoh that sat on his throne, unto the first-born of the captive that was in the dungeon ; and all the first-born of cattle.

30 And Pharaoh rose up in the night, he and all his servants, and all the Egyptians ; and there was a great cry

l See on 15
j 43. 48.

k iii. 16. xvii. 5.
xix. 7. Num. xi. 16.
l 3. Num. ix. 2—5. Josh. v. 10. 2 Kings xxiii. 21. 2 Chr. xxx. 14—17. xxxv. 5, 6. Matt. xxvi. 17—19.
m Lev. xiv. 6, 7. Num. xix. 18. Ps. li. 7. Heb. ix. 1. 14, 19. xii. 24. 1 Pet. i. 2. n Matt. xxvii. 30.

o See on 12.

p 2 Sam. xxiv. 16. Is. xxxvii. 36. Ez. ix. 6. 1 Cor. x. 10. Heb. xi. 28. Rev. vii. 3. ix. 4.

q See on 4—10. Gen. xvi. 8—10.

r Deut. iv. 5 xii. 8, 9. xvi. 5—9. Josh. v. 10—12. Pa. cv. 44, 45.

s xiii. 8, 9. 14, 15. Deut. vi. 7. xi. 19. xxxii. 7. Josh. iv. 6, 7. 21—24. Ps. lxxviii. 3—6. cxlv. 4. Is. xxxviii. 19. Eph. vi. 4.
t See on 11. 23—xxiv. 25. Deut. xii. 2. 5. Cor. v. 7.

u iv. 31. xxxiv. 8. 1 Chr. xxix. 20. 2 Chr. xx. 18. xxx. 30. Neh. viii. 6.

x See on 12. xi. 4 xiii. 15. Job xxxiv. 20. 1 Thes. v. 2.
y Num. iii. 13 viii. 17. xxxiii. 4 Ps. lxxviii. 51 cv. 36. cxxxv. 8 cxxxvii. 10. Heb. xi. 28.
z iv. 23. xi. 5. † Heb. house of the pit. Is. xxiv. 22. li. 14. Jer. xxxviii. 6. 13 Zech. ix. 11.
a See on xi. 6—Prov. xxi. 13. Am. v. 17. Jam. ii. 13.

expression ; (Marg. Ref. c) ; but something beyond exclusion from the religious privilege of an Israelite must be intended, as the strangers also are included in it (19).—During all the seven days, sacrifices were appointed to be offered ; but, on the first, and on the last, “ a holy convocation ” was held, or an assembly of the people for solemn worship. These days were accounted holy, like the sabbaths, and no manner of work was permitted to be done, except preparing their food. (Marg. Ref. c)

V. 19, 20. The people were commanded to put away all leaven from their houses, that none might be found by any person, to tempt him to transgress. Heathen slaves, therefore, and strangers, seem to have been included ; and not merely proselytes who had been circumcised. Indeed, the latter alone might eat the passover ; but all without exception were required to abstain from leaven.—This was a shadow of the holy life of the true believer, who, by the grace of Christ, through faith in his atonement, puts away the old leaven of sin with abhorrence, and walks with God in newness of life : (Note, 1 Cor. v. 6—8) ; and also, of that pious attention to his domesticks, as to their external conduct, which is required of him.

V. 22, 23. The blood of the paschal lamb, sprinkled on the lintel and door-posts, was the only security to the Israelites from the destroyer who smote the Egyptians ; and under that protection they must abide during the whole night, if they would be secured from destruction.—Thus we must abide in Christ by faith to the end of our days.

V. 26. Notes, 11—14. xiii. 8—10.
V. 27. Sacrifice.] The passover was a “ sacrifice,” as offered to God and typical of Christ ; but it differed from all the other sacrifices, in that no part of it was consumed upon the altar. The Jewish writers indeed say, that the fat was burnt on the altar ; but the Scripture is silent on that head.

V. 29, 30. The hour chosen, for this most tremendous execution, was suited to enhance the consternation. Probably, the persons smitten expired with agonizing cries, which awakened every family ; and the report would rapidly spread from house to house. The Egyptians, for three days and nights just before, had been kept in perpetual solicitude and horror by the darkness ; and now their rest was broken by a still more terrible calamity. By the death of the first-born, they were righteously punished for murdering the children of the Israelites ; as well as for keeping that nation in bondage, which God honoured by calling it “ his son, and his first-born.”—Words can never in Egypt: for there was not a house where there was not one dead.

^b iii 19, 20. vi. 1. xi. 1. 8. Ps. cv. 38. ^c See on x. 9. 31 And he called for Moses and Aaron by night, and said, ^b Rise up, and get you forth from among my people, both you and ^c the children of Israel: and go serve the LORD, as ye have said.

^d See on x. 26. 32 Also take ^d your flocks and your herds, as ye have said, and be gone; and ^e bless me also.

^e viii. 28. Gen. xxvii. 34. 38. Ezra vi. 10. ^f xi. 1. Ps. cv. 38. 33 And the Egyptians were ^f urgent upon the people, that they might send them out of the land in haste: for they said, ^g We be all dead men.

^g Gen. xx. 3. Num. xvii. 12. 3. 34 And the people took their dough before it was leavened, their ^{*} kneading troughs being bound up in their clothes upon their shoulders.

^h iii. 22. xi. 2. 3. Gen. xv. 14. Ps. cv. 37. 35 And the children of Israel did according to the word of Moses: ^h and they borrowed of the Egyptians jewels of silver and jewels of gold, and raiment.

36 And ⁱ the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians, so that they lent unto them such things as they required: and they spoiled the Egyptians.

^k i. 11. Gen. xlvii. 11. xxxviii. 26. Gen. xv. 5. xvi. 3. Num. i. 46. xi. 21. 37 And the children of Israel journeyed from ^k Rameses to Succoth, about ^l six hundred thousand on foot that were men, besides children.

^m Num. xi. 4. Zech. viii. 23. ⁿ Heb. a great mixture. 38 ^m And ⁿ a mixed multitude went up also with them; and flocks, and herds, even very much cattle.

39 And they baked unleavened cakes of the dough which they brought forth out of Egypt, for it was not leavened: because they were ⁿ thrust out of Egypt, and could not tarry, neither had they prepared for themselves any victual.

40 ¶ Now the ^o sojourning of the children of Israel, who dwelt in Egypt, was ^p four hundred and thirty years.

41 And it came to pass, at the end of the four hundred and thirty years, express the terror and bitterness of this sudden blow, from an invisible hand, destroying the pride, and hope, and comfort of every family of all ranks, throughout this populous kingdom; the whole nation at once mourning over the dead, and trembling for themselves!

V. 31, 32. It is probable, that Pharaoh only sent a message to Moses and Aaron, allowing and requiring Israel to depart; and that Moses never saw him again after he left him in anger, as before related. (Note, xi. 8.)—The first words may be rendered, “And he called to Moses “and Aaron.”

V. 35, 36. In their extreme terror, the Egyptians were willing to purchase the favour, and the speedy departure, of Israel at any price: and thus the Lord both took care that their hard-earned wages should at last be paid, and that the people should be well provided for their journey. They therefore left the country laden with the wealth of the Egyptians, as if they had plundered them in war. (Notes, iii. 21, 22. xi. 2, 3.)

Borrowed. (35.) ‘The word signifieth also to ask or require. Junius renders it petierunt: Montanus, postulaverunt. Leigh.—Jewels.] כֶּסֶף, אֶזְמֵרִים. Sept. Not only ornaments, but also vessels of gold and silver: plate as well as jewels.—Lent. (36.) אֶזְמֵרִים, אֶזְמֵרִים. Sept.—“I have lent him (הֶאֱזְמֵרִים) to the Lord.” 1 Sam. i. 28. This seems to be the only other place in which the Hiphil of אֶזְמֵר occurs: and the word lent does not well suit the transaction there recorded. (Note, 1 Sam. i. 28.)

V. 37, 38. It seems the Israelites made a general rendezvous at Rameses, and from thence marched to some distance, where they pitched their tents: for the word Succoth signifies tents.—The word rendered men, literally denotes strong men: and it is generally supposed, that not only the minors and women, but such men as were incapable of great exertion by reason of age, were excluded in this computation; and the subsequent numberings of the people confirm the supposition. So that the whole company could not be much less than two millions; an immense increase from seventy persons, in little more than two hundred years!—Of “the mixed multitude” that followed Israel, it is probable, that some left Egypt because it was desolated, others because they were distressed or discontented; and others out of curiosity to see what would become of Israel, and how they would serve the Lord: some might be connected with the Israelites by marriage; and perhaps a few accompanied them from love to them and their religion. But these were few indeed: for the bulk of this multitude became a snare to them, and probably after a time returned into Egypt. (Num. xi. 4.)—Cattle seem to have been almost the only property, which the Israelites possessed in Egypt; and these the Lord had lately caused exceedingly to increase.

V. 39. The Israelites, though no doubt warned to prepare for a speedy departure, were at last driven out of Egypt so suddenly, that they had not provided themselves with victuals for the journey. But being constrained to set off while they were about to lay in a stock of bread, when the dough was yet unleavened, they took it with them in that state: and when they came to Succoth, they baked cakes of it for the present use. Probably, this was their principal supply till the manna was sent. Thus the Lord took care, that they should keep the feast of unleavened bread, which otherwise they would perhaps have neglected.

V. 40. From the first calling of Abraham, to the departure out of Egypt, exactly four hundred and thirty years seem to have passed.—The Septuagint read it, ‘the sojourning of Israel... in Egypt and the land of Canaan.’ But this is merely a comment, though a just one. (Notes, Gen. xv. 12—16.)

q Ps. cii. 18. Dan. ix. 24. Hab. ii. 3. John vii. 8. Acts i. 7. r vii. 4. Josh. v. 14.

even ^a the self-same day it came to pass, that all the ^r hosts of the LORD went out from the land of Egypt.

• Heb. a night of observations. s 14. Deut. xvi. 1—4.

42 It is ^a a night to be much ^a observed unto the LORD, for bringing them out from the land of Egypt: this is that night of the LORD to be observed of all the children of Israel, in their generations.

t 48. Lev. xxii. 10. Num. ix. 14. Eph. ii. 12.

43 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses and Aaron, This is the ordinance of the passover: ^r there shall no stranger eat thereof.

u Gen. xvii. 12. 13. 23.

44 But every man's servant, that is bought for money, when thou hast ^u circumcised him, then shall he eat thereof.

v 1 Cor. xii. 12. Eph. ii. 19—22.

45 A foreigner, and an hired servant shall not eat thereof.

46 In ^x one house shall it be eaten: thou shalt not carry forth ought of the y Num. ix. 12. John xix. 36.

flesh abroad out of the house: ^y neither shall ye break a bone thereof.

z 3. 6. Num. ix. 13.

47 ^z All the congregation of Israel shall ^z keep it.

a 43. Num. ix. 14. xv. 15, 18.

• Heb. do it.

48 And when ^a a stranger shall sojourn with thee, and will keep the passover to the LORD, ^b let all his males be circumcised, and then let him come near and keep it; and he ^c shall be as one that is born in the land: for no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof.

b Gen. xvii. 12. Ez. xiv. 9. xvii. 22.

c Gal. iii. 28. Col. iii. 11.

49 ^d One law shall be to him that is home-born, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among you.

e Deut. iv. 1, 2. xii. 32. Matt. vii. 24. 28. xxviii. 20. John ii. 5. xiii. 17. xv. 14. Rev. xxii. 14.

49 Thus did all the children of Israel; ^e as the LORD commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

f 41 vi. 26. vii. 4.

51 And it came to pass the self-same day, that the LORD did bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt, ^f by their armies.

V. 42. To be observed, &c.] It was thus observed, when the passover was duly celebrated. (Προφυλακη, a vigil, or a watching. Sept.)

V. 43—45. Every person in each household, including women and children, ate this first passover, none being excepted but uncircumcised males. The law was not yet given; and whatever traditional customs prevailed, no restriction is mentioned in this chapter in respect of ceremonial uncleanness. Yet afterwards, even before the ceremonial law had been explicitly given, we read of those, who "being defiled by the dead body of a man, could not keep the passover on that day." (Note, Num. ix. 6—8.) The ceremonially unclean therefore, were thenceforth excluded. The women and children were not indeed commanded to go up to the tabernacle, where alone it was celebrated; but when they did, they joined in this sacred feast.—It does not appear that any servant or stranger was compelled to be circumcised; but, till he was circumcised, he must not be allowed to eat the passover.—This may intimate, that without regeneration, or "the circumcision of the heart," we cannot share the benefits of redemption by the death of Christ; and by parity of reason, we are not meet communicants at the Lord's table.

V. 46. When two households joined for one lamb, they were not allowed to divide it, either before or after it was roasted; but they must meet in one house, and eat it together. This coincided with the direction before given (9); and implied that all believers receive the whole of Christ's salvation and have fellowship one with another, while they live on his fulness, and share the blessings derived from his cross.—The injunction, "neither shall ye break a bone thereof," may be considered also as prophetic, to be literally fulfilled in the great Antitype, and which the apostle thought worthy of special notice. (John xix. 36.)

V. 48, 49. A stranger, though he renounced idolatry, and by circumcision professed himself a worshipper of the God of Israel, was not allowed to eat the passover, unless all the males in his family also were circumcised: and, as there was "one law to him that was home-born and to the stranger," it seems that even an Israelite, who retained uncircumcised persons in his household, must not eat the passover. It is therefore probable, according to the opinion of Jewish writers, that if any heathen slave after a year's trial, persisted in refusing to be circumcised, he was sold to some of the heathen neighbours. As to other persons, who refused to embrace the religion of Israel, and to profess it by circumcision; they were allowed to remain with them. The practice, indeed, of open idolatry must not be tolerated; but such as professed to worship the true God, though not according to the ceremonies of the law, might live in the country, but not in the households of the Israelites.—A great part of the observations of learned men on this chapter, and on other parts of the ceremonial law, consists of citations from Jewish writers, concerning the manner in which they suppose the several rules were observed by their ancestors: but as they were not authorized to add to the divine law, or to take from it; we can make no other use of their information, than as it sometimes helps us to understand more clearly the meaning of the scriptural expressions. In other respects, their traditions form a kind of comment on the Mosaic institutions, not much dissimilar from that of Popish writers on the Christian sacraments; and only shew, how far they have ventured to deviate from the simplicity of their written rule.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS

V. 1—28.

The Lord makes all things new, to those whom he delivers from the bondage of Satan, and takes to himself as his peculiar people; and the æra of their enlargement is the commencement of a new life, of new hopes, pleasures, and employments. They who in early life are devoted to the

CHAP. XIII.

The first-born of man, and firstlings of cattle, are sanctified to God, 1, 2. The feast of unleavened bread is appointed to be kept annually as a memorial of Israel's deliverance from Egypt, 3—10. Their children must be instructed in the meaning of these service of God, are peculiarly happy: and we should begin every year, and month, and week, and day, with the great duties of religion; endeavouring to engage our families likewise. For nothing is more honourable to God, or more profitable to men, than harmonious family-religion: it is the best bond of domestick peace, the best solace of domestick afflictions, and the best security for the continuance and increase of domestick felicity; while it affords an important advantage for constant "growth in grace, and in the knowledge of Jesus Christ."—In order to attain these advantages, and communicate them to others, we should diligently study the holy Scriptures, that we may understand the true nature and meaning of every part of our religion, and be enabled to explain it to our children; who ought to be encouraged in their enquiries, and informed by clear and satisfactory answers: that, in the most easy and agreeable manner, they may become acquainted with the word and works of God, and join with us in celebrating the praises of his truth and mercy, and the wonders of his powerful arm.—But, in attending on the ordinances of God, we should carefully observe the stated order and season: and, while we must not neglect or despise any of his appointments, we may properly take time for serious enquiry and conscientious preparation, that we may at length attend on them with more solemnity, and to better purpose. But, if we would have the comfort of acceptance in our religious services, we must watch against the leaven of hypocrisy, malice, and wickedness; which in numberless instances have rendered, and still do render, attendance on the very ordinances, that God himself has appointed, an abomination in his sight. (Notes, Is. i. 10—20.) And whatever we offer to the Lord, should be the best which we possess.

V. 29—42.

When the Lord's time comes to perform his promises, mountains melt and flow down at his presence, and nothing creates any more difficulty, than is proper to illustrate his powerful operation.—The greatest and proudest sinner is not exalted out of the reach of his omnipotent vengeance, and the least are not beneath his notice: and if a temporal calamity filled Egypt with universal, inexpressible terror and lamentation; what words can describe, or imagination conceive, the consternation and anguish of the wicked, at the approaching judgment-day!—For fear of impending death, the Egyptians were willing to part, not only with their bond-slaves, but with their gold and silver: and "what shall a man be profited, if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" Alas! riches will not profit in the day of wrath, for it costs more to redeem souls from destruction: but if we would escape, we must moderate our worldly attachments, renounce our sinful projects, and hold ourselves in continual readiness to leave all and follow Christ; and if we should be called to part with, not only our wealth, but every temporal comfort, the perfect free-observances, 11—16. The Lord guides forth the people, 17, 18; who take with them the bones of Joseph, 19; and, under the guidance of a pillar of cloud and of fire, arrive at Etham, 20—22.

AND the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, dom of his service will give a relish to our meanest provisions.—But, alas! a very numerous mixed multitude have hitherto accompanied the camp of Israel; who, from various worldly motives, or transient convictions, seem to leave Egypt, and to set out for the heavenly Canaan. While they retain their profession, they often prove snares and tempters to others; and at length in "time of temptation they fall away," and "their last state is worse than the first." Let us then "look diligently," that we may not prove such as "draw back to perdition;" but be found among "those who believe to the saving of their souls."—While we hear even hardened Pharaoh, under the dread of immediate destruction, not only consenting to let Israel go, according to the utmost demand of Moses and Aaron, but even intreating them to "bless him also;" we may know what in general to think of the confessions and pious language, which are extorted from many wicked men, when death affrights them; and which, being injudiciously attested as genuine repentance, by some Christians and ministers, often give encouragement to others to procrastinate, in hopes of being saved at last in the same manner.

V. 43—51.

"Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us;" his blood is the only ransom for our souls; without the shedding of it there could have been no remission, without the sprinkling of it there can be no salvation. But have we, by faith, sheltered our souls, from the deserved vengeance of God, under the protection of his atoning blood? Do we keep close to him, in habitual dependence on his merits, and access to the throne of grace through his intercession? Do we so profess our faith in the divine Redeemer, and our obligations to him, that all who pass by may know, as by the blood-besprinkled door, to whom we belong? Are we careful not to pervert or disgrace this our profession, by any inconsistent conduct, lest we should trample the blood of the covenant under our feet? Is Christ indeed, the Food and Feast of our souls? Do we 'feed on him in our hearts' 'by faith with thanksgiving,' deriving all our life, strength, hope, and consolation from his fulness of truth and grace? Do we receive him in his whole character, and for all the purposes of salvation, from wrath, from sin, from this evil world, and from the powers of darkness? Do we in consequence stand prepared for his service, and prompt to walk in his ways; to separate ourselves from his enemies, and assert that liberty with which he makes his people free? These are questions of vast importance to our souls: the Lord direct our consciences to give an honest answer to them! Without the daily exercise of godly sorrow and true repentance, we can never eat of this true Passover; and though we must also bear our cross, and have our feast alloyed by the bitter herbs of tribulation and temptation; we shall find the life of faith and grace a feast indeed, a source of joy, such as the world can neither give nor take away.—Finally, the Lord's supper is our unbloody

a 12—15. xxii. 29.
 30. xxiii. 19.
 xxxiv. 19. 20.
 Lev. xxvii. 26.
 Num. iii. 13.
 viii. 16, 17.
 xviii. 15. Deut.
 xv. 19. Luke ii.
 23. Heb. xii. 23.
 b xii. 42. xx. 8.
 Deut. v. 15. xv.
 15. xvi. 3. 12.
 xxiv. 18. 22.
 1 Chr. xvi. 12.
 Ps. cv. 5. Luke
 xxii. 19. 1 Cor.
 xi. 24.
 c 14. xx. 2. Deut.
 v. 6. vi. 12. viii.
 14. xiii. 5. 10.
 Josh. xxiv. 17.
 Judg. vi. 8.
 • Heb. servants.
 d vi. 1. Deut. iv.
 34. xi. 2, 3.
 Neh. ix. 10.
 Eph. i. 19.
 e See on xii. 8. 15.
 f xxi. 15. xxxiv.
 18. Deut. xvi. 1.
 g iii. 8. xxxiv. 11.
 Gen. xv. 18—21.
 Deut. vii. 1. xii.
 22. xix. 1. xxvi.
 1. Josh. xxiv.
 11.
 h vi. 8. xxxiii. 1.
 Gen. xvii. 7, 8.
 xvii. 16—18.
 xxvi. 3. 1. 24.
 Num. xiv. 16.
 39. xxxiii. 11.
 i See on iii. 17.
 See on xii. 25.

2 * Sanctify unto me all the first-born, whatsoever openeth the womb among the children of Israel, both of man and of beast: it is mine.

3 ¶ And Moses said unto the people, Remember this day, in which ye came out from Egypt, ° out of the house of ° bondage; for by ° strength of hand the LORD brought you out from this place: ° there shall no leavened bread be eaten.

4 This day came ye out, in the month of Abib.

5 And it shall be when the LORD shall bring thee into the land of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which he ° sware unto thy fathers to give thee, ° a land flowing with milk and honey, that ° thou shalt keep this service in this month.

6 ^k Seven days shalt thou eat unleavened bread, and in the seventh day shall be a feast to the LORD.

7 Unleavened bread shall be eaten seven days: and there shall ° no leavened bread be seen with thee, neither shall there be leaven seen with thee in all thy quarters.

8 And ° thou shalt shew thy son in that day, saying, This is done because of that which the LORD did unto me, when I came forth out of Egypt.

9 And it shall be for ° a sign unto thee upon thine hand, and for a memorial between thine eyes; that the LORD's law ° may be in thy mouth: for with a ° strong hand hath the LORD brought thee out of Egypt.

10 Thou shalt therefore ° keep this ordinance in his season, from year to year.

k See on xii. 15—20.—xxxiv. 13. Lev. xxiii. 8.

l xii. 19. Matt. xvi. 6. 12.

m See on xii. 26, 27.—Deut. iv. 9, 10. Ps. xlv. 1. lxxviii. 3—8. 1s. xxxviii. 19. Eph. vi. 4.

n 16. Num. xv. 39. Deut. vi. 8. xi. 18, 19. Prov. i. 9. vi. 20—23. 1s. xlix. 16. Jer. xxii. 24. Matt. xxiii. 5.

o Deut. xxx. 14. Josh. i. 8. 1s. lix. 21. Rom. x. 8.

p 3. vi. 6. Josh. i. 9. Neh. i. 10. Ps. lxxxix. 13. 1s. xxvii. 1. xl. 10. li. 9. Joel ii. 11. Rev. xviii. 8.

q xii. 14. 24. xxxiii. 15. Lev. xxiii. 6. Deut. xvi. 3. 4. 1 Cor. xi. 25.

passover, our feast upon the atoning sacrifice, our ‘ sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving.’ Having previously “ examined ourselves whether we be in the faith,” and seriously as sinners applied to the Lord Jesus for his salvation, and devoted ourselves to his service; let us frequently and constantly, in this appointed way, remember our Redeemer’s love and sufferings; let us make this confession of our sins, this profession of our faith, this declaration of our gratitude, and this surrender of ourselves to his service, as “ bought with a price to glorify him, both in body and spirit, which are his.” Thus uniting ourselves to him, and having fellowship with him and his people here, we shall receive from his fulness, rejoice in his ways on earth, and at length sit down with him in his heavenly kingdom.

NOTES.

CHAP. XIII. V. 2. In remembrance of the destruction of the first-born of Egypt, both man and beast; and of the preservation of Israel, and their deliverance out of bondage by means of that judgment; the first-born males of the Israelites must be solemnly presented and dedicated to the Lord, and a price was appointed to be paid for their redemption.—This represented to them, that their lives were preserved through the ransom of the atonement, which in due time was to be made for sin; and that they ought to consider themselves, thus ransomed from death, as consecrated to the service of God.—The first-born may mean either the first son of his father, or the first son of his mother. Reuben was the first son both of Jacob and Leah, and Joseph was the first-born of Rachel; but Jacob acknowledges Reuben only as his first-born. (Gen. xlix. 3. Dent. xxi. 15—17.)—In many cases the eldest son of the father, who was entitled to some peculiar privileges, might not be the first-born of the mother: but the first-born of the mother, exclusively, was dedicated to God out of Israel, as the language used clearly shews; and it may be supposed, that the destruction of the first-born in Egypt was made by the same rule.

V. 3—7. On the arrival of Israel at Succoth, Moses seems to have again enforced the injunctions before given in Egypt, lest the people should forget them; and to shew that these institutions were to be considered as of perpetual obligation, especially after they were settled in the promised land; for they could not regularly observe them in the wilderness. This Moses did with varied expressions, concerning the leaven. Accordingly we are told that the Israelites were very careful in searching every corner of their houses, that no leaven might remain; and what they found, they burnt, buried, or in some way destroyed, before the feast of the passover.—The first day of unleavened bread was particularly observed, in remembrance of Israel’s setting out from Egypt on that day; and many expositors suppose, that they passed the Red Sea on the seventh day, and that it was likewise the sabbath-day.

V. 8—10. The constant observance of these institutions, with plain and easy explications of the meaning to the young persons, would render the deliverance out of Egypt familiar to the Israelites, from generation to generation; and be a continual memorial, as well as an open profession, of their obligations to love and serve the Lord: as those who wish to remember and fear to forget any thing, use a variety of methods to remind them of it. Inscribe it upon the hand, placing it before their eyes, or as a frontlet upon their foreheads, seem to have been used in those times for such purposes.—“ That the LORD’s law may be “ in thy mouth;” “ that their children might be able to ‘ declare to their posterity, the law of the Lord about these ‘ matters.’ Bp. Patrick.—In like manner Baptism and the Lord’s Supper, if clearly explained and duly attended on, would render the nature of Christianity, and the obligations of Christians, familiar to the minds of one generation after another; and remind them, or give them occasion to 11 ¶ And it shall be when the LORD shall bring thee into the land of the Canaanites, ^r as he sware unto thee and to thy fathers, and shall give it thee, ^r See on h. 5.

12 That ^s thou shalt ^t set apart unto the LORD all that ^u openeth the matrix: and every firstling that cometh of a beast, which thou hast, the males shall be the LORD's.

^s See on 2.
^t Heb. cause to pass over.
^u xxxiv. 19. Num. iii. 12. xviii. 15

13 And every firstling ^v of an ass thou shalt redeem with ^w a lamb; and if thou wilt not redeem it, then thou shalt break his neck: and all the first-born of man among thy children ^x shalt thou redeem.

^v xxxiv. 20. Num. xviii. 15—17.
^w Or, kid. xii. 8. 21. Margins.

14 And it shall be when ^y thy son asketh thee ^z in time to come, saying, What is this? that thou shalt say unto him, By strength of hand the LORD brought us out from Egypt, from the house of bondage.

^v Num. iii. 46—51. Rev. xiv. 4.
^x See on xii. 26.
^y Deut. vi. 20—24. Jesh. iv. 6. 21—24. Ps. cxlv. 4.
^z Heb. to-morrow. Gen. xxx. 33. Deut. vi. 20. Josh. iv. 6. xxii. 24. Margins.

15 And it came to pass, when Pharaoh would hardly let us go, that ^y the LORD slew all the first-born in the land of Egypt, both the first-born of man, and the first-born of beast: ^z therefore I sacrifice to the LORD all that openeth

^y See on xii. 29

^z See on 12.

the matrix, being males; but all the first-born of my children I redeem.

16 And it shall be for ^a a token upon thine hand, ^b and for frontlets between thine eyes: ^c for by strength of hand the LORD brought us forth out of Egypt.

^a See on xii. 13.
^b Dent. vi. 7—9. xi. 18.
^c 9. 14.

17 ¶ And it came to pass when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God led them not through the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near: for God said, Lest peradventure ^d the people repent when they see war, and they ^e return to Egypt.

^d xiv. 11. 12. Num. xiv. 1—4. Dent. xx. 8. Judg. vii. 3. Luke xiv. 27—32. Acts xiii. 13. xv. 38. 1 Cor. x. 13.
^e xvi. 2. 3. Neh. ix. 17. Acts vii. 39.

18 But God ^f led the people about, through the way of the wilderness of the Red Sea: and the children of Israel went up ^g harnessed out of the land of Egypt.

^f xiv. 2. Num. xxxiii. 6—8. Ps. cvii. 7.
^g Or, by fire in a rank. xii. 51. Marg. Gen. i. 24, 25. Josh. xxiv. 52. Acts vii. 16.

19 And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him: ^h for he had straitly sworn the children of Israel, saying, ⁱ God will surely visit you; and ye shall carry up my bones away hence with you.

^h Or, by fire in a rank. xii. 51. Marg. Gen. i. 24, 25. Josh. xxiv. 52. Acts vii. 16.
ⁱ iv. 31. Gen. xlviii. 21. Luke i. 68. vii. 16.

20 And ^j they took their journey from Succoth, and encamped in Etham, in the edge of the wilderness.

^j Num. xxxiii. 5, 6.

remind one another, of their obligations, their duty, and the vows of God which are upon them.

V. 11—16. The first-born males alone were thus set apart for God: if a female preceded, the first succeeding male was not considered as the first-born. The firstling males of such animals as were appointed for sacrifice, were offered at the altar; but others must either be exchanged, or killed. The firstling of an ass is mentioned, as asses were common among the Israelites; but that of horses or camels likewise, which were not common, seem to have been under the same regulation. The Levites were afterwards taken instead of the first-born children. (Notes, Num. iii.)—This custom likewise would give parents an important opportunity of instructing their children, in respect of the wonderful works of God in behalf of his people.

V. 17, 18. The nearest road from Egypt to Canaan was only a few days' march; as it must be evident to every reader, who considers the journeys of the sons of Jacob into Egypt. But the Philistines were a hardy warlike people; and the Israelites were unarmed, dispirited by long bondage, and not acquainted with war; and they might have been greatly discouraged, had they been reduced to the necessity of engaging so soon with these formidable enemies. This was one reason, and probably the avowed reason, why the Lord led them another way: so that, by his express command, the Israelites took their route, much more to the south, than the direct road lay; and they marched towards the banks of the Red Sea; instead of going directly to the isthmus of Suez, which communicates betwixt Africa and Asia. It is probable, that at this time, the Israelites had scarcely any weapons of war: though they seem to have procured some from the dead bodies of the Egyptians, before the Amalekites attacked them. (xvii. 8—13.)—The margin intimates that the word, translated harnessed, may signify, by five in a rank; but the room such a multitude must have taken from the van to the rear, is immense, had they marched in this manner; as there would have been 120,000 lines of five men each, besides women and children. It seems rather to mean that they marched in five distinct squadrons; or in general, that though unarmed, they journeyed in regular order, and not as a disorderly multitude. The LXX translate it in the fifth generation.—The Psalmist informs us, that “there was not one feeble person amongst their tribes:” Ps. cv. 37. This was a very extraordinary circumstance, which the history of the world cannot parallel: yet it was very suitable to the situation of those, who had sufficient encumbrances in their march, without having invalids to take care of. It also completed their triumph over Pharaoh and the Egyptians, since they were not constrained to leave one of the company behind them.

Harnessed. (18.) עֲשֵׂתָּ. Rendered by the LXX εὐζωνοί, Josh. i. 14: and δισκευασμένοι, Josh. iv. 12.—It occurs also Judg. vii. 11.

V. 19. The bones of Joseph had long been a pledge of Israel's deliverance, and of their inheriting Canaan. Some think that the bones of the other sons of Jacob likewise were carried with the Israelites to Canaan, though it is not here expressly mentioned. (Note, Gen. i. 24—26.)

^k xiv 19—24. xl. 34—58. Num. ix. 15—22. x. 34. xiv. 14. Deut. 1. 33. Neh. ix. 12. 13. Ps. lxxviii. 14. xcix. 7. cv. 34. Is. lv. 5, 6. 1 Cor x 1 2.

21 And ^k the Lord went before them, by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light; to go by day and night.

^l Pa. cxxi. 5—8. ^m Rev. x. 1.

22 He ^l took not away the pillar of the cloud by day, nor the ^m pillar of fire by night from before the people.

CHAP. XIV.

The way taken by Israel proves the occasion of hardening Pharaoh's heart, 1—4. He pursues them, 5—9. Being affrighted, they murmur; but are encou-

V. 21, 22. The Lord manifested his gracious presence with Israel, by a miraculous appearance in the air, in form like a pillar, the base of which was so large as to overshadow the camps of Israel. This was seen by day as a cloud, and by night it gave light as fire; and it seems to have been continued with them, to direct their marches, and as a pledge of the divine protection, till they entered Canaan.—This pillar represented the guidance, comfort, and security, which the Lord affords his true people; from the time when they renounce the service of sin and Satan, until they safely arrive in heaven.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—10.

We are so unteachable in divine things, that we need the same lessons over and over, in a variety of ways, before we make any tolerable proficiency: repetitions therefore are neither impertinent nor useless.—The instructions of the holy Scriptures are suited to render divine truths and precepts very plain and familiar to our minds, that we may have them continually in view, frequently converse about them, and regulate our conduct by them. Ministers when teaching their congregations, and parents when educating their children, should keep this constantly in sight; and embrace every opportunity of deeply impressing the minds of those committed to their charge, with a sense of their obligations to the Lord for all his benefits. They should use every means of rendering them well acquainted with his wonderful works, especially the redemption of the world by Jesus Christ, and his harmonious perfections, displayed in that grand design; that they may thus be led to know, trust, love, and serve the God of their salvation.—But if we sincerely desire to devote ourselves to God, we must be as careful to search out, and put away, all remains and occasions of sin, and to mortify and subdue every carnal and corrupt affection, as the Israelites were to remove the leaven from their houses, when they celebrated the passover.

V. 11—22.

By creation, and as preserved and sustained by him, we are the Lord's property, and he has a right to dispose of us as he pleases; but redemption gives him a new and more endearing title to our bodies, souls, and services: and exemption from the desolations which come on the wicked, and deliverance from the malice of our enemies, flow from his merey, through the ransom of raged by Moses, 10—14. God instructs Moses, 15—18. The cloud removes behind the camp; the Red Sea is divided; the Israelites pass through it; but the Egyptians following them are drowned, 19—30. The Israelites are suitably affected, 31.

AND the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, ^a that they turn and encamp before Pihahiroth, between ^b Migdol and the sea, over against Baal-zephon: before it shall ye encamp by the sea.

3 For ^c Pharaoh will say of the chil-

^a 9. xlii. 17, 18. Num. xxxiii. 7. ^b Jer. xli. 1. xlii. 14. Ez. xxix. 10. ^c Heb. vii. 3, 4. Dent. xxxix. 21. Ps. cxxxix. 2, 4. Ez. xxxviii. 10, 11. 17. Acta iv 28.

the Redeemer's blood, and by the power of his mighty arm. If we are really made partakers of these benefits, we belong to "the church of the first-born, whose names are written in heaven;" and we are required to "present our bodies as a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God, which is our reasonable service." Nor shall we ever enjoy so much liberty, or so much comfort in our children and substance, as when we most unreservedly devote ourselves and them to him. "The strong man, armed" with our lusts and passions, our inveterate habits and intimate evil connexions, vehemently opposes our conversion, and "will hardly let us go;" but "when a Stronger than he comes upon him, he takes from him "his armour wherein he trusted, and divides the spoil." Then, being delivered from bondage, putting ourselves under the Lord's care and protection, and joining ourselves to his people, we learn to walk before him in all his ordinances and commandments: and though the way in which he leads us is widely different from that which we should choose for ourselves; we shall find that he in every particular regards our weakness, and that he orders all things for our good, and in such a manner as may most effectually keep us from returning back to sin and the world.—Through all the intricacies and dangers of the way, he will guide and guard us by his word and Spirit; he will enlighten every dark night of affliction by his holy consolations, and shelter us from the burning sun of temptation, until he bring us to his heavenly rest with everlasting songs of joy and praise.

NOTES.

CHAP. XIV. V. 2. The Israelites before this had marched, not in the direct road to Canaan, but more to the south, towards the Red Sea; until they came to the edge of the wilderness, whither the Egyptians expected they were retiring to offer sacrifices to the Lord. (xiii. 20.) But now they received orders to turn still further out of the way, into some impervious straits, or narrow defiles. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 3, 4. It was the avowed design of God to harden the heart of Pharaoh; and he knew how to effect it, without being in any sense or degree the Author of sin. It would suffice for this purpose to remove all restraints from his heart and conscience; to leave him entirely to his own pride, and impetuous lusts, and to the instigations of Satan: and to arrange the dispensations of providence, so as most

TUE RED SEA, NEAR THE SUPPOSED SPOT AT WHICH THE ISRAELITES PASSED OVER.

EXOD. XIV. 2, 9, 16.

dren of Israel, ^dThey are entangled in the land, the wilderness hath shut them in.

4 And ^eI will harden Pharaoh's heart, that he shall follow after them, and I will be honoured upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host; ^fthat the Egyptians may know that I am the Lord. And they did so.

5 And it was told the king of Egypt, that the people fled: and ^hthe heart of Pharaoh and of his servants was turned against the people, and they said, ⁱWhy have we done this, that we have let Israel go from serving us?

6 And he made ready his chariot, and took his people with him:

7 And he took ^ksix hundred chosen chariots, and all the chariots of Egypt, and captains over every one of them.

8 And ^lthe Lord hardened the heart of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and he pursued after the children of Israel: and the children of Israel went out ^mwith an high hand.

9 But ⁿthe Egyptians pursued after them, (all the horses and chariots of Pharaoh, and his horsemen and his army,) and overtook them ^oencamping by the sea, beside Pi-hahiroth before Baal-zephon.

10 ¶ And when Pharaoh drew nigh, the children of Israel lifted up their eyes, and behold the Egyptians marched effectually to encourage his hopes of yet prevailing in the contest. The heart of Pharaoh had been sorely galled, but it was not in the least humbled. He had been repeatedly baffled and frightened, and forced to yield; yet his daring spirit was not subdued, but revolted more and more against the violence done him, so that he was fired with resentment and thirsted for revenge. His covetousness and ambition had been severely disappointed; his kingdom had been desolated and almost depopulated, and his first-born son slain: he had suffered an ignominious defeat; and nothing, but despair of success, and the urgent terror of death, could have extorted his consent to Israel's enlargement.—While under the immediate pressure of the last dreadful visitation, every thing except the preservation of his life was forgotten: but when his terror and anguish were somewhat subsided, and his convictions abated, then his stoutness of spirit returned; and the thoughts of the mortifications, ignominy, and loss which he had sustained, with all their probable and possible effects, no doubt rushed into his mind. Then every thought or counsel would be welcome, which could point out the way, or revive the hope, of reducing Israel, or of wreaking his vengeance on them.—Had they marched directly towards Canaan, they would, probably, have been out of his dominions, before he had recovered from his fright, and he might have given them up in despair: but as they turned another way, and were, as he supposed, entangled in the wilderness, and shut up by surrounding rocks, mountains, and seas; he would conclude that they were not under an infallible guidance, and thence infer that they had not an almighty protection, but might yet be subdued to his will: and what he ardently wished, feeble evidence would induce him to believe.—This the Lord foresaw; and that he might be honoured upon the Egyptians, and make his power and justice known, he gave his directions to Israel accordingly.—I will 'show my power and justice in their destruction, which would not have been so visible, had they died of the pestilence,...as it was by hardening Pharaoh so far as to follow the Israelites into the Red Sea, where he and his whole host were overthrown; which made the terror of the LORD's wrath manifest to the world.' Bp. Patrick.

V. 5—9. The Egyptians had consented to the departure of the Israelites, and even urged them to be gone; and when they liberally bestowed on them the gold and silver and raiment which they asked, they seem to have had no expectation that they would return. But as the Israelites, probably, had not expressly declared themselves on this head; when the Egyptians heard, (perhaps by some of the mixed multitude who came back,) that they neither halted in the desert to offer sacrifices, nor kept the direct road to Horeb, (where some think they had said that they intended to keep a feast to the LORD,) but turned aside into intricate paths; they began to treat them as fugitive slaves. The servants of Pharaoh, while terrified by the divine judgments, and suffering severely the effects of them, had counselled him to dismiss Israel: yet considering themselves sharers in his loss and disgrace, and being again encouraged to expect better success; they blamed themselves for having let them go, and gave Pharaoh more agreeable advice: and he was so infatuated by worldly policy, and so hardened in obstinate rebellion against the Lord, that, forgetting his late terrors, he determined to take vengeance on Moses and on Israel. Accordingly he collected all his forces which were at hand, especially his chariots of war and his cavalry, which was the chief strength of his army; and without delay pursued the fugitives: but they, not expecting so formidable an enemy, had marched on with great alacrity, and in good order, not at all like slaves who were fleeing from their masters; and were at that time encamping by the sea. It is generally supposed, that on the right and left of their encampment there were impassable mountains or fortifications; while the Red Sea was in the front, and Pharaoh and his army pressed upon their rear.

V. 10—12. It is evident, that all the wonders, wrought for Israel in Egypt, had excited in most of them nothing beyond transient convictions, hopes, and joy; and that in general they were destitute of true faith and confidence in God. They had therefore been in high spirits, when no danger appeared: but when they saw the army of Pharaoh marching up to them, they sunk into terror and despondency; and their cries to the Lord, having been extorted by dismay, were soon succeeded by rebellious murmurs. Yet it must be supposed that some out of the vast mul-d Judg. xvi. 2. 1 Sam. xxiii. 7. 23. Ps. lxxi. 11. Jer xx. 10.

e 17. See on iv. 21. vii. 3. 13, 14. —Rom. xi. 8.
f 18. ix. 16. xv. 10, 11. 14—16. xviii. 11. Neh. ix. 10. Is. ii. 11, 12. Ez. xx. 9. xxviii. 22. xxxix. 13. Dan. iv. 30—37. Rom. ix. 17. 22, 23. Rev. xix. 1—6.
g See on vii. 17. h xii. 33. Ps. cv. 25.
i Jer. xxxiv. 10—17. Luke xi. 24. —26. 2 Pet. ii. 20—22.

k 23. xv. 4. Josh. xvii. 16—18. Judg. iv. 3. 15. Ps. xx. 7. lxxvii. 17. Is. xxxvii. 24.
l See on e 4
m vi. 1. xiii. 9. 16. 18. Num. xxxiii. 3. Deut. xxxix. 27. Ps. lxxxix. 13 Acts xiii. 17. n xv. 9 Josh. xxiv. 6.

o See on 2

after them, ^p and they were sore afraid: and the children of Israel ^q cried out unto the LORD.

11 And they said unto Moses, ^r Because there were no graves in Egypt, hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness? ^s Wherefore hast thou dealt thus with us, to carry us forth out of Egypt?

12 ^t Is not this the word that we did tell thee in Egypt, saying, ^u Let us alone, that we may serve the Egyptians: ^v For it had been better for us to serve the Egyptians, than that we should die in the wilderness.

13 And Moses said unto the people, ^w Fear ye not, stand still, and ^x see the salvation of the LORD, which he will shew to you to-day: ^y for the Egyptians whom ye have seen to-day ^z ye shall see them again no more for ever.

14 ^a The LORD shall fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace.

15 And the LORD said unto Moses,

^c Wherefore criest thou unto me? Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward.

16 But ^d lift thou up thy rod, and stretch out thine hand over the sea, and divide it; ^e and the children of Israel shall go on dry ground through the midst of the sea.

17 And ^f I, behold ^g I, will harden the hearts of the Egyptians, and they shall follow them: ^h and I will get me honour upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

18 And the Egyptians shall ⁱ know that I am the LORD, when I have gotten me honour upon Pharaoh, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

19 ¶ And ^k the Angel of God, which went before the camp of Israel, removed and went behind them; ^l and the pillar of the cloud went from before their face, and stood behind them.

20 And it came between the camp

titude, in this emergency sought the Lord in fervent prayer, while the rest vented their anguish in bitter complaints against Moses. All however were sensible, that such an unarmed multitude could not withstand Pharaoh's disciplined troops: they had no thoughts therefore of fighting, no prospect of escaping by flight, no hope in submitting to so enraged a tyrant; and very few of them had any confidence in God, or expectation from him, so that death seemed inevitable. They therefore expostulated bitterly with Moses for leading them out of Egypt; as if he had done it by his own authority, and in order to expose them to the rage of Pharaoh, that he might kill them in the wilderness!—Thus, while Pharaoh, hardened in desperate presumption, forgot the wonderful works of God, which he and his people had seen and severely felt; the Israelites themselves, in unbelieving despondency, were equally regardless of them; and looked back with sad regret on the wretched slavery, under which they had before groaned!

V. 13, 14. On this trying occasion, the faith of Moses was peculiarly illustrious. He answered the injurious complaints of Israel without the least resentment, and with great sedateness, meekness, and presence of mind. He expressed no fear of Pharaoh and his army; and only required the people to be still, and not put themselves into disorder, but to stand prepared to obey his word of direction; being assured that the Lord would deliver them by his own powerful arm. It would not be at all needful for them to fight against the Egyptians; but merely to look on with silent astonishment, and to witness their destruction. (Marg. Ref.) For this would be the last time they would ever see them, as living enemies, either to injure or affright them. They afterwards indeed saw the dead bodies of some of them on the sea shore; (3^o. xv. 5. 12;) but it is very remarkable, that the power of Egypt was so crushed, and the spirit of the rulers so broken, by this last stroke, that the Egyptians never attempted to pursue or molest Israel, even when shut up in the wilderness during forty years.

V. 15, 16. Moses was earnest in prayer at this trying conjuncture; and it cannot be supposed, that the Lord was displeased with him: but he thus assured him, that his request was granted, and that he was about to effect the deliverance of Israel. Moses needed only to excite and encourage the people to march forward; and God would make way for them, by dividing the sea, that they might go through it as on dry land.

V. 17. I, behold I.] This speaks the certainty of the event, as the Lord himself undertook, that the heart of Pharaoh and of his subjects should be hardened. These had associated themselves with their king in rebellion, and were thus with him doomed to the same deserved punishment.

V. 18. The Egyptians.] The miserable remains of this once flourishing people.—The expression, again and again repeated, “I will be honoured, upon Pharaoh, &c.” as marking the grand design of all these transactions, should be peculiarly noticed.

V. 19. The Angel.] Either a created angel, by whose ministry this pillar was produced, and moved; or rather the great Angel of the Covenant, the eternal Son of God. (24.)

V. 20. Even in the night, the cloud caused an additional gloom to the Egyptians: yet it was a light to the Israelites, who marched as by day-light to the sea-shore; while their enemies bewildered in darkness could scarcely of the Egyptians and the camp of Israel; and it was ^m a cloud of darkness to them, but it gave light by night to these: so that the one came not near the other all the night.

21 ¶ And Moses stretched out his hand over the sea, and ⁿ the Lord caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all that night, and made the sea dry land, and the waters were divided.

22 And ^o the children of Israel went into the midst of the sea upon the dry ground: and the waters were ^p a wall unto them, on their right hand, and on their left.

23 And ^q the Egyptians pursued, and

^m Ps. xviii. 11
Prov. iv. 18, 19.
Is. viii. 14. 2 Cor.
ii. 15, 16.

ⁿ xv. 8. Josh. iii.
13—16. iv. 23
Neh. ix. 11. Job
xxvi. 12. Ps.
lxxvi. 6. lxxix.
13. lxxxviii. 13.
cvi. 7—10. cxiv.
3—5. cxxxvi. 13.
Is. li. 10. lxxiii.
12

^o Num. xxxiii. 8.
1 Cor. x. 1.
Heb. xi. 29.

^p xv. 8. Hab. iii.
8, 9. Zecl. ii. 5

^q 17. xv. 9. 19
1 Kings xxii. 20.
Ec. ix. 8. Is. xiv
24—27.

went in after them, to the midst of the sea, even all Pharaoh's horses, his chariots, and his horsemen.

24 ¶ And it came to pass ^r that in the morning-watch, the Lord ^s looked unto the host of the Egyptians, through the pillar of fire and of the cloud, ^t and troubled the host of the Egyptians,

25 And ^u took off their chariot-wheels, ^v that they drave them heavily: so that the Egyptians said, ^w Let us flee from the face of Israel; ^x for the Lord fighteth for them, against the Egyptians.

26 And the Lord said unto Moses, ^y Stretch out thine hand over the sea,

^r Sam. xi. 11
^s Job xl. 12. Ps.
xviii. 13, 14.
lxxvii. 16—19.
civ. 32.
^t 19, 20.
^u Job xxii. 13.
xxiii. 15, 16.
xxiv. 20, 29.
Ps. xlviii. 5.
^v Judg. iv. 15. Ps.
xlvii. 9. lxxvi. 6.
^w Or, and made them to go heavily.
^x Job xi. 20. xx.
24. xxvii. 22.
Ps. lxxvii. 12.
Am. i. 14. v. 19.
ix. 1
^y See on 14—Deut.
iii. 22. 1 Sam.
iv. 7, 8.
^z vii. 19. viii. 5.
Matt. viii. 27.

discern the prey, which they expected at once to seize upon!

V. 21—23. At the stretching forth of Moses's hand, and the waving of his rod, the Lord caused a strong east wind to blow: but even this was only the signal of his power, by which he divided the waters, till they formed two mighty walls, and a spacious road between, through which the Israelites marched securely; being encouraged, outwardly by the word of Moses, but inwardly by the power of God; while the Egyptians, given up to desperate hardness of heart, presumptuously followed them. Some however think, that bewildered by the darkness, and hearing the Israelites before them, they were not aware that they had entered the sea, till it was too late to escape: but the language of the apostle seems to favour the former interpretation. (Heb. xi. 29.)

V. 24, 25. The Israelites, who marched foremost, probably entered the channel of the sea while it was yet day; and a very spacious opening being made for them, the others followed in a broad column, so that the whole multitude was marching on the bed of the channel of the sea, at the beginning of the night, the Egyptians closely pursuing them.—The watches, into which the Israelites, and afterwards the Romans, and probably many other nations, divided the night, were so called from the term allotted to watchmen or soldiers who kept guard, after which they were relieved. The morning-watch seems to have begun about three hours before sun-rise: so that the whole company, both of Israel and of Egypt, had probably been many hours marching, with all possible speed, between the waters, piled up as walls on either side of them: and they must have gone several miles at that time. The channel of the Red Sea is thought by some to have been ten or twelve miles across, by others twenty, or more: but, taking the larger dimensions, even the Egyptians might have gone far more than half the way before the morning-watch.—The Scripture uniformly states that the Lord led Israel through the Red Sea: yet the Jewish expositors, and some others, who pay far too much deference to their comments, are of opinion, that after Pharaoh and his army were overwhelmed, the Israelites came out on the same side by which they had entered. This they ground chiefly, on the improbability of this large company marching so far, in the short time allotted them; which in fact amounts to nothing: for if the path through the channel of the sea was as wide as the ordinary road by which they travelled; they might as well march twelve, or even twenty miles during the night, on this occasion, as the same distance during the same time, in any other part of their journey; and they were surely as likely to make all haste, while pursued by the Egyptians, and environed by the sea, as on an ordinary march.—It is also said, that they encamped in the wilderness of Etham, the first stage after they came out of the sea; and they encamped at Etham on the edge of the wilderness, after they left Succoth. (Comp. xiii. 20. Num. xxxiii. 6—8.) But is it not most likely, that the wilderness of Etham extended on each side the extremity of the Red Sea, while Etham was a town or village, situated near the place where the Israelites first entered that wilderness, whence it took its name? (Note, Num. xxxiii. 8.) Certain it is, that Horeb lay east of the sea, and they appear to have come out on that side nearest Horeb.—In the morning-watch, JEHOVAH looked upon the Egyptians, as evidently frowning on them, through the pillar of fire (19). It is probable, that there was a tremendous storm of thunder, lightning, and hail, and other dreadful appearances, which concurred with an inward influence on their minds to trouble and dismay them: while by some extraordinary interposition, their chariot wheels were broken or taken off, so that they could not get forward; and thus they were made sensible, when too late, that JEHOVAH fought against them in behalf of his people. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 26—30. We may suppose, that the Israelites were nearly arrived on the opposite shore, when Moses received this command, which was given perhaps by a voice from the pillar of fire: but there is no improbability in the opinion, that the waters began to roll back with irresistible violence to their ancient channel, in that part of the sea where the Egyptians were, though they still continued a wall to Israel where they marched; and the introduction of verse 29 seems to favour it. It is however sufficient to know, that Israel was completely preserved; and Pharaoh, with the Egyptians, so entirely overwhelmed that not one remained. The returning light of the morning would show them their dreadful situation; but every effort to b 1. 22. Judg. i. 6. that ^b the waters may come again upon

 7. Matt. vii. 2. the Egyptians, upon their chariots, and Jam ii. 3. Rev. upon their horsemen.
 xvi. 6.

c 21, 22. xv. 10. 27 And Moses stretched forth his 19. Josh. iv. 18. hand over the sea, ^c and the sea returned to his strength when the morning appeared, and the Egyptians fled d xv 1—7. 21. against it: ^d and the LORD ^e overthrew Judg v. 20, 21. the Egyptians in the midst of the sea.
 Heb. shook off

e Deut. xi. 4. Ps. 28 And ^e the waters returned and lxxviii. 53. Hab. covered the chariots and the horsemen,
 i. 1. 8—10. Heb. and all the host of Pharaoh that came xi. 29. into the sea after them: there ^f remained not so much as one of them.

f 13. 2 Chr. xx.
 24. Ps. cvi. 9—
 11. cxxxv. 15.

escape was fruitless.—The Egyptians had drowned the male children of the Israelites in the river; and now the righteous Lord took vengeance on them for those cruel and multiplied murders, by drowning all the strength and flower of the nation in the Red Sea!—It is probable that very many of the dead bodies were driven on shore, near the place where the Israelites went up out of the sea, the Lord thus ordering it; and that they were furnished with arms, as well as enriched with other spoils, by that means.—The Egyptians were renowned for their art in embalming the dead, and for their attention to the bodies of their relatives, and especially their princes and grandees; but God now poured contempt upon all the great ones of the nation, and caused their bodies to be left unburied on the sea-shore!

V. 31. When the Israelites witnessed this stupendous scene; they were for the time greatly affected, both with reverence of the majesty, power, and justice of the Lord, and with gratitude for their surprising deliverance; and they shewed a readiness to believe his word, as delivered to them by Moses, and to trust in him for the future; but, alas! this proved only a temporary faith, as the event in a little time evinced. (Note, Ps. cvi. 12—14.)—Learned men have shewn, by various citations, that a traditinary mutilated report of this grand transaction prevailed among the surrounding nations, many centuries afterwards.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—9.

The Lord, by all his commands and dispensations, makes trial of men's spirits; and every thing eventually concurs to harden the hearts of obstinate rebels to their destruction, and to exercise and increase the faith of his people: that by making known the glories of his name, he may be honoured by the one, and on the other. Would we then escape the awful sentence of being judicially hardened, we should take care not to harden our own hearts in sin, when called upon to repent, and submit ourselves to God; for none are thus punished, who have not righteously deserved it.—Genuine faith gives the Lord credit for his wisdom, faithfulness, and love, even where they are not discernible; and expects the accomplishment of his promises in the way of unreserved obedience to his commandments, however contrary to the suggestions of human policy; it also rests satisfied, that the event will clear up every difficulty;

29 But the children of Israel ^g walked upon dry land in the midst of the sea:
 and the waters were ^h a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left.

30 Thus ⁱ the LORD saved Israel that day out of the hand of the Egyptians:
 and Israel ^k saw the Egyptians dead upon the sea-shore.

31 And Israel saw that great [†] work which the LORD did upon the Egyptians: and the people ^l feared the LORD, and ^m believed the LORD, and his servant
 Moses.

and in this its excellence greatly consists.—Unless the heart be truly humbled, sin of every kind abhorred, and love to God and holiness implanted, no religious impressions will be abiding. Under remorse of conscience, the anguish of sufferings, and the terrors of impending destruction, and while temptations are out of sight, sinful propensities appear to be slain: but they soon revive when there is respite, when convictions wear off, terrors subside, and temptations return; and only rage with redoubled force, for having received a temporary check. Then, the past is forgotten, and the heart grows harder than ever in bold presumption; till, given up of God, and infatuated by Satan, men become even ashamed of their constrained repentance, and impetuously rush upon their own destruction! Such is the progress of those who rebel against the light, and encourage one another in wickedness, till they are involved in one common ruin. “Let us therefore fear lest we also should be hardened by the deceitfulness of sin.”

V. 10—18.

Our fallen race is prone, not only in desperate presumption to lose sight of the power and wonderful works of God, and his threatened destruction of the wicked; but also, in despondency, to forget his wonders of love and promises of deliverance to his people; and in large companies even of professed worshippers, there always have been multitudes destitute of faith and grace. These in times of trial, when others are crying to the Lord for help, manifest their impatience and rebellion against God, by quarrelling with his servants: and they often discourage others, and lead them to mingle unbelieving murmurs, and peevish complaints, with their prayers and supplications. Indeed, it is too commonly the case, that when men meet with unexpected difficulties in their first entrance on a religious life, or on any particular service, they are tempted to wish they had never gone about it, or to utter expressions equally unreasonable and sinful; and few of those who watch their own hearts, can fairly plead not guilty in this respect.—But the Lord still pities and pardons the upright: and he encourages some by the faith and boldness of others, and the meekness with which they bear the reproaches that are cast upon them. For the wisest and best of men must not expect to escape calumny, even in their most disinterested endeavours to be useful: so that we should especially arm ourselves with the mind

CHAP. XV

The song of Moses, Miriam, and Israel on their deliverance, 1—21. In the wilderness they want water, 22; the waters of Marah are bitter, they murmur, Moses prays, and the waters are made sweet by means which God appointed, who also gives them his charge and promise, 23—26 They encamp at Elim, 27.

of Christ, in "meekness of wisdom," if we would do any real good in the world.—The more we observe human nature, the fuller will be our conviction, that there is immense difficulty in prevailing with men to use the means of salvation, in which the Lord hath promised to meet and bless us; and to find a willing people to welcome a willing Saviour. For this also we should trust in his power, and lift up our prayers to him; and likewise exhort, admonish, and persuade those to whom we are sent, with all earnestness and perseverance. If the Lord answers our desires, so that sinners are excited to observe his directions, whether to patient waiting, or to go forward in his ways; we need not fear but he will fight for them, and open them a way through difficulties and obstacles, as insurmountable as mountains and seas; and make the number and power of their enemies subservient to his glory, and their final and abundant advantage. But he sometimes leads us into circumstances, in which we can see no possible way of escape or success; that we may the more admire his power and love in our deliverance, and be more encouraged and affected by it.

V. 19—31.

How dark do all the dispensations of Providence, and even the doctrines of the gospel, (which give light and comfort to believers,) appear to those who are fighting against God! And who can stand before him, who has all creatures at his command? All men will at length see, that JEHOVAH fighteth for his church against all her enemies; but, alas! multitudes harden their hearts in mad rebellion, till they fall into destruction, beyond the possibility of escape! And how tremendous will that day be, when the wicked shall sink into the depths of hell, and "all the people that forget God!" But happy are they, who at his command march forward under his banner, enlightened by his word, comforted by his Spirit, and protected by his arm. From time to time, even here, they experience such interpositions in their favour, as silence their complaints, make them ashamed of their despondings, and excite them to animated praises and cheerful obedience. How then will their hearts exult, in adoring, triumphant love, joy, and gratitude, when, finally delivered from every enemy, they shall stand on the heavenly shore, and celebrate their great Deliverer with everlasting songs of praise!

NOTES.

CHAP. XV. V. 1. The capacity of the human mind for poetry and music, and for taking pleasure in them, has been common to every age and nation; and though too generally perverted to the worst of purposes, through the depravity of our fallen nature, (as all our other capacities have been,) it was doubtless originally implanted by the Creator for wise and holy reasons, and should be conse-

THEN ^asang Moses and the children of Israel this song unto the LORD, and spake, saying, I will sing unto the LORD, ^bfor he hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

2 The LORD is my ^cStrength and

^a Judg. v. 1, &c.
^b 2 Sam. xxii. 11
 &c. Ps. cxii. 12
 cvii. 8. lxx. 21
 22. Is. xii. 1
 &c. l. 10, 11
 Rev. xv. 3.
^b 21. xiv. 17, 18
 27. xviii. 11.
 Col. ii. 15.
^c Ps. xvlii. 1, 2.
 xxviii. 8. lxx. 17.
 lxxii. 6, 7. cxviii.
 14. Hab. iii. 17—
 19. Phil. iv. 13.

erated to his service and glory. Accordingly, hymns or songs of praise form a considerable portion of the sacred Scriptures; some of which were composed on particular occasions, and sung as a part of solemn worship at the time, or afterwards in commemoration of the transactions celebrated in them; while others seem to have been of a more general nature, as suiting the experience, and expressing the varied affections, of believers in every age. The poetry of these sacred hymns has been carefully investigated; and much admired, by many persons of eminent attainments in ancient learning, as in many respects vastly superior to all other remains of antiquity; especially by Dr. Lowth, the late Bishop of London, in his Praelectiones.—This song, which Moses prepared, doubtless by divine inspiration, in order to instruct Israel, how to express their admiring gratitude to the Lord for their late surprising deliverance, is the most ancient composition of the kind now extant in the world. It was sung by Moses and the congregation of Israel; while Miriam led the women, to accompany them, not only with singing, but also with timbrels and dances. (Note, 20, 21.) Mr. Henry observes, that, 'this proves Psalm-singing to be more ancient than the ceremonial law, and therefore no part of it: and it proves the same also concerning the use of instrumental musick in the worship of God, and even of religious dances. Whether, in present circumstances, either the one or the other tends to the glory of God and the edification of men, and therefore whether either of them ought to be retained, or both excluded from the worship of the New-Testament Church, is another question: but it seems evident, that they form no part of the ceremonial law, and are neither commanded nor prohibited in the Scripture; though we have examples of them in the Old Testament, and none in the New.—Pharaoh and the Egyptians had contended with pertinacious obstinacy against JEHOVAH the God of Israel; but JEHOVAH, unexpectedly and with violence, throwing the "horse and his rider into the sea," had obtained a complete victory, and triumphed most gloriously: it was therefore Israel's bounden duty to sing joyful praises to their great Deliverer, and to celebrate the wonders which he had wrought in their behalf.

V. 2. The original word here translated, "The LORD," is JAH, which seems to have the same meaning as JEHOVAH, and to be derived from the same root; indeed, some think it is merely a contraction of it. Both names are supposed to signify nearly the same as the words rendered, I AM THAT I AM; and to denote Self-existence. 'That character from which the acutest reasoners have endeavoured demonstratively to deduce, as from their source, all the divine attributes, is SELF-EXISTENCE. Is it not then highly remarkable, that it is under this character, the Divinity is described, on his first manifestation to the Jewish Law-giver?—The Self-existence, and by consequence the ^d Deut. x. 21. Ps. xxii. 3. ^c Rev. xv. 3. ^e xiv. 13. 2 Sam. xxii. 51. Ps. lxxviii. 20. Is. xli. 2. xlv. 17. xlix. 6. Jer. iii. 23. Luke i. 77. ii. 30. John iv. 22. Acts iv. 12. Rev. xix. 1. ^f iv. 22. Gen. xvii. 7. Ps. xxii. 10. Jer. xxxi. 33. xxxii. 38. Zech. xiii. 9. ^g xl. 34. Gen. xxviii. 21. 22. 2 Sam. vii. 5. Ps. cxxxii. 5. Is. lxvi. 1. 2 Cor. v. 19. Eph. ii. 22. Col. ii. 9. ^h See on iii. 15, 16. ⁱ Ps. xviii. 46. xxxi. 1. xxxiv. 8. xcix. 5. 9. cxviii. 28. cxlv. 1. Is. xxv. 1. John v. 23. Phil. ii. 11. Rev. v. 9-14. ^j Ps. xxiv. 8. Rev. xix. 11-21. ^k See on iii. 13, 15. ^l Ps. lxxxiii. 18. Is. xlii. 8. ^m xiv. 23. Ez. xxvii. 34. ⁿ Jon. ii. 2. Mic. vii. 19. Matt. xviii. 6. ^o Neh. ix. 11. Jer. li. 63, 64. Rev. xviii. 21. ^p 11. 1 Chr. xxix. 11, 12. Ps. xvii. 7. xlv. 3. lx. 5. lxxiv. 11. lxxvii. 10. lxxxix. 8-13. xcvi. 1. cxviii. 15, 16. Is. li. 9. lvi. 10. Matt. vi. 15. ^q Ps. ii. 9. Is. xxx. 14. Jer. xlii. 14. Rev. ii. 27. ^r ix. 16. Deut. xxxiii. 26. Ps. cxlviii. 13. Is. v. 16. Jer. x. 6.

^a Song, and he is become ^c my Salvation: he is ^f my God, and I will prepare him ^g an habitation; my ^h father's God, and I will ⁱ exalt him.

3 The LORD is ^a a man of war: ^k the LORD is his name.

4 Pharaoh's ^l chariots and his host hath he cast into the sea: his ^m chosen captains also are drowned in the Red Sea.

5 The ⁿ depths have covered them: ^o they sank into the bottom as a stone.

6 Thy ^p right hand, O LORD, is become glorious in power: thy right hand, O LORD, hath ^q dashed in pieces the enemy.

7 And in ^r the greatness of thine excellency thou hast overthrown ^s them that rose up against thee: thou sentest forth thy wrath, ^t which ^u consumed them as stubble.

8 And with the ^v blast of thy nostrils the waters were gathered together: ^w the floods stood upright as an heap, and the depths were congealed in the heart of the sea.

9 The enemy said, ^x I will pursue, I will overtake, I will divide the spoil: my lust shall be satisfied upon them, I will draw my sword, my hand shall ^y destroy them.

10 Thou didst ^z blow with thy wind, ^{aa} the sea covered them: ^{ab} they sank as lead in the mighty waters.

11 Who is ^{ac} like unto thee, O LORD, who has displayed in the sight of the universe, through the medium of his human nature.

'eternity, and immutability of the one Great JEHOVAH?' Graves.—On the almighty power, and sovereign authority of the Creator of the world, and the God of their fathers, the Israelites had been taught to depend for protection and deliverance; and he had, in the crisis of extreme danger, answered and exceeded their expectations. He was their "Strength;" and they celebrated his praises in joyful songs, because "he was become their Salvation." (Is. xii. 2.) This every Israelite was taught to profess in the most explicit manner: and Moses, prophetically intimating the LORD's design, of having a tabernacle and afterwards a temple among them, as the external token of his gracious presence, the centre of their worship, and the type of the human nature of Christ, "in whom dwelleth all the fulness of the godhead bodily," led them also to avow their purpose of preparing him a habitation, as the God whom alone they would worship.—The Lord had also manifestly shewn himself to be the God of their "father" Abraham, and of Isaac, and Jacob; and had glorified his merey and truth by fulfilling the promises which he had made to them: and on this account, he should be exalted by their loftiest adorations and most grateful acknowledgments.—It is obvious, that all this is a shadow of the true Christian's confidence, conflicts, victories, and triumphs; and of the praises which the whole ransomed church shall at last render to the glorious God of their salvation, and which here on earth they in a feeble manner anticipate. (Note, Rev. xv. 1-4, latter part.)

V. 3. JEHOVAH had acted as a renowned warrior and conqueror, whose achievements ought to be celebrated in sacred songs of praise, as those of the heathen conquerors were in their profane poems; emphatically so called, while they ascribed the honours, due to God, to some ambitious, cruel man.—Perhaps the Holy Spirit might in the expression, "A Man of War," have some reference to the incarnation of the divine Saviour: for every deliverance of the church was granted, in consequence of his engagement to take on him our nature; his most glorious victories have been, and will be, obtained by him, under the character of "the Son of Man;" and all divine perfections cellency thou hast overthrown ^a them that rose up against thee: thou sentest forth thy wrath, ^b which ^c consumed them as stubble.

8 And with the ^d blast of thy nostrils the waters were gathered together: ^e the floods stood upright as an heap, and the depths were congealed in the heart of the sea.

9 The enemy said, ^f I will pursue, I will overtake, I will divide the spoil: my lust shall be satisfied upon them, I will draw my sword, my hand shall ^g destroy them.

10 Thou didst ^h blow with thy wind, ⁱ the sea covered them: ^j they sank as lead in the mighty waters.

11 Who is ^k like unto thee, O LORD, who has displayed in the sight of the universe, through the medium of his human nature.

V. 5. The Egyptians, overwhelmed by the weight of the waves which impetuously rushed upon them, sank to the bottom as a stone; and probably multitudes of them rose no more (12); though others were washed up again, and driven to the land. (Note, xiv. 26-30.)

V. 6. Or "Thy right hand is glorified in power."—All men would admire the greatness and power of God, as glorified in the destruction of Pharaoh; and, in like manner, his right hand would dash in pieces every other enemy.

V. 7. [Excellency.] Not only excelling in power, but excellent in justice, wisdom, truth, and goodness.—This verse, and the latter clause of the foregoing, are in the future tense in the original; and may be considered, as a solemn warning to all men, not to copy the persecuting, impious, and obstinate conduct of Pharaoh and the Egyptians, if they would escape the dreadful effects of JEHOVAH's omnipotent indignation.—"Thou wilt dash, &c."

V. 8. The wind may, by a strong metaphor, be called "the blast of the LORD's nostrils," or indignation, having been excited by his power, as the token of his dividing the Red Sea. The waters piled up into immense heaps on each side of the road, on which Israel marched, stood as if petrified into solid rocks.

V. 9, 10. The former of these verses, in the highest style of genuine sublimity, describes the rage, pride, and presumption of Pharaoh and the Egyptians confirming what was spoken upon that subject in the foregoing chapter; while the latter, with inimitable simplicity and brevity, describes the perfect ease with which they were arrested by the Lord, and overwhelmed in the sea; so that they sank to the bottom suddenly, as lead at once sinks in the water.

V. 11. Not only the mightiest princes, but also all the objects of religious worship of the Egyptians, and other idolaters, through which Satan proudly affected to be worshipped as "the god of this world," were thus proved wholly unworthy to be in any respect compared to JEHOVAH. His righteousness, faithfulness, purity, and love,

Is. xxxvii. 17. 23. 29. 36. 39. Mic. iv. 11. Nab. i. 9-12. Zech. ii. 8. xiv. 3. 8. Acts ix. 4. Ps. lix. 13. lxxxiii. 13. Is. v. 24. xlvii. 14. Nah. i. 10. Mal. iv. 1. u. xiv. 21. 2 Sam. xxii. 16. Job iv. 9. Is. xii. 4. xxxvii. 7. 2 Thes. ii. 8. x. See on xiv. 22. Is. lxxxviii. 13. Hab. iii. 10. z. Judg. v. 30. 1 Kings xix. 2. xx. 10. Is. x. 8-13. xxxvi. 20. Hab. iii. 14. Luke xi. 22. Or, represents. xiv. 5, 9. xiv. 21. Gen. xviii. 1. Ps. lxxiv. 13, 14. cxxxv. 7. cxlviii. 18. Is. x. 15. Jer. x. 13. Am. iv. 13. Matt. viii. 27. d. Deut. xl. 4. c. See on 5. d. Deut. iii. 22. xxxiii. 26. 1 Sam. ii. 2. 2 Sam. vii. 5. Is. xl. 18. 25. Jer. x. 6. 16. xlix. 19.

* Or, mighty ones. amongst the * gods? who is like thee, e Lev. xix. 2. Ps. lxxxix. 18. cxlv. 17. Is. vi. 3. xxx. 11. lvi. 15. 1 Pet. i. 15, 16. Rev. iv. 8.
 f Ps. lxxvi. 5. lxxxix. 5, 7. xc. 11. cxix. 120. 15. lxxv. 2, 3. Jer. x. 7. Luke xii. 5. Heb. xii. 24, 29. Rev. xv. 4. xix. 1-6.
 g See on 6.
 h Gen. xix. 16. Eph. ii. 4.
 i Ps. lxxvii. 14, 15. lxxviii. 52, 53. cvi. 9. Is. lxviii. 12, 13. Jer. ii. 6.
 k 1 Pet. i. 5.
 l Ps. lxxviii. 54.
 m Num. xiv. 14. xxii. 5. Deut. ii. 4. 25. Josh. ii. 9, 10. ix. 24. Ps. xlviii. 6.
 n Is. xiv. 29. 31.
 o Gen. xxxvi. 40. Num. xx. 14-21. 1 Chr. i. 51-54.
 p Num. xxii. 3-5. Hab. iii. 7.
 q Josh. ii. 11. v. 1.
 r Deut. xx. 8-9. Josh. ii. 9. Marg. xiv. 8. 1 Sam. xiv. 16. 2 Sam. xvii. 10. Ps. lxxvii. 2. Is. xiii. 7. xiv. 1. Ez. xxi. 7. Nah. ii. 10. a Deut. xi. 25. t xi. 7. 1 Sam. ii. 9. xxv. 37. u xix. 5, 6. Deut. xxxii. 6. 2 Sam. vii. 23. Ps. lxxiv. 2. Is. xliii. 1-3. li. 10. Jer. xxxi. 11. Acts xx. 28. Tit. ii. 14. 1 Pet. ii. 9. 2 Pet. ii. 1.

glorious in holiness, 'fearful in praises, doing wonders :

12 Thou stretchedst out thy right hand, the earth swallowed them.

13 Thou in thy mercy hast led forth the people which thou hast redeemed: thou hast guided them in thy strength unto thy holy habitation.

14 The people shall hear and be afraid: sorrow shall take hold on the inhabitants of Palestina.

15 Then the dukes of Edom shall be amazed, the mighty men of Moab, trembling shall take hold upon them: all the inhabitants of Canaan shall melt away.

16 Fear and dread shall fall upon them: by the greatness of thine arm they shall be as still as a stone; till thy people pass over, O LORD, till the people pass over which thou hast purchased.

17 Thou shalt bring them in, and plant them in the mountain of thine inheritance, in the place, O LORD, which thou hast made for thee to dwell in: in the sanctuary, O LORD, which thy hands have established.

18 The LORD shall reign for ever and ever.

19 For the horse of Pharaoh went in with his chariots, and with his horsemen into the sea, and the LORD brought again the waters of the sea upon them: but the children of Israel went on dry land in the midst of the sea.

20 ¶ And Miriam the prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took a timbrel in her hand; and all the women went out after her, with timbrels and with dances.

21 And Miriam answered them, Sing ye to the LORD, for he hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

x Ps. xlv. 4. lxxviii. 54, 55. lxxx. 8. Is. v. 1-4. Jer. ii. 21. xxxii. 41. y Ps. lxxviii. 54. 68, 69. Jer xxxi. 23.
 z Ps. x. 16. cxlvi. 10. Is. lvii. 15. Dan. ii. 44. vii. 14. Matt. vi. 13. Rev. xi. 15-17. a xiv. 23. Prov. xxxi. 81.
 b xiv. 28, 29. Heb. xi. 29.
 c Judg. iv. 4. 1 Sam. x. 5. 2 Kings xxii. 14. Luke ii. 36. Acts xxi. 9. 1 Cor. xi. 5. xiv. 34.
 d ii. 4. Num. xii. 1. xx. 1. xxvi. 59. Mic. vi. 4.
 e Judg. xi. 34. 1 Sam. xviii. 6. 2 Sam. vi. 14. Ps. lxxviii. 25. cxlix. 3. cl. 4.
 f 1 Sam. xviii. 7. 2 Chr. v. 13. Ps. xxiv. 7-10. cxxxiv.
 g See on 1.—Judg. v. 3. Is. v. 1. Rev. vii. 10-12. v. 9. xiv. 3. xv. 3. xix. 1-6.

(that is, his holiness,) form his essential glory and excellence; and reflect glory upon all the contrivances of his consummate wisdom, and the operations of his almighty power, which, if not devised and performed in holiness, would be tremendous, but not glorious. Such majesty also, and excellency, are displayed in the Lord's works of love and mercy, as cannot be suitably admired and praised, unless the mind be filled with solemn awe and reverential fear.

V. 12. 'They who were drowned in the sea, are...said to be swallowed up in the earth: (Jon. ii. 6:) because the sea is in the depths of the earth.' Bp. Patrick.

V. 13. It is here acknowledged, that the deliverance of Israel was a display of mercy, even as the destruction of the Egyptians was an act of justice. This miraculous redemption from bondage was an earnest of their being put in possession of Canaan, which is spoken of as if it had been already accomplished.—Canaan seems to be called the "holy habitation" of JEHOVAH, and afterwards "the mountain of his inheritance," and "the sanctuary;" because God had chosen it for the place of his future special residence, where he would manifest his presence and love, establish his holy ordinances, and publish his holy word. (Note, 17.)—This is a shadow of the believer's merciful redemption from iniquity and the powers of darkness, and of his being powerfully guided to the holy habitation of God in heaven.

V. 14—16. The Philistines had been objects of terror to Israel; (Note, xiii. 17, 18;) but the people now suppose these formidable enemies to be filled with dismay and anguish, at the report of this wonderful deliverance: and no doubt it produced very great effects on all the surrounding nations, for a long time. The inhabitants of Jericho, forty years after, had not got over the alarm which it occasioned.

(Note, Josh. ii. 8—11.) Thus the nations would be awed into silence, and be restrained from resistance, as if petrified, and become stones, by the glory of JEHOVAH's power and indignation; seeing he had ransomed his people at the price of so flourishing a country as Egypt. (Marg. Ref.) Pass over. (16.) Note, Josh. iii. 2, end.

V. 17. (Note, 13.) 'Moses seems to have foreseen, by the Spirit of prophecy, that God would place his habitation upon mount Zion; which he understood, perhaps, from the sacrifice of Isaac on mount Moriah.' Bp. Patrick. (Note, Gen. xxii. 2, latter part.)

V. 18. In perfect wisdom, justice, and goodness, "JEHOVAH shall reign for ever," as the only Lawgiver and Judge over his willing people; and he will finally and eternally crush all his enemies with irresistible force.—Two distinct words are used in the original to express what is rendered "for ever and ever," which mutually confirm each other, and evidently signify eternity, in the strictest sense of the word.—The translation in the LXX is remarkable: Κυριος εσσιγεων τον αιωνα, και επ'αιωνα, και ει. 'The LORD reigning over eternity, and unto eternity, and beyond' (or evermore).

V. 20, 21. Miriam is joined, by Michal, with Moses and Aaron, in leading forth the people; (Mic. vi. 4;) and she is here called a prophetess: yet nothing is recorded of her in that character, but her leading the women in this song of praise, joined, according to the usages of the times, with timbrels and dances. It may, however, be observed, that she as well as Aaron said, "Hath not the LORD spoken by us?" (Num. xii. 2:) and though she was rebuked for her misconduct on that occasion; yet the context seems to imply that the Lord had spoken by her, but not in the same manner as to Moses. Perhaps on some occasions, she delivered the messages of God to the women of Israel.

22 ¶ So Moses brought Israel from the Red Sea, and they went out into the wilderness of Shur: and they went three days in the wilderness, and found no water.

23 And when they came to Marah, they could not drink of the waters of Marah, for they were bitter: therefore the name of it was called Marah.

24 And the people murmured against Moses, saying, What shall we drink?

25 And he cried unto the LORD, and the LORD shewed him a tree, which when he had cast it into the waters, the waters were made sweet:

She was at this time about ninety years of age; and, having generally lived with Aaron, she is called his sister, rather than the sister of Moses.—It is supposed that the Israelites sang responsively; and that Miriam led the chorus of the women, when it came to their turn to take up the song of praise. Many passages of Scripture seem to denote this alternate mode of singing, some of which are referred to in the margin. (f.)

V. 22—24. This immense multitude, with their numerous flocks and herds, marching for three days without any water, except as they might carry some small quantity with them, must have experienced great distress and perhaps disease: and having found water, but not being able to drink it, they were still more disappointed. Probably, the waters of Marah were not only very nauseous, but also unwholesome, so that the trial was indeed very great. (Note, 25, 26.) When first delivered from the Egyptians, the Israelites were so impressed with the power exerted in their behalf, that “they feared the LORD, and believed the LORD, and his servant Moses,” as acting under his authority: but being again alarmed, as well as distressed, “they soon forgot his works,” and began to vent their discontent and distrust, in peevish murmurs against Moses, as if he had acted of himself!—They ‘should rather have prayed to God than murmured against Moses.’ Bp. Patrick.

V. 25, 26. Moses did what the people had neglected to do; and, in answer to his prayer, a tree was pointed out to him, by means of which the waters became sweet and wholesome. It cannot reasonably be supposed, that this change was made by a natural efficacy; but rather, that the wood was the appointed token of God’s miraculous operation. (Notes, 2 Kings ii. 19—22. iv. 40, 41.) It may also call to our remembrance the blessings of the gospel, which Christ obtained for us when he hung upon the tree; and which sweeten all our bitterest trials, by giving peace to the conscience, comfort, and the hope of glory.—On this occasion, the Lord was pleased to give Israel some intimations of his holy will, previous to the promulgation of the law; as well as to shew them by what rule he intended to act towards them; even according to their conduct, whether obedient or disobedient. Perhaps, they were reminded to observe the sabbath, and directed how to order their re-there he made for them a statute and an ordinance, and there he proved them,

26 And said, If thou wilt diligently hearken to the voice of the LORD thy God, and wilt do that which is right in his sight, and wilt give ear to his commandments, and keep all his statutes; I will put none of these diseases upon thee, which I have brought upon the Egyptians; for I am the LORD that healeth thee.

27 And they came to Elim, where were twelve wells of water, and three-score and ten palm-trees: and they encamped there by the waters.

ligious worship, as well as instructed in the grand outlines of the moral law. Whilst the Lord engaged to provide for them, and continue their health and comforts, if they were obedient; he also intimated that if they were rebellious, the very diseases and judgments, which they had seen inflicted upon the Egyptians, would come upon them also. Perhaps the want of water, and the unwholesome waters of Marah, which some of them had drunk, occasioned sickness, and filled the multitude with dismal apprehensions, which were thus obviated and over-ruled for good purposes.

V. 27. Twelve wells, &c.] A well of water to each tribe, and the palm-trees for a cooling shade and pleasant fruit.—It is remarkable that the number answers to the twelve patriarchs and the seventy elders, and to the twelve apostles and the seventy disciples.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS

V. 1—21.

Those events in providence, and those experiences in the life of faith, which have occasioned our most distressing apprehensions, often terminate in such a manner as to fill our hearts with gratitude, and our lips with praise: nor would the Lord lead those whom he loves into straits, did he not intend to render them subservient to his own glory, and to their comfort and advantage.—When we have patiently and quietly waited for deliverance out of trouble, and have had our expectations answered, we should proclaim to all around us the wonderful works of God: and every one, in the improvement of his talent, and the exercise of his particular endowments, should concur in so pleasant and reasonable a service.—They who oppress the people of God, are his declared enemies, over whom he will at length triumph completely; and all shall acknowledge, that he is “glorious in holiness,” as well as in power, in their destruction, and in that of all impenitent sinners. But they, who humbly submit to him and trust in his mercy, will find that he “is become their Salvation,” and He will “compass them about with songs of deliverance.”—What his grace begins, his power and faithfulness will complete; and, having redeemed them from the bondage of sin and Satan, every past favour becomes an earnest of future benefits, till he shall bring them to his holy habitation in heaven.—The judgments inflicted on some enemies

VALLEY IN THE WILDERNESS : PROBABLY EILIM.

EXOD. XV. 27.

THE WILDERNESS OF SIN.

EXOD. XVI. 1; XVII. 1. NUMB. XXXIII. 11, 12.

CHAP. XVI.

The Israelites come to the wilderness of Sin, and murmur for want of bread, 1—4. Manna, &c. is promised, and the people are rebuked, 5—12. Quails and manna are sent, 13—15. Manna is described, and rules are given for gathering it; the people disobey in hoarding it, and in seeking it on the sabbath-day, 16—31. God commands that an omer of it should be preserved, 32—36.

AND they ^a took their journey from Elim; and all the congregation of the children of Israel came unto the wilderness of ^b Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai, on the fifteenth day of the second month, after their departing out of the land of Egypt.
 2 And the ^c whole congregation of

^a xv. 27. Num. xxxiii. 10—12.

^b xvii. 1. Num. xxxiii. 12. Ez. xxx. 15, 16.

^c See on xv. 24.—Gen. xix. 4. Ps. cvi. 7. 13. 25. 1 Cor. x. 10.

of God are evidences that judgment will be executed on the rest; and he often intimidates those whom he intends to punish. Ere long “every enemy shall be destroyed, which hath done evil in his sanctuary;” the whole church shall sing “the song of Moses and of the Lamb,” as triumphing over the fall of every antichrist; “and the LORD shall reign for ever and ever,” to the eternal satisfaction of his redeemed people, and the eternal confusion of his adversaries.

V. 22—27.

In this world we must pass through many changes: and those praises, which only spring from gratified self-love, will soon be turned into rebellious murmurs. Hypocrites may have a temporary faith, and sometimes very high affections, and be very earnest in religious exercises; but, in time of temptation, they often fall away: and even true believers, in seasons of sharp trial, are frequently induced to fret, distrust, and murmur. But, in every dispensation, we should cast our care upon the Lord, and pour out our prayers before him; and we shall find that a submissive will, a peaceful conscience, and the comfort of the Holy Spirit, render the bitterest trials tolerable, yea pleasant. And, let us not forget that we are preserved from destruction, and delivered from our enemies, to be the servants of God; that he proves us in order to our more unreserved obedience; that our exemptions from the afflictions, which others endure, is intended to encourage us in the path of duty; and that the evidence, of our being interested in his redeeming love, arises from the habitual disposition to keep his commandments. Our health, both of body and soul, depends on him: may he then sanctify our bodily sicknesses, restore our souls to the health of holiness, enable us “to draw water with joy from the wells of salvation,” and “to sit down under his shadow with great delight,” and find “his fruit sweet to our taste.”—(Cant. ii. 3. Is. xii. 3.)

NOTES.

CHAP. XVI. V. 1—3. We are informed in another place, (Num. xxxiii. 10—12,) that the Israelites marched back to the Red Sea, when they left Elim. Perhaps the Lord saw good to lead them thither again; in order to rethe children of Israel murmured against Moses and Aaron in the wilderness.

3 And the children of Israel said unto them, ^d Would to God ^e we had died by the hand of the LORD in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the ‘flesh-pots, and when we did eat bread to the full: for ye have brought us forth into this wilderness, ^f to kill this whole assembly with ^h hunger.

4 Then said the LORD unto Moses, Behold, ⁱ I will rain bread from heaven for you: and the people shall go out and gather a ^k certain rate every day, that I may ^k prove them, whether they will walk in my law, or no.

5 And it shall come to pass, that on

^d Num. xx. 3—5. Deut. xxxviii. 67. Josh. vii. 7. 2 Sam xviii. 33. Acts xxvi. 29. 1 Cor. iv. 8. 2 Cor. xi. 1. ^e Num. xi. 15. xiv. 2. Job iii. 1. 10. 20. Jer. xx. 14—18. Jon. iv. 8, 9. ^f ii. 23. Num. xi. 4, 5. ^g v. 21. xvii. 3. Num. xvi. 13. 41. ^h Deut. viii. 3. Jer. ii. 6. Lam. iv. 9. ⁱ Is. lxxviii. 24. cv. 40. John vi. 31, 32. 1 Cor. x. 3. ^k Heb. the portion of a day in his day. Neh. xi. 23. Prov. xxx. 8. Matt. vi. 11, 32. 33. Luke xi. 3. ^l See on xv. 25.—Josh. xxiv. 15.

mind them of his past mercies, and to renew the impressions made at first on their mind, which were in great measure erased at Marah.—They however arrived in the desert of Sin, not far from Sinai, exactly a month after they set off from Egypt: but when they came thither, having by this time consumed nearly the whole stock of provisions which they had brought with them, and seeing no prospect of a supply; “the whole congregation,” including the elders and the body of the people, with very few exceptions, murmured vehemently against Moses and Aaron. As they had been liberated from Egyptian bondage, and conducted thus far, by a series of stupendous miracles; doubtless they should have expected to be provided for in a similar manner: but, instead of this confidence in God, they looked only to natural causes; and, perceiving nothing but approaching famine and desolation, they passionately wished that they had died by some sudden judgment, in like manner as the first-born of Egypt had been slain! Nay, they seemed to envy their speedy death, while they considered themselves reserved to a more lingering and painful execution! They had likewise forgotten the galling labours and oppression of their cruel bondage, and only remembered the plenty which they had enjoyed, magnifying it probably far beyond the truth: as if their enslaved condition in Egypt had been a most desirable privilege! ‘They untruly magnify their former condition, that they may represent their present to be more miserable than really it was.’ Bp. Patrick.—Not daring directly to arraign the justice of God, they passionately arraigned the conduct of Moses and Aaron; as if they had purposely intended the destruction of the whole congregation!

V. 4, 5. The conduct of Israel was ungrateful, perverse, and distrustful; yet, as their distress was real and urgent, the Lord did not execute deserved punishment on them, or so much as threaten it. But he determined to prove them, and to make it manifest, as by a fair trial, whether any reasonable indulgence, or any miraculous interpositions, would induce them to obey his commandments.—The Manna came from the region of the air, which is sometimes called the heavens, (Note, Gen. i. 6—8;) where it was miraculously produced; and it descended in filled with bread: and ye shall know that I am the LORD your God.

13 ¶ And it came to pass, that at even the quails came up, and covered the camp: and in the morning the dew lay round about the host.

14 And when the dew that lay was gone up, behold, upon the face of the wilderness there lay a small round thing, as small as the hoar frost on the ground.

15 And when the children of Israel saw it, they said one to another, * It is manna: for they wist not what it was. And Moses said unto them, 'This is the bread which the LORD hath given you to eat.

16 This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded, Gather of it every cloud; and thus confirmed what he had before spoken. By the miraculous and very large supply of provisions about to be sent, the people would be convinced, not only that the Lord was able, but also that he considered himself engaged, to protect and provide for them; unless they forfeited that privilege by rebellion and apostasy.

V. 13. There are different opinions concerning the meaning of the word translated quails. Some imagine that they were a species of locusts; but the language of Scripture uniformly leads us to consider them as wild fowl, of whatever species they might be. (Marg. Ref. b.)—Such a large multitude of these were miraculously brought to the camp of Israel, and lighted among the people; that without difficulty they caught as many as sufficed for the whole multitude! This miracle of mercy may be contrasted with the plague of locusts which devoured the remaining sustenance of Egypt.

V. 14, 15. After the Israelites had feasted at night upon the quails, they found in the morning that, along with the dew, there had fallen all around the camp "a small round thing, as small as the hoar frost;" yet it had not been exhale with the dew, but lay on the ground as a solid substance: and while they did not know what it was, and enquired of each other, they were led to say, man hu: "This is man," or, manna. This is prepared or appointed, or portioned out; that is, 'This is the food before predicted, which God hath prepared or appointed for us.'—The name thus first given it, has been retained as to the substance, in most languages, into which the Scriptures have been translated.—As the people seemed not to be generally satisfied, that this was the bread which God had promised to "rain from heaven for them," Moses expressly assured them that it was.—The name manna has also been given to several substances, procured in different ways; but it does not appear, that any of them was the same as the manna given to Israel, or at all fitted to answer the same purposes. It was indeed a miraculous provision, given immediately from God; and not the production of second causes.

It is manna. (15) קָדַח מַנָּה. 'Quasi preparatus cibus, aut man according to his eating: an omer for every man according to the number of your persons, take ye every man for them which are in his tents.

17 And the children of Israel did so, and gathered, some more, some less.

18 And when they did mete it with an omer, he that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack: they gathered every man according to his eating.

19 And Moses said, Let no man leave of it till the morning.

20 Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto Moses, but some of them left of it until the morning, and it bred worms and stank: and Moses was wroth with them.

'comparatus sine labore.' Robertson.—It is formed from מִנְיָן, as מִן a precept from מִצְוָה, and מִן a line from מִקְלָה. The word may be derived from the substantive מִנְיָן a portion, a distribution. The common opinion that מַנָּה מִן הַשָּׁמַיִם means What is this? seems entirely destitute of foundation.

V. 16—20. The Lord sent the Manna, but the people must go out early to gather it; and they were directed to take, for each individual, such a quantity as would in general suffice a healthy man: for that seems to be the meaning of the expression, "Every man according to his eating," when compared with the context. There would be in each tent several women and children, who did not require so much food as the grown men; yet these were directed to gather for every one of them, each man according to his own eating. And, as an Omer is computed to be nearly three quarts, wine measure, it would be a competent supply for any individual. We may suppose, that the several persons capable of labour, in each tent, cast all they gathered into one stock; and when the father of the family came to measure it, he was allowed to retain an Omer for each of his household: but, if he had any over, he must impart it to his neighbour who had less than that quantity; for some would be less active than others. Thus it came to pass, that he who "gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack;" but they daily gathered for every individual, in that vast assembly, according to the eating of a grown man, or an Omer each, and this was the case during forty years.—The apostle's argument, grounded on the passage, leads us to this interpretation; (Note, 2 Cor. viii. 10—15;) else how could the case of Israel have been in point to that of Christians, when exhorted to impart of their superfluity, to supply the wants of their brethren, and to trust the Lord to send them a new supply, as they needed it? If this exposition be not admitted, it must be supposed, that numberless miracles were constantly wrought, without any apparent occasion, in augmenting or diminishing the quantity gathered by each person, as "some gathered more and some less." But if we allow that every head of a family who had gathered above the quantity was directed to keep an Omer a iv. 5. vi. 7. vii. 17. Jer. xxxi. 34. Ez. xxxiv. 30. xxxix. 22. Joel iii. 17. Zech. xiii. 9. b Num. xi. 31—33. Ps. lxxviii. 27, 28. cv. 40. c Num. xi. 7—9. Deut. viii. 3. Neh. ix. 15. Ps. lxxviii. 24. cv. 40. d Ps. cxlvii. 16. * Or, What is this? or, It is a portion. e Deut. viii. 3. 16. Josh. v. 12. Neh. ix. 29. John vi. 31, 32. 49, 58. 1 Cor. x. 3. Rev. ii. 17. f See on 4.—Num. xxi. 5. Prov. ix. 5. Luke xii. 30.

g 18. 33. 36. † Heb. by the poll, or, head. ‡ Heb. souls. h 2 Cor. viii. 4, 15. i xii. 10. xxiii. 18. Matt. vi. 34. k Matt. vi. 19. Luke xii. 15. 33. Heb. xiii. 5. Jam. v. 2, 3. l Num. xii. 3. xvi. 15. Mark iii. 5. x. 14. Eph. iv. 26.

21 And they gathered it every ^m morning, every man according to his eating: and when the sun waxed hot, it melted.

22 And it came to pass that ⁿ on the sixth day they gathered twice as much bread, two omers for one man: and all the rulers of the congregation came and told Moses.

23 And he said unto them, This is that which the LORD hath said, To-morrow is the ^o rest of the holy sabbath unto the LORD: ^p bake that which ye will bake to-day, and seethe that ye will seethe; and that which remaineth over lay up for you to be kept until the morning.

24 And they laid it up till the morning, as Moses bade: ^q and it did not stink, neither was there any worm therein.

25 And Moses said, Eat that to-day; for to-day is ^r 'a sabbath unto the LORD: to-day ye shall not find it in the field.

26 ^s Six days ye shall gather it: but on the seventh day, which is the sabbath, in it there shall be none.

27 And it came to pass, that there went out some of the people on the seventh day for to gather, ^t and they found none.

28 And the LORD said unto Moses, ^u How long refuse ye to keep my commandments and my laws?

29 See, for that the LORD ^v hath

^m Prov. vi. 6—11.
Ec. ix. 10. xii. 1.
Matt. vi. 33. John
xii. 35. 2 Cor
vi. 2.

ⁿ 5. 16. Lev. xxv.
12. 22

^o xx. 8—11. xxxi.
15. xxxv. 3 Gen.
ii. 2, 3 Lev.
xxiii. 3. Mark ii.
27. 28. Luke xxiii
56. Rev. i. 10.
^p Num. xi. 8.

^r See on 23. 29—
Neh. ix. 14.

^s xx. 9. 11. Dent.
v. 13. Ez. xvi.
1. Luke xiii. 14

^t Prov. xx. 4.
^u x. 3. Num. xiv.
11. xx. 12.
2 Kings xvii. 14.
Ps. lxxxii. 13.
14. Is. vii. 9. 13.
Jer. iv. 14. Ez.
xx. 13—16. Mark
ix. 19.

^v xxxi. 13. Neh.
ix. 14. Is. lviii.
13. 14. Ez. xx
12.

for each of the several persons in his tent, and to give the overplus to his neighbour who had not gathered so much; the whole may be easily explained. Some might retain more than the Omer each, and so hoard what they ought to have imparted: and others, finding an Omer each more than sufficient for his family for the present day, might hoard part of it for the morrow, fearing lest no more should fall. But as the Israelites were taught by this way of subsisting, to live continually and cheerfully dependent on God, and in liberal love to each other; and, as the daily supply of the manna was an emblem of the life of faith in Christ; hoarding in either way was expressly forbidden. And while those who gathered much imparted to their neighbours, they who could not consume an Omer each, might, as some think, give the residue to their cattle; or burn it before the next morning, as they did the remains of the paschal lamb, and other sacrifices. But when some of them selfishly and distrustfully disobeyed this injunction, the manna which they kept bred worms and stank, though when preserved by the Lord's command it continued perfectly good.

V. 21. As the people were required to use, impart, or destroy the manna gathered each day, before the next morning; they were under the necessity of gathering it early in the day, "every man according to his eating," or else they would have had no food: for though it did not exhale with the dew in the morning, "when the sun waxed hot it melted." This was a very extraordinary circumstance, that a substance, which was so easily dissolved and exhaled, should be sufficiently nutrimental to support the people in health and vigour for so long a course of years, and also that what melted and totally disappeared when the sun waxed hot, might yet be baked or seethed (23) without any such effect.

V. 22—27. It is evident, that the miracle, on this occasion, consisted in the larger quantity of manna that fell on the sixth day; which caused it to be so much thicker on the ground than at other times, that the people gathered twice the quantity, with little additional labour (29); and not in a subsequent increase of the quantity which each person had gathered.—As the rulers came to inform Moses, that the people had gathered twice the usual quantity; it may be supposed, that they were appointed to superintend the distribution, and wanted his directions in the present case: and this gave him the opportunity of more fully stating to them, and by them to the people, the obligation of keeping the sabbath as a holy rest unto the Lord.—In whatever way they chose to prepare the manna, they might use what they wanted on that day, and reserve the remainder for the morrow; and it would continue fit for use: but it is generally thought, that they were forbidden to bake or seethe it on the sabbath-day; though the language used does not necessarily imply this.—It is remarkable, that three miracles were wrought, every week, in honour of the sabbath, even before the promulgation of the Mosaic law. Double the quantity fell the day before; none fell on the sabbath-day; nor did that stink, which they kept for that day. This confirms the opinion, that the institution of the sabbath was from the beginning. Indeed the whole narrative implies, that reference was made to an institution before known, but not properly remembered or regarded; and not to any new law given on the occasion. Neither the enquiry of the elders, nor the language of Moses, can be consistently interpreted of an entirely new institution.

V. 28—30. The people had murmured against Moses and against God, in Egypt, at the Red Sea, at Marah, and before the manna was sent; which implied a rebellious and refractory spirit: when forbidden to hoard the manna, they disobeyed; and again, when forbidden to go out for manna on the sabbath, they went out. After all the miracles of mercy which they had experienced, this was exceedingly ungrateful and provoking; and the Lord sharply rebuked their conduct, in thus refusing to keep his commandments and laws, as made known by Moses.—The extraordinary circumstance, of a double quantity of manna on the sixth day, was a sufficient proof of the Lord's determination to enforce the hallowing of the sabbath. This was originally instituted, when creation was finished: (Note, Gen. ii. 3:) but as the posterity of fallen Adam, being generally sunk into idolatry, entirely neglected to observe it; the God of Abraham, as a special favour, had given you the sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days: ^v abide ye every man in his place, let no man go out of his place on the seventh day.

^v Luke xxiii 56.

30 So the people ^r rested on the seventh day.

^r Lev. xxiii 3
Deut. v. 12-14
Heb. iv. 9.

31 And the house of Israel ^a called the name thereof Manna: ^b and it was like coriander-seed, white; and the taste of it was like wafers made with honey.

^a See on 15.

^b Num. xi. 6, 7
Cant. ii. 3.

32 ¶ And Moses said, This is the thing which the LORD commandeth, ^c Fill an omer of it to be kept for your generations; that they may see the bread wherewith I have fed you in the ^c Ps. ciii. 1, 2. cv.

5. cxi. 4. Luke
xxii. 19. Heb. ii.
1.

wilderness, when I brought you forth from the land of Egypt.

33 And Moses said unto Aaron, ^d Take a pot, and put an omer full of manna therein, and lay it up before the LORD, to be kept for your generations.

^d Heb. ix. 4.

34 As the LORD commanded Moses, so Aaron laid it up before the ^e testimony, to be kept.

^e xxv. 16. 21.
xxvii. 21. xxx. 6
.36. xxxi. 18.
xxxviii. 21. xl.
20. Num. i. 50.
53. xvii. 10.

35 And the children of Israel did eat manna ^f forty years, ^g until they came to a land inhabited: they did eat manna, until they came unto ^h the borders of the land of Canaan.

Num. xxxiii. 38.
Deut. viii. 2, 3.
Neh. ix. 15, 20.
21. Ps. lxxviii.
24, 25. John vi.
30-58.

36 Now ⁱ an omer is the tenth part of an ephah.

^g Josh. v. 12.
^h Num. xxxiii. 48
-50. Deut. i. 8.
xxxiv. 1-4.
ⁱ 16. 32, 33.

given the descendants of that patriarch the Sabbath, that it might be a day of holy rest unto them. They must not therefore leave their habitations on that day, for any secular business.—This for the present proved sufficient to induce the people to observe it, though the offenders were not punished.

V. 31. The shape of the manna was like coriander seed, that is, round and small; it was white; and its taste resembled that of cakes mixed up with a small quantity of honey, which were frequently used in those days.—It had also, at least when dressed in some particular way, the flavour of sweet oil, which was in great request and use among the Israelites. (Num. xi. 6-8.) We may therefore conclude, that it was a very pleasant substitute for bread, and very nourishing; though the history itself confutes the tradition of the Jews, that it had all manner of pleasant flavours, according to men's different tastes.

V. 32-34. It is very probable, that this direction was not given till the ark of the covenant, the testimony of God's gracious presenee with Israel, was made, and placed in the holy of holies. The apostle informs us, (according to the Septuagint,) that the pot in which the manna was preserved, like other sacred vessels, was made of gold.—Thus by miracle, the manna, which was dissolved by the sun if not gathered, and when kept in distrust, stank in one night, was preserved pure from generation to generation!

V. 35, 36. As Moses lived till a great part of the fortieth year was past, when Israel was encamped in the plains of Moab; there is no reason to say, that the thirty-fifth verse was added after his decease.—An ephah was something more than seven gallons of our measure, and less than our bushel.—The manna was a type of Christ, provided by God, and given to sinners, who must otherwise have inevitably perished, who were altogether undeserving of such a gift, and prone to despise and undervalue it. The careless multitude understand not what this heavenly manna is, or what use to make of it; till instructed that "it is the Bread which the LORD hath given them." The hypoerite retains the doctrine as a notion, which corrupts, and produces pride and vain confidence. The true Christian, having an appetite for this heavenly provision, seeks it diligently and early, day by day; labours for it, though it is the gift of God; and 'feeds upon it in his 'heart by faith with thanksgiving;' by which his soul acquires health and vigour, and he becomes strong to labour and to fight with his enemies.—There is a sufficiency in this provision for the whole congregation of Israel, but nothing over for any one. We must have it fresh, and feed upon it daily, to the end of our journey to the heavenly Canaan; and, though it appear to some light bread, it will hold out to the end: that is, we must by faith receive from Christ, as the purchase of his sacrifice, pardon and peace, grace and strength, every day till we come to heaven. And though we now seem to gather a double portion on the sabbath-day; yet, when we keep the heavenly Sabbath, we shall not need to gather any more, nor will the stoek we have acquired any more corrupt; but in that holy of holies it will endure for ever, as provision for our souls, to the glory of our God.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1-12.

Changes are prepared for us in this world: we should therefore prepare for them, and be ready to endure hardship, and to exercise faith, patience, and self-denial, whenever called to it. But, before we severely censure others, we ought to put "our souls in their souls' stead." We may easily condemn the Israelites: but perhaps we do not readily suspect, that we also should distrust, despond, and murmur, if proved by far less trials, and left to ourselves: nor do we sufficiently regard their conduct as an intended picture of human nature; and their history, as that of the human heart under the varying dispensations of Providence. In whatever situation we are placed, we are prone to undervalue our mercies, to aggravate our troubles, and to compare the unfavourable side of our present circumstances, with the favourable side of some former, or some imaginary situation: and in this way we are perversely ingenious in rendering ourselves discontented and unthankful; and are ever wishing for some change, yet ever seeming to change for the worse.—When ashamed to reflect directly upon God, we are apt to vent our impatience, in complaints against the instruments, or mere

CHAP. XVII.

The people want water, chide with Moses, and tempt the Lord, 1, 2; Moses expostulates with them, and complains to God; and, at his command, smites the rock in Horeb, which pours out water, 3—6; the place is named Massah, and Meribah, 7. Amalek assaults Israel, and is overcome by Joshua, while Moses holds up his hands with the rod of God, 8—13. Amalek is doomed to destruction: and Moses builds an altar, called JEHOVAH-NISSI, 14—16.

AND all the congregation of the children of Israel journeyed from the occasions, of our uneasinesses; not aware that our murmurings are against the Lord himself. It behoves us, therefore, to watch and pray against this rebellious, unthankful spirit, the offspring of pride and unbelief; that confiding in the wisdom of God, and conscious of our own unworthiness, we may learn contentment: and if plain and sharp reproofs humble and quiet us, they are valuable advantages. But “the Lord is slow to anger,” and mercifully considereth our frame; and He knows how hard we find it to bear urgent want without impatience; and to believe his word in direct opposition to every appearance of probability. He therefore frequently shews us his glory, and proves our obedience, by supplying our wants, and exceeding our expectations; and this tends, for the future, to deprive us of all plausible pretence of saying, that we want encouragement to trust and serve him.

V. 13—21

The Lord could, at all times, supply his people with superfluities, and in some cases he does so: but, in general, he sees it best for them to have only things necessary, and that from day to day; and he constrains most of them, to expect their support from him on the morrow, that they may see the glory of his power, and taste the sweetness of his truth and love, in their daily bread. If our faith were strong, we should sleep no worse, though, like Israel, we went to rest night after night, without one morsel in the house for the next day; or any other prospect of obtaining it, except confidence in him, who, as “a Father, knoweth what things we have need of.” Yet we must “labour even for the meat that perisheth,” in subordination to our labouring for that “which endureth unto everlasting life;” though both are the gift of God: and it is the Lord’s will, that the poor should be liberal of their little, as well as the rich out of their abundance. But whether we have much or little, that which is hoarded in covetousness and distrust, corrupts, breeds worms, and stinks; and that alone is useful, which supplies our wants and relieves the necessities of others.

V. 22—36.

Whatever diligence we use in worldly business on other days, we are to consider the sabbath as the Lord’s gift to us; and should previously contrive every thing, even in respect of our food, in that manner which may best render it a day of holy rest from worldly business, and in spiritual employments: and he will take care that we shall eventually be no losers by so doing.—But there is in us, by wilderness of ^a Sin, after their journeys, according to the commandment of the LORD, and pitched in ^b Rephidim: and there was no water for the people to drink.

2 Wherefore ^c the people did chide with Moses, and said, ^d Give us water that we may drink. And Moses said unto them, Why chide ye with me? ^e Wherefore do ye tempt the LORD?

3 And the people thirsted there for water; and the people murmured

^a xv. 1. Num. xxxiii. 12—14.
^b 8. xix. 2.
^c v. 21. xiv. 11. 12. xv. 24. xvi. 2. 3. Num. xi. 4—6. xiv. 2. xx. 3—5. xxi. 5.
^d Gen. xxx. 1. 2. 1 Sam. viii. 6. Luke xv. 12.
^e 7. Num. xiv. 22. Deut. vi. 16. Ps. lxxviii. 18. 41. 56. xcv. 9. cvi. 14. Is. vii. 12. Mal. iii. 15. Matt. iv. 7. xvi. 1—3. Luke iv. 12. Acts v. 9. xv. 10. 1 Cor. x. 9. Heb. iii. 9.

nature, a spirit of perverseness, which takes pleasure in acting contrary to the Lord’s commands; and by our conduct, as it were, declaring, that we will not submit to him: nor can we be his true servants, unless this proud self-will be mortified and subdued.—Whatever Providence in any honest way allots us, we should consider as “the bread which the LORD giveth us to eat,” and be thankful, and contented with it.—But, if we cannot merit our bodily food, what claim can we have to that “Bread which came down from heaven, to give life to our souls?” (Notes, John vi. 22—58.) Let us then with thankful hearts, early and diligently go forth to gather this heavenly provision, and joyfully feed upon it: let us seek earnestly for the grace of the Holy Spirit, to turn all our knowledge of the doctrine of Christ crucified, into spiritual nourishment for our souls by faith and love; that we may not rest in barren notions, feed on worldly vanities, or satisfy ourselves with former supposed experiences; but, living upon this Bread from day to day, in attendance on all the means of grace, we shall shew that our souls are nourished in all holiness, and fitted for unreserved obedience. And thus also, edifying others by the way, we shall in due time arrive at the heavenly Canaan, there to feast for ever on the rich provisions of our Father’s house above.

NOTES.

CHAP. XVII. V. 1, 2. There are other intermediate stages mentioned in Numbers; (Marg. Ref. a;) but here the sacred historian pointed out such places alone as were on some account made remarkable.—“The commandment “of the Lord,” respecting the journeys of the people, was made known by the moving of the pillar. They were, however, still disposed, after all they had seen and heard, even while marching under this guidance, and living upon the manna, on every new trial, to forget God, and to speak and act as if they thought, that Moses and Aaron had of themselves brought them out of Egypt! Thus they “tempted the LORD;” they put his omniscience and omnipotence to the trial; and behaved as if they would tempt him to take vengeance on them, or to leave them to the consequences of their perverseness and unbelief: or as if they would presumptuously prescribe to him, or limit him, and put it to the proof, whether he could perform their requirements or not; being disposed to reject his authority, and refuse to believe that he was among them, if he did not. (Marg. Ref. e.)

V. 3, 4. When the people wanted water, they imme-against Moses, and said, Wherefore is this that thou hast brought us up out of Egypt, to kill us and our children, and our cattle, with thirst?

 4 And Moses ^gcried unto the LORD, saying, What shall I do unto this people? They be ^halmost ready to stone me.
 5 And the LORD said unto Moses, ⁱGo on before the people, and take with thee of the elders of Israel: and ^kthy rod, wherewith thou smotest the river, take in thine hand, and go.

 6 Behold, ^lI will stand before thee there upon the rock ^min Horeb; ⁿand thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall come water out of it, ^othat the people may drink. And Moses did so in the sight of the elders of Israel.
 7 And he called the name of the place ^pMassah and ^qMeribah, because of the ^rchiding of the children of dially shewed great impatience and bitterness of spirit: but, when left for a while to experience the distress of unallayed thirst, in order to make them sensible of their entire dependence on God, and to prepare them to receive the miraculous supply intended, with the greater admiration of his power and goodness; they became so outrageous, that they were ready to stone Moses, in a popular tumult, as the author of their calamity, which they supposed would end in the destruction of the whole multitude! But he, in the meekness and confidence of faith, stated the case before the Lord, and calmly sought his direction, assured of his seasonable and effectual interposition.

V. 5, 6. It is observable, that each of the several extraordinary interpositions of the Lord, in behalf of Israel, was preceded by some remarkable discovery of their ungrateful and rebellious disposition; and this served exceedingly to illustrate the riches of his unmerited mercy towards them.—Instead of commanding Moses to lift up his rod, and call for some dreadful plague, like those inflicted on Egypt, to destroy the ringleaders of this tumult, and dismay the rest; God directed him to take, as his attendants, some of the elders of Israel, to be eye-witnesses of the miracle about to be wrought, which the people could only behold afar off; and also the rod with which the Nile had been smitten, when its waters became blood: and at mount Horeb, which lay at some distance, he and the elders should see the visible glory of God from the cloud, resting on one particular rock, which he must smite with the rod; and then water would burst from it, sufficient for the necessities of the people.—An immense quantity of water would be required for so large a multitude, and for their flocks and herds, even in one day: but we have reason to conclude, that this water followed them as a river in the wilderness from place to place, for a long time; and some think that it continued afterwards to water those parts of the desert.—The apostle calls this water “spiritual drink,” as the emblem of spiritual blessings; and he says, “that Rock was Christ;” that is, a type of him; and this should direct our interpretation of the passage. (Note, 1 Cor. x. 1—5.) It is also observable, that God is never in Scripture called a Rock, till after this event, but afterwards the expression often occurs. A rock is indeed firm and unshaken, as a foundation on which to build: but from a rock of flint, as this was, we might sooner expect fire than water: and thus Christ is a tried Foundation of immoveable power and stability; but sinners had more reason to expect vengeance than happiness from him. The rock must be smitten by the rod of Moses, the giver of the law, even that rod by which the plagues were inflicted upon Egypt: thus Christ was made under the law, and bore its righteous curse, even that punishment which our sins deserved. The rock was smitten by Moses, at the LORD's command, once, in the presence of the elders of Israel, the people who were then full of rebellion, beholding at a distance, while the symbol of the LORD's presence and glory rested upon it: and thus Christ was crucified by the demand of the rebellious Jewish elders, the whole multitude consenting to his death, once for all, and by man's instrumentality; but by his determinate purpose, who said, “Awake, O sword, against my Shepherd, against the Man who is my Fellow, saith the LORD of Hosts: smite the Shepherd;” (Zech. xiii. 7;) while evident tokens of divine majesty attended his crucifixion and death. (Matt. xxvii. 45—54.) After the rock was smitten, the waters flowed forth abundantly, without which supply Israel must have perished: and thus after Christ's crucifixion, resurrection, ascension, and intercession, the Holy Spirit, in all his humbling, sanctifying, and comforting influences, as well as in his manifold gifts and operations, was abundantly communicated. For this seems to have been especially meant, though all the blessings of salvation are included.—Immense as the congregation of Israel was, there was water enough for them all, and a constant, abundant supply: and numerous as believers are, the Spirit of Christ suffices amply; yea, there is so large and inexhaustible a fulness in him, that millions of millions might drink and be satisfied, if so many were athirst for these living waters. The water flowed from the rock in streams to refresh the wilderness, and attended the people on their way to Canaan: and the water typified by it flows from Christ through his ordinances, in the barren wilderness of this world, to refresh our souls, and to purify and fructify them, until we come to glory.—Multitudes, however, who drank of the water which flowed from the rock, perished in the wilderness: but “whosoever drinketh of the Water which Christ shall give him, it shall be in him a well of water, springing up into everlasting life.” (Note, John iv. 10—15.)

V. 7. The place, before called Rephidim, was afterwards, from the misconduct of the people, generally called Massah and Meribah, or Temptation and Chiding; for they had there chided with Moses, and tempted the Lord.

q Ps. xcv. 8. Heb. iii. 8, 9.
 r xxxv. 9. Deut. xxxi. 17. Josh. xxii. 31. Is. xii. 6. Mic. iii. 11. John i. 14. Acts vii. 37—39.

Israel, and because ^q they tempted the LORD, saying, 'Is the LORD among us, or not?

8 ¶ Then came ^r Amalek, and fought with Israel in Rephidim.

9 And Moses said ^s unto ^t Joshua, ^u Choose us out men, and go out, fight with Amalek: to-morrow I will stand on the top of the hill, with ^v the rod of God in mine hand.

10 So ^y Joshua did as Moses had said to him, and fought with Amalek: ^z and Moses, Aaron, and ^a Hur, went up to the top of the hill.

11 And it came to pass when ^b Moses held up his hand, that Israel prevailed: and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed.

12 But Moses's ^c hands were heavy, and they took a stone and put it under him, and he sat thereon: and Aaron and Hur ^d stayed up his hands, the one on the one side, and the other on the other side; and his hands were steady until the going down of the sun.

13 And ^e Joshua discomfited Amalek and his people with the edge of the sword.

14 And the LORD said unto Moses, Write this ^f for a memorial in a book, and rehearse ^g it in the ears of Joshua: ^h for I will utterly put out ⁱ the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven.

15 And Moses built an altar, and called the name of it ^j JEHOVAH-NISSI.

16 For he said, ^k Because ^l the LORD hath sworn ^m that the LORD ⁿ will have war with Amalek from generation to generation.

d Je. xxxv. 3. 2 Cor. i. 11. Phil. i. 19. 1 Theas. v. 25. Heb. xii. 12. Jam. i. 6.
 e Josh. x. 28. 32. 37. 42. xi. 12. f xii. 14. xiii. 9. xxxiv. 27. Deut. xxxi. 9. Josh. iv. 7. Job xix. 23. Hab. ii. 2, 3.
 g Num. xxiv. 20. Deut. xxv. 17—19. 1 Sam. xv. 2. 3. 8. 18. xxvii. 8. 9. 2 Sam. i. 1. 8.—16. 1 Chr. iv. 43. Job xviii. 17. Pa. ix. 6. Prov. x. 7. That is, The LORD my Banner. Gen. xxii. 14. xxxiii. 20. Judg. vi. 24. Ez. xlviii. 35.
 h Or, Because the hand of Amalek is against the throne of the LORD, therefore, &c.
 i Heb. the hand upon the throne of the LORD. Is. lxvi. 1. Acts vii. 49.
 j Ps. xxi. 8—11.

V. 8—13. It is generally taken for granted, that the Amalekites were descended from Esau: yet there is no proof at all of this, except that Eliphaz, the son of Esau, had a son called Amalek, who probably was his youngest son; and this seems by no means a conclusive argument. (Note, Gen. xxxvi. 12.) The Amalekites, however, were not included among the nations whose land was granted to Israel, nor had they received any injury from them: yet, whether from enmity or policy, they attacked them unexpectedly, and smote some of the people, who were feeble, and followed the camp at a distance; (Deut. xxv. 18;) and in other respects they shewed a determination to wage war with them. Accordingly Joshua, (or Oshea, Note, Num. xiii. 16,) who already was an eminent person, was directed to choose a company of warlike men, and give battle to Amalek; while Moses would place himself on a hill, within sight of the combatants, lifting up the rod of God, which had been the token of so many miracles, wrought for Israel and against their enemies. No doubt Moses, Aaron, and Hur, (whom some conjecture to have been the husband of Miriam,) united their earnest prayers; and Moses especially was Israel's typical intercessor and mediator; yet the holding up of his hands, (probably first one and then the other,) with the rod of God, must chiefly be considered, as an avowed dependence, not on human valour, but on the power of JEHOVAH for victory. Thus, so long as Moses was able to hold up the rod, Israel prevailed; but when his hand drooped, then Amalek prevailed: yet, by proper assistance, he was enabled to hold it up till sun-set, by which time Joshua had obtained a complete victory. Perhaps Amalek was the name of the king, as well as of the people; or the Amalekites were aided by allies, or dependants.—This transaction tended to shew the nature and efficacy of faith, and the prevalence of prayer; and typified Christ's effectual intercession for his disciples in all their conflicts.—The people had just before quarrelled with Moses, as if he had meant to kill them; but he was now honoured by holding up the rod of God, the token of their deliverance and triumph.

V. 14. This is the first time that writing is mentioned in Scripture; though it is generally thought that Moses had before this time written the book of Genesis. Some however imagine, that even this direction was given after the law had been delivered from mount Sinai: for they consider alphabetical writing, not so much a human invention, as a divinely appointed method of perpetuating revealed truth. They therefore are of opinion, that the law, written by God himself on the tables of stone, was the first alphabetical writing in the world; and that Moses was afterwards instructed in writing his books.—Yet this is only conjecture, no intimation of the kind being given in Scripture: but it may be stated more confidently, that the command given to Moses, first to write this account in a book, and then to rehearse it in the ears of Joshua, is an internal evidence that Moses wrote this history himself, and gave it to Joshua in that form before his death. As Joshua was chosen to command in the wars of Israel, it was proper that he should be informed of this sentence, that he might embrace every opportunity of executing it, and enjoin the same conduct to his successors: yet it was not accomplished till the reign of David, after whose time we seldom read of the name of Amalek.

[In a book.] Εἰς βιβλίον, Sept. Biblion, the word from which Bible is taken.

V. 15, 16. Moses ascribed the victory to JEHOVAH's banner, under which Israel fought; and he gave him the glory of it, and considered it as an earnest of many subsequent victories.—This is the first altar that we read of, since Jacob went down into Egypt; and it does not appear that publick sacrifices to JEHOVAH had been offered during the intervening period. This altar, however, was not intended for sacrifices, but as an additional memorial of God's purpose concerning Amalek.—The expression translated "The LORD hath sworn," is variously inter-

CHAP. XVIII.

Jethro brings to Moses his wife and sons, 1—6. Moses entertains him; and relates the Lord's goodness to Israel, 7, 8. Jethro rejoices, blesses God, and offers sacrifices, 9—12. He gives good counsel to Moses, and Moses acts according to it, 13—26. He departs from Moses, 27.

^a ii. 16. 21. iii. 1.
iv. 18. Num. x.
23. Judg. iv. 11.
^b Ps. xxxiv. 2.
xlv. 1. lxxviii.
4. Jer. xxxiii. 9.
Zech. viii. 23.
Gal. i. 23, 24.

WHEN *Jethro, the priest of Midian, Moses's father-in-law, ^b heard of interpreted: for some think it refers to an ancient method of taking a solemn oath, by laying hold on the throne, or tribunal, according to one of the marginal renderings, "The hand upon the throne of the LORD:" but others consider it as stating the reason of this denounced extirpating war, "Because the hand of Amalek is against the throne of the LORD." According to this latter marginal rendering, JEHOVAH had fixed his throne in Israel, and shewn his glorious power and majesty in bringing him out of Egypt: yet Amalek, unprovoked, had attacked this throne of the Lord, who therefore determined to take signal vengeance on him, for an example to all future generations.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—7.

When we are walking according to the commandments of the Lord, we may surely depend on him to supply our real wants, in his own time and manner; but we must expect trials, and learn to exercise patience as well as faith. Inordinate and impatient thirsting, even for needful things, puts the mind into a ferment; renders us forgetful of the power and goodness of the Lord, when we have most abundantly experienced them; and disposes us to quarrel with our best friends, and even presumptuously to tempt, distrust, and prescribe to God himself.—They who endeavour to do important good to others, must expect much unreasonable and ungrateful behaviour; and not only to be reproached, but exposed to danger, for their best services: they need therefore to be well armed with patience, prudence, and meekness; and to have constant and near communion with God, that they may spread every case before him, and seek from him guidance, comfort, and protection.—The Lord will honour those, who behave thus in trying circumstances, in the presence of their despisers, and perhaps make them instruments of their preservation.—When Moses, with the rod, so often the token of vengeance on Egypt, smote the rock to bring forth water for Israel, after all their base rebellions; how powerfully did he teach them "not to be overcome of evil, but to overcome evil with good!" But this was far more emphatically enforced, when "Christ redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us," who might justly have sunk under that wrath, which the glorious Son of God willingly endured in our stead!—From this smitten Rock flow the streams of salvation, which follow us through the wilderness. Thence the believing soul receives in measure answerable, not only to his necessities, but to his largest expectations; while all who "are athirst," yea, "all that will, are invited to come, and take of them freely."—Indeed "where sin hath abounded, grace much more

VOL. I.

all that ° God had ^d done for Moses, and for Israel his people, and that the LORD had brought Israel out of Egypt;

2 Then Jethro, Moses's father-in-law, took ° Zipporah Moses's wife, after he had sent her back;

3 And her ^f two sons, of which the name of the one was * Gershom, (for he said, I have been an alien in a strange land;)

^c Acts vii. 25, 26
xiv. 27. xv. 12
xxi. 19, 20. Rom.
xv. 18
^d vii. xv. Josh. ii.
10. ix. 9. Nth.
ix. 10, 11. Ps.
lxxviii. 14, 15.
lxxxviii. 50—53.
cv. 36—41. cvi.
8—11. cxxxvi. 16
—16. Is. lxiii. 11
—13.
^e ii. 21. iv. 25, 26
^f Acts vii. 29.
^{*} That is, *A stranger
here.* ii. 22.
Ps. xxxix. 12.
Heb. xi. 13.
1 Pet. ii. 11.

"abounds."—The Lord often meets the sinner with his converting grace, at the moment when it might have been expected that he would have made him an example of his vengeance; and the believer is sometimes surprised with the sweetest consolations, when most overwhelmed with a sense of his own unworthiness!—Yet this gracious Lord abhors iniquity; and, while he pardons sin, and blesses penitent sinners, he still shews his abhorrence of their crimes; and takes effectual methods, that they shall remember, for their humiliation, how they have tempted and provoked him.—But, happy are his people! They can never want, when He, who commanded food from the clouds, and sent water from the rock, engages to provide.—Let us then ask and receive, and drink, and rejoice, and live for ever.

V. 8—16.

We should expect that our enemies will especially assault us, when drinking most abundantly from the living streams of salvation: these will, however, prepare us for the conflict; and, fighting under the LORD our Banner, we shall finally prevail, and give him the glory.—We may also observe that some men are useful in one way, and some in another; but none are so serviceable as they, who serve the publick by the fervent, persevering prayers of faith. Little do statesmen in the cabinet, or commanders in the field, understand, how much the success of their deliberations and efforts is influenced by the prayers of the true Christian in his closet, in his family, and in the house of God!—But alas! how soon we flag in those spiritual exercises, even sooner than the soldier wearies in the field of battle! and we have need to be supported, and animated by each other; but especially we need continual assistance from the Lord, that "we may pray always and not faint."—Oh! what cause have they to tremble, who have not only the sword of an enemy, but the prayers of God's people, and the memorials of his word, against them!—Nor let it be ever forgotten, that the complete salvation of the righteous is inseparable from the entire destruction of the wicked.

NOTES.

CHAP. XVIII. V. 1—5. It is generally supposed, that Moses sent Zipporah to Jethro, when the Lord met him by the way in anger, because he had neglected to circumcise his son. (Note, iv. 24—26.) The dangers and difficulties to be encountered in Egypt were very great; and perhaps Moses was aware, that she did not possess adequate fortitude and patience: but as soon as the Lord had brought Israel forth out of Egypt, and led them near to the residence of Jethro, Jethro brought Zipporah and her two sons back to Moses; doubtless according to some pre-

2 G

4 And the name of the other was ^a Eliezer, (for the God of my father, said he, was mine help, and ^b delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh :)
 5 And Jethro, Moses's father-in-law, came with his sons and his wife unto Moses into the wilderness, where he encamped at the ^b mount of God.
 6 And he said unto Moses, I, thy father-in-law Jethro, am come unto thee, and thy wife and her two sons with her.
 7 And Moses ^l went out to meet his father-in-law, and ^k did obeisance, and ^l kissed him, and they asked each other of their [†] welfare: and they came into the tent.
 8 And Moses ^m told his father-in-law all that the LORD had done unto Pharaoh, and to the Egyptians for Israel's sake, ⁿ and all the travail that had ^o come upon them by the way, and how ^o the LORD delivered them.
 9 And Jethro ^p rejoiced for all the goodness which the LORD had done to Israel; whom he had delivered out of the hand of the Egyptians.
 10 And Jethro said, ^q Blessed be the LORD, who hath delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of Pharaoh, who hath deliver-

* That is, My God is an Help. Ps. xvi. 1. Is. 1. 7—9. Heb. xlii. 6. ii. 15. Ps. xlviii. 1. 48. xxxiv. 4. Dan. vi. 22. Acts xii. 11. 2 Cor. 1. 8—10. 2 Tim. iv. 17.

h iii. 1. 12. xix. 11. 20. xxiv. 16, 17. 1 Kings xix. 8.

i Gen. xlv. 29. Num. xxii. 26. Judg. xi. 34. Acts xviii. 15. k Gen. xviii. 2. xix. 1. xxxiii. 3—7.

l Gen. xxix. 13. xxxi. 28. xlv. 15. Ps. ii. 12. Luke vii. 45. Acts xx. 37.

† Heb. near. Gen. xlii. 27. 2 Sam. xi. 7. Margins.

m See on 1.—Neth. ix. 9—15. Ps. lxxvi. 16. lxxi. 17—20. cv. 1, 2. cxlv. 4—12.

n xv. 22—24. xvi. 3. xvii. 2.

o Heb. found them. Gen. xlv. 34. Num. xx. 14. Neth. ix. 32.

Ps. lxxviii. 42. cvi. 10. cvii. 2.

p Is. xlv. 23. lxxvi. 10. Rom. xii. 10. 1 Cor. xii. 26.

q Gen. xiv. 20. 2 Sam. xviii. 28. 1 Kings viii. 13. Ps. xli. 13. cvi. 47. 48. Luke 1. 68. Eph. i. 3. 1 Thes. iii. 9. 1 Pet. i. 3. Rev. v. 11—13. xix. 1—6.

vious appointment.—The younger son of Moses seems to have been born but a short time before he set off to return into Egypt, and to have been circumcised by the way, as before related. But Moses, being at that time about to face the Egyptian monarch, recollected his deliverance from the power and anger of a former king of Egypt: and considering this as a pledge of his safety and success in the present undertaking, he called his son Eliezer, or My God is a Help, with reference to his past experience, and his present confidence.

V. 6—11. Jethro seems to have informed Moses, by messengers, that he was arrived at the borders of the camp; and by them he thus addressed him: (Notes, Matt. viii. 5—9. Luke vii. 1—10:) accordingly, Moses went forth without the camp to meet him, and gave him a very affectionate and respectful reception.—The joy and praise of Jethro, for the mercies shewn by the Lord to Israel, was a remarkable contrast to Israel's murmurings and rebellion. He declared, that his faith was greatly confirmed, and his heart encouraged in worshipping the God of Israel, as distinguished from ill idols, by this decided victory, which JEHOVAH had obtained over the proud and presumptuous opposition of Pharaoh and the Egyptians and over the idols of Egypt, and by the redemption of Israel.

V. 12. The Aaronick priesthood was not yet esta-ed the people from under the hand of the Egyptians.

11 Now ^r I know that ^r the LORD is greater than all gods: for ^r in the thing wherein they dealt ^u proudly, he was above them.

12 And Jethro, Moses's father-in-law, ^x took a burnt-offering, and sacrifices for God: and ^y Aaron came, and all the elders of Israel to ^z eat bread with Moses's father-in-law before God.

13 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses ^a sat to judge the people: and the people stood by Moses from the morning unto the evening.

14 And when Moses's father-in-law saw all that he did to the people, he said, What is this thing that thou doest to the people? Why sittest thou thyself alone, and all the people stand by thee from morning unto evening?

15 And Moses said unto his father-in-law, Because the people come unto me ^b to enquire of God.

16 When they have ^c a matter, they come unto me, and I judge between ^d one and another, and I do ^d make them know the statutes of God and his laws.

i. 16. 1 Kings xvii. 24. 2 Kings v. 15. x. 11. 1 Chr. xvi. 25. 2 Chr. ii. 5. Ps. xcv. 3. cxxxv. 5. t i. 10. 16. 22. v. 2. xiv. 8. 18. u See on ix. 17. x. 3.—1 Sam. ii. 3. Neth. ix. 10. 16. 29. Job xl. 11. 12. Dan. iv. 37. Luke i. 51. Jam. iv. 6. 1 Pet. v. 5. x xxiv. 5. Gen. iv. 4. viii. 20. xii. 7. xxvii. 25. xxxii. 54. Job i. 5. xlii. 8.

y xxiv. 11. Lev. xii. 11—17. Deut. xii. 7. xxvii. 7. 1 Chr. xxix. 21. 22. 2 Chr. xxx. 22. 1 Cor. x. 18. 21. 31.

z ii. 20. Gen. xliii. 25. 2 Sam. ix. 7. Job xlii. 11. Dan. x. 3. Luke xiv. 1. 15. a Judg. v. 10. Job xxix. 7. 1e. xxi. 5. Jer. iii. 12. Matt. xxiii. 7. Rom. xii. 8. xiii. 6.

b 19. 20. Lev. xxiv. 12—14. Num. xv. 34. xxvii. 5. xxiii. 7. xxiv. 14. Deut. xvii. 8—12. 2 Sam. xv. 3. Job xxxi. 13. Acts xviii. 14. 1 Cor. vi. 1.

c Heb. a man and his fellow. ii. 13. d Lev. xxiv. 15. Num. xv. 35. xxxv. 6—9. Deut. iv. 5. v. 1. vi. 1. 1 Sam. xii. 23. Matt. xxviii. 20. 1 Thes. iv. 1, 2.

blished: for there seems no ground at all for the opinion of the Jewish expositors, that these events occurred some time after the giving of the law. It is therefore evident that Jethro, as an ancient priest of the Lord, officiated in these sacrifices, in which, though not of Israel, he had fellowship with Israel: and this appeared favourable to the ease of the Gentiles. Having offered a burnt-offering, which was wholly consumed, he sacrificed other sacrifices; and he and Moses and Aaron, with the elders of Israel, feasted together with thankfulness and cheerfulness, as before God. This was a representation of the life of faith in Christ, and the communion of the saints.

V. 13—16. Moses, the divinely appointed Deliverer of Israel from Egyptian bondage, was of course acknowledged as the Ruler, or chief Magistrate; and, in this capacity, he undertook to hear and decide all the controversies which arose among the people.—Besides the various revelations, which had been made in preceding ages, to Adam, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, and others, concerning the grand doctrines and requirements of true religion, which had been handed down by tradition to the descendants of Jacob; no doubt Moses had received much immediate instruction in these respects, before the solemn promulgation of the law from Sinai, and could thus answer those, who "came to him to enquire of God," and "make them know his

* Heb. Fading
 † How wilt fade.
 e 2 Cor. vii. 15.
 Phil. ii. 30
 1 The. ii. 8, 9.
 f Num. xi. 14—
 17. Deut. i. 9—
 12. Acts vi. 1—4.
 g 24. Prov. ix. 9.
 h ii. 12. iv. 12.
 Gen. xxxix. 2
 Deut. xx. 1.
 Josh. i. 9, 2 Sam.
 xiv. 17. Matt.
 xxviii. 20.
 i See on 15.—iv.
 16. xx. 19. Deut.
 v. 5.
 k 16. Deut. iv. 1.
 5. v. 1. vi. 1, 2.
 vii. 11. Neh. ix.
 13, 14.
 l 1 Sam. xii. 23.
 Ps. xxxii. 8.
 cxliii. 8. 1s. xxx.
 21. Jer. vi. 16.
 xlii. 3. Mic. iv.
 2. 1 The. iv. 1.
 m Deut. i. 18. Ez.
 iii. 17. Matt.
 xxviii. 20. Mark
 xiii. 34. 2 The. s.
 iii. 6—12.
 n Deut. i. 13—17.
 Acts vi. 3.
 o 1 Kings iii. 9—12.
 Prov. xviii. 2.
 p xliii. 2—9. Gen.
 xxii. 12. xlii. 18.
 2 Sam. xxiii. 3.
 1 Kings xviii. 3.
 12. 2 Chr. xix. 5
 —9. Neh. v. 9.
 vii. 2. Ec. xii. 13.
 Luke xviii. 2. 4.
 q Job xxix. 16. 1s.
 xvi. 5. lix. 4. 14.
 15. Jer. v. 1. Zech
 vii. 9. viii. 16.
 r xxiii. 8. Deut
 xvi. 18, 19. 1 Sam.
 viii. 3. xii. 3, 4.
 Ps. xxvii. 9, 10.
 1s. xxxiii. 15. Ez. xxii. 12. Acts xx. 33. 1 Tim. iii. 3. vi. 9—11. 2 Pet. ii. 14, 15.
 s Num. x. 4. Deut. i. 15. Josh. xxii. 14. 1 Sam. viii. 12.

17 And Moses's father-in-law said unto him; The thing that thou doest is not good.
 18 *Thou wilt surely *wear away, both thou and this people that is with thee: for this thing is too heavy for thee; -^f thou art not able to perform it thyself alone.
 19 ^gHearken now unto my voice: I will give thee counsel, and ^hGod shall be with thee. ^lBe thou for the people to God-ward, that thou mayest bring the causes unto God:
 20 And thou shalt ^kteach them ordinances and laws, and shalt shew them ^lthe way wherein they must walk, and the ^mwork that they must do.
 21 Moreover, ⁿthou shalt provide out of all the people, ^oable men, ^psuch as fear God, ^qmen of truth, ^rhating covetousness: and place such over them, to be ^srulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens.
 22 And let them judge the people at all seasons; and it shall be, that every ^tgreat matter they shall bring unto thee, but every small matter they shall judge; so shall it be easier for thyself, and ^uthey shall bear the burden with thee.

 23 If thou shalt do this thing, and ^vGod command thee so, then thou shalt be able to endure, ^wand all this people shall also go to their place in peace.
 24 So ^xMoses hearkened to the voice of his father-in-law, and did all that he had said.
 25 And Moses ^ychose able men out of all Israel, and made them heads over the people, rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens.
 26 And they judged the people ^zat all seasons: ^athe hard causes they brought unto Moses, but every small matter they judged themselves.
 27 And Moses ^blet his father-in-law depart: and he went his way into his own land.

“statutes and laws.”—The people were generally ignorant, and, we may well conclude, contentious, as well as numerous; Moses was very accessible and meek; and their suits were managed without expense to them: and therefore they would doubtless furnish him with abundance of employment:
 V. 17—23. The earnestness of mind, with which Moses engaged in this important work, had caused him to overlook the consequences of such incessant application, which must have soon worn him down, and have eventually proved injurious to the people also; and it did not please the Lord to instruct him in this point of discretion immediately, but by the counsel of a wise and pious man, and a descendant of Abraham, though not an Israelite.—When Jethro therefore observed his method of procedure, he ventured to object to it, and to give him advice which he trusted God would approve and prosper.—Let him reserve himself for such causes as were more difficult; or such as more immediately referred to the ordinances and commandments of God, as far as then made known to him; and concerning which he would, by divine inspiration, receive more complete instruction that he might teach the people: and let him select proper persons for ability, piety, integrity, and disinterestedness, in due subordination to each other; who might judge and decide all those causes, to which they were competent, and only refer those to Moses which they knew not how to determine. (Marg. Ref. n—s.) But, in giving this wise counsel, Jethro intimated, that Moses should refer the matter to God, and only follow it in case he commanded him.
 V. 24—26. (Notes, Deut. i. 11—18.) It is probable, that Moses consulted the Lord on this subject; and, by his appointment, carried Jethro's counsel into effect, with the concurrence of the people. (Note, Acts vi. 2—6.) The magistrates, thus constituted over thousands, hundreds, fifties, and tens, were distinct persons from the seventy elders chosen on another occasion, and far more numerous. (Note, Num. xi. 16.) Probably, this arrangement was permanent in Israel, at least as far as the rulers over thousands. (Judg. vi. 15. marg. Mic. v. 2.)

 V. 27. It is evident, that after Jethro had given this counsel to Moses, and had continued some time longer with him, he returned home; where no doubt he did what he could to promote true religion, and probably with considerable success. (Notes, Num. x. 29—32.)
 PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.
 V. 1—12.
 The report of the Lord's power and goodness, shewn in behalf of Israel, having reached distant places, confirmed the faith, and excited the joy and gratitude, of those who were not personally interested in these peculiar benefits: and the records of the same events handed down to these distant ages, should produce the same effects upon our minds; that we too may be established in the faith, and stirred up to trust and praise the Lord for his mercies to Israel.—Husbands and wives may, on some occasions, be obliged to separate for a time; but the sooner they meet again, and the more they live together, the better: and though it may be improper for the female sex to share the dangers and hardships of extraordinary undertakings; yet the wife should participate the ordinary cares, and every

CHAP. XIX.

Israel arrives at mount Sinai, and encamps there, 1, 2. Moses hears the message of God, and delivers it to the people; they engage to obey, and he reports it to the Lord, 3—8 Preparations are made, regulations prescribed, and the time set, for the giving of the law, 9—15. The tremendous introduction to that solemn transaction, 16—25.

xii. 2, 6. Lev. xxxiii. 16—18.

IN ^athe third month, when the children of Israel were gone forth out of comfort and honour, of the husband. Nor should children be needlessly deprived of the great benefit, which they may derive from the instruction and example of pious and wise parents: and when the people witness how well they, who are entrusted with the administration of publick affairs, and take care of the church of God, regulate their own families, the example will be peculiarly useful.—When we record our trials, we should be sure to record our mercies also: “persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed;” exiles, but protected by the God of our fathers.—It is very becoming, when persons, employed in the most important publick services, pay a proper attention to the duties and regards of private life; and when they, who are highly honoured of God, are very humble and affable, and shew all respect to superior relations, and gratitude to benefactors.—Our meeting, from time to time, with our friends on earth will be very comfortable and useful, if we converse together concerning the loving kindness and wonderful works of God; if we unite in praise and thanksgiving; and if, by sobriety, love, gratitude, and the fear of God, we turn every festive interview into a religious ordinance, “a sacrifice acceptable, well-pleasing to the “Lord.” What then will our final meeting in heaven be, where the love, and joy, and praise will be complete, uninterrupted, and eternal!

V. 13—27.

Our affectionate attention to relatives and friends must not induce us to neglect our proper business; any more than the ingratitude, which we experience, should render us weary of doing good. The most exalted stations, if properly filled, have the heaviest work connected with them: for such is human nature, that it is not only an arduous undertaking to restrain men from ungodliness, but very difficult to keep them from devouring one another: and they, who would administer justice, keep the peace, and repress violence and fraud, will have enough to engross their thoughts, to burden their spirits, and to occupy their time. Yet, in “doing with our might whatever our hand findeth “to do,” a prudent regard to our health is not only allowable, but a duty, which it is not good to neglect, however well we may be employed: and “wisdom is profitable to direct” men in high stations, what they must do themselves, and what they may do by others. The Lord hath also divided his gifts severally to different men; and an impartial observer, though of inferior endowments, may sometimes suggest a counsel, which the wisest may very profitably attend to: yea, his wisdom will dispose him to attend to it; for “give instruction to a wise man, and “he will be yet wiser; but fools despise wisdom and in-the land of Egypt, the same day ^bcame they into the wilderness of Sinai. b xvi. 1. Num. xxxiii. 15

2 For they were departed from ^cRephidim, and were come to the desert of Sinai, and had pitched in the wilderness; and there Israel ^dcamped before the mount. c xvii. 1. d xviii. 5. Acts vii. 24. 25. Ga. iv. 24.

3 And Moses ^ewent up unto God, and the Lord ^fcalled unto him out of the mountain, saying, Thus shalt thou e xx. 21. xxiv. 15. 18. xxiv. 2. Deut. v. 5. 31. f iii. 4.

struction.” Yet we must not follow the wisest counsel, until we have, by attention to the Scriptures, and by prayer, consulted the Lord also; who often counsels us by the advice of our pious friends, that we may love and be united to them, as well as dependent on him, and thankful to him.—Magistracy, as well as the ministry of the Gospel, is an ordinance of God: they therefore, who are employed even in the most subordinate offices of government, should be chosen persons, “able men,” of clear heads and sound judgments; and such as “fear God,” and from a principle of genuine piety, are steadily “men of truth,” of integrity, and fidelity; and have learned to “hate covetousness,” that they “may shake their hands from holding of bribes,” and administer justice impartially. What then ought law-givers, supreme magistrates, and the ministers of religion to be! Happy indeed are the people, that are blessed with such rulers and teachers; “yea, blessed “are the people who have the Lord for their God.”

NOTES.

CHAP. XIX. V. 1. In the third month.] Or, “on the “third new moon.” The Israelites left Egypt on the fifteenth day of the first month, and it is supposed that they arrived at Sinai on the first day of the third month; and, computing by the space of time between one new moon and another, which is somewhat more than twenty-nine days and a half, this will appear to have been on the forty-sixth day after their departure. Probably, on the next day Moses went up to the mount, and three days afterwards the law was delivered; that is, on the fiftieth day, on which the feast of Pentecost was held, as it is supposed, in commemoration of this event.

V. 2. Rephidim could not be far from Horeb, or from some parts of the mountain so called; because when Israel was encamped at Rephidim, Moses, attended by the elders, and probably followed by numbers of the people, smote a rock in Horeb, which poured forth waters for them and their cattle. But the assault of the Amalekites might cause delay; and so they continued encamped at Rephidim, for some time after the rock was smitten, before they marched to that part of the mountain, generally called Sinai, from whence the law was delivered. (Notes, xvii.)

V. 3. Moses went up to mount Sinai, doubtless by the Lord’s command, who “had called to him out of the “mountain” by an audible voice, requiring him to come up, in order to receive his message to the people. They were now to be incorporated, as a church and nation, under the government of God, and in covenant with him; having hitherto been, first a single family, and then a multitude of slaves.

THE APPROACH OF THE ISRAELITES TO MOUNT SINAI

EXODUS XIX. 1, 2.

g vii—xiv. Deut. say to the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel;
 i. 9. 33—36. xxix 2. Is. lxiii. 9
 h Deut. xxxii. 11, 12, Rev. xii. 14.
 i xxiii 22. xxiv. 7. Deut. xi. 27. xxviii. 1. Josh. xxiv. 24. 1 Sam. xv. 22. Is. i. 19. Jer. vii. 23. xi. 4—7. Heb. xi. 8.
 k Deut. v. 2. Ps. xxv. 10. civ. 17. 18. Is. lvi. 4. Jer. xxxi. 31—33.

4 Ye have ^e seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how ^h I bare you on eagles' wings, and brought you unto myself.
 5 Now therefore ^l if ye will obey my voice indeed, and ^k keep my covenant, then ye shall be ^l a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for ^m all the earth is mine.

 6 And ye shall be unto me ⁿ a kingdom of priests, ^o and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel.
 7 And Moses came and called for ^o

Deut. iv. 20. vii. 6. xiv. 2. xxvi. 18. xxxii. 9. Jer. cxcv. 4. Jer. x. 16. Mal. iii. 17. Tit. ii. 14.
 m ix. 29. Deut. x. 14. Job xli. 11. Ps. xxiv. 1. i. 12. Dan. iv. 34. 35. 1 Cor. x. 26, 28.
 n Is. lxi. 6. Rom. xii. 1. 1 Pet. ii. 5. 9. Rev. i. 6. v. 10. xx. 6.
 o Lev. xi. 44, 45. xix. 2. xx. 26. 1 Pet. i. 15, 16.

V. 4. On eagles' wings.] As the eagle carries her young upon her wings, out of the reach of those who would attempt their destruction; so the Lord had rescued the Israelites from Egypt, that they might be his people, dwelling under his protection, and devoted to his worship and service. (Note, Deut. xxxii. 11, 12.)

V. 5. Covenant.] The national covenant with Israel was here meant; the charter upon which they were incorporated, as a people, under the government of JEHOVAH. It was an engagement of God, to give Israel possession of Canaan, and to protect them in it; to render the land fruitful, and the nation victorious and prosperous, and to perpetuate his oracles and ordinances among them; so long as they did not, as a people, reject his authority, apostatize to idolatry, and tolerate open wickedness. These things constituted a forfeiture of the covenant, as their national rejection of Christ did afterwards.—True believers among them were personally dealt with according to the covenant of mercy and grace, even as true Christians now are; and unbelievers were under the covenant of works, and liable to condemnation by it, as at present: yet the national covenant was not strictly either the one or the other, but had something in it of the nature of each. It did not refer to the final salvation of individuals; nor was it broken by the disobedience, or even idolatry, of any number of them, provided this was not sanctioned or tolerated by public authority. It indeed, in many respects, prefigured the dealings of God with his people, under the Christian dispensation; in which the new covenant of grace and mercy, made with all true believers, is more clearly exhibited, than under any of the preceding dispensations; yet it "had not the very image," but only "a shadow of good things to come." When therefore, the nation had broken this covenant; the Lord declared that he would make "a new covenant with the house of Israel, . . . putting his law," not only in their hands, but "in their inward parts;" and "writing it," not upon tables of stone, "but in their hearts; forgiving their iniquity, and remembering their sins no more." (Jer. xxxi. 32—34. Heb. viii. 7—12. x. 16, 17.)—In the scriptures referred to, the covenant spoken of, "as ready to vanish away," is evidently not the covenant of works, but the national covenant with Israel, which the Israelites had vacated by their sins.—Unless we carefully attend to this distinction, we shall be liable to fall into perpetual mistakes in reading the Old Testament. Hardly any thing can be more absurd, than to suppose, that the whole nation of the Jews was under the covenant of works, which contains nothing about repentance, faith in a Mediator, forgiveness of sins, or grace: yet we often meet with language in Christian authors, which conveys this idea. And it is perhaps more common to hear the whole nation of Israel spoken of, as if they all bare the character, and possessed the privileges, of true believers, actually interested in the covenant of grace; and conclusions are continually drawn from such premises, as if undeniable!—But in fact, the Israelites were under a dispensation of mercy, and had outward privileges and great advantages in various ways for salvation; yet, like professing Christians, the most of them rested in these and looked no further. "For they are not all Israel, which are of Israel." The outward covenant was made with the nation, entitling them to outward advantages, upon the condition of outward national obedience: and the covenant of grace was ratified personally with true believers, and sealed and secured spiritual blessings to them, by producing a holy disposition of heart, and spiritual obedience to the divine law.—In case Israel kept the covenant, the Lord promised, that they should be to him "a peculiar treasure," which is safely reposed because highly valued. The whole earth being the Lord's, he might have chosen any other people instead of Israel: and this implied, that as his choice of them was gratuitous, so, if they rejected his covenant, he would reject them, and communicate their privileges to others; as indeed he hath done, since the introduction of the Christian dispensation.

A peculiar treasure.] תְּשׁוּבָה. Deut. vii. 6. xiv. 2. xxvi. 18. 1 Chron. xxix. 3. Mal. iii. 17.—The LXX render it λαοῦ περιωριστος, "a peculiar people." See Tit. ii. 14. Gr.

V. 6. Israel was formed into "a kingdom of priests," an honourable, and sacred kingdom, under JEHOVAH himself as their King, who manifested his special presence among them, from above the Mercy-seat. They were also distinguished from other kingdoms, by laws and statutes immediately given them from God, and bearing the stamp of his holiness. He, in an especial manner, was their Protector against every foe; and they were his professed worshippers, according to the oracles and ordinances which he gave them. Thus they were a "kingdom of priests," and "a holy nation," separated from other people, consecrated to God, permitted to approach him, to offer sacrifices and supplications, and possessing a sacred character among the nations of the earth. Israel had these outward distinctions; but the nation was only a type of all true Christians, in their spiritual privileges and real character, in the sight of God, and before the world. (Notes, 1 Pet. ii. 9, 10. Rev. i. 4—6. v. 8—10.)

V. 7—9. "The elders of the people" seem to have been the principal persons, or seniors, in each tribe and family, who in some sense represented the rest: and Moses, having assembled them, plainly stated before them the terms of the covenant, which God was about to make with the nation, that they might propose them to the people at large; and these unanimously and at once acceded to them, probably without due consideration and with too

^p See on iii. 16.
^q iv. 29, 50 1 Cor.
xv. 1.

^p the elders of the people, ^q and laid before their faces all these words which the LORD commanded him.

^r xx. 19. xxiv. 8.
7. Deut. iv. 17.
28. xxvi. 17—19.
Josh. xxvii. 24.
Neh. x. 29.

8 And all the people answered together, and said, All that the LORD hath spoken, we will do. And Moses returned the words of the people unto the LORD.

^s 16. xx. 21. xxiv. 15. 16. Deut. iv. 11. 1 Kings viii. 12. 2 Chr. vi. 1. Ps. cxviii. 11, 12. xxvii. 2. 1s. xix. 1. Matt. xvii. 5. Mark ix. 7. Luke ix. 34, 35. Rev. i. 7.

9 And the LORD said unto Moses, Lo, I come unto thee in a thick cloud, that the people may hear when I speak with thee, and believe thee for ever. And Moses told the words of the people unto the LORD.

^t Deut. iv. 36.
John xii. 29, 30.
^u xv. 21. 2 Chr. xx. 20. 1s. vii. 9. Luke x. 10.

10 And the LORD said unto Moses, Go unto the people and sanctify them to-day and to-morrow, and let them wash their clothes.

^v 14. Gen. xxxv. 2. Lev. xi. 25. xv. 5. Num. viii. 7. 21. xxxi. 24. Zech. iii. 3, 4. Heb. x. 22. Rev. vii. 14.

11 And be ready against the third day: for the third day the LORD will come down in the sight of all the people upon mount Sinai.

^w 18. 20. iii. 8. xxxiv. 5. Num. xii. 17. Deut. xxviii. 2. Ps. cxlv. 5. cxiv. 1, 2. Mat. iii. 3—6. John iii. 13. vi. 38. 21. 23. Josh. iii. 4.

12 And thou shalt set bounds unto the people round about, saying, Take heed to yourselves, that ye go not up into the mount, or touch the border of it: whosoever toucheth the mount, shall be surely put to death.

13 There shall not an hand touch it, but he shall surely be stoned or shot through; whether it be beast or man, it shall not live: when the trumpet soundeth long, they shall come up to the mount.

^a xxi. 28, 29. Lev. xx. 15, 16.
^e 1 Cor. xv. 52.
^f 1 Thes. iv. 16.
^g Or, correct.

14 And Moses went down from the mount unto the people, and sanctified the people, and they washed their clothes.

^f See on 10

15 And he said unto the people, Be ready against the third day; come not at your wives.

^g Am. iv. 12. Mat. iii. 2. Matt. iii. 10—12. xxiv. 44. 2 Pet. iii. 11, 12. Zech. vi. 3. xii. 12—14. 1 Cor. vii. 5.

16 ¶ And it came to pass on the third day in the morning, that there were thunders and lightnings, and a thick cloud upon the mount, and the voice of the trumpet exceeding loud; so that all the people that was in the camp trembled.

^h ix. 23, 29, xx. 18. 1 Sam. xii. 17, 18. Job xxxvii. 1—5. xxxviii. 25. Ps. cxviii. 11—14. xxix. 3—11. l. 3. lxxvii. 18. xcvi. 4. Heb. xii. 19. 19. Rev. iv. 5. viii. 5. xii. 19. See on 9.—x. 34. 2 Chr. v. 14.

17 And Moses brought forth the people out of the camp to meet with God, and they stood at the nether part of the mount.

ⁱ 1 Sam. xxi. 4, 5. Zech. vi. 3. xii. 12—14. 1 Cor. vii. 5.

18 And mount Sinai was altogether on a smoke, because the LORD descended upon it in fire: and the smoke thereof ascended as the smoke

^m Rev. i. 10. iv. 1. n Jer. v. 22. Heb. xii. 21.
^o Deut. iv. 10. v. 5. p xx. 18. Deut. iv. 11, 12. v. 22. xxviii. 2. Judg. v. 5. Ps. lxxvii. 7. 8. civ. 32. cxliv. 5.—See on 13.—1s. vi. 4. Hab. iii. 3. Rev. xv. 8.

much confidence.— Upon the report made to God of the people's consent, he proceeds... to declare the laws, by which they should be governed, (xx—xxiii;) and then in the twenty-fourth chapter these laws pass into a covenant between God and them.' Bp. Patrick. In order that this might be rendered peculiarly solemn and affecting, the Lord declared that he would "come in a thick cloud," much denser than that from which his glory had before been manifested, and indicating a tremendous tempest; for the Scriptures referred to in the margin shew, that most dreadful lightnings and fire continually burst from the cloud in the sight of the people. (Marg. Ref. s.) This was intended, among other reasons, to convince them, that the Lord spake by Moses, and to induce them to believe his testimony, and ever after willingly to receive the commands of God from his servant, rather than behold such a sight any more.—The thick cloud also represented the comparative darkness of that dispensation: and when Christ was transfigured, the voice came out of a bright cloud, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleased, hear ye him." (Note, Matt. xvii. 5—8.)

V. 10—15. Moses was ordered to "sanctify the people;" that is, he was to instruct them in what manner they should sanctify themselves, and to enforce the observance of his directions. It is probable, that the two days which preceded the giving of the law, and the day on which it was given, were observed in some respect as a season of solemn fasting and prayer.—The washing of the clothes by the people, and the other external observances, (similar to what we meet with in the Scriptures referred to in the margin,) represented the inward purification of the heart by the sanctification of the Holy Spirit, when sin is repented of and renounced, sinful desires are mortified, and sinful thoughts are excluded with abhorrence; and when attention to the great concerns of religion renders men indifferent even about lawful satisfactions. All this was peculiarly proper, now that the people were about to be admitted into covenant, as a holy nation with a holy God; who also would display his glory among them, in the most evident and awful manner. The other regulations, and all the terrific solemnities of this transaction, were calculated to impress the minds of the people with a deep sense of the divine majesty and purity; to convince them of their own guilt and unholiness; and to shew them, that they could not stand in judgment before God by their own obedience to that law, which was about to be delivered.

V. 16—20. It is intimated, in several parts of Scripture, that these tremendous appearances and voices were effected by the ministration of angels, as attending on this sublime display of the glory of JEHOVAH. (Acts vii. 53. Gal. iii. 19. Heb. ii. 2.)—When the signal had been given; by the long and loud sound of a trumpet, Moses led the congregation, who trembled at what they saw and heard, to the foot of the mount; where they took their station, and waited, doubtless in great trepidation, to hear the Lord himself speak to them. But while they stood there, the appearances became more and more dreadful; the mountain itself trembled exceedingly, and every blast of the

MOUNT SINAI IN THE DISTANCE.

NUMBERS 8. 13.

SUMMIT OF MOUNT SINAI.

Exod. xix. 20; xxxiv. 2.

STEPS CUT IN THE ROCK, AND LEADING UP MOUNT HOREB.

of a furnace, and the whole mount quaked greatly.

19 And when the voice of the trumpet sounded long, and waxed louder and louder, Moses spake, and God answered him by a voice.

20 And the LORD came down upon mount Sinai, on the top of the mount: and the LORD called Moses up to the top of the mount, and Moses went up.

21 And the LORD said unto Moses, Go down, charge the people, lest they break through unto the LORD to gaze, and many of them perish.

22 And let the priests also, which come near to the LORD, sanctify themselves, lest the LORD break forth upon them.

23 And Moses said unto the LORD, The people cannot come up to mount Sinai: for thou chargedst us, saying, Set bounds about the mount, and sanctify it.

24 And the LORD said unto him, Away, get thee down, and thou shalt come up, thou, and Aaron with thee: but let not the priests and the people break through to come up unto the LORD, lest he break forth upon them.

25 So Moses went down unto the people, and spake unto them.

y See on 11.—Neh. ix. 13.

z 3. xxiv. 12, 13. 18. xxxiv. 2. 4. Deut. ix. 9.

* Heb. contest. 12, 13. a iii. 3, 5. 1 Sam. vi. 19. Ec. v. 1. Heb. xii. 28, 29.

b xxiv. 5. Lev. x. 1—3, 14, iii. 11. c See on 5. 14, 15.

d 2 Sam. v. 6, 8. 1 Chr. xiii. 9—11. xv. 13. 2 Chr. xxx. 3. 5. 18. 19. Acts 9. 5, 10. i Cor. xi. 30—32.

e 12. Josh. iii. 4, 5.

f See on 20.

g See on 12. 21.—Matt. xi. 12. Luke xiii. 24. xvi. 16. John i. 17. Heb. iv. 16. x. 19—22. xii. 13—25. 29.

h See on d. 22.—Rom. iv. 15. 2 Cor. iii. 7—9. Gal. iii. 10, 11. 19—22. i 24.

trumpet which continued sounding; was more terrible than those which had preceded; as announcing the presence of the Lord, and demanding an awful attention to his words.—It was at this crisis, no doubt, that Moses himself said, “I exceedingly fear and quake:” (Note, Heb. xii. 18—21:) for “he spake, and the LORD answered him by a voice,” encouraging him not to fear, and calling him to come up into the mount.

Voice of the trumpet. (16) A voice, or sound, resembling that of a trumpet, made, as we must suppose, by some of the attendant angels. (1 Cor. xv. 52: 1 Thes. iv. 16. Heb. xii. 19. Rev. i. 10. iv. 1.)

V. 21—25. It might have been supposed, that the terror of this prospect would have checked all presumptuous curiosity: but it is continually demonstrated by undeniable facts, that the hard heart of sinners can trifle with the most terrible denunciations and judgments of an angry God; nay, convert them into diversion and amusement, or make them the subject of curious speculations:—It is evident that Moses went up into the mount, amidst all the tremendous appearances, which at first dismayed him; and the Lord ordered him to “go down, and charge the people.” Some were therefore disposed to break through, while others were appalled with terror; and Moses must go and warn them, that if they did, God would certainly punish their presumptuous intrusion with immediate death.—It is much controverted among learned men, who the priests were, “that came near to the LORD:” but probably they were some of the chief persons in the several families, who generally took the lead in every act of religious worship, and perhaps had sometimes offered sacrifices. Presuming on this distinction, they were not suitably impressed by the solemn scene, and they had in some degree neglected the orders to sanctify themselves, in preparation for it: they were therefore warned to act with greater reverence of God. Moses, indeed, thought there was no danger that the people should attempt to break through; but he was mistaken, and was sent down to take proper precautions against such an interruption of the awful solemnity. He was also directed to bring Aaron up along with him; doubtless in order that the people might learn to honour their future high priest, by seeing him thus distinguished.—If Moses and Aaron went up into the mount directly, before the law was given, as it seems they did; (for Aaron did not accompany Moses afterwards;) they soon descended again, as it appears in the next chapter. Every circumstance and expression, in this transaction, were suited to evince, that the law now about to be given, though “holy, just, and good,” could speak nothing but terror and destruction to transgressors; and to fill the heart of every sinner with horror, dismay, and desperation. In suberviency to the Covenant of grace, its uses are manifold, and of vast importance, as will presently be shewn. But it is extremely difficult to drive men from the absurd notion, that a sinner may and ought to seek justification before God by his imperfect, scanty, and external obedience. To counteract that propensity in fallen human nature, no doubt this tremendous scene was exhibited; as well as to teach the Israelites, that even in respect of their national covenant, though their obedience was required, yet the blessings were not merited by it, but freely given by a gracious God, in a way becoming his own holiness.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—15.

The blessedness of the Lord’s people originates from his most free and plenteous mercy; yet, unless we yield ourselves to his service, and willingly walk in his commandments, we can bring no proof that we belong to that happy company.—What admirable and adorable condescension and compassion hath the God of glory shewn to us fallen sinners, in taking any of our apostate race to be unto him “a peculiar treasure!” But let us never forget, that he “purifies” every one of “them to himself, to be “a peculiar people, zealous of good works.” If we have any scriptural reason to conclude that we are of this number, let us recollect, that he who has thus distinguished us is Lord of the whole earth, and might have chosen others and passed us by, had he seen good.—We should also “remember all the way that he hath led us,” in redeeming us from our far worse than Egyptian bondage; and often meditate on the kind and effectual methods by which he accomplished our deliverance, notwithstanding the power of our enemies, yea, notwithstanding our own rebellious and unbelieving opposition to the conduct of his grace. Then shall we perceive, that he “bare us as on

CHAP. XX.

The ten commandments are spoken in an audible voice, by JEHOVAH, to the whole congregation of Israel, 1—17. The people are alarmed, and confer with Moses, 18—20. Moses receives from God an “ eagles’ wings, and hath brought us to himself.” May we prove in all our future conduct, that we are indeed, “ a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, “ a peculiar people; to shew forth the praises of him, who “ hath called us out of darkness into his marvellous light.” May we abound in “ spiritual sacrifices, which are acceptable to God through Jesus Christ,” yield ourselves to his service, and allow of nothing inconsistent with our holy profession and character!—But we are all naturally more disposed to profess and to resolve, than to practise. Let us not then say, that we will do these things; but beg of God to enable us to do them.—The ministers of the Lord are required, fairly and plainly to lay the whole of their message before the people, and in prayer they report before him the reception with which it meets; but they are not answerable for consequences.—The more seriously we prepare for divine ordinances, and the more our minds are abstracted from all earthly objects, the greater benefit shall we receive. But in approaching to God, we must never lose sight of his holiness and greatness, and of our own meanness and pollution.

V. 16—25.

How could we sinners approach the Lord upon the terrible mount Sinai? Could we rush into the midst of the fire, tempests, and earthquakes? or can we stand in judgment before him, according to the tenour of his righteous law? If so tremendous tokens of the divine justice accompanied the promulgation of the law: what will that day be when the earth shall be encircled in flames; and when all who ever dwelt upon it through successive generations, shall be gathered before the tribunal of the Judge, to hear their final and decisive sentence! Happy they, who have discovered their need of a Mediator, have hearkened to the voice of the Saviour, and from him have obtained forgiveness of all their sins, and acceptance with God; who have received the law, disarmed of its curses and deprived of its terrors, from his loving, kind, and gracious hands, and have been taught by his grace to love it, and obey it in sincerity and truth. These, like Moses and Aaron, though at first they tremble at God’s word, and are always humbled before him; yet, through Christ, will grow, as it were, familiar with mount Sinai. Fearless of condemnation, they will meditate on the terror of the sentence of the law, and thence draw arguments to increase their gratitude, and animate their willing services; and they will finally triumph, when the wicked shall be calling in vain to the rocks and mountains, to cover them from the wrath of their offended Judge.—Blessed be God, we are yet in the land of forgiveness, of prayer, of hope; and, in this favoured country, we are all under a dispensation of mercy, and have the oracles and ordinances of God continued to us. We are not come to mount Sinai, to tremble or despair; but to mount Zion, where our God reigns upon a mercysent, and waits to be gracious to every returning sinner.—Let us, however, remember his awful words: “ See that additional prohibition of idolatry, and rules for erecting an altar, 21—26.

AND * God spake all these words, a Deut. iv. 33. 26 v. 22. Acts vii. 38. 53. saying,

“ ye refuse not him that speaketh; for if they escaped not, “ who refused him that spake on earth, how much more “ shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that “ speaketh from heaven?” Let none then rest in outward advantages or distinctions; for “ our God is still a consuming Fire,” and will be sanctified by those who draw nigh to him: and let none indulge a presumptuous curiosity, by attempting to “ intrude into things not seen, “ vainly puffed up by a fleshly mind;” lest the Lord in vengeance break forth upon him. Finally, let us “ all “ fear, lest a promise being left us of entering into his “ rest, any of us should seem to come short of it;” and perish after the manner, in which an immense majority of this vast multitude fell in the wilderness, when the Lord “ sware in his wrath that they should never enter into his “ rest.”

NOTES.

CHAP. XX. V. 1. After the preparations recorded in the former chapter, and the glorious and tremendous display of the special presence of God on mount Sinai, had solemnized the minds of the people, and excited their awful expectations; it may be supposed that the sound of the trumpet ceased, and JEHOVAH himself immediately spake, in a voice loud enough to be distinctly heard by the immense assembled multitude. For while it is evident, that many things, on this extraordinary occasion, were effected by the ministration of angels; and probably some other parts of the law were delivered to Moses by them; (Acts vii. 53. Gal. iii. 19. Heb. ii. 2:) the language, here and elsewhere used, is so express and decided, that it cannot reasonably be doubted that God himself, by his own immediate agency, without the intervention of angels, formed that awful voice by which the following words were delivered, from the midst of the fire, to the congregation of Israel. (Deut. iv. 11, 12. 33. v. 4. 22.)—The words spoken are generally called, ‘The ten commandments;’ and they are justly considered as the grand outlines of the holy law of God; of that law, which is commonly called the moral law, to distinguish it from the other injunctions of the Mosaic dispensation.—As the full and exact knowledge of this law is peculiarly important, in order to our clearly understanding the whole system of revealed religion, I shall introduce the exposition of it, by some observations on its nature, obligations, and uses. It is evident that there is a distinction between moral precepts, and instituted appointments. Some things are in themselves so indifferent, that the same authority which enjoined them, might, without impropriety, have prohibited them; as the use of bread and wine in one religious ordinance, and the use of water in another. But there are laws of a widely different nature: and it is absurd to suppose that God could have forbidden us to love him and one another, or to speak truth and do justice. Indeed, ritual precepts are for the time equally obligatory; except when they come in competition with moral duties,

^b Gen. xvii. 7, 8. ² I am ^b the LORD thy God, which have ^c brought thee out of the land of
 Lev. xxvii. 1, 13. Deut. v. 6, vi. 4. 5. 2Chr. xxviii. 3. Ps. l. 7. lxxxi. 10. Jer. xxxi. 1. 33. Hos. xiii. 4. Rom. iii. 29. x. 12
 Lev. xix. 36. xxiii. 43. c x—xv.

Egypt, ^d out of the house of *bondage. d xiii. 3. Deut. v. 15. vii. 8. xii. 10. xv. 15. xxv. 6—8. * Heb. servants and then the Lord "will have mercy, and not sacrifice." But the ritual injunction is of temporary obligation; it had no existence before its express appointment, and it may be vacated by the same authority; or, having answered the purpose, its obligations may cease of course: while the moral precept is, on the contrary, of immutable and eternal validity. The different circumstances, indeed, in which rational creatures may be placed, occasion a variation arising from those changes of circumstances; as the entrance of sin and misery has rendered patience and forgiveness of injuries, exercises of our love to God and to our neighbour. These, and many other things required of us in our present situation, will cease entirely in heaven; yet the grand principles from which they are deduced would have been the same, had we never sinned, and they will remain the same to all eternity.—Some traces of the moral law are discoverable by our natural reason, and the whole perfectly accords to it. It has its foundation in the nature of God and of man; in the relations men bear to him and to each other; and in the duties which result from those relations: and on this account it is immutable and universally obligatory. Though given, on this particular occasion, to Israel, it demands obedience from all mankind; and the whole world will be judged according to this law, and to the opportunity which they have had of becoming acquainted with it, whether by reason and tradition alone, or by the light of the written word; except the believer who has obtained deliverance from its merited condemnation. The law is also spiritual: that is, it takes cognizance of our spirits, of our most secret thoughts, desires, intentions, and dispositions; and demands a holy regulation of the judgment, will, and affections. It principally requires LOVE, without which the best external obedience is condemned as mere hypocrisy. This is peculiar to the law of God, who alone can search the heart; and no other law ever attempted to enforce the obedience of the heart: but, in common with other laws, it demands perfect, unfailling, uninterrupted, and perpetual obedience; for no law can tolerate the transgression of itself. From the entrance to the close of life, God requires of us exact conformity to every precept: he that "keepeth the whole law, and offendeth in one point, is guilty of all:" (Note, Jam. ii. 8—13:) and the least deviation, whether by omission or commission, excess or defect, is sin; and every sin deserves wrath and needs forgiveness. (1 John iii. 4.)—The ten commandments are a compendium of the holy law, which is commented on in all the preceptive parts of Scripture; and the substance of its requirements is given, still more concisely, in the two great commandments, "Thou shalt love the LORD thy God, with all thine heart, and with all thy mind, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength:" and, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." We are authorized by the example of Christ, to interpret every one of these commands in the strictest, most spiritual, and extensive sense, of which it is capable.—Even repentance, faith in a Mediator, and all evangelical graces and duties, are exercises of this entire love to God, and are required of sinners placed under a dispensation of mercy; though originally the law had no direct connexion with redemption, but lay at the foundation of another covenant. We may therefore wave the controversy concerning the rule of duty, whether this be the ten commandments, or the whole word of God; for the one, properly understood, will be found as broad as the other: seeing we cannot love God with all our hearts, unless we love every discovery which he is pleased to make of his glory; believe every testimony and embrace every promise which he gives; seek his favour in the use of all the means that he appoints; and employ ourselves in diffusing the knowledge of his glorious excellencies and wonderful works, according to our ability and opportunity, and the station which we occupy in society.—The Lord Jesus perfectly fulfilled the extensive requirements of this holy law: yet, in his peculiar circumstances, it actually required all that love for the Father, and for his brethren, and all those expressions of it, which, subsequent to his incarnation that he might be our Mediator, he manifested in his life and death. But no apostle or prophet ever reached, in one single instance, that degree of love and purity which it demands.—The uses of this holy law, in connexion with the gospel of Christ, and in subserviency to the covenant of grace, are many and important. "By the law is the knowledge of sin:" and if it were more fully understood, in the extent and excellency of its spiritual requirements, and the justice of its awful sanctions, sinners would be at once convinced of their guilt and danger; they would learn what they ought always to have been and to have done, and thus discover their real character and situation, of which most men are entirely ignorant; they would become acquainted with their wants, and prepared to understand and value the inestimable blessings of the gospel; and they would perceive their need of regeneration, and of that repentance, that life of faith in the Son of God, and sanctification by the Holy Spirit, which in general are disregarded, nay frequently ridiculed.—Believers may thence learn their obligations to the divine Redeemer: and receiving the law from his hands, as the rule of their grateful obedience and the standard of holiness; daily self-examination according to it serves to keep them humble, dependent on free mercy, diligent in pressing forward to the mark, and watchful against every temptation or suggestion to evil. It also directs them in acquiring an exact judgment and correct spiritual taste, in respect of every part of the Christian temper; and, in many other ways, it promotes their establishment, fruitfulness, and consolation.—Besides these uses, the law served to restrain the Israelites from gross transgression, by its strictness and terrors; and it still in a measure answers the same purpose even to wicked men, and, where known, serves to keep the world in some degree of order. It also discovers the holy character of God, the nature of his government of the world, and the rule and measure of the future judgment, that "day of wrath and perdition of ungodly men."—On the other hand, the bad effects resulting from ignorance or mistakes concerning the holy law of God, are manifold and deplo-

^e xv. 11. Deut. v. 7 vi. 5. 14. Josh. xxiv. 18—24. 2 Kings xvii. 24—25. Ps. xxix. 2. lxxiii. 25. lxxxii. 9. Is. xxvi. 4. xlvi. 10. xlv. 8. xlv. 21. 22. xlv. 9. Jer. xxx. 6. Matt. iv. 10. 1 Cor. vii. 4. 6. Eph. v. 5 Phil. iii. 19. Col. li. 18 1 John v. 20, 21. Rev. xix. 10. xxii. 9.

3 Thou shalt have 'no other gods before me.

able. The dreams of a purgatory, either before or after the day of judgment; the flattering illusions of the merit of human obedience; the palliating excuses that are made for sin; the objections to the sovereignty of divine grace in the gospel, and to God's method of justifying sinners; and all antinomian perversions of those precious truths of revelation, seem principally to arise from this source. Ignorance of the extensive requirements of the divine law supports careless presumption and Pharisaical self-confidence: ignorance of its excellency excites murmurs and objections against the severity of its awful sanction. The same ignorance has led some to frame, in imagination, a new law, which has been substituted in the place of the holy law of God, since by sin man became unable to obey it; and the same ignorance has occasioned innumerable objections to the doctrine, and mistakes about the nature, of regeneration; and indeed it has prevented many real Christians from glorifying God in that manner which they otherwise might have done. In short, were the law of God well understood, the person and office of the Saviour must appear most suitable and precious; and the genuine beauty of Christianity, as reinstating a lost sinner in his Maker's favour, and recovering him to his image, in a way honourable to all the perfections of the Deity, would shine forth with unclouded lustre.

We may consider the giving of the law from mount Sinai, either as a publication to mankind of the law of their reason and nature, as originally written in their hearts, but erased or obscured by sin; or as given to Israel, for the rule and foundation of their national covenant.—For want of adverting to this obvious distinction, it has been incautiously asserted, that the law itself was given only to the redeemed; which sentiment not only supposes the rest of JEHOVAH's universal kingdom without a law, but vacates redemption itself; for "where there is no law, there is no transgression," no condemnation, no occasion for redemption.—On the other hand, it is often asserted, or assumed, that the believer has in no sense any thing to do with the law; nay, it is sometimes even ranked among the enemies, from which Christ came to deliver us! "Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the law." All rational creatures are bound by its authority, and all transgressors are under its condemnation: but since Christ has fulfilled its righteousness and borne its curse, all who hear the Gospel are under a dispensation of mercy, and have forgiveness proposed to them; and all true believers are actually pardoned and justified, and are required, and inwardly disposed, to render a sincere, unreserved, habitual obedience to the law, though not able to obey it perfectly.

V. 2. The great Lawgiver prefaced his injunctions, by proclaiming his own essential glory and perfection. "I am JEHOVAH." As the Source of existence, and consequently of all power, wisdom, justice, truth, and goodness, God is the Standard of excellence and beauty; from whom all created amiableness is an emanation, and of whose glory it is a feeble reflection. To him alone the throne belongs; he alone is qualified to be the Lawgiver and Judge of the universe; and he has the sole and unalienable right to that love and service which his law demands. To this he added, "THY GOD," to express Israel's relations and obligations to him. We are all his rational creatures; and every benefit, which he bestows, binds us more forcibly to love and obedience. But the Israelites were the children of the covenant made with Abraham; they had the external seal of circumcision in their flesh; his glorious presence was among them, and they had just consented to enter into covenant with him: and professed Christians, dedicated to God in the initiatory sacrament of baptism, favoured with the light of revelation, and avowing themselves his worshippers, stand in a similar relation to him.—The recent deliverance also of Israel from Egypt laid the Israelites under additional obligations to obedience, and afterwards rendered their disobedience more inexcusable. This was a type of our redemption from sin and Satan; and though all men ought to obey the law of God, yet none actually yield it any spiritual obedience, except his redeemed people.

4 Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of

V. 3. The commandments are addressed, in the singular number, to each person, because every one is concerned in them on his own account: and each prohibition implies a positive duty.—This first commandment requires a disposition and conduct, suited to the relation in which we stand to JEHOVAH, as our God. He alone is the adequate Object of our love, and able to satisfy our capacity of happiness: all we are and have, is derived from him; and he possesses an unalienable right to prescribe the use which we should make of all his gifts. He has so clear a title to our love, gratitude, and adoration, our reverence, submission, credence, confidence, and obedience, that we cannot withhold them from him, without the most palpable injustice. Considering Who he is, and what he hath done for us; except we love him to the utmost extent of all our natural powers, we do not render him his due: and if we thus loved him, all contrary affections would be excluded, all inferior affections subordinated. Admiring his excellency, desiring and delighting in him and his favour, being grateful for his loving-kindness, and zealous for his glory, with all the energy of our whole souls; it is evident that all our love to other objects would be for his sake, and according to his will; no creature could then rival him in our affections, or prevail with us to neglect his service; and, while we rendered him the tribute of adoring love and praise, we should possess unalloyed felicity in his favour. This is the reasonable state, in which things should be; thus it has always been with holy angels; thus it will be for ever with the redeemed in heaven; and all that deviates from it is SIN, and the effect of apostasy from God.—These reflections may prepare us for understanding the nature and extent of the prohibition, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." Mankind in general, as reasonable creatures, though fallen, have required some object of worship, and some kind of religion; but, disliking the holy attributes and spiritual worship of the true God, they have been led to substitute deities and religious rites more congenial to themselves. Thus, (to the disgrace of any thing, that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth:

the human understanding,) the grossest idolatry has been almost universal; while a more refined and plausible kind of idolatry has often supplanted it, in the few places where something more rational has prevailed; and that proud ambitious Spirit, who is the enemy of God and man, has been gratified in the success of his presumptuous attempts to become, by these means, "the god of this world." This worship of creatures, whether actually existing, or only supposed to exist, is the principal violation of the commandment; as it ascribes to them the glory of those perfections which JEHOVAH incommunicably possesses, and seeks those blessings from them which he alone can confer. The immensely varied idolatries of the Gentiles, which the Israelites were constantly disposed to imitate, are always in Scripture spoken of with decided abhorrence, as flagrant transgressions of the letter of this command: and it is impossible for those professed Christians, who render religious worship to saints and angels, to shew that their practice is not so too, or to disprove the charge of ascribing the glory of the divine perfections to mere creatures.—All pretences to witchcraft likewise, or to magick, fortune-telling, charms, astrology, or enchantments, deeply partake of the same guilt; as in these ways men expect that information or assistance from other beings, which God alone can afford.—But this spiritual precept reaches much further. To love, desire, delight in, or expect good from, any forbidden indulgence, even in the smallest degree, is evidently a violation of it; and to suffer the most valuable and excellent creature to rival God in our affections, must be a proportionable contempt of him. By atheism and irreligion, men set up themselves as gods, aspire at independence, reject subordination, and refuse to render homage, worship, love, or praise, to any superior or benefactor; as if they had created themselves, and were sufficient for their own happiness! The proud man idolizes himself, offers incense to his own deity, and expects others to do the same: therefore "God resists him" as his rival. The ambitious pay homage to the opinions of men, and seek happiness in their applause, or in such distinctions as they can bestow. The revengeful usurp the throne of God, and invade the prerogative of him "to whom vengeance belongeth." The covetous man deifies his wealth; the sensualist, his vile appetites; and the rapturous lover, his mistress: he lives on her smiles, his heaven is placed in her favour, and her frown would make him the most miserable of creatures. Nay, the doating husband, and the fond parent, may deify the objects of their affections: for though they ought to love them tenderly; yet this affection, and the manner in which it is exercised, should be absolutely subordinated to the will and glory of God.

But no comment can equal the extent of this command. Whatever does not consist with the most perfect love, gratitude, reverence, submission, and devotedness to God, is a transgression of it; and it requires us to love the Lord and all his creatures, according to their real worthiness; not more nor less, except as finite beings cannot love infinite excellence in an adequate manner. Obedience to this precept would perfectly enthrone the Lord in our judgment and affections: and the whole of our love being thus given to him, we should love all others for his sake, and according to the measure which he had enjoined: while the violation of it destroys this regular subordination, and gives the creature the throne in our heart. Well therefore may it stand foremost in the Decalogue; for our obedience in all other things depends upon it. Other transgressions injure the subject, and affront the Sovereign; but the violation of this law is high treason against the majesty of heaven, and is therefore called "an abomination." At the same time it is entirely destructive to the transgressor, who "forsakes the Fountain of living waters, to hew out broken cisterns which can hold no water." Its reasonableness and excellence, therefore, are equal to its strictness and spirituality; and without conformity to it in its fullest extent, the glory of God and the felicity of rational creatures cannot be secured.—The expression, "before me," implied, that Israel might be considered as immediately in the presence of God, who in an especial manner dwelt among them; that idolatry would daringly insult him to his face; and that it could not be kept so secret, but he would detect and punish it.

V. 4. The second commandment requires us to render to the LORD our God a worship and service, suited to his perfections, and honourable to his name. His incomprehensible nature cannot be represented by any similitude.—The most exquisite painting or sculpture can only give an external resemblance of a man: even animal life with its several functions cannot be thus exhibited, much less can a likeness be made of the soul and its operations. How dishonourable then must be every attempt to represent the infinite God, "by silver or gold, graven by art and man's device!" The general disposition of mankind, to form images of the Deity, proves that low apprehensions of him are congenial to our fallen nature; and the practice has exceedingly increased the grossness of men's conceptions concerning him. The more stupid of the heathen alone worshipped the picture or image itself; others used it as a visible representation of the invisible Numen, or Deity: and all that ingenious papists have urged, in behalf of their images, is equally applicable to Israel's worship of the golden calves, or to that rendered by the Ephesians to "the image of Diana which fell down from Jupiter."—A material image of the Deity is likewise an affront to the Person of Christ, the only adequate "Image of the invisible God:" and the worship of saints and angels, as mediators and present deities, by images, in every respect robs him of his mediatorial glory.—The commandment does not prohibit the making of images and pictures, for other purposes, as some have ignorantly supposed: for God commanded several of these to be made even in the construction of the tabernacle: but the making of them, in order to men's bowing down before them, and worshipping them; and in this case, both the maker and the worshipper of the image are involved in the guilt. The prohibition includes every kind of creature, because all are utterly unfit to represent the infinite Creator: and there are some devices common among us, as emblematick xxiii. 24. Lev. 5 Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them: for I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me :

 xxvi. 1. Josh. xxxii. 7. 16. Judg. ii. 19. 2 Kings xvii. 35. 41. 2 Chr. xxxv. 14. Matt. iv. 9. xxiii. 14. Deut. iv. 24. vi. 15. xxxii. 21. Josh. xxiv. 19. Ps. lxxviii. 58. Prov. vi. 34. 35. Ez. viii. 3. Neh. i. 2. 1 Cor. x. 22. 1 xxxiv. 7. Lev. xx. 5. xxvi. 29. 30. 40. Num. xiv. 18. 33. 1 Sam. xv. 2. 3. 2 Sam. xxi. 1. 6. 1 Kings xxi. 29. 2 Kings xxiii. 26. Job v. 4. xxi. 19. Ps. lxxxix. 8. cix. 14. Is. xiv. 20. 21. Jer. ii. 9. xxxii. 18. Matt. xxiii. 34-39. j Deut. vii. 10. xxxii. 41. Ps. lxxxii. 15. Prov. viii. 36. John vii. 7. xv. 18. 23. 24. Rom. i. 30. vii. 7. Jam. iv. 4.

6 And shewing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments.
 7 Thou shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain: for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.
 Deut. iv. 37. v. 29. vii. 9. Jer xxxii. 39. 40. Acts ii. 39. Rom. xi. 26. 29. 1 John xiv. 15. 21. 1 John iv. 19. v. 3. 2 John 6. m Lev. xix. 12. xxiv. 11-16. Deut. v. 11. vi. 13. xxiii. 21-23. Ps. xv. 4. l. 14-16. Prov. xxx. 8. 9. Ec. v. 4-6. Jer. iv. 2. Matt. v. 33-37. xxiii. 16-22. xxvi. 63. 64. 2 Cor. i. 23. xi. 31. Heb. vi. 16. 17. Jam. v. 12. n Lev. xxiv. 16. 23. Deut. xxiii. 21-23. Josh. ii. 12. 17. ix. 20. 2 Sam. xxi. 1. 2. 1 Kings ii. 9. Ez. xvii. 13-19. Zech. v. 3. 4.

of the Trinity, which do not accord to the strictness of this injunction.—But the spiritual import of the commandment reaches much further. Superstition of every kind is an evident violation of its spirit and intent: and so are all human appointments in religious worship, when at all relied on as acceptable with God. The use of things indifferent in religion, without command from God, leads men's minds to gross conceptions of him; as if he delighted in that outward splendour, or those external forms, which excite in them lively but false affections, that are often mistaken for devotion: and it is commonly connected with a false dependence; it substitutes something else in the place of the appointments of God; and it tends to the usurpation of authority over men's consciences.—But, many circumstances of worship must be regulated by human discretion: every man therefore should judge for himself which regulations tend to these evils, and which do not; and be candid in judging such as differ from him.—Hypocrisy and formality, arising from unworthy apprehensions of God, together with all unscriptural delineations of the divine character, are certainly here prohibited: for men, forsaking the light of revelation, and “not liking to retain God in their knowledge,” frame notions of a deity according to their own opinions of excellence, warped by their predominant vicious inclinations; and then dignify this creature of their fancy with the title of the Supreme Being. But this object of their love and worship, is altogether unlike “the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ;” especially in respect of justice and holiness, being in general deemed so clement that he cannot hate or punish sin.—The Jews of old supposed they worshipped the God of their Fathers, yet they were declared by our Lord neither to have known nor loved him; nay, in “hating the Son, to have hated the Father that sent him:” and it will at last be proved in this case also, that the worshippers of these ideal deities were as real idolaters, as they who adored the work of their own hands. In short, the second commandment requires us to conceive of God, in all respects, as far as we are able, according to the revelation which he has made of himself to us: to realize his glorious presence to our minds, by faith, not by fancy: and to worship him as a Spirit “in spirit and truth;” not with corporeal representations of him before our eyes, or low conceptions of him in our minds; but sincerely, inwardly, with the most fervent affections, and profound reverence of his infinite majesty; in all his appointed ordinances, and in them alone; and with constancy and frequency, as performing a service reasonable in itself, and most pleasant to our own souls, as well as most honourable to his great name.

V. 5. God is so tenacious of his honour, in respect of idolatry, that the least approach to it, especially in the conduct of his professed worshippers, excites his hottest displeasure: even as the jealous husband is exasperated, and roused to seek vengeance, by whatever leads him to suspect his wife of adultery.—If then Israel, or any Israelites, should revolt to idolatry, they would be deemed “haters of God;” as the wife would be supposed to hate her husband, when she preferred any worthless stranger to him.—It is observable, that throughout the Scriptures, the words fury, indignation, jealousy, as ascribed to God, and hatred, abomination, detestable things, and other strong expressions of abhorrence, in respect of man's conduct, are principally used when idolatry is spoken of.—It is evident that children in general are sufferers by the crimes of their parents; but Israel was under a peculiar covenant, which idolatry violated in its primary condition. If then the parents forfeited the covenant-blessings, their posterity must suffer the effects of the forfeiture. As this was intended to restrain them from sin, by means of natural affection, the third and fourth generation only are mentioned; for they could not expect to see more of their descendants, and would be less concerned about their remote posterity: or it may imply, that the Lord being ready to forgive, the effects would cease after that period, unless the children persisted in the sins of their parents.—In every age, whatever brings any family into the visible church and under the means of grace, is a benefit to that family, and often to its remote posterity; and whatever excludes any from the church, is a heavy loss to them.

V. 6. The law, as given to sinners in subservency to the covenant of grace, (as well as to Israel with reference to their national covenant,) makes mention of the mercy of God, though not properly belonging to its own nature; and this with an especial reference to his character; and in order to manifest how deserving he is of that love and service, which according to it he claims as his unalienable right.—This mercy is promised unto thousands; not only unto great multitudes, or to the third or fourth generations, but to successive generations to the end of time. The Lord's dealings with the posterity of Abraham, who believed his word, loved him, and kept his commandments, illustrates this promise.

V. 7. The worshippers of the Lord must have frequent occasion to mention his name; and sometimes it will be requisite for them to call him to witness the truth of their words, and to bind themselves by vows and engagements as in his sight. This third commandment therefore forbids us to “take the name of the LORD our God in vain;” that is, to use it irreverently, or profanely, or in fraud, dissimulation, and hypocrisy. It forbids all rash and unlawful vows, and such as relate to things uncertain or impracticable. But perjury of every kind is the capital transgression of it: for by this men appeal to the omnio xvi. 23—29. xxvi. 13, 14. Gen. ii. 3. Lev. xix. 3. 30. xxiii. 3. xxvi. 2. Deut. v. 12. 13. Is. lvi. 4—6. lviii. 13. Ez. xx. 12.

p xxiii. 12. Luke xiii. 14—16.

8 ° Remember the sabbath-day, to keep it holy.

9 P Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work.

10 But ° the seventh day is the sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, ° thy man-ser-q xxxi. 15. xxxiv. 21. Lev. xxiii. 3. xvi. 27, 28. xxxv. 2, 3. Num. xv. 32—36. Luke xxiii. 56. Lev. xxv. 6, 7. Deut. v. 14, 15.

cient, heart-searching God, for the truth of what they testify or assert, or for their sincerity in what they engage to do; when they do not know the truth of the one or even think that it is false, and are consciously insincere in the other. This is one of the most atrocious and provoking crimes imaginable, though common among us in this land to an inconceivable degree, so that it is little noticed unless accompanied with flagrant injustice! But, alas! it is very closely connected with other instances of disregard to this law, by the unnecessary multiplication of oaths in all judicial transactions and commercial regulations, even on the most frivolous occasions; and by being administered with extreme irreverence, instead of all the solemnity of a religious ordinance, which every thinking person must allow to be reasonable.—All appeals to God in common conversation, with such expressions, as ‘the Lord knows,’ when the matter attested is either not true, or not important, involves a measure of the same guilt.—All cursing and swearing is a most horrid violation of this commandment.—The use of the words, ‘God, Lord, Christ,’ or such like, without necessity, seriousness, and reverence; whether in improper religious discourse, or as expletives, in talking about other matters: every expression that takes the form of an adjuration or imprecation, though the name of God be not used: indeed, all that is more than “yea,” “yea, nay nay,” that is, every thing which, in common conversation, goes beyond a simple affirmation or denial; all jesting with the word of God or sacred things; all irreverence to whatever relates to him; and the use of his tremendous name, in religious worship, in a heedless or hypocritical manner:—all these, I say, are violations of the spirit of this law. It likewise implies a command to remember habitually the infinite majesty, purity, and excellency of God; and to behave towards him, in word and deed, with that awe and reverence of his perfections, which becomes such mean and worthless creatures, in his infinitely glorious presence.

To this law it is added, that JEHOVAH “will not hold the transgressor guiltless.” Men may not discover, or they may neglect to punish, this crime; and the sinner’s conscience may scarcely trouble him about it: but let him know, that God will certainly detect and punish that atrocious affront, which is thus put upon him, often without even the plea of temptation, or expectation of profit or pleasure; unless men can find pleasure in disobeying and defying their Creator! But when it shall at last be said to the daring transgressor, “Wherefore hast thou despised the commandment of the LORD?” his profane trifling will be turned into terror and despair.

V. 8—10. The form of the fourth commandment implies, that it had been previously known to the patriarchs and their descendants, though they were prone to forget it. (Note, Gen. ii. 3.)—The separation of a portion of our time, to the immediate service of God, is doubtless of moral obligation; for his glory, and our good, personal and social, temporal and eternal, are intimately connected with it, and therefore it is inserted in the moral law: but the exact proportion, as well as the particular day, may be considered as of positive institution. Yet one day in seven seems to have been fixed upon, by infinite wisdom, as the most proper, in every age of the world; though the change of the dispensation, after the resurrection of Christ, has occasioned an alteration of the day, and an addition to the topics which call for peculiar commemoration and contemplation, on this season of sacred rest.—It is plain that the words, “Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work,” were merely an allowance, and not an injunction; for the Lord forbid, by other precepts, all labour on some of these days: but they were assigned for the diligent performance of the business which relates to this present life, while the seventh was consecrated to the immediate service of the Lord. The concerns of our souls must indeed be attended to, and God worshipped, every day, that our business may be regulated in subserviency to his will; but on the other days of the week “we should do all our work,” reserving none for the sabbath, except works of charity, piety, and necessity; for these alone consist with the holiness of that sacred day of rest, and are allowable, because “the sabbath was made for man, not man for the sabbath.” All works, therefore, which arise from avarice, distrust, luxury, vanity, and self-indulgence, are entirely prohibited. Our affairs should be previously so arranged, that the sacred duties of the Lord’s day may be interrupted as little as possible. Buying and selling, paying wages, settling accounts, writing letters of business, reading books on ordinary subjects, trifling visits, journeys, excursions, dissipation, or conversation which serves only for amusement, cannot consist with “keeping a day holy to the LORD:” and sloth is a carnal, not a spiritual rest. The sabbath should be a cessation from worldly labour, and a rest in the service of God. Serious self-examination; perusal of the Scriptures; private, social, and public worship; instruction of children and servants; meditation and pious conversation, should occupy our time from morning till evening; except as these duties are suspended by attention to such things, as really conduce to our own good, or that of others. Servants and some others may, however, be under a real necessity of doing things which are not necessary in themselves: though good management might often greatly lessen the evil; and the pious servant will prefer a place of less emolument, where he can have more entire liberty of keeping holy the sabbath-day. Were our love to God and spiritual things as intense as it ought to be, we should deem a day thus spent our great delight; for heaven will be an eternal rest, not essentially differing from it. All our aversion from such strictness arises from “the carnal mind, which is enmity against God:” and the advantages which would accrue from thus hallowing the sabbath, to the morals, health, liberty, and happiness of mankind, are so many and so obvious, that they who doubt its obligation often allow its expediency.—But parents and masters are required, not only themselves to hallow the sabbath, and

xli. 48, 49. xxii. 21. xxiii. 9—12. Gen. xvii. 12. 13. 21. Lev. xix. 33, 34. xxii. 23. Num. xv. 14—16. 26. 29. 30. Deut. xvi. 11. 12. xxiv. 14—22. Neh. x. 31. xxii. 15—2. xxiii. 17. Gen. ii. 2, 3. Ps. xcvi. 4—7. Mark ii. 27, 28. John xx. 19. 26. Acts xx. 7. 1 Cor. xvi. 2. Heb. iv. 2—5. 9—11. Rev. i. 10. Luke xi. 12.

vant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates.

11 For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the sabbath-day, and hallowed it.

x Lev. xxii. 32. Jer. xvii. 20—27. Ez. xx. xlv. 24. Matt. vi. 9.

xxi. 15. 17. xxii. 28. Gen. ix. 22. Lev. xix. 3. 32. xx. 9. Deut. v. 6. xxi. 16—21. xxvii. 16. 1 Kings ii. 19. 2 Kings ii. 12. v. 13. xiii. 14. Prov. i. 8. 9. vi. 20. xv. 5. xix. 26. xx. 20. xxiii. 22—25. xxviii. 24. xxx. 11. 17. Is. iii. 5. Mal. i. 6. Matt. xv. 4—6. xix. 19. Mark vii. 10—12. xii. 17. Luke xiii. 20. Rom. xiii. 7. Eph. v. 21. vi. 1—3. Col. iii. 20. 1 Tim. v. 1, 2. 4. 17. vi. 1, 2. Heb. xiii. 7. 1 Pet. ii. 17. in. 1—7. v. 3, 6. Jude 8. z Deut. iv. 25. 40. vi. 2. xvii. 20. xxv. 15. xxxii. 47. Prov. iii. 16. v. 1. a xxi. 14. 20. 29. xxii. 2, 3. Gen. iv. 8—16. 23. ix. 5, 6. xxvii. 41. 45. xlix. 6. Lev. xxiv. 17. 21. Num. xxxv. 16—21. 31—34. Deut. v. 17. xix. 11—13. xxi. 1—9. 2 Sam. xii. 9, 10. 1 Kings ii. 5, 6. 2 Kings xxi. 16. 2 Chr. xxiv. 22. Ps. x. 8—11. Prov. i. 11. 18. xxviii. 17. Is. i. 15. xxvi. 21. Jer. xxvi. 15. Matt. v. 21, 22. John viii. 44. Acts xxviii. 4. Rom. xiii. 9. Gal. v. 21. 1 Tim. i. 9. Jam. ii. 11. 13. iv. 1, 2. 1 John iii. 12—15. Rev. xvi. 6. xvii. 6. xxi. 8. xxii. 15.

12 Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

13 Thou shalt not kill.

20. xv. 5. xix. 26. xx. 20. xxiii. 22—25. xxviii. 24. xxx. 11. 17. Is. iii. 5. Mal. i. 6. Matt. xv. 4—6. xix. 19. Mark vii. 10—12. xii. 17. Luke xiii. 20. Rom. xiii. 7. Eph. v. 21. vi. 1—3. Col. iii. 20. 1 Tim. v. 1, 2. 4. 17. vi. 1, 2. Heb. xiii. 7. 1 Pet. ii. 17. in. 1—7. v. 3, 6. Jude 8. z Deut. iv. 25. 40. vi. 2. xvii. 20. xxv. 15. xxxii. 47. Prov. iii. 16. v. 1. a xxi. 14. 20. 29. xxii. 2, 3. Gen. iv. 8—16. 23. ix. 5, 6. xxvii. 41. 45. xlix. 6. Lev. xxiv. 17. 21. Num. xxxv. 16—21. 31—34. Deut. v. 17. xix. 11—13. xxi. 1—9. 2 Sam. xii. 9, 10. 1 Kings ii. 5, 6. 2 Kings xxi. 16. 2 Chr. xxiv. 22. Ps. x. 8—11. Prov. i. 11. 18. xxviii. 17. Is. i. 15. xxvi. 21. Jer. xxvi. 15. Matt. v. 21, 22. John viii. 44. Acts xxviii. 4. Rom. xiii. 9. Gal. v. 21. 1 Tim. i. 9. Jam. ii. 11. 13. iv. 1, 2. 1 John iii. 12—15. Rev. xvi. 6. xvii. 6. xxi. 8. xxii. 15.

not to employ their children, servants, or slaves, in any needless work; but they should also with authority require them to keep holy the Lord's day, which is greatly intended for their benefit; and they are responsible to God for it, if those under their care violate this holy rest, by their command, or connivance, or negligence.—The cattle must also be allowed to rest from the hard labour of husbandry, journeys, and all employments connected with trade or pleasure; though doubtless we may employ them too in works of necessity, piety, and charity, and thus they may properly be used for the gentle service of conveying those to places of publick worship, who could not otherwise attend, or perform the duties to which they are called. (Note, 2 Kings iv. 23.) Yet, alas! ostentation and self-indulgence so multiply violations of the Lord's day in this respect, that it is with hesitation that this observation is admitted; and the true Christian would wish to adhere to the letter of the prohibition in all cases, when it did not interfere with its intention.—The stranger likewise, though not of the same religion, was not only to be persuaded and encouraged to hallow the sabbath; but prohibited from externally violating its sacred rest, while he resided among the Israelites: for this was the law of their land, as well as of their religion. (Notes, xxxv. 2, 3. Num. xv. 32—36.) And, though the government of Israel differed from that of other people, yet there seems a great propriety in nations professing Christianity making it a part of their law likewise. But, alas! how often do such laws lose their energy, for want of being sanctioned by the example of the legislators themselves, and by that of those whose office it is to carry them into execution!

V. 11. The sabbath was originally instituted in remembrance of the completion of the work of creation, and in honour of the great Creator; the Israelites had additional reasons assigned them, why they should observe it; and Christians have some of a still more important nature: but all the perfections of the Lord, as displayed in creation, providence, redemption, or in any of his works of power and love to us or to his church, should be remembered and adored by us, on this solemn and joyful day.

This compendious exposition of the first table of the law suffices to prove its requirements to be very extensive, spiritual, reasonable, and beneficial; yet it must be owned to be entirely contrary to the disposition of our hearts, and diverse from the tenour of our lives. We all therefore need mercy, redemption, and a new creation to holiness, in order that we may please God and be made fit for heaven.—We now proceed to the second table.

V. 12. According to the principle, which has hitherto directed our interpretation, this commandment must be considered as the abstract of relative duties. All other relations spring from that of parents and children, or partake in a measure of its nature; and this most nearly resembles our relation to the great Creator.—Children are required to honour their parents; which implies, that it is the duty of parents to behave honourably, by diligently performing the several parts of their important charge, as entrusted with the care of their offspring, both in body and soul; and by a becoming deportment in all other respects. Yet children are not absolved from their duty by the misconduct of their parents, for which they must answer to God: and such a limitation, in this and other relative precepts, would absurdly constitute all the inferior relations, judges and lords over their superiors. Children, under God, derive their being from their parents: and they are generally taken care of by them, with much labour and expense and self-denial, during helpless infancy and inexperienced youth. It is therefore reasonable, that they should so long obey them unreservedly in all things lawful; and afterwards in all things which are not manifestly injurious to them, though they may be disagreeable. They ought to love their parents; to respect their characters, counsels, and instructions; to consult their interest, credit, and comfort; to conceal their infirmities; to bear with their tempers and humours, alleviate their sorrows, and rejoice their hearts as far as possible: and when they are grown old, or become in any way incapable of maintaining themselves, children are bound, if able, even to labour for their support, as their parents did for them when infants. In all these respects, both parents are equally included; and should alike be honoured and obeyed, and not in opposition to one another; which should teach the parents to set their children an example of impartiality, and to be harmonious in their conduct towards them.—By parity of reason, every one, who has acted a parent's part, is entitled to a correspondent respect and deference; and all the superior and inferior relations have their several reciprocal duties, which may be referred to this command, but will hereafter be considered. (Notes, Rom. xiii. 1—7. Eph. v. 21—33. vi. 1—9. Col. iii. 18—25. iv. 1. 1 Tim. vi. 1—5. 1 Pet. ii. 13—25. iii. 1—7.)—The annexed promise of long life to obedient children, might have a peculiar reference to the covenant of Israel; yet, careful observers of mankind have noted its remarkable fulfilment in other nations. Subordination, in the family and community, tends to personal and publick felicity; and the dislike which the human heart bears to submission renders it proper to enforce it by motives of every kind.

V. 13. The sixth commandment requires us to "love our neighbour as ourselves," in respect of his person and b Lev. xviii. 20. 14 ^bThou shalt not commit adultery.

 xix. 29. xx. 10.
 Deut. xxii. 21—24. 2 Sam. xi. 4, 5, 27. xii. 9—11. Job xxxi. 1, 9, 10. Ps. l. 18. Prov. ii.
 5—18. v. 15—20. vi. 24—35. vii. 18—27. Jer. v. 8, 9. vii. 9. xiii. 27. xxxiii. 14. xxxix. 22.
 28. Ez. xviii. 9, 11, 15. xxii. 9—11. Mal. iii. 5. Matt. v. 27, 28. xix. 9. Mark x. 11, 12.
 John vii. 2—11. Rom. i. 24—29. vii. 2, 3. 1 Cor. vi. 9—11. vii. 4. Gal. v. 19, 20. Eph.
 v. 3—5. 1 Thes. iv. 4—7. Heb. xiii. 4. Jam. iv. 4. 2 Pet. ii. 14, 18. Rev. ii. 20—22.
 xvii. 1—5. xxi. 8. xxii. 15

15 ^cThou shalt not steal.

c xxi. 16. xxii. 1—5. 7—13. Lev.
 vi. 1—7. xix. 11, 13, 35—37. Deut. v. 19. xix. 14. xxxiii. 24, 25. xxiv. 7. xxv. 19—23. Job
 xx. 19—22. Ps. l. 18. Prov. i. 13—15. vi. 30, 31. xi. 1, xx. 10. Jer. v. 20—23. vii. 8—11.
 Amos iii. 10. v. 11, 12. viii. 4—6. Mic. vi. 10, 11. vii. 3. Zech. v. 3, 4. Mal. iii. 5. Matt.
 xv. 19. xix. 18. xxi. 13. xxxiii. 14. Mark x. 19. Luke iii. 13, 14. xviii. 20. xix. 8. John xii.
 6. Rom. xiii. 9. 1 Cor. vi. 10. Eph. iv. 28. 1 Thes. iv. 6. 1 Tim. i. 10. Jam. v. 4.

life.—Magistrates, as “God’s ministers in executing vengeance,” are in some cases commanded to put men to death; and in others it may be allowable, because conducive to the publick good.—Witnesses or executioners may also concur in such capital punishments without the guilt of murder. We may doubtless take away another’s life in defence of our own: for he who assaults another’s life, by that action forfeits his own; and there is no opportunity of referring the cause to the civil magistrate. Perhaps, in peculiar circumstances, the same may be allowable in defence of our property; especially when violence is menaced.—Some wars are necessary and unavoidable to one party, because of the injurious conduct of the other; and the blood shed in them is not imputed as murder to those who shed it: yet the guilt of it must rest somewhere; and few wars indeed are so entered upon and conducted, as to leave any of the contending parties free from blood-guiltiness.—A man may by misfortune kill another: yet God condemns, as wilful murder, many of those actions by which life is taken away, but which are called by our law manslaughter. Furious passions, excited by sudden provocation or drunkenness, is no where in Scripture excepted from the general rule, “He who sheddeth man’s blood, by man shall his blood be shed.” The duellist is a proud and revengeful murderer of the most atrocious kind; and, in general, he is distinguished from all other criminals, by an habitual determination to commit the sin, whenever he shall be tempted to it.—All fighting for wagers, or prizes, or renown, violates this command; and the blood thus shed is murder.—Whatever, by force or stratagem, deprives another of his life, is prohibited. All the slaughter committed by oppressions, persecutions, or attempts to deprive of liberty, or confine in slavery, our unoffending fellow-creatures, on any pretence whatever, is wilful, cruel murder. What then shall we think of the accursed slave-trade, and how thankful should we be, that it is at length abolished!—Even laws, needlessly sanguinary, involve the persons concerned in this enormous guilt: and they, who ought to punish the murderer, and yet suffer him to escape, will be numbered among the abettors of his crime at the tribunal of God. But capital punishments are denounced, in this land, in so very many instances, that they counteract their own intention; and yet are executed in such numerous instances, and for offences so different in the degree of criminality, as almost to obliterate in the minds of numbers the disparity of crimes, and to lessen exceedingly the horror of committing murder: and impartial judges must allow, that our criminal code is in this respect both unscriptural, impolitic, and unreasonably severe.

This commandment likewise prohibits us to assault, maim, or wound others, or to assist those who do; to tempt men to crimes that destroy their constitutions, or endanger their lives, either from the sword of justice, or the resentment of the injured party; nay, to entice them, by the prospect of a large reward, to such enterprises and labours, as are known generally to shorten life. Many parents and wives are murdered by the gross misconduct of their children and husbands; and numbers will be found guilty of transgressing this commandment, by covetously or maliciously wishing the death of others. The spiritual import of it prohibits all envy, revenge, hatred, or causeless anger; all that insulting language, which provokes to wrath and murder; and all the pride, ambition, and covetousness, which prompt to it. Nay, that man will be condemned as the hater and murderer of his brother, who, seeing his life endangered by the want of food, raiment, or medicine, and having ability to relieve him, selfishly neglects to do it. (Notes, 1 John iii. 13—17.)—But the murder of the soul is still more heinous. This is committed by seducing men to sin; by a bad example; by disseminating poisonous principles; by terrifying others from religion by persecution, or by reviling or ridiculing such as attend to it; by withholding instructions, needful warning, and counsels, especially such as are due from parents to their children, or ministers to their people: and it is tremendous to think, what numbers will be thus condemned as the murderers of the souls of men.—The heinousness of suicide likewise should be especially marked. It is in reality the most malignant of all murders; and, as scarcely ever repented of, it combines the guilt of murdering both soul and body at once. We were not the authors, and are not the lords, of our own lives: nor may we leave our assigned post, or rush without a summons into the presence of our Judge, any more than we may execute vengeance on our neighbour, or send him to the tribunal of God. Self-murder may be easily shewn to be a complication of ingratitude, contempt of the Lord’s gift of life, impatience, pride, rebellion, and infidelity: nor is it generally the effect of insanity, (as verdicts, in which perjury is deliberately committed from false tenderness, would lead us to suppose;) except as all are in some sense insane, who are hurried on by fierce passions and Satan’s temptations. That original murderer knows this present life to be the only season, in which salvation can be obtained: and therefore he tempts men to such excesses, as destroy the constitution, or render life miserable; and he urges them on to suicide, that he may destroy both body and soul by their hands, not being permitted to do it by his own power. Extravagance, discontent, and despondency should therefore be most carefully shunned; and gratitude, patience, and hope most diligently cultivated.—In a word, this command requires enlarged benevolence, kindness, long-suffering, and forgiveness; and a disposition to seek, in all respects, the welfare of every human being.

V. 14. The seventh commandment regulates our love to our neighbours, in respect of their purity, and domestick comfort; and requires the proper government of those inclinations, which God hath implanted in order to the increase of the human species.—The marriage of one man with one woman was the original institution of the Creator; and not merely a civil contract, as some state it to be: one man and one woman “became one flesh” in this respect, as if they formed one body, actuated by one soul; in order to promote and share one another’s satisfactions, and with d xxiii. 6, 7. Lev. 16 ^d Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour.

 xix. 11, 16. Deut. v. 20. xix. 15—21. 1 Sam. xii. 8—19. 1 Kings xxi. 10—13 Ps. xv. 3. 1, 20. lili. 2—4. ci. 5—7. Prov. x. 18. xi. 13. xviii. 8. xix. 5, 9. xx. 19. xxv. 23. xxvi. 20—22. Is. lix. 3, 4. Jer. ix. 4. Ez. xxii. 9. Matt. xxvi. 59, 60. Acts vi. 13. Rom. 1. 30. 1 Cor. vi. 10. Eph. iv. 31. 1 Tim. 1. 10. lili. 11. 2 Tim. lili. 3. Tit. ii. 3. Jam. iv. 11. 1 Pet. ii. 1. 2 Pet. ii. 10, 11. Rev. xii. 10. xxii. 15.

17 ^e Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, thou shalt not covet thy e Gen. iii. 6. xiv. 23. xxxiv. 23. Deut. v. 21. Josh. vii. 21. 1 Sam. xv. 19. 1 Kings xxi. 6—16. 2 Kings v. 20. Pa. x. 3. cxix. 36. Ec. iv. 8. v. 10, 11. Is. xxxiii. 15. lvi. 11. lvii. 17. Jer. xxii. 17. Ez. xxxiii. 31. Am. ii. 6, 7. Mic. ii. 2. Hab. ii. 9. Matt. vi. 19—24. Luke xii. 15. xvi. 14. John xii. 6. Acts xx. 33. Rom. vii. 7. xiii. 9. 1 Cor. v. 10. vi. 10. Eph. v. 5. Phil. iii. 19. Col. iii. 5. 1 Tim. vi. 6—10. Heb. xiii. 5. Jam. iv. 1, 2. 2 Pet. ii. 14, 15. 1 John ii. 16.

united attention to educate their common offspring. (Note, Mal. ii. 13—16.) The entrance of sin and death made way for the dissolution of this union, a variety of evils began to embitter the relation, and abuses were soon introduced. Some things were under the preceding dispensations connived at, which did not accord to the original institution; but Christ refers his disciples to that standard of honourable marriage, as far as the change of circumstances can admit of it.—The force acquired by men's passions, in consequence of sin, renders the "prevention of fornication" one express end of marriage; mutual forbearance and reciprocal compliances are now needful and incumbent; the sorrows of the female sex, as well as the afflictions of life, require peculiar sympathy, to alleviate the anguish of the suffering party; and the separating stroke of death leaves the survivor free to take another companion. We as Christians therefore must not explain adultery, as prohibited in this commandment, according to the judicial law of Moses, which will afterwards come under consideration; (Lev. xx. 10. Deut. xxii. 22;) but, by the decisions of Christ, with which polygamy and divorces (except for unfaithfulness) are utterly incompatible. It is evident, that marriage, recognized in some appointed way, to distinguish it from illicit connexions, gives each party such a property in the other's person and affections, that every violation of conjugal fidelity, on either side, is adultery, according to the New Testament; and is far more deserving of death, (if we estimate crimes by their mischievous effects,) than many offences which are capitally punished. (Notes, Matt. xix. 3—9. Mark x. 2—12. 1 Cor. vii. 1—5.) On either side, it is a violation of this spiritual commandment; it militates against the ends and intentions of marriage; is inconsistent with that union of hearts and interests which it implies; is a breach of the marriage-compact; mars domestick peace; prevents the harmonious agreement in training up children; and forms an alienation of that property, which both husband and wife have in the persons and affections of the other, and which is scarcely ever lost without the bitterest anguish and keenest resentment. Adultery on the woman's side is indeed more generally chargeable with the injustice of introducing a spurious offspring to inherit the husband's property: but, his infidelity is not seldom productive of a similar effect, when the husband has the disposal of that, which was the property of the wife. And though jealousy is especially "the rage of man," and produces the most fatal effects; yet sometimes female passions overpower female timidity, and dreadful consequences ensue on that side also. So that, in the impartial judgment even of reason, the difference of the injury and of its effects in the two cases is not very great.—All other commerce between the sexes is prohibited by the spirit of this law; from the lowest scenes of prostitution, to the temporary connexions, that are formed and dissolved at pleasure. The difference between the tempters and the tempted, and other circumstances, vary the degree of guilt contracted; for the seducer's character is diabolical: but fornication is found in almost every black catalogue in the Scripture; and, however men may be deceived by vain words, its dire effects on the human species prove the goodness of God, as well as his justice, in thus strictly forbidding it, and threatening those who violate the prohibition, with his severest indignation.—Under the word lasciviousness, various transgressions are denoted, which cannot be mentioned without offence: and every thing, which does not comport with the design of marriage, though sanctioned by that name, violates the spiritual meaning of the prohibition.—All impure discourse, imaginations, or desires, are likewise condemned by this law. "Whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her, hath committed adultery with her already in his heart."—Writing, publishing, vending, circulating, or reading, obscene books; exposing to view indecent pictures or statues, or whatever else may excite men's passions, must partake of the same guilt: and wit, elegance, and ingenuity only increase the mischief, wherever the specious poison is administered.—All the arts of dress, motion, or demeanour, which form temptations to heedless youth; with all those blandishments, insinuations, amorous looks and words, which subserve seduction, and make way for criminal indulgence, fall under the same censure.—In short the commandment requires the utmost purity, both of body and soul, in secret as well as before men; with a holy indifference to animal indulgences, and the strictest government of all the appetites, senses, and passions. And it enjoins the desire and endeavour of preserving the same disposition and behaviour in all others also, as far as we have it in our power.

V. 15. This commandment is the law of love in respect of property. The productions of the earth are obtained and prepared for use by labour: this gives property, which justly descends to the owner's posterity or heirs. From this and similar causes, combining their effects for ages, the difference in men's worldly circumstances originates. That portion which we honestly obtain, is "the bread that God hath given us;" and with this we should be satisfied. But men's passions crave more; and sloth refuses to labour: hence force and fraud are employed to get possession of the property of others, without their free consent fairly obtained. It is not necessary to enumerate those violations, of which human laws take cognizance; but men may, in various ways, break the divine law, and yet escape present punishment. Fraudulent bargains, which impose on the ignorant, credulous, or necessitous; abuse of confidence; extortion; exorbitant gain; deceitful combinations to enhance the price of goods or labour, or to lower the wages of the poor; will be all condemned at the tribunal of God as violations of this command, though perhaps hardly censured in human society.—The overgrown ravager of nations and provinces, who smiles defiance at human justice, will be adjudged a principal robber, without any other distinction. Defrauding the publick constitutes a most atrocious transgression of this law; whether it be done by oppressive rulers, who burden the people with merciless exactions; or by those who embezzle the

† 2 Sam. xi. 2—4. neighbour's 'wife, nor his man-servant, Job xxxi. 1. 9. nor his maid-servant, nor his ox, nor Prov. iv. 23. vi. 24, 25. Jer. v. 8.
 Matt. v. 28. Jam. i. 14, 15. 2 Pet. ii. 14.

his ass, nor any thing that ^{is thy} neighbour's. g Matt. xx. 15
Acts v. 4
2 Thes. iii. 12.

treasures committed to their stewardship; or by smuggling, and in various ways evading the payment of taxes. Contracting debts to support vanity and luxury, or in pursuit of some scheme of aggrandizement, or for any thing not absolutely necessary, without a fair prospect of paying; taking advantage of humane laws, to evade payment, when the insolvents are again able to do it; all extravagance, beyond the sober allowance of a man's income; and slothfulness, or unnecessary subsistence upon charity, are violations of it in different ways. Nay, for men to withhold from real objects of compassion proper relief; or to squeeze the poor so low in their wages, as hardly to allow them a subsistence, in order that their employers may live in affluence and enrich their families, is absolutely inconsistent with its evident demands.—In short, the spirit of it prohibits inordinate love of the world, covetousness, luxury, and the pride of life; and requires industry, frugality, sobriety, submission to Providence, and a disposition "to do to all others," in respect of worldly property, as we "would they should do unto us."

V. 16. The ninth commandment is the law of love, as it respects our neighbour's reputation; though, in the connexion of human affairs, the violation of it may likewise affect his property or life; and bearing false witness, in a court of justice in this land, may be perjury, robbery, and murder, as well as calumny. In such important concerns, we should attest nothing of which we have not the fullest assurance; and all human passions should be watched over, that our evidence may not be warped by any of them. We should be exact to a word in reporting what we know, and in speaking the truth, and no more than the truth; while equal caution is required in juries, and in the judge who decides the cause.—The malicious invention and circulation of slanderous reports, to the injury of a man's character, is a very heinous violation of this commandment. To do this in sport is an imitation of "the madman, who "throws about firebrands, arrows, and death," for his diversion. To spread stories which others have framed to the discredit of our neighbour, when we suspect them to be false or aggravated; or even if we suppose or know them to be true, when there is no real occasion for it, (such as the detection of a mischievous hypocrite, or designing villain,) is prohibited by this law: for this practice results from pride, self-preference, malevolence, or affectation of wit and humour.—Severe censures, bitter sarcasm, ridicule, harsh judgments, ascribing good actions to bad motives, inuendos, misrepresentations, collecting and circulating in any way family-anecdotes, or anecdotes of persons in high life or conspicuous station, unfavourable to the reputation of those concerned, or exposing them and their connexions to ridicule, and various other practices of the same nature, can never consist with it.—This commandment is very frequently violated by authors: a lie or a slander is far worse when printed, than when only spoken; and religious controversy is too generally disgraced by the most abominable calumnies: for bigots, of all parties, agree in mis-stating the actions, misquoting the writings, and misreporting the words, of their opponents.—All lies are a violation of this law. They are in every possible case an abuse of speech, and of our neighbour's confidence, and a derogation from the value of truth; and almost always hurtful to mankind.—Even injurious thoughts, groundless suspicions, and secret prejudices, or envy of the praises and commendations which others receive, do not consist with the spirit of this precept. For it requires sincerity, truth, fidelity, candour, and caution, in all our conversation and conduct; and a disposition to honour in every man what is honourable, to commend what is commendable, to vindicate and excuse what can be vindicated and excused, and to conceal what may lawfully be concealed; and in every respect to consult his reputation, and even to rejoice in his credit and renown, as we should were it our own, and as we might reasonably desire he also should. In our own case, we all feel the excellency and reasonableness of the precept, in its strictest sense; we value and are tender of our reputation; and expect, nay demand, to be treated with candour, respect, and sincerity; and we are greatly pained and affronted when we are imposed upon, or held forth to scorn, ridicule, and censure, by the tongues or pens of others. But, through the exorbitancy of self-love, and want of love to others, we are prone, in an amazing degree, to violate the rules which we should impose on our neighbours, in our own conduct towards them, and that without much remorse, or sense of guilt. Nor can words express how heinously this reasonable commandment is every day transgressed, in almost every company, and among persons of all characters!

V. 17. This concluding commandment forbids us to covet any thing that is our neighbour's. This restriction is placed as the fence of all the rest. The apostle's reference to it, (Note, Rom. vii. 7, 8,) shews that it comprises the utmost spirituality of the law; and it is a perpetual confutation of all those systems, by which the outward, gross crime is considered as the only violation of each command.—We are here expressly, and in the most forcible language, prohibited so much as to desire what is withheld from us by the command or providence of God; and, so far from wanting to level property, or seize violently on our neighbour's possessions, we may not so much as at all hanker after them.—The most secret wish for another man's wife violates this precept; but, to desire an union by marriage with an unmarried woman, becomes sinful only when it is excessive, and when it is not submitted to the will of God, if he render it impracticable. We may desire that part of a man's property, which he is inclined to dispose of, if we mean to obtain it only on equitable terms; but what he chooses to keep we may not covet. The poor man may desire moderate relief from the rich; but he must not covet his affluence, or repine even if he do not relieve him. Men exposed to equal hazards, may agree to a proportionable contribution to him who suffers loss; for it accords with the law of love to help the distressed. This exculpates insurance when fairly conducted. But every species of gaming originates from an undue desire and hope of increasing our property, by proportionably impoverishing other men; and is therefore a direct violation of this law.—Public gaming by LOTTERIES, so far from being less criminal than other species of that vice, is the 18 ¶ And ^h all the people saw the thunderings, and the lightnings, and the noise of the trumpet, and the mountain smoking; and when the people saw it, ¹ they removed and stood afar off.

19 And they said unto Moses, ^k Speak thou with us, and we will hear: but let not God speak with us, lest we die.

^h xix. 16—18. See on Deut. iv. 10, 11. 26 v. 22, 23.
ⁱ Ps. cxxxix. 7, 8. Jer. xxiii. 23, 24.
^k Deut. v. 27, xxviii. 16. Acts xii. 23. Gal. iii. 19. Heb. xii. 18, 19.
^l xxxiii. 20. Gen. xxxii. 30. Deut. i. v. 24, 25.

20 And Moses said unto the people, ^m Fear not: for God is come to ⁿ prove you, and that ^o his fear may be before your faces, that ye sin not.

21 And ^p the people stood afar off, and Moses drew near unto the ^q thick darkness where God was.

22 And the LORD said unto Moses, Thus thou shalt say unto the children

^m 1 Sam. xii. 20, 24.
ⁿ xv. 25, 26. Gen. xxii. 1. 12. Deut. viii. 2. 16. xiii. 3. o Gen. xx. 11. xlii. 18. Deut. iv. 10. vi 2. x. 12. xvii. 13. 19. xxviii. 58. Josh. xxiv. 14. Neh. v. 15. Job xxxviii. 28. Prov. i. 7. Is. viii. 13. Jer. xxxii. 39, 40. Matt. x. 28. Heb. xii. 28.
^p xix. 17. Deut. v. 1.
^q 1 Kings viii. 12, 13. 2 Chr. vi. 1. Pa. xviii 9 12. xxvii. 2. civ. 2. 1 Tim. vi. 16.

worst of them all: for it abets and sanctions, as far as example and concurrence by statute can do it, a practice, which opens the door to every species of fraud and villainy; which is pregnant with the most extensive evils to the community and to individuals; which seldom fails annually to bring several to an untimely end, by suicide or the sentence of the law; which unsettles an immense multitude from the honest employments of their station, to run in quest of imaginary wealth; and which exposes them to manifold temptations, unfits them for returning to their usual mode of life, and often materially injures their circumstances, breaks their spirits, sours their tempers, and excites the worst passions of which they are susceptible. Indeed, the evils, political, moral, and religious, of lotteries, are too glaring to be denied, even by those who plead necessity for continuing them; and too numerous to be recapitulated in this place. Can it therefore consist with the law of God, "Thou shalt not covet," or with the character of a Christian, to concur in so iniquitous and injurious a system, from a vain desire of irregular gain? Whatever argument proves it unlawful for two or three men to east lots for a sum of money, or to game in any other way, is much more strongly conclusive against a million of persons gaming publicly by a lottery, to the stagnation in great measure of every other business; while the gain made by government, and by individuals, from the stakes deposited with them, renders it as imprudent as it is sinful in the adventurers; for every individual stakes at least three to two on an even chance, if a covetous appeal to Providence may be called chance. (Note, Prov. xvi. 33.)—Even Tontines are by no means to be justified; as they constitute a kind of complicated wager about longevity, to be decided by Providence in favour of the survivors; and must therefore partake of the nature of other games of chance. Coveting the property of our neighbours contrary to the law of love, and enriching the survivors, commonly at the expense of the relatives of the deceased, are intimately connected with them: while they lead men into strong temptation secretly to wish the death of others, for the sake of advantages which they inordinately desire, and irregularly pursue.—In fine, discontent, distrust, love of wealth, pleasure, and grandeur, desire of change, the habit of wishing, and every inordinate affection, are the evils here prohibited; and we know them to be the sources of all other crimes, and of man's misery. The command requires moderation in respect of all worldly things, submission to God, acquiescence in his will, love to his commands, and a reliance on him for the daily supply of all our wants, as he sees good. This is right and reasonable, fit for God to command, and profitable for man to obey;—the very temper and felicity of heaven itself: but it is so contrary to the disposition of our heart by nature, and so superior to the actual attainment of the best Christians on earth, that it is very difficult to persuade men in general, that God requires such perfection; still more difficult to satisfy them, that it is indispensable to the happiness of rational creatures; and most difficult of all to convince them, that every thing inconsistent with this, or short of it, is sin; that it deserves the wrath of God, and cannot be taken away, except by the mercy of God, through the atonement of Christ.—We cannot close this brief explication of the divine law, (in which we find nothing redundant, nothing defective, nothing injurious, but all things "holy, and just, and good,") more properly, than by the words of our church-service, 'Lord, have mercy upon us,' (forgive all our past transgressions,) 'and write all these thy laws in our hearts, we beseech thee.'

V. 18—20. The thunderings and lightnings continued during the whole of this awful solemnity; and we may suppose, that as soon as the Lord had ceased to speak, the trumpet again sounded loudly, as before. The people therefore, witnessing such a continuance or succession of tremendous scenes, removed in trepidation to a greater distance; and requested that Moses would, from that time, deliver the commands and will of God to them, promising to be attentive and obedient.—"They could not endure the things which were spoken," any more than the tremendous manner in which they were delivered: and though their request to Moses was rather the language of terror than of judgment; yet it implied that they needed a Mediator, and could not stand before God without one. Moses however encouraged them, not to fear immediate death, which they seem to have expected: for these solemn displays were not intended for their destruction; but to prove them, whether they would be obedient or not, and to impress them with reverential fear of the authority and majesty of JEHOVAH, that they might be restrained from sinning against him.—The distinction between servile fear, and the dread of immediate vengeance, on this particular occasion, and the salutary fear of God, which habitually influences the conduct, is very observable in this passage.

V. 21—25. At this time Moses directed the people to return to their tents, while he approached nearer to that thick darkness, from which the Lord had especially manifested his presence, and had spoken the ten commandments. There he received the following directions, enforcing what had been delivered, especially the commandments prohibiting idolatry of every kind, as being the most essential of all: particularly stating, that the precious materials, of which images might be made, would not diminish the guilt of the maker or worshipper.—It must be supposed

Deut. iv. 36. of Israel, Ye have seen that 'I have Neh. ix. 13. Heb. talked with you from heaven.
 xii. 25, 26.
 3-5. See on
 xxxii. 1-4.—
 1 Sam. v 4, 5.
 2 Kings xvii. 33.
 41. Ez. xx. 39.
 xliii. 8. Dan v.
 4. 23. Zeph. i. 5.
 1 Cor. x. 21, 22.
 2 Cor. vi. 14—
 16. Col. ii. 18, 19.
 1 John v. 20, 21.
 Rev. xxii. 15.
 u John iv. 24.
 Lev i. liii.
 x Deut. xii. 5, 11.
 21. xvi. 5, 6. xxvii.
 2. 1 Kings viii.
 29, 43. ix. 3.
 2 Chr. vi. 6 vii. 16. xii. 13. Ezra vi. 12. Neh. i. 9. Ps. lxxiv. 7. lxxvi. 2. lxxviii. 68.
 cxxxii. 13, 14. Jer. vii. 10—12. Mal. i. 11. Matt. xviii. 20. xxviii. 20. John iv. 20—23.
 1 Tim. ii. 8.

23 Ye shall not make with me gods of silver, neither shall ye make unto you gods of gold.

24 An altar of earth thou shalt make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy burnt-offerings, and thy peace-offerings, thy sheep and thine oxen: in all places where I record my name, I will come unto thee, and I will bless thee.

25 And if thou wilt make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stone: for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it.

26 Neither shalt thou go up by steps unto mine altar, that thy nakedness be not discovered thereon.

y Gen. xii. 2
 Num. vi. 24—
 27. Deut. vii. 13.
 2 Sam. vi. 12.
 Ps. cxxxviii. 5.
 cxxxiv. 3.
 z Deut. xxvii. 5.
 6. Josh. viii. 31.
 * Heb. build them with hewing.

a Lev. x. 3. Ps.
 lxxxix. 7. Ec. v.
 1. Heb. xii. 28.
 29. 1 Pet. i. 16.

they would now bring sacrifices; as an act of worship, which had been in use from the beginning: and in sacrificing, either burnt-offerings to be wholly consumed, or peace-offerings on part of which they were allowed to feast, they must make no other altar than one of sods or rough stone. In due time another altar would be formed, according to special directions about to be given: in the mean while, they must remember that God principally looked to the heart and intention of the offerer, and to that Saviour whom the sacrifices typified. But he would afterwards record his name, or fix places where he would display his glory, and accept their worship; and there he would meet and bless them.—The rules prescribed about the altar might refer to some usages of the Gentiles, or in several ways be intended to exclude superstition: and they seem to have been of permanent obligation, as to occasional altars, raised on any emergency at a distance from the places where the Lord recorded his name; of which we shall hereafter meet with several instances.

V. 26. The Heathen worship was frequently attended by shameful indecencies, from which the Lord would keep his people at the utmost distance; and, as they wore loose garments, this precaution was very proper.—It is supposed, that the ascent to the altar at the tabernacle, and even at the temple, was by a gentle slope.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—17.

Though we neither hear the thunders, nor see the lightnings, nor witness the awful circumstances, with which the holy law was given; and though we are not appalled by the voice of God himself, speaking to us from the top of blazing Sinai: yet, if we attend to the things then spoken, we shall perceive, that we have as much occasion to tremble, as the Israelites had, when they stood at the foot of the mountain. This law, which is so extensive that we cannot measure it, so spiritual that we cannot evade it, and so reasonable that we cannot find fault with it, will be the rule of the future judgment of God, as it is of the present conduct of man. Nor would it consist with the glory of the Lord's perfections, the honour of his government, the interests of his universal and everlasting kingdom, or even with the felicity of his rational creatures, to reverse, repeal, or relax one precept of it; for it is all perfectly "holy, just, and good."—Comparing the state of the world with its spiritual requirements, we see most evidently that man is a fallen creature; for his character, disposition, and conduct, so far from being perfectly conformable to this holy law, are quite contrary to it: "The carnal mind" of man "is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, nor indeed can be." Examined by this rule, our own past lives appear a continued series of transgressions; our best actions, defective in their principle, end, and measure, and defiled with sin; and our judgment, will, and affections, the reverse of what they ought to be: so that, while we behold ourselves in this mirror, we cannot but use the language of the prophet, "We are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags." And we may learn to what imminent danger of hopeless misery, every one is exposed, from the words of the apostle, or of the Lord by Moses, "Cursed is every one, that continueth not in all things, which are written in the book of the law to do them:" (Note, Deut. xxvii. 26 :) especially, as our Lord assures us that, at the solemn day of judgment, he will thus address those on his left hand, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the Devil and his angels;" and that "these shall go away into everlasting punishment."—Yet, if we impartially consider the excellency of every commandment, we shall gradually be constrained to approve of the whole; to allow the evil of transgression; and, in some degree, to perceive the equity of that "wrath of God, which is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men." For if transgression of human laws, in any case, justly merits the death of the body, the utmost punishment which man can inflict; transgression of God's law, (considering who he is, and what are our obligations to him,) may surely be allowed justly to merit the utmost effect of his power, "who is able to destroy both body and soul in hell." Thus the law, when applied by the convincing Spirit of God, shews men their lost estate, their guilt, danger, and misery; and effectually demonstrates to their consciences, that their own righteousness cannot justify them, their own arm cannot save them. Under these convictions, who can despise the gospel of Jesus Christ? Pardon of sin, justification by faith, access unto God upon a mercy-seat, the renewal of our souls to holiness, and eternal life as the free gift of a gracious God, can appear superfluous or despicable, only to him, who knows not the extent, spirituality, or excellency of the divine law; or who has never carefully examined his heart and life according to it, with the day of judgment placed before his eyes.—In the person, undertaking, obedience, and death of Christ, this law was magnified and made honourable, and the justice of God satisfied; so that his hatred of sin now harmonizes with his

CHAP. XXI.

Laws concerning the release or detention of Hebrew slaves, 1—6; the treatment of female slaves, 7—11; murder, manslaughter, smiting or cursing parents, man-stealing, maiming any person, killing or wound-love to sinners. Here he "gives the knowledge of salvation to his people by the remission of their sins;" for "Christ hath redeemed them from the curse of the law, being made a curse for them."—If we view the character of Christ, in human nature, in the midst of temptations and sufferings, even unto the death upon the cross; we shall learn that he was perfectly obedient to this law in its fullest extent: and on this obedience his divine nature stamped infinite value. This, O self-condemned sinner, is the provision God hath made for thy justification! This righteousness, being commensurate with the largest demands of the divine law, is "the righteousness of God, which is unto all and upon all them that believe; for there is no difference:" and, through the atoning blood of Christ, and his intercession, we have open access to a reconciled God and Father, notwithstanding our guilt and unworthiness.—But can it be imagined, if the law is so holy and excellent, and such honour has been put upon it, by the obedience and sufferings of the incarnate Son of God, that any redeemed sinner should be allowed to disobey it? It is absurdity, impossibility, blasphemy! The knowledge of the law shows our need of repentance; the knowledge of Christ crucified is inseparably connected with repentance. In every believer's heart sin is dethroned and crucified, the law is written, and the image of God is renewed; Christ is "made sanctification" to him: the Holy Spirit disposes, inclines, and enables him to hate and flee from sin; to love, delight in, and keep this law in sincerity and truth; and to copy daily the example of him who perfectly fulfilled it. Nor will the believer ever cease to exercise repentance, or to follow after holiness, till he becomes "holy, as he who hath called him is holy." May this be indeed our religion: and while "we count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ," that "we may be found in him," and "made the righteousness of God in him;" may his holy precepts be "our delight and our counsellors," and may we be careful to "adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things!"

V. 18—26.

The language of men, under terror of conscience, or in the prospect of immediate death, is often entirely opposite to their habitual conduct and character at other times; and therefore very little to be depended on.—When thus alarmed, they frequently apply with respect and earnestness to the ministers, whom they before treated with neglect, or loaded with reproaches! And they make many promises and resolutions, how attentive and obedient they will be, if spared at that time; which they soon after violate without scruple. Not that they are always, or generally, insincere in these protestations: but they speak the language of their terrors, which form the predominant passion at the time; but which soon subside, and leave the heart under the influence of other passions, which habitually enslave them to sin.—Indeed, all convictions, which leave the heart ing a slave, hurting women with child, and other injuries, 12—27; mischiefs by cattle, and by pits, 28—36.

Now these are the judgments which thou shalt set before them.

b xix. 7 xxiv. 3, 4. Deut. iv. 5. 8. 14. 45. vi. 20. Matt. xxviii. 20. 1 Thes. iv. 1, 2.

Lev. xviii. 5. 26. xix. 37. xx. 22. Num. xxxv. 24. xxxvi. 18. Deut. v. 1. 31. vi. 20. 1 Kings vi. 12. 2 Chr. xix. 10. Neh. ix. 13, 14. x. 29. Ps. cxlvii. 19. Ez. xx. 11. 25. Mal. iv. 4. 1 Thes. iv. 1, 2.

unrenewed, and consequently alienated from God, tend eventually to drive men from him; and often terminate in a wilful and studied forgetfulness of all those subjects which have excited them: so that dissipation, excess, open impiety, and even infidelity, are not seldom the refuges, to which convinced sinners flee, to escape the reproaches of a guilty conscience. On the other hand, a presumptuous confidence in the mercy of God quiets the fears of numbers, though they continue strangers to "repentance, and works meet for repentance."—The ministers of Christ, however, must use all proper methods of warning men against these delusions; and they should endeavour to abate the terrors of awakened sinners, when verging to despondency, by shewing them the purposes of God in giving the law, in revealing his wrath from heaven against transgressors, and in alarming their consciences; and by holding forth the invitations and encouragements of the gospel. Thus they may expect that, in many instances, these terrors will make way for that holy, habitual fear of God, which, united with faith, and hope, and grateful love, will preserve them from sinning against him. It is in this manner, that our God "seeks men to worship him in spirit and truth," and forms "a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices," unto their reconciled God, "through Jesus Christ;" such as attend wherever he records his name, to give him praise and honour, while "he comes unto them and blesses them." (Note, Matt. xviii. 19, 20.)—But we must remember, that all uncommanded endeavours to decorate and embellish divine ordinances, by ingenuity, magnificence, or human devices of any kind, tend to superstition, false affections, and low thoughts of God; and so in fact pollute what they were intended to improve. "For the LORD seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh at the outward appearance, but the LORD looketh at the heart." Yet purity of heart will shew itself in purity of manners; and while simplicity is most suited to our spiritual worship, surely we should carefully avoid every thing in the least inconsistent with the rule laid down by the apostle, "Let all things be done decently and in order."

NOTES

CHAP. XXI. V. 1. Judgments.] (Marg. Ref.) This word here evidently, and by general allowance, means judicial laws, or rules of judgment, by which the magistrates and judges of Israel should proceed, in determining causes and trying criminals. And, making some allowance for the circumstances, varying in different ages and nations, there is a spirit of equity in these laws, which is well worthy of being transfused into those of any state.—This chapter, and the two following, continue the narrative of what the Lord spake to Moses, when "he drew near to the thick darkness," after the people had removed from the mount. The whole of the judicial, or political, law of Israel, except some injunctions about the Sabbath, was

c. xli 44. xxii. 3.
Gen. xxxvii. 28.
36. Lev. xxv. 39.
44. 2 Kings iv 1.
Neh. v. 1—5. 8.
Matt. xviii. 25.
1 Cor. vi. 20.
d Lev. xxv. 40—
43. 45. Deut. xv.
1. 12—15. 18.
xxxii. 10. Jer.
xxxiv. 8—17.
• Heb. with his body.

2 If thou buy °an Hebrew servant, six years he shall serve: °and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing.

3 If he came in * by himself, he shall go out by himself: if he were married, then his wife shall go out with him.

4 If his master have given him a wife, and she have born him sons or daughters; the wife and her children shall be her master's, and he shall go out by himself.

5 And ° if the servant † shall plainly say, I love my master, my wife, and my children, I will not go out free:

6 Then his master shall bring him unto 'the judges; he shall also bring him to the door, or unto the door-post: and his master shall ° bore his ear

• Deut. xv. 16.
17. 18. xxvi. 13.
2 Cor. v. 14. 15.
† Heb. saying shall say.
f 22. xviii. 21—26.
xxii. 8, 9 28
Num. xxv. 5—8.
Deut. i. 16. xvi.
18. xix. 17, 18.
1 Sam. viii. 1, 2.
1s i. 26. Zeph.
iii. 3.
g Ps. xl. 6—8.

either given on this occasion, or afterwards spoken to Moses from above the mercy-seat in the tabernacle; whence also a great part of the ceremonial law was delivered. (Lev. i. 1.) For little seems to have been prescribed to Moses, during his continuance for forty days in the mount, as afterwards recorded; except what related to the tabernacle and its sacred furniture, and to the holy garments for Aaron and his sons; the manner of their consecration to the priesthood; and the composition of the holy oil and of the incense.

V. 2. The Israelites sometimes sold themselves or their children, through poverty; magistrates sold some persons for their crimes; and creditors were, in certain cases, allowed to sell their insolvent debtors. In these ways slavery had been, or would soon be, introduced among the Israelites, even that of their brethren as well as of strangers; and God did not see good, in the judicial law, totally to prohibit this, and several other things, which are not agreeable to the perfect demands of the moral law.—In the government of nations, legislators must judge how far it is practicable, expedient, or conducive to the grand ends of magistracy, to require all that is right, and forbid all that is wrong, under penal sanctions: and in this respect Israel was like other nations. Indeed, the moral and judicial law were enacted by the same Lawgiver, and coincided, as far as infinite wisdom saw it to be conducive to the grand ends in view; but, as they were intended for very distinct purposes, they must in many things vary. The moral law commanded every thing spiritually good in its utmost perfection, and tolerated nothing wrong in the smallest degree; but the sentence of it was reserved “to that day, when God shall “judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ.” The judicial law commanded nothing morally bad, and forbade nothing morally good; but, as sentence according to it would be pronounced by the civil magistrate, it did not insist on the same perfection: and besides that it enjoined nothing concerning the state of the heart, except as the intentions could be judged of by words and actions; it had also respect to the situation, character, and peculiar circumstances of the nation to be governed; and supposed the existence of some evils, which could not be eradicated without a constant miracle; and it provided against their worst effects.—This distinction, carefully attended to, will account for many things, tolerated in the Mosaic law, which are condemned in the New Testament; and not only there, but, in the moral law of “loving our neighbour as ourselves.” They are not sanctioned, but merely “suffered because of the hardness of the people’s hearts,” or on some account to prevent worse consequences.

Slavery was almost universal in the world: and though, like wars, it always proceeded of evil, and was generally evil in itself; yet the wisdom of God deemed it better to regulate, than to prohibit it. We should not, however, judge of the practice itself by these judicial regulations, but by the law of love. Slavery, like war, may in some cases, in the present state of things, be lawful: for the crime which forfeits life, no doubt forfeits liberty; and it is not inconsistent even with the moral law, for a criminal to be sold and treated as a slave, during a term of time proportioned to his offence. In most other cases, if not in all, it must be inconsistent with the law of love.—The plain meaning of this verse is, that on what account soever a Hebrew was bought as a slave, he should be set at liberty at the end of six years, or at the beginning of the seventh, whether that were the sabbatical year or not: and he was not entitled to his liberty till that time, even if the sabbatical year intervened. But the Jewish expositors, (on whose authority some learned men build very much,) both here, and all through these laws, make so many distinctions, additions, and exceptions, that they almost abrogate the very statutes which they profess to elucidate. Our blessed Lord, in vindicating the law from the corrupt glosses of the Scribes and Pharisees, and asserting its authority in opposition to their traditions, (which often vacated it,) does not much countenance his disciples in paying deference to such commentators; and the successors of these scribes, in after ages, have by no means proved themselves entitled to more implicit credence. In matter of fact, respecting the usages and customs of the nation in their own times and in preceding ages, they may be useful; and we may learn how they understood the several laws: but it seems, to me at least, that they generally perplex the subject which they attempt to explain; as a quibbling lawyer causes the meaning of the plain statute to appear doubtful or obscure, by his frivolous distinctions and exceptions.

V. 3—6. If the person sold for a slave had a wife, and she, either by choice or compulsion, accompanied him; she must not be detained when her husband was liberated.—Many expositors state that the person, who bought a married man for a slave, was bound to maintain his wife and children during the term of his servitude: but if so, it is reasonable to suppose, that he had the advantage of their labour. If the person sold had no wife, or his wife did not accompany him, and his master gave him one of his female servants to wife during his servitude; she was not set at liberty with him at the end of the six years, and the children were considered as the property of the master. It is generally thought that an Israelitish woman could not on any account be thus disposed of; and that the slaves, thus given in marriage for the time, were Gentiles. Yet this can hardly be supposed, as the prohibitions against intermarriages with the heathen were so express.—It does not through with an awl; and he shall serve him ^h for ever.

7 And if a man ^lsell his daughter to be a maid-servant, she shall not go out as the men-servants do.

8 If she ^{*}please not her master, who hath betrothed her to himself, then shall he let her be redeemed. To sell her unto a strange nation he shall have no power, ^lseeing he hath dealt deceitfully with her.

9 And if he have betrothed her unto his son, he shall deal with her after the manner of daughters.

10 If he take him another wife : ^mher food, her raiment, and her duty of marriage shall he not diminish.

11 And if he do not these three unto her, ^athen shall she go out free without money.

12 ¶ He that ^osmiteth a man, so that he die, shall be surely put to death.

13 And if a man ^plie not in wait, but ^qGod deliver him into his hand; then ^rI will appoint thee a place whither he shall flee.

14 But if a man come ^spresumptuously upon his neighbour to ^tslay him with guile; thou shalt ^utake him from mine altar, that he may die.

15 And he that ^xsmiteth his father, or his mother, shall be surely put to death.

16 And he that ^ystealeth a man, and ^u See on 2. xx. 13. Gen. ix. 6. Lev. xxiv. 17. Num. xxxv. 31.—24. 30, 31. Deut. xix. 11—13. 2 Sam. xii. 13. Matt. xxvi. 52. ^p Num. xxxv. 11. Deut. xix. 4—6. 11. Mic. vii. 2. ^q 1 Sam. xxiv. 4. 10. 18. 2 Sam. xvi. 10. 11. x. 7. Num. xxxv. 11. Deut. iv. 41—43. xix. 1—3. 9. Josh. xx. 2—9. Num. xv. 30, 31. Deut. i. 43. xvii. 12, 13. xviii. 22. Ps. xix. 13. Heb. x. 26. 2 Pet. ii. 10. ^t Num. xxxv. 20, 21. Deut. xxvii. 2. 2 Sam. iii. 27. xx. 9, 10. ^u 1 Kings i. 50, 51. ii. 28—34. 2 Kings xi. 15. ^x Deut. xxi. 18—21. Prov. xxx. 11. 17. 1 Tim. i. 9. ^y Gen. xl. 15. Deut. xxiv. 7. 1 Tim. i. 10.

^h Lev. xxv. 23, 40. Deut. xv. 17. 1 Sam. i. 22. xxvii. 12. xxviii. 2. 1 Kings xii. 7. ^l See on c. Neh. v. 5. ^{*} Heb. be evil in the eyes of. Gen. xxviii. 8. Judg. xiv. 3. 1 Sam. viii. 6. xviii. 8. Marg. ^k Deut. xx. 7. xxi. 11—14. ^m 1 Cor. vii. 1—6.

appear, that children born in slavery, (as this very statute shews some would be,) were entitled to liberty, at any time before the year of jubilee: of these, there might be women of Hebrew extraction, to be given as wives for the time to Hebrew slaves; and others, originally of Gentile extraction, might be proselyted to the religion of Israel.—If however in any case, the slave, whose time was expired, deliberately and constantly avowed such an affection to his wife and children, and such an attachment to his master, that he preferred his present situation to “going out by himself;” it was enacted, that he should, by solemn process before the magistrates, have his ear bored at his master’s door, intimating that he was from that time to be considered as a part of his household, entirely under his authority; and he must then continue his servant for ever, or perpetually, either to his death, or to the year of jubilee.—As we find from a parallel passage, (Deut. xv. 17,) that female servants were under the same law; there might, among such as chose to continue with their masters, be found wives for the Hebrew slaves.

The judges. (6) εὐεργετῶν θεῶν. (το κριτηριον τῶ Θεῶ. Sept.) Notes, Ps. lxxxii. 1. 5, 6. John x. 32—39.

V. 7—11. A parent might sometimes be induced to sell his daughter, in her youth; but this seems not to have been allowed, except he was compelled by poverty; and except there was either some engagement or expectation that the person who bought her, would take her, when of age, as his wife or concubine. (Note, Gen. xxv. 5, 6.) If therefore the person who bought her changed his mind, and did not espouse her, or if he afterwards grew weary of her; he was required to let her “be redeemed” at any time by her friends, at a reasonable price: and if this were not done, he was not allowed to marry her, to any other person, or to sell her into another family. Thus the words rendered “a strange people,” are generally understood, because it is supposed no Hebrew slave could be sold to a Gentile: yet perhaps they mean, that he must not sell her to one of another nation, who desired to have her as his concubine, where she would be in danger of forgetting the true religion; and having already deceived her, he must not be permitted to add one injury to another.—

If he had betrothed her to his son, he must act towards her as a father to his daughter, not as a master to his slave: and whether he or his son had married her, and then afterwards took another wife; he must either maintain her suitably, and give her some recompence for the injury, or else freely set her at liberty.—It is evident this case was very different from that of a woman sold for theft, or who sold herself because of her poverty; for there is no proof, that that might not be the case of a woman, as well as of a man. (Deut. xv. 12.) But a daughter sold by her father, in expectation that she should be espoused by her master or one of his sons, was entitled to peculiar tenderness, and must be dealt with by other rules than slaves of another description.

V. 12—14. If a man smote another wilfully, so that he died, whether out of previous resentment, or sudden anger, it was to be deemed murder; but when it was merely by accident, which is here called “God’s delivering him into his hand,” (as God was thus pleased to take away the life which he gave,) the cities of refuge would be appointed for him to flee to. (Marg. Ref. r.) Yet so far would they be from affording a security to the wilful, presumptuous, deliberate murderer, that he was to be taken by the officers of justice even from the altar of God itself, and put to death. ‘Though he was the high priest, and in the act of sacrifice, he was to be taken away without delay, if he had committed wilful murder.’ Bp. Patrick. (Note, 1 Kings ii. 26, 27.)—The heathen altars and temples were generally refuges for criminals: but God would not have his altar profaned, by protecting those who deserved punishment; nor did he appoint any sacrifice for murder. (Note, 1 Kings ii. 28—34.)—It is thought, that there was some place appointed in the camp, as a refuge for the unfortunate manslayer, while the Israelites were in the wilderness.

V. 15—17. To smite either father or mother, in a manner which indicated contempt or malice, or left marks of violence, was deemed a proof of so ungrateful and unnatural a disposition, that no provocation was admitted as an excuse, but the offence was made capital: nay, he who cursed his father or mother, who uttered imprecations, ill-

^z Gen. xxxvii. 28. ¹ selleth him, or if he be ^a found in his hand, he shall surely be put to death. ^g Gen. ix 6. Num. xxxv. 30—33.

^a xxii. 4. ^b Lev. xx. 9. ¹⁷ And ^b he that ^a curseth his father, or his mother, shall surely be put to death. ^h Heb. aranged. Gen. iv. 15. 24 Num. xxxv. 19. Rom. xiii. 4.

^c 22. ii. 13. Deut. xxv. 11. 2 Sam. xiv 6. ¹⁸ ¶ And if ^c men strive together, and one smite ^t another with ^d a stone, or with his fist, and he die not, but keepeth his bed :

^e 2 Sam. iii. 29. Zech. viii. 4. ¹⁹ If he rise again, and walk abroad ^e upon his staff, then shall he that smote him be quit : only he shall pay ^f for ^t the loss of his time, and shall cause him to be thoroughly healed.

^z Heb. his ceasing. ^f 26, 27. Deut. xix. 21. Prov. xxix. 19. 1s. lviii. 3, 4. ²⁰ And if a man ^f smite his servant, or his maid, with a rod, and he die under his hand ; ^g he shall be surely ^h punished.

²¹ Notwithstanding, if he continue a day or two, he shall not be punished : for ^h he is his money.

²² ¶ If men ⁱ strive and hurt a woman with child, so that her fruit depart from her, and yet no mischief follow ; he shall be surely punished, according as the woman's husband will lay upon him ; and he shall pay ^k as the judges determine.

²³ And if any mischief follow, then thou shalt give ^l life for life,

²⁴ ^m Eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot, wishes, or revilings, against a parent, was included in the same sentence ; though few crimes were made capital by the law of Moses ! The authority of God, as delegated to parents, is honoured when they are honoured, and despised when they are despised. To rebel against the lawful exercise of this authority is rebellion against God : and in any case, where not only obedience is refused, but revenge and malice expressed, or violence attempted against the person of a parent, it must be considered as one of the highest crimes both against God and man, which can be conceived. (Note, Matt. xv. 3—6.)—The same honour is as expressly required by the divine law, to be rendered to rulers, as the ministers of Providence in governing nations : yet both rulers and parents may often be very faulty, both in their general conduct, and in the exercise of their delegated authority.—Between these two capital offences, another is very remarkably inserted ; namely, that of stealing a man in order to sell him for a slave ; whether the thief had actually sold him, or whether he continued in his possession, having had no opportunity of selling him before his crime was detected.—The Jewish writers assert, that it was not a capital crime to steal one of another nation, but only when the person stolen was a Hebrew : yet this is by no means consistent with the text, which certainly implies, that he who stole any one of the human species, in order to make a slave of him, should be punished with death. It can scarcely be supposed, that the Israelites in general would purchase their brethren of those who stole them : so that this crime would commonly be aggravated, by sending them away into foreign countries, to be slaves to idolaters, at a distance from the worship and ordinances of God.—The Septuagint reverse the order, and place the two judgments concerning parents together, in the most natural order.

V. 18, 19. If on any sudden quarrel two men fought together, and one smote the other, either with his fist, or a stone, or whatever came to hand ; he was not to be punished as a murderer, provided the wounded person so far recovered as to walk abroad again ; because, if he died afterwards, it might be supposed that his death arose from some other cause.—This exception forcibly establishes the general rule ; and shews that, even in unpremeditated encounter, if one man killed another, either on the spot, or by a mortal wound, he was adjudged a murderer, and punished as such ; without even determining who was the aggressor in the quarrel : nor is there any exception, in this case, in the laws respecting the cities of refuge.—Even if the person smitten recovered, the other must pay him for his loss of time, and the expenses of his being thoroughly cured.—It may be proper to notice the contrariety of this law to the usages in this nation ; according to which, even those, who fight duels with weapons of death, or contend in pitched battles for prizes or renown, and in them kill their opponents, in general escape almost, if not entirely, without punishment !

V. 20, 21. The killing of a slave, by any weapon of death, was not distinguished in the law from other murders : and if a slave died, while his master was correcting him with a rod, or staff, the master must be surely punished. It is not said, “He shall surely be put to death :” and it is therefore supposed, that a discretionary power was lodged with the magistrates, to punish him according to circumstances, which might make his cruelty appear more or less atrocious. It could not however be supposed, that he meant to commit murder, and the death of his slave would be a considerable loss to him : so that if the slave lived a day or two afterwards, the master was not to be punished by the magistrate, but left to the judgment of God.

V. 22—25. In case two men strove together, and the wife of one of them, being pregnant, interposed, and received a hurt which caused her to miscarry, but produced no further mischief ; the other party must be punished for the injury, by a fine laid on him to be paid to the woman's husband, who might lay his damages for the mischief ; yet the magistrates must determine what compensation should actually be paid. But if any further detriment followed to the woman, the magistrates were authorized to punish the offender, even so far as to put him to death if the woman died ; and in case of lighter injuries, to inflict an exact retaliation on him. These were not allowances made to private revenge ; but laws to regulate the magistrate's decision, who might go thus far if the heinousness of the offence required it, but not further : and it seems reasonable to suppose, that they were also allowed to abate of this rigour, when alleviating circum-

25 Burning for burning, wound for wound, stripe for stripe.

26 And if a man ^a smite the eye of his servant, or the eye of his maid, that it perish; he shall let him go free for his eye's sake.

^a 20. Deut. xvi. 19. Neh. v. 5. Job xxxi. 13—15. Ps. ix. 12. x. 14. 1st. lxxii. 12 —14. Prov. xxii 22, 23. Eph. vi. 9. Col. iv 1.

27 And if he smite out his man-servant's tooth, or his maid-servant's tooth; he shall let him go free for his tooth's sake.

28 ¶ If an ox gore a man or a woman, that they die: then ^b the ox shall be surely stoned, and his flesh shall not be eaten; but the owner of the ox shall be quit.

^b 32. Gen. ix 5, 6. Lev. xx. 15, 16.

29 But if the ox were wont to push with his horn in time past, and it hath been testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in, but that he hath killed a man or a woman; the ox shall be stoned, and ^c his owner also shall be put to death.

^c Deut. xxi. 1—9

30 If there be laid on him a sum of money, then he shall give ^d for the ransom of his life, whatsoever is laid upon him.

^d 22. Num. xxxv. 31—33

31 Whether he have gored a son or have gored a daughter, according to this judgment shall it be done unto him.

32 If the ox shall push a man-servant, or maid-servant; he shall give unto their master ^e thirty shekels of silver, ^f and the ox shall be stoned.

^e Gen. xxxvii. 28. Zech. xi. 12, 13. Matt. xxvi. 15. xxvii. 3—9.

33 ¶ And if a man shall ^g open a pit, or if a man shall dig a pit, and not cover it, and an ox or an ass fall therein;

^f 28, 29. ^g Ps. ix. 15. cxix 85. Prov. xxviii. 10. Ec. x. 8. Jer. xviii 20, 22

34 The ^h owner of the pit shall make ⁱ it good, and give money unto the owner of them; and the dead beast shall be his.

^h 29, 30. xxii. 6. ⁱ 14

35 And if one man's ox hurt another's that he die, then they shall sell the live ox, and divide the money of it, and the dead ox also they shall divide.

36 Or ^k if it be known that the ox ^l hath used to push in time past, and his owner hath not kept him in; he shall surely pay ox for ox, and the dead shall be his own.

stances rendered it proper.—As a variety of mischiefs are stated, some of which could scarcely happen in the case referred to; it is likely, that various other suits for personal injuries were determined by the same rule. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 26, 27. It is obvious, that this merciful restraint on the passions of those who possessed slaves, though it only mentioned the eye and the tooth, was meant to extend to every other material personal injury; and that all slaves, whether Israelites or not, were to have the benefit of it. The degree of melioration, which the condition of slaves would receive from such a law impartially executed, can scarcely be conceived.

V. 28—32. To shew the value of the life of man, in the judgment of God; to enhance the horror at the thoughts of murder, in the mind of every Israelite: and to increase circumspection in guarding against every thing which might cause death; it was enacted, that the ox, or bull, which gored any person so that he died, should be stoned. For similar reasons, and that the owner's loss might be the greater, it was added that his flesh should not be eaten.—It is obvious, that the spirit of this statute would apply to a variety of similar cases. If this was the first instance, in which the owner had been fairly acquainted with the mischievousness of his ox, or bull, he was not liable to any further punishment: but if he had been informed of preceding instances of the same kind, and had neglected to take care of the animal, and through his neglect any one lost his life; not only must the ox be stoned, but the owner might be punished as a murderer. Yet, in case of alleviating circumstances, the magistrates were permitted to change this punishment into a pecuniary mulct, as the ransom of his life. And this statute was to be enforced, not only if a grown man or woman was killed, but also if it was a male or a female child, provided it were not a slave. But in case the person gored was a slave, the owner, besides the loss of the ox, must pay the fine of thirty shekels to the proprietor of the slave.—This valuation of a slave was precisely the sum, for which Judas betrayed Christ!—As a compensation in this law is expressly allowed, we may conclude that it was not allowed where it is not mentioned.

If there be laid, &c. (30) “If an atonement (חַטָּאת) be laid upon him, he shall give a ransom of his life, &c.” Εαν δε λυτρα επιβληθη, κ. τ. λ. Sept.

V. 33—36. It must be supposed, that these compendious statutes were intended as general rules, according to which an immense number of particular causes would be decided by the magistrates: for it is impossible to multiply laws to meet all the vast variety of cases, which occur in the course of human affairs. But if the spirit of these laws were observed, every litigation might equitably be terminated, by a due consideration of the degree in which carelessness or selfishness had been concerned, in the injuries which one man suffered by the cattle or other property of his neighbour.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS

V. 1—11.

The commandments of God, as well as his providential dispensations, not only relate to the grand outlines of his administration but descend to minute particulars and the

CHAP. XXII.

Laws concerning theft and fraud; kindling fires which occasioned damage; breach of trust; and things borrowed and hired, 1—15. Concerning seducers, witchcraft, bestiality, idolatry, and the treatment of strangers, widows, and orphans, 16—24. Against usury and reviling rulers: concerning the first-fruits and firstlings, and against eating the flesh of torn animals, 25—31.

† Or, goat.
 * Lev. vi. 1—6.
 Num. v. 7. 2 Sam.
 xii. 6. Prov. vi.
 31. Luke xix. 8.

IF a man shall steal an ox, or a sheep, and kill it, or sell it; * he shall meanest objects; especially when righteousness, goodness, and truth, are concerned. With a condescending regard, we particularly watches over those, who are most exposed to oppression, injustice, or damage; and he has respect to all ranks, from the poorest beggar to the mightiest monarch; and to all the stages of human existence, from the newly-conceived embryo in the womb, to decrepit old age. Though he no longer reigns over any single nation, in that peculiar sense in which he reigned over Israel; yet he is King over all the earth, and will at his awful tribunal arraign and condemn those violations of his law, which here escape notice, or elude or outbrave the sword of human justice.—Having his precepts and example before our eyes, and this future judgment in our remembrance; with what equity, sincerity, and humanity should we treat our servants, dependents, and inferiors! Indeed we ought so to behave towards our domesticks, that, though free from other bonds, they may be attached to us by the ties of love, and count it their privilege to spend and close their days in our service.—Let us also recollect, that now the gospel “proclaims liberty to the captive, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound:” nothing but love to our hateful and ruinous bondage, and to our associates in it, can keep us from enjoying true freedom in the service and favour of God. But, if we deliberately choose slavery, we must serve sin and Satan for ever. Let us then, as the redeemed of the Lord, break off every sinful connexion, and leave all for his sake: and from love to his name, let us have our ears, as it were, nailed to the posts of his door, that we may be his happy servants for ever and ever.—But, if we are his willing people, we shall be far from behaving deceitfully, in the important concern of marriage. How much then shall we abhor the baseness of consigning to lasting disgrace or misery, for the sake of our own indulgence, an unhappy object, over whom in any way we have acquired an ascendancy! On the contrary, while purity, sincerity, and equity, mark our whole conduct, we shall learn habitually to sacrifice our own inclinations, even in things lawful, to the general interests of humanity, or the particular advantage or comfort of the individuals, over whom we have the greatest influence or authority.

V. 12—36.

Let children hear, with trembling, the sentence denounced by the unchangeable God, against such as are ungrateful and rebellious: and let them remember, that if they dare to lift a hand, on any account, against their parents, or to curse them in their hearts, or slander their characters, or needlessly publish their faults, either while restore ^b five oxen for an ox, and four ^b sheep for a sheep. Prov. xiv. 4.

2 If a thief be found ^c breaking up, and be smitten that he die, there shall c Job xxiv. 14 xxx. 5. Hos. vii. 1. Joel ii. 9. Matt. vi. 19, 20. xxiv. 43. 1 Thes v. 2. ^d no blood be shed for him. d Num. xxxv. 27.

3 If the sun be risen upon him, there shall be blood shed for him; for he should make full restitution; if he have nothing, ^e then he shall be sold for his theft. e See on xxi. 2.—Judg. ii. 14. x. 7. Is. i. 1.

4 If the theft be certainly ^f found in f xxi. 16.

they live, or after their death; God will severely punish them, except they repent. And let parents also hence learn to redouble their care, in educating their children, giving them good instructions, praying for them, and setting them a good example, especially in restraining their passions: and let them likewise avoid that harshness or severity, which might provoke them to wrath, and tempt them to such heinous crimes.—While we rejoice that, in this island, laws concerning slavery are not wanted; let us remember, that if we are true Christians, we shall have no occasion for penal statutes to restrain us from stealing or enslaving our brethren of the human species; or of such varied methods to inspire us with horror of the sin of murder: for, so far from lying in wait to shed blood, or trading in the bodies of men, we shall watch for, and gladly embrace, the opportunity of preserving the liberty or life of our enemy; still repressing the rising emotions of anger, pouring out our prayers for them, and attempting acts of kindness under the greatest provocations: and, instead of enforcing the law of retaliation, we shall ever be ambitious of “overcoming evil with good.”—We shall also guard, though with trouble and loss, against whatever can endanger the life or property of another; and while ready in any way to make up, to the utmost of our power, the damage which we have indiscreetly, or even without blame, occasioned to others, we shall be very backward in demanding such satisfaction to ourselves.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXII. V. 1—4. The instances here adduced, to fix the principles on which the magistrates of Israel must proceed in regard to theft and robbery, are taken especially from the cattle; because in these their property chiefly consisted, and these would likewise be most exposed to depredation.—If any person had stolen a sheep or goat, and had proceeded so far as to kill or sell it, he was sentenced to restore fourfold; if an ox, which besides its value was very useful for labour, fivefold. Yet, in case his theft was detected while the animal was still alive in his possession, he was only required to restore it double; probably, because in this case, he seemed to discover more hesitation, and less subtlety or industry, in dishonesty, than if he had proceeded to sell or kill it. The ass is also mentioned in this clause (4), and no doubt the camel, and other useful animals, were included in the design of the law.—But if the thief voluntarily confessed, and restored the property which he had stolen, he was only required to add a fifth part to it. (Lev. vi. 4, 5.)—In case, however, any one was detected in the night, endeavouring forcibly to his hand alive, whether it be ox, or ass, or sheep; ^g he shall restore double.

^g 1. 7. 9. Prov vi 31. Is. xl. 2. Jer xvi. 18. Rev. xviii. 6.

5 ¶ If a man shall cause a field or vineyard to be eaten, and shall put in his beast, and shall feed in another man's field: of the best of his own field, and of the best of his own vineyard, ^h shall he make restitution.

^h 3. 12. Job xx. 18.

6 If fire break out, and catch in thorns, ⁱ so that the stacks of corn, or the standing corn, or the field be consumed therewith; ^k he that kindled the fire shall surely make restitution.

ⁱ Judg. xv. 4. 5. 2 Sam. xiv. 30. 31.

^k 9. 12. xxi. 33. 34.

7 ¶ If a man shall deliver unto his neighbour money or stuff to keep, and it be stolen out of the man's house; ^l if the thief be found, ^m let him pay double.

^l Prov. vi. 30. 31. Jer. li. 26. Jobn xii. 6. 1 Cor. vi. 10.

^m See on 4. n. 28. Marg. xxi. 6. Deut. xvi. 18. xix. 17. 18. 1 Chr. xxiii. 4. Ps. lxxxii. 1.

8 If the thief be not found, then the master of the house shall be brought unto ^o the judges, to see whether he have put his hand unto his neighbour's goods.

9 For all manner of ^o trespass, whether it be for ox, for ass, for sheep, for raiment, or for any manner of lost thing, which another challengeth to be his, ^p the cause of both parties shall come before the judges; and whom the judges shall condemn, he shall ^q pay double unto his neighbour.

^o Num. v. 6. 7. 1 Kings vii. 31. Matt. vi. 14. 15. xxiii. 15. 35. Luke xvii. 3. 4.

^p xviii. 21. 22. xxiii. 6-8. Deut. xvi. 18. 19. xix. 16-18. xxi. 1. 2 Chr. xix. 10.

^q 4. 7.

10 If a man ^r deliver unto his neighbour an ass, or an ox, or a sheep, or any beast to keep; and it die, or be hurt, or driven away, no man seeing it:

^r Gen. xxxix. 8. Luke xii. 48. xvi. 11. 2 Tim. i. 12.

11 Then shall ^s an oath of the LORD be between them both, ^t that he hath not put his hand unto his neighbour's goods: and the owner of it shall accept thereof, and he shall not make it good.

^s Lev. v. 1. vi. 3. 1 Kings ii. 42-43. Prov. xxx. 9. Heb. vi. 16. 19. xxiii. 1.

12 And if it be ^u stolen from him, he break into a house, it might be considered as an assault on the lives of the inhabitants, as well as an attempt to plunder their property; and if, in repelling the assault, the robber was slain, the person who killed him was not punishable. But if he was slain after sun-rise, his death must be punished as murder; because there was another method of securing or recovering the property; and it is supposed that no assault was made on the life of any one.—In all cases, when the thief, or robber, could not make the stipulated restitution, he was sold for the theft for a limited time, not exceeding six years: and, without doubt, the injured person received the emolument arising in either way, at least when moderate expenses had been deducted.—It is not stated what restitution should be made by him, who forcibly plundered goods from a house; so that it must be supposed, that the magistrates were authorized to decide according to circumstances.

^u 7. Gen. xxxi. 39.

Such statutes would be deemed, at present, very inadequate to the security of property. But though the state of society in this age and nation is very different, yet human nature is the same; and we have no reason to consider the Israelites as more tractable than the rest of our species. It may in some cases be urged, that robbery among us, is more commonly connected with the avowed purpose of murder, in case of resistance, which enhances the crime exceedingly: but it requires more serious consideration, how far this arises from the punishment of theft being made equal to that of murder, which confounds the disparity of the two crimes in the minds of men, and removes the restraint arising from the dread of a severer penalty. This plea however, in very many cases, cannot be advanced; and not only the equity, but even the policy, of multiplying capital offences, is very questionable; nay, facts prove that it defeats its own end. Humane persons are reluctant to be concerned in taking away the life of one, who has only deprived them of property: and therefore they will not prosecute if it can be avoided. And, in various ways, compassion allows the young offender to escape with impunity: this encourages him to proceed with greater confidence; and having corrupted many others, as well as multiplied crimes more and more atrocious, he at last perhaps is sentenced to die.—But frequent escapes give boldness in perilous attempts of all kinds; and the same self-flattery, which soothes every adventurer in a lottery with the hope of the highest prizes, though very few can gain them; far more powerfully operates on the minds of the dishonest, to expect impunity, while so very many in proportion actually escape.—The dread of a lighter punishment, yet exposing the culprit to much present pain or hard labour, and total exclusion from all congenial society, and so constantly inflicted as to appear unavoidable, would probably be far more effectual in preventing crimes, than a remote possibility of an ignominious death; especially as a future state of retribution has seldom much place in the thoughts of these unhappy men.

V 5, 6. It is evident that these instances were intended, as illustrations of the general principles of equity, by which many similar cases were to be determined. We may suppose that the fire, which did the mischief, was kindled carelessly, or on a man's own ground for some special purpose, and that for want of proper attention, it spread so far as to injure others: for wilfully and maliciously to kindle a destructive fire, is a crime deserving of far severer punishment.

V. 7—15. If money, plate, or furniture, were entrusted to any one, from which he derived no emolument, and it was lost out of his house, where he had placed it for security; he was not bound to make it good, in case it was stolen and could not be recovered. Yet if any suspicion rested on him, that he had secreted the property entrusted, the magistrates were authorized to examine the evidence, and decide accordingly.—In this and other matters of trespass or trust, their sentence was final; and breach of trust, as well as theft, was punishable by double restitution.

shall make restitution unto the owner thereof.

^x Ez. iv. 14. Am. ii. 12. Mic. v. 8. Nah. ii. 12. 13 If it be ^x torn in pieces, then let him bring it for witness, and he shall not make good that which was torn.

^y Deut. xv. 2. xxiii. 19, 20. Neh. v. 4. Ps. xxxvii. 21. Matt. v. 42. Luke vi. 35. ^z 11. xxi. 34. Lev. xxiv. 18. 14 And if a man ^y borrow ought of his neighbour, and it be hurt, or die, the owner thereof being not with it; he shall surely ^z make it good.

15 But if the owner thereof be with

When an ox, sheep, or ass, was committed to another's care, (probably with a compensation for its subsistence, or wages for tending it,) if it happened to die, or to receive any hurt, or to be driven away with other cattle by an invading enemy, or by robbers, when none were present to bear witness, the person entrusted, on making oath that he had not been accessory to the loss, was freed; but if it was stolen from among his cattle, and there was any reason to suppose he had not taken proper care of it, he must make it good. If, however, it had been torn in pieces by a wild beast, and he could bring any remains of the carcase in proof of it, he was not answerable.—He who gratuitously used the labour of his neighbour's ox, or ass, or camel, if it died or was hurt in the absence of the owner, must make it good; for it might be thought he had caused it to labour excessively, or been cruel to it; but if the owner was present, this could not be suspected, and he must not be compelled to make it good. When hire was paid for the labour of an animal, and any harm came to it, the owner could not demand restitution, at least unless he could prove that it had been abused.—The more attentively these statutes are examined, the more clearly will it be seen, that the spirit of them is equitable, reasonable, mild, and humane, in no common degree.

V. 16, 17. This statute relates to a case, which must carefully be distinguished from some others, that may be confounded with it. It is assumed, that no force was used, but merely persuasions and blandishments; and that the young woman was not betrothed to another man. In general, it might be supposed, that promises, or at least intimations, of marriage would be made by the seducer; and therefore he was bound to "endow her to be his wife." Some expositors are of opinion, that he must either endow her, that is, give her a sum of money for the injury, or marry her: but the obvious meaning of the law is, that he must take her for his wife, and endow her, or provide for her suitably according to his station. It does not appear, that either the seducer, or the person seduced, was allowed a negative; but the young woman's father might refuse his consent, and in this case the seducer must pay a certain sum of money as a compensation for the injury. This sum is generally supposed to have been fifty shekels: but the passage from which this conclusion is made, seems to refer to a rape; and then the money was paid to the father; though the offender was obliged to marry, and not allowed to divorce, the injured damsel. (Deut. xxii. 28, 29.)—The option here granted the father, shews, that great deference is owing in respect of marriage to parental authority; and it also demonstrates, that marriage is en-it, he shall not make it good: if it be an hired thing, ^a it came for his hire.

16 ¶ And if ^b a man entice a maid that is not betrothed, and lie with her; he shall surely endow her to be his wife.

17 If her father ^c utterly refuse to give her unto him, he shall ^d pay money according to the ^d dowry of virgins.

18 Thou ^e shalt not suffer a witch to live.

Zech. viii. 10.
Gen. xxxiv. 2—4. Deut. xxii. 28, 29.
Deut. vii. 3, 4.
Heb. weigh.
Gen. xxiii. 16.
Gen. xxxiv. 12.
1 Sam. xviii. 25.
Lev. xix. 26, 31.
xx. 6, 27. Deut. xviii. 10, 11.
1 Sam. xxviii. 3.
9. Is. xix. 3. Acts viii. 9—11. xvi. 16—19. xix. 19. Gal. v. 20.

tirely a distinct matter, in the word of God, from any voluntary intercourse between a man and a woman, however privately accompanied by reciprocal assurances, if not avowedly sanctioned by some publick recognition.—It is not here stated, whether the seducer, if previously married, was bound to take the seduced damsel also as his wife; nor is it material to us. Polygamy was then an existing evil, concerning which many regulations were made; but Christianity has in general terminated it, as far as its authority has been acknowledged.—Nothing could be conceived more equitable, than some regulation like this statute, if properly restricted to real seduction by an unmarried man. But it is matter of fact, capable of full proof, that, in these licentious days, young women in inferior circumstances, and even encouraged by their parents, (shocking as it may seem,) employ their utmost address to attract the attention of young men of better circumstances; in order that, under the pretence of seduction, they may be married to greater advantage! And, in attempting to remedy the grievous evil of real seduction, this should by no means be encouraged and increased. It is, however, highly reasonable, that every unmarried man, whatever his circumstances be, who debauches a virgin with promises of marriage, or any engagements which have the same effect upon her mind, should be obliged actually to marry her; and that, if a married man, professing himself unmarried, should thus seduce a virgin, he should be obliged to maintain her, while she continues unmarried. But a young woman, who suffers herself to be enticed by a man, whom she knows to be married, seems not entitled to the same compensation, whatever punishment he may deserve.

V. 18. Witchcraft is generally understood to mean, 'a compact with evil spirits, by whose agency and assistance, applied for by certain incantations, effects of various kinds may be produced, by which malice, or covetousness, or other corrupt passions, may be gratified.' A vast variety of practices, with different degrees of aggravation, which will hereafter be considered, agree in common with witchcraft, in avowedly making Satan "the god of the world," and the god of those who thus apply to him for information or assistance.—It is readily allowed that much imposture on the one hand, (which forms a very singular kind of hypocrisy,) and much superstition, folly, and cruelty on the other, have taken place, in respect of these practices, whether real or pretended. But it seems one of the most flagrant absurdities of modern Sadduceism, to suppose that God himself would repeatedly command the magistrates of his people to punish with death a crime which never was committed! If it should be said, that 19 Whosoever ^flieth with a beast, shall surely be put to death.

20 He that ^gsacrificeth unto any god, save unto the Lord only, he shall be ^hutterly destroyed.

21 ¶ Thou shalt neither ⁱvex a stranger, nor oppress him: ^kfor ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.

22 Ye ^lshall not afflict any widow, or fatherless child.

23 If thou afflict them in any wise, and they ^mcry at all unto me, ⁿI will surely hear their cry;

24 And ^omy wrath shall wax hot, and I will kill you with the sword; and I will hear; ^pfor I am gracious.

1 Lev xviii. 23. xx. 15, 16. Deut xxvii. 21.
2 Num. xxv. 2-5. Deut. xiii. 1-15. xviii. 2-5. xviii. 20.
3 Num. xxi. 3. Josh. xxiii. 15, 16.
4 xxiii. 9. Lev. xix. 33. xxv. 35. Deut. x. 19. Jer. vii. 6, xxii. 3. Zech. vii. 10.
5 xx. 2. xxiii. 9. 1. out. x. 19. xv. 15. xxiii. 7.
6 Deut. x. 18. xxiv. 17. xxvii. 19. Ps. xciv. 6. Is. i. 17. 23. x. 2. Ez. xxii. 7. Zech. vii. 10. Jam. i. 27.
7 Deut. xv. 9. xxiv. 15. Job xxxi. 38, 39. xxxv. 9. Luke xviii. 7.
8 Job xxxiv. 28. Ps. x. 17. 18. xxiii. 6. cxi. 12. cxlvi. 7-9. Prov. xxii. 22, 23. xxiii. 10, 11. Jam. v. 4. Job xxxi. 23. Ps. lxxvi. 7. xc. 11. Nah. i. 6. Rom. ii. 5-9. Heo. x. 31.

and ^pyour wives shall be widows, and your children fatherless.

25 If thou ^qlend money to any of my people that is poor by thee, thou shalt not be to him as an usurer, neither shalt thou lay upon him usury.

26 If thou at all take thy neighbour's raiment ^rto pledge, thou shalt deliver it unto him by that the sun goeth down:

27 For that is his covering only, it is his raiment for his skin: wherein shall he sleep? And it shall come to pass, ^swhen he crieth unto me, that I will hear; ^tfor I am gracious.

1 Job xxvii. 13-15. Ps. lxxviii. 65, 64. cix. 9. Jer. xv. 8. xxiii. 21. Luke vi. 35.
2 Lev. xxv. 35-37. Deut. xxiii. 19, 20. 2 Kings iv. 1. 7. Neh. v. 2-5. 7. 10, 11. Ps. xv. 5. Prov. xxviii. 8. 1er. xv. 10. Ez. xxiii. 8. 17. Matt. xxv. 27. Luke xix. 23.
3 Deut. xxiv. 6 10 -13. 17. Jobxxii. 6. xxiv. 3. 9. Prov. xx. 16. xxii. 27. Ez. xxviii. 7. 16. xxxiii. 15. Am. ii. 8.
4 ii. 23, 24. Ps. xxxiv. 6. lxxii. 12 Is. xix. 20.
5 xxiv. 6. Ps. cxxvi. 10, 11.

mere pretences to witchcraft might warrant laws against it; I would only desire the reader to examine the marginal references, and judge for himself, whether it be not spoken of in Scripture as a real practice.—The existence, sagacity malice, ambition, and power of evil spirits, are sufficiently declared in Scripture: there can be no doubt, that they are both able and willing thus to interpose, if permitted: and that human nature is capable of such wickedness, as even knowingly to combine with them. That witchcraft may be, that it hath been, and that it still is in some parts of the world, actually practised, seems capable of proof, were any collateral evidence necessary to confirm the truth of the divine testimony. But as, by certain degrees of cultivation, wild beasts are banished or extirpated; so, in some stages of civilization, the practice of witchcraft is nearly excluded. The truth is this; in such circumstances it no longer so well answers Satan's grand purpose of deception and destruction: he therefore changes his ground, and varies his attack; nor is he any loser, by exchanging the practice of witchcraft for the prevalence of scepticism.—Though witch, in the feminine, is the word here used; yet in other places, the masculine word is employed, and various things of the same nature are prohibited on the penalty of death.

V. 20. Idolatry was universally prohibited in the moral law; but by the judicial law, it was punishable by death, when committed by an Israelite, or by one that dwelt among the Israelites: for to these exclusively, laws given to the magistrates of Israel could extend. Sacrificing, being the principal act of religious worship at that time, was selected as the open act of idolatry, which constituted the capital offence. The expression utterly destroyed implies, that the offender should be devoted to entire destruction, as an accursed thing, or a sacrifice to the awful justice of God. Whole cities involved in the guilt of idolatry were afterwards sentenced to utter destruction, by an universal execution of the inhabitants: (Notes, Deut. xiii.) for this crime especially was a breach of the national covenant; but, so long as the judges punished it according to the law, it would not be accounted a national forfeiture.

V. 21—24. It was desirable that strangers should be allured by kind usage to live among the Israelites, provided they did not practise idolatry, or violate the requirements of the judicial law; in order that they might thus be induced to think favourably of true religion, and at length to embrace it. They must not, therefore, be harassed by any injury, or reproach, or vexation, which might harden them in prejudice, or drive them back among idolaters.—In thus behaving kindly to strangers, the Israelites should call to mind their late situation in Egypt, and the anguish of spirit which they had endured under oppression in a strange land.—The subsequent verses, in which JEHOVAH avows himself the Husband of the widow, and the Father of the orphan, are peculiarly illustrative of the kind and compassionate spirit of the Mosaic law; though special reasons rendered some statutes needful and salutary, which at present appear rigorous to the superficial reader. No penalty was enjoined to be inflicted by the magistrates, on those who oppressed the stranger, the widow, and the orphan, unless some violation of other statutes could be proved: because the Lord himself undertook to avenge their cause, by a just retaliation on their oppressors and their families.

V. 25—27. Usury, as here stated, properly consists in taking interest from the poor, on what they borrow for present subsistence, or in urgent need; which tends to enrich the lender by still more impoverishing the borrower. This was frequently carried to such a pitch among the ancients, and even the Israelites, that the creditors constrained their debtors to sell themselves or their children for slaves; which was an aggravated violation of the law of love. (Note, Neh. v. 1—5.)—The Israelites were but little engaged in commerce; and their law was not only suited, but intended, to keep them from mingling by any means with other nations. Their land also was divided by lot, and they were not allowed to alienate their inheritances. They were not, therefore, greatly in the way of lending or taking up money upon interest, to employ in trade, or expend in estates: in which cases, and in those of the like nature, it does not appear inconsistent with either equity or love, for the lender to receive a proportion of the profits from the borrower. The original is indeed remarkable; for it may be rendered, "If thou lend money to my people, even to a poor man, &c." yet it is generally thought, that the Israelites were not allowed in any ordinary case, to take interest for money, or usury of any

• Or, judges. 9. 28 Thou shalt not revile the * gods,
Ps. lxxvii. 1—7. cxxxviii. 1. John x. 34, 35.
 nor curse the ruler of thy people.
 • xxi 17. 1 Sam. 29 Thou shalt not delay to offer xxiv 6. 10. xxvi 9. Ec. x. 20. Acts xxiii. 5. Rom. xiii. 2—7. Tit. iii. 1, 2. 1 Pet. ii. 17. 2 Pet. ii. 10. Jude 8. x xxiii. 19. Deut. xxvi. 2—10. 2 Kings iv. 42. 2 Chr. xxxi. 5. Prov. iii. 9. 10. Ez. xx. 40. Matt. vi. 33 Rom. viii. 23. Jam. i. 18. † Heb. thy fulness. † Heb. tear.
 † the first of thy ripe fruits and of thy liquors : † the first-born of thy sons shalt thou give unto me.

30 Likewise shalt thou do with thine oxen, and with thy sheep : † seven days it shall be with his dam : on the eighth day thou shalt give it me. z Lev. xxi. 27. a xix. 5, 6. Lev. xi. 45. xix. 2. Deut. xiv. 21. 1 Pet. i. 15, 16. b Lev. xvii. 15, 16. xx. 25. xxii. 8. Deut. xiv. 21. Ez. iv. 14. xlv. 31. Acts x. 14. xv. 20.

31 And ye shall be † holy men unto me : † neither shall ye eat any flesh that is torn of beasts in the field : ye shall cast it to the dogs.

other kind, from their brethren. As, however, they were permitted to take it of the Gentiles, though expressly required not to oppress them ; it is evident that interest on lent money is not in itself unjust, or contrary to the divine law, when not attended by oppressive circumstances. (Deut. xxiii. 19, 20.)—But, besides the practice of exacting exorbitant interest of the poor, it was also customary to take a pledge for the payment of the money advanced ; and this was commonly either the garment which they wore by day, or the covering under which they slept at night. But if an Israelite in any case took such a pledge, he was required to restore it before night ; not by compulsion of the magistrate, but as a matter of conscience towards God. The language assigning the reasons, why this should be done, is a very beautiful appeal to the tenderest emotions of pity for the distressed : and the concluding sentence,—“And it shall come to pass when he crieth “unto me, I will hear ; for I am gracious,”—gives a most endearing view of the perfections and government of God, for the encouragement and imitation of his worshippers. Yet the tender compassion and mercy of the Lord are stated, to be perfectly consistent with his severest vengeance, on the cruel oppressor of the needy who cry unto him.—How far the business of a pawnbroker, in the present state of society, consists with the spirit of these precepts, is a question which involves much difficulty. Some are of opinion, and argue with considerable plausibility, that the very practice is radically injurious to society, and inconsistent with Christianity ; and certainly, as it is frequently conducted, it is so. But, as receiving interest is not in all cases absolutely prohibited, it may be doubted whether taking pledges be always unjust or improper. It is not, however, an employment to which a real Christian can be supposed so partial, as to choose it either for himself or his children, after he has become acquainted with the truth, power, and spirit of the gospel. But should the grace of God meet with a person already engaged in this business, as having been educated to it, or accustomed to get his subsistence by it ; and should his disposition be really formed to strict uprightness, benevolence, and conscientiousness ; it may be questioned whether by rendering his employment much less lucrative, he may not make it even beneficial, or at least not oppressive, to others ; so as to have the prayers of the poor for him, not their cries against him. In this case the employment may be consistent with the principles of Christianity, and perhaps in no other. If such a person should, after serious examination and fervent prayers to God for direction, find himself at liberty to continue in his calling, he will “abide therein “with God ;” he will consider it as his cross, and take it up as such ; and, disdaining the prospect of heaping up wealth by every profit which the laws of the land may allow, he will carefully consult the law of God, of equity, of humanity, and of love ; and will only go so far in his employment, as he verily deems consistent with these rules. And if a man’s heart be upright, the Lord will either satisfy him to proceed, or encourage him to cast himself upon his providence in renouncing it.

V. 28. The word (עֲרִיצָה) here rendered gods is repeatedly used for judges in this chapter ; and it is therefore probable, that the former clause of the verse referred to the magistrates of Israel in general ; and the latter to their chief magistrate, who was also the high priest, when Paul before the council quoted this statute. (Note, Acts xxiii. 1—5.) The language used is very similar to that, by which cursing a parent was denounced a capital crime : only no particular punishment is appointed, that being left to the discretion of the magistrate ; or rather these precepts towards the close of the chapter were proposed, as binding on the conscience in the sight of the Lord.—But, as the word generally translated God, is used, many think that blasphemy against God, as well as reviling or cursing the magistrate, was intended ; and some even contend that the Israelites were by that clause forbidden to revile or curse the gods of the heathen.

V. 29—31. These were ceremonial appointments, some of which have been in part considered, (Notes, xiii. 2—16.) and others will be more fully spoken of afterwards.—The first-fruits of the orchard and vintage, being presented to God, were used by the priests : but the proportion was left to the liberality of the offerer.—No animal must be presented to God before the eighth day from its birth, the day fixed for the circumcision of the male child ; and probably this referred to that institution.—As a holy people, the Israelites must not eat any thing torn by beasts ; for it had the blood in it. (Marg. Ref. b. Note, Matt. vii. 6.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—15.

A careful comparison of these ancient statutes, given to Israel, with the most celebrated productions of heathen lawgivers, whether in Greece, Rome, India, or China, must effectually convince any impartial person, that Moses had a right to say, “Keep therefore and do them ; for this is “your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of all “the nations, which shall hear all these statutes, and say, “Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding “people !—And what nation is there so great, that hath “statutes and judgments so righteous, as all this law, “which I set before you this day ?” Nay, were he on earth at present, he might safely make the same challenge, in respect of the municipal laws of any country in the world ; and a full investigation of the subject would evince, that the laws enacted by him were uniformly more wise, equi-

CHAP. XXIII.

Laws forbidding slander, false witness, wresting judgment, bribery, and oppression; and requiring kindness to enemies, 1—9. The law of the sabbatical year and the weekly sabbath, with a caution against idolatry, 10—13. The three great annual feasts appointed, 14—19. The Lord promises to conduct Israel safe to Canaan, to put them in possession of it, to enlarge their borders and destroy their enemies; and adds some cautions and precepts, 20—33.

a 7. xv. 16. Lev. xix. 16. 2 Sam. xv. 3. xix. 27. Ps. xv. 3. ci. 5. cxv. 3. Prov. x. 18. xvii. 4. xxv. 23. Jer. xx. 10. Matt. xxviii. 14. 15. Rom. iii. 8. Or, receive.

THOU shalt not raise a false report: put not thine hand with the able, humane, mild, and salutary in their tendency, than the complex body of laws of the most civilized nations; even of those where Christianity has most flourished. For the former bear the evident stamp of a divine original; the latter are invariably tarnished by the infirmities and passions of our fallen nature.—According to the spirit of the divine law, we should, as the worshippers of God, always be inclined to mildness and mercy; tender of the lives and souls even of thieves and robbers; and not value our property so highly, as to put it in competition with concerns of such immense importance. We ought never to be willingly accessory to the death of another, except in the defence of our own lives, or in the execution of publick justice: and then we should go about it as a most painful duty, with reluctance, and sorrow of heart; not urged on by resentment or self-interest, but by conscience, to sacrifice the life of an individual to the general good. We should likewise remember that we are answerable in the sight of God, for the consequences not only of what we do maliciously, but of what we do heedlessly; and are chargeable with injustice, for abuse of confidence, double dealing, carelessness of things borrowed, and various kinds of selfishness, which are not punishable by human laws. If then we are conscious of having injured our neighbour in any of these ways, and are truly penitent, we shall endeavour to make restitution to the utmost of our ability, though not compelled to it by the sentence of the magistrate.

V. 16—31.

If the fear of God rule in our hearts, and his law be written there; a humble recollection of our own transgressions, and a thankful sense of the Lord's unmerited mercies to us, will induce an habitual disposition to shew kindness and mercy, as well as to do justice, to our neighbours; to subject all our passions and appetites to the will of God; and to shun all evil, and every occasion and appearance of evil. Kindness and humanity to the stranger, the widow, and the fatherless; and liberal compassion to the poor and needy, will freely flow from the principle of genuine love implanted in our hearts, and from a desire of adorning our holy religion, and recommending it to those who are without. And while we study to submit to those who are placed over us, and shew due respect to all men; we shall not forget to "honour the LORD with our substance and with the first-fruits of all our increase," and to devote ourselves to be a holy people unto his name.—What a contrast do such characters form to those, whose selfish and filthy hearts are capable of crimes far more than wicked to be an unrighteous witness.

2 Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil; neither shalt thou speak in a cause, to decline after many to wrest judgment.

3 Neither shalt thou countenance a poor man in his cause.

4 If thou meet thine enemy's ox or brutal, nay, truly diabolical! who need to be held in, with strict laws and dreadful punishments, from the most detestable crimes, and yet burst through even these restraints! who have the cries of the oppressed, the widow, the orphan, and the poor, with the wrath of God, against them, and who must be cut off by the avenging sword of human justice, to prevent further mischief! The one is human nature unchanged and unrestrained: the other is the effect of true grace converting and ruling in the heart.—"Turn thou us, O LORD, and we shall be turned," that we may be "unto thee a peculiar people zealous of good works," through Jesus Christ. Amen.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXIII. V. 1—3. These verses seem especially to relate to the trial of causes, and to the conduct of all parties concerned on such occasions; though they also contain general rules of universal application. He who invents a slander, or first raises a vain report, and he who receives and propagates it, (margin) are at all times very criminal: but the iniquity is most atrocious, when the calumny is advanced or taken up in a court of justice; and when the witnesses thus "put their hand with the wicked," to give success to an unrighteous cause, by lying testimony, or by attesting as fact the vain rumours circulated against the other party. Even if such reports had obtained general credit, the witnesses must "not follow a multitude to do evil," in sanctioning them, not knowing them to be true; nor the judges, in deciding according to them; nor the pleader, in adducing them to prejudice the minds of the magistrates or audience. In no case must any party be influenced to act contrary to strict equity and impartiality; either by publick opinion, or by the sentiments or inclinations of the great and powerful; or even by compassion for the poor man, whose cause was unjust.—The word rendered countenance, signifies adorn, and seems to refer to the arts of oratory and the sophistry of law, by which the badness of a cause is varnished over.—"Neither parties, friends, judges, witnesses, nor vulgar opinions, must move us, to lessen great faults, aggravate small ones, vindicate offenders, accuse the innocent, or misrepresent any thing, to procure an unjust sentence." Brown.

V. 4, 5. The connexion of these verses has suggested to several expositors the observation, "That there are ways innumerable of shewing pity and kindness, without supporting a poor man in an iniquitous cause." Yet, the precepts do not specify the poor, but an enemy, and one that b Deut. v. 20. xix. 16—21. 1 Kings xxi. 10—13. Ps. xxvii. 12. xxxv. 11. Prov. vi. 19. xii. 17. xix. 5. 9. xxi. 28. xxv. 18. Matt. xix. 18. xxvi. 59—61. Luke iii. 14. xix. 8. Acts vi. 11—13. 2 Tim. iii. 3. 1 Pet. iii. 16. Rev. xii. 10. c xxxii. 1—5. Gen. vi. 12. vii. 1. xix. 4. 7—9. Num. xiv. 1—10. Josh. xxiv. 15. 1 Sam. xv. 9. 24. 1 Kings xix. 10. Job xxxi. 34. Prov. i. 10, 11. 15. iv. 14. Matt. xxvii. 24—26. Mark xv. 15. Luke xxiii. 24. 51. John vii. 50, 51. Acts xxiv. 27. xxv. 9. Rom. i. 32. Gal. ii. 11—13. Or, answer. d Lev. xix. 15. Deut. i. 17. Ps. lxxii. 2. Jer. xxxvii. 15, 21. xxxviii. 5, 6. 9. Ez. ix. 9. Hab. i. 4. Margins. e Ps. lxxxii. 2, 3. Jam. iii. 17. f Deut. xxii. 1—4. Job xxxi. 29, 30. Prov. xxiv. 17, 18. xxxv. 21. Matt. v. 44. Luke vi. 27, 28. Rom. xii. 17—21. 1 Thes. v. 15.

* Or, Wilt thou cease to help him? or, wouldst cease to leave thy business for him; thou shalt surely leave it to join with him.
 his ass going astray, thou shalt surely bring it back to him again.

5 If thou see the ass of him that hateth thee lying under his burden, and ^hwouldest forbear to help him: thou shalt surely help with him.

6 Thou shalt not ^gwrest the judgment of thy poor in his cause.

7 Keep thee ^hfar from a false matter: and ^lthe innocent and righteous slay thou not: ^jfor I will not justify the wicked.

8 And ^kthou shalt take no gift: for hateth: and no doubt persons of every nation and character were included, though the Jewish writers expound them only of Israelites.—Besides the reluctance men naturally have to a laborious and troublesome action, from which no advantage is likely to arise; the circumstance of the owner being an enemy, an unreconciled, bitter enemy, would have much influence. Yet regard to the interest even of such an enemy, as well as mercy to a poor animal, and above all, the will of God thus made known, would induce every conscientious Israelite to bring back the ox or ass that had gone astray; nay, to assist an injurious and malicious adversary, whose very presence would be uneasy to him, to lift up the animal which had sunk under his burden! It does not appear, whether the magistrates were authorized to punish those who neglected this duty. The spirit of these laws entirely coincides with the precepts of Christ, though the Jews in general do not acknowledge it; and many Christians speak, as if there was no marked coincidence, and affirm that love and kindness to enemies are peculiar to the New Testament dispensation.

V. 6—9. It may reasonably be supposed, that the preceding verses implied an instruction to the judges; as they are included between two passages, which evidently relate to them in particular.—There might in some cases be danger, lest compassion should induce unjust partiality to a poor man in a legal process; but far more instances must occur, in which the magistrates would be tempted to neglect or pervert his cause, either to oblige a rich opponent, or to save trouble, or because the poor man had not money to pay the requisite expenses; or finally, because nothing could be gained by doing him justice, and nothing risked by deciding against him. But the expression, thy poor, is supposed to imply an answer to such evil thoughts and surmises. ‘He is of the same nature, of the same blood, and the protection of him in his right is committed, O magistrate, to thee especially, by the great Judge of the world: therefore “wrest not his cause,” and refuse not on any account to do him justice.’—In order to enforce this general principle, of doing impartial justice without respect of persons, and without fear, favour, or affection; the judges were reminded, that if they wilfully or incautiously hearkened to false testimony, or decided wrong in a case of life and death, either directly or by consequence, they would be deemed the murderers of the innocent and righteous. Did they tremble at the thoughts of such an atrocious crime? They should remember, that the righteous God would not judge according to the frivolous distinctions, which men invent to shade the malignity of their conduct; but would consider every man as a murderer, who aided, from corrupt motives, or wilful negligence, in putting an innocent man to death: for “he would not justify the wicked.” And, by parity of reason, they who thus concurred in depriving others of their property, would be guilty of theft or robbery.—In order to keep at a distance from such wickedness, the magistrates were forbidden to take any gift from the persons whose cause they were about to decide, though no express condition were annexed to the acceptance of it: for such is human nature, that a gift tends exceedingly to blind the understanding of the most sagacious, and to pervert the words, or decisions, even of those who were otherwise righteous.—It is recorded of Sir Matthew Hale, that upon his circuit as a judge, he refused to try the cause of a gentleman, who had sent him the customary present of venison, until he had paid for it: for he well understood the spirit of these excellent laws.—The concluding verse is nearly the same as one before considered: (xxii. 21:) but it seems here introduced as a caution to the judges, to beware of prejudice against foreigners, in deciding causes in which they were concerned; and to be sure not to oppress them; for they knew how strangers felt on such occasions, having themselves been oppressed by Egyptian magistrates.—The glosses of the Jewish expositors on these laws, which almost totally invalidate them, shew the need there was for this caution: but alas! it seems to have been but little noticed. (Note, Matt. v. 43—48.) The very question of the lawyer, “But “who is my neighbour?” with our Lord’s answer, may give some faint idea of those corrupt glosses, by which the scribes explained away, and made void, the law of love, as to their whole conduct towards strangers. (Notes, Luke x. 25—37.)

9 Also ^lthou shalt not oppress a stranger: for ^mye know the ^hheart of a stranger, seeing ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.

10 ¶ And six years thou shalt sow thy land, and shalt gather in the fruits thereof.

11 But ⁿthe seventh year thou shalt let it rest and lie still; that the poor of thy people may eat: and what they leave, the beasts of the field shall eat. In like manner thou shalt deal with thy vineyard, and with thy ^oolive-yard.

V. 10, 11. The Israelites were commanded to commemorate the creation of the world, not only by sanctifying one day out of seven, as a holy rest to the Lord, but also by intermitting the culture of their land every seventh year. Yet a promise was implied in this command, that the ground should, even in that year, produce spontaneously a considerable increase; which they were required to allow

2. 3. Deut. xvii. 19. xxvii. 19. 2 Chr. xix. 7. Job xxxi. 13, 21. 22. Ps. lxxxii. 3. 4. Ec. v. 8. Is. x. 1, 2. Jer. vi. 28. vii. 6. Am. v. 11, 12. Mic. iii. 1—4. Zeph. iii. 1—4. Mal. iii. 5. Jam. ii. 5, 6. 11. Lev. xix. 11. Deut. xix. 16—21. Job xxii. 23. Prov. iv. 14, 15. Is. xxxiii. 15. Luke iii. 14. Eph. iv. 25. Thes. v. 22. i Deut. xxvii. 25. j xxxiv. 7. Prov. xvii. 15. Nah. i. 3. Rom. i. 18. ii. 5, 6. k Deut. xvi. 19. l Sam viii. 3. xii. 3. Ps. xxvi. 10. Prov. xv. 27. xvii. 8. 23. xix. 6. xxix. 4. Ec. vii. 7. Is. i. 23. v. 23. Ez. xxii. 12. Hos. iv. 18. Am. v. 12. Mic. vii. 3. Acts xxv. 26.

+ Heb. the seeing. See on xxii. 21. —Deut. x. 19. xxiv. 14—18. xxvii. 19. Ps. xciv. 6. Ez. xxii. 7. Mal. iii. 5. m Matt. xviii. 33. Heb. ii. 17, 18. n See on Lev. xxv. 2—7. 11, 12. 20. 22. xxvi. 34, 35. o Or, olive-trees.

o See on xx 8—11.—xxxi. 15, 16 Luke xiii. 14. p Deut. v. 13—15. Is. lviii. 3. q Deut. iv. 9, 13. Josh. xxii. 5. xxiii. 11. 1 Chr. xxvii. 7—9. Ps. xxxix. 1. Eph. v. 15. 1 Tim. iv. 16. Heb. xii. 15. r Deut. xii. 3. Josh. xxiii. 7. Ps. xvi. 4. Jer. x. 11. Hos. ii. 17. Zech. xiii. 2. Eph. v. 12. s xxxiv. 22. Lev. xxiii. 5. 16, 34. Deut. xvi. 16. t xii. 14—28. 43—49. xiii. 6, 7. xxxiv. 18. Lev. xxiii. 5—8. Num. ix. 2—14. xxviii. 16—25. Deut. xvi. 1—8. Josh. v. 10, 11. 2 Kings xxiii. 21—23. Mark xiv. 12. Luke xxii. 7. 1 Cor. v. 7, 8.

12 ° Six days thou shalt do thy work, and on the seventh day thou shalt rest: that thine ox and thine ass may rest, and the son of thy handmaid, and the stranger, may be refreshed.

13 And in all things that I have said unto you, be circumspect: and make no mention of the names of other gods, neither let it be heard out of thy mouth.

14 ¶ Three times thou shalt keep a feast unto me in the year.

15 Thou shalt keep the feast of unleavened bread: thou shalt eat unleavened bread seven days, as I commanded thee in the time appointed of the month Abib; for in it thou camest out from Egypt: and none shall appear before me empty.

16 And the feast of harvest, the first-fruits of thy labours, which thou hast sown in the field: and the feast of in-gathering which is in the end of the year, when thou hast gathered in thy labours out of the field.

17 Three times in the year all thy males shall appear before the Lord God.

18 Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread, neither shall the fat of my sacrifice remain until the morning.

u xxxiv. 20. Lev. xxiii. 10. Deut. xvi. 16. Prov. iii. 9, 10. x xxii. 29. Lev. xxiii. 9—21. Num. xxxiii. 26 —31. Deut. xvi. 9—12. Acts ii. 1. y xxxiv. 22. Lev. xxiii. 34—44. Num. xxix. 12 —30. Deut. xvi. 13—15. Neh. viii. 14—18. Zech. xiv. 16—19. John vii. 2, 37. z xxxiv. 23. Deut. xii. 5. xxxi. 11. Is. lxxxiv. 7. Luke ii. 42. a xii. 8. 15. xxxiv. 25. Lev. ii. 11. vii. 12. Deut. xvi. 4. + Or, feast. b xii. 10. Lev. vii 15.

the poor, who had no lands in possession, to gather for their use and enjoyment: and on the residue the beasts of the field might feed. It is evident that the owners were not allowed to reap any harvest, or gather in the increase of the vine-yard or olive-yard, during this sabbatical year; yet it is generally thought that they might, along with their poor neighbours, gather some of the fruits, which could not be preserved, for present use.—The law seems to have been intended to teach the people, that they were merely the Lord's tenants for their estates; and that they would incur a forfeiture, if they did not observe his rules in cultivating them. It was also suited to teach them dependence on his Providence; and to lead them to observe his faithfulness, in sending a proportionate increase on the sixth year. It evidently and cogently inculcated indifference to worldly wealth; and liberality, without grudging, to the poor. The institution, as far as observed, likewise gave the Israelites leisure to attend on more important concerns; and no doubt was a real advantage to the ground, by letting it sometimes lie fallow: while it typified the rest of heaven, when all earthly labours, cares, and interests shall cease for ever.—Some expositors think, that the seventh thousand years of the world will be in some respect analogous to this sabbatical year. (Notes, Lev. xxv. 1—7. 20—22.)

V. 12. Even on the sabbatical year, the holy rest of the sabbath day must be observed, as well as at other times. (Notes, xx. 8—11. Deut. v. 12—15.)

V. 13. In order to exact circumspection in keeping these commandments, and especially in avoiding all occasions of idolatry, or approaches to it; the Israelites were forbidden to mention, or cause to be remembered, the names of other gods, or to let them be heard from their mouths. No doubt, on some occasions, they might mention the names of idols, in order to express their abhorrence of them; for thus, and thus only, the sacred writers mention them: but the use of their names in common conversation, would tend to abate this abhorrence, and to make way for the worship of them.—It is worth while to enquire, how far the familiar acquaintance with the heathen mythology, which generally accompanies a classical education, and is considered as essential to it, consists with this law: and whether it do not subserve the cause of scepticism and immorality, and prove very unfavourable to genuine Christianity. The characters and anecdotes of Jupiter, Bacchus, Apollo, Mars, Mercury, Venus, and other abominable idols, told in the fictions of the poets in a fascinating manner, lose their horror, and fill the youthful mind with delight and admiration: and an imagination stored with ideas, and a judgment perverted by examples, of this kind, promise nothing very desirable, either in respect of purity, integrity, or piety. It were to be wished that such books as Ovid's Metamorphoses, and many others of that cast, were either totally kept out of the hands of inexperienced youth, or more cautiously entrusted to them.—As to the pleasures of public diversion, they subsist by accommodation to the more plausible passions of depraved human nature: and the Heathenism of them only forms an additional proof of their unfavourable aspect on Christianity; and an additional reason, why real Christians should keep themselves and their children from them.

V. 14—18. Three solemn religious festivals were instituted to be observed by the Israelites, during all succeeding generations, while they continued to be the peculiar people of God.—“The feast of unleavened bread,” in remembrance of their deliverance out of Egypt, has been considered. (Notes, xii. xiii. 8—10.) “The feast of harvest,” when it became ripe, called also “the feast of pentecost,” seems to have been instituted, in remembrance of the promulgation of the Law from mount Sinai: and the “feast of in-gathering” when the harvest was completely secured, called also “the feast of tabernacles,” in remembrance of the people dwelling in tents in the wilderness. This was observed in the seventh month, called here “the end of the year;” for the year began in Autumn, till Israel was delivered out of Egypt.—Various oblations were required on all these occasions, which we shall hereafter consider; as also the command, that every male should appear before the Lord at his tabernacle, or temple, at those times, and not appear empty.—No leavened bread was allowed to be offered with the blood of the sacrifices; that is, say expositors, the sacrifice of the passover: but the other sacrifices at that festival were also intended; as likewise in the caution, not to leave any of the fat until the morning, lest it should be in danger of corrupting. A similar injunction had before been given respecting the ^c xxii. 29. xxxiv. 26. Lev. xxiii. 10—17. Num. xviii. 12, 13. Deut. xii. 5—7. xxvi. 10. Neh. x. 35. 1 Cor. xv. 20. Rev. xiv. 4.

 19 The first of the first-fruits of thy land thou shalt bring into the house of the LORD thy God. Thou shalt not see the kid in his mother's milk.

^d xxxiv. 26. Deut. xiv. 21. Prov. xii. 10. Jer. x. 3. iii. 2—6. xxxvii. 34. xxxviii. 2. 14. Gen. xlviii. 16. Num. xx. 16. Josh. v. 13. vi. 2. Is. lxiii. 9. Mal. iii. 1. 1 Cor. x. 9, 10.
 20 ¶ Behold, I send an Angel before thee to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared.

^f Gen. xv. 18. Matt. xxv. 34. John xiv. 3. Ps. ii. 12. Matt. xvii. 5. Heb. xii. 25.
 21 Beware of him, and obey his voice; provoke him not: for he will not pardon your transgressions: for my Name is in him.

^h Num. xiv. 11. Ps. lxxviii. 40. 56. Eph. iv. 30. Heb. iii. 10, 16.
 22 But if thou shalt indeed obey his voice, and do all that I speak; then I will be an enemy unto thine enemies, and an adversary unto thine adversaries.

^k iii. 14. xxxiv. 5—7. Ps. lxxviii. 19. lxxxiii. 18. Is. vii. 14. ix. 6. xlii. 8. xlv. 6. lvi. 15. Jer. xxiii. 6. Matt. i. 23. John v. 23. x. 30. 33. xiv. 9, 10. Col. ii. 9. Rev. i. 8. ii. 8, 23. iii. 7. 1 Gen. xii. 3. Num. xxiv. 9. Deut. xxx. 7. Jer. xxx. 20. Zech. ii. 8. Acts ix. 4, 5. * Or, I will afflict them that afflict thee. m See on iii. 17.—Gen. xv. 19—21. xxxiv. 2. Josh. xxiv. 8—11.
 23 For mine Angel shall go before thee, and bring thee in unto the Amorites, and the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Canaanites, the ⁿ See on xxx. 5. o Lev. xviii. 3. 29—30. Deut. xii. 30, 31. 2 Chr. xxxiii. 2. 9. Is. cvi. 35—38. Ez. xvi. 47. p xxxii. 20. xxxiv. 13, 14. Num. xxxiii. 52. Deut. vii. 5, 25, 26. xii. 3. 2 Chr. xxxiv. 3—7. q Deut. vi. 13. x. 12. 20. xi. 13. xiii. 4. xxviii. 1—6. Josh. xlv. 1. 5. xxiv. 14, 15. 21, 24. 1 Sam. vii. 3. xii. 20. 24. Jer. viii. 2. Matt. iv. 10. r Deut. vii. 13. xxviii. 5—8. Mal. iii. 10, 11. s xv. 25. Deut. vii. 15. Is. xxxiii. 24. t Deut. vii. 14. xxviii. 4. Job xxi. 10. Ps. cvii. 28. cxlv. 13. u Gen. xxv. 8. xxxv. 23. 1 Chr. xxiii. 1. Job v. 26. xiii. 17. Ps. lv. 23. xc. 10. Is. lxxv. 20. x xv. 14—16. Gen. xxxv. 5. Deut. ii. 25. xi. 23, 25. Josh. ii. 9—11. 1 Sam. xiv. 15. 2 Kings vi. 6. 2 Chr. xiv. 14. f Heb. neck. Ps. xxvii. 40. y Deut. vii. 20. Josh. xxiv. 11, 12

Hivites, and the Jebusites: and I will cut them off.
 24 Thou shalt not bow down to their gods, nor serve them, nor do after their works: but thou shalt utterly overthrow them, and quite break down their images.

25 And ye shall serve the LORD your God, and he shall bless thy bread, and thy water: and I will take sickness away from the midst of thee.

26 There shall nothing east their young, nor be barren in thy land: the number of thy days I will fulfil.

27 I will send my fear before thee, and will destroy all the people to whom thou shalt come, and I will make all thine enemies turn their backs unto thee.

28 And I will send hornets before thee, which shall drive out the Hivite, the Canaanite, and the Hittite from before thee.

flesh of the paschal lamb. (xii. 10. Notes, Lev. xxiii. Deut. xvi. 1—17.)

V. 19. Not see the, &c.] This singular practice, which is more than once prohibited, might be deemed to have some semblance of cruelty; or it might be considered as an unnatural gratification of the appetite: but probably it was a superstition, or a sort of incantation, in use among idolaters, by which they thought to secure a plentiful harvest. (Marg. Ref. d.)

V. 20—23. After the Lord had enacted all these laws, he concluded this revelation to Moses, by him to be delivered to Israel, with many encouraging promises, interspersed with warnings and exhortations. He engaged especially to “send his Angel before” the people, to conduct them to Canaan: but he cautioned them to take heed and obey him, and not be refractory and rebellious; as he would not endure their provocations, but take signal vengeance on them, if they persisted in them: “for,” says JEHOVAH, “my name is in him.” (Marg. Ref. k.)—When we recollect the many Scriptures, which call an Angel, that appeared to the people of God, by the names, JEHOVAH, and ELOHIM, that is, GOD, we can hardly doubt who this Angel was, who had power on earth to forgive, or not to forgive, and in whom was the name of JEHOVAH; which seems naturally to mean the participation of the divine perfections, as well as acting with divine authority.—“But,” adds the LORD, “if thou shalt indeed obey his voice, and do all that I command thee,” then I will confer the promised blessings.

V. 26. Number, &c.] The righteous Governor of the world has established such a connexion between causes and effects, that the wickedness of men conduces, in an immense degree, to shorten their lives, and those of others, even to succeeding generations: so that very few of the human race live so long as they might, did not their own misconduct, or that of other men, bring them to an untimely end. No doubt in this, as in all other respects, the counsel of the Lord is accomplished: and this is one of his methods of restraining or punishing vice.—But “the number of their days,” which the Lord promised “to fulfil” to the Israelites, while obedient, refers to that term of human life, which men of a good constitution might be expected to attain to, if they did nothing to impair their health, were preserved from the effect of other men's vices, and by the blessing of God, were protected from external injuries, and exempted from pestilences and fatal diseases. We ought not to suppose, that such assurances, as we meet with in the close of this chapter, engaged to every individual long-life, health, and fruitfulness; but only that a special blessing should attend them, in addition to the natural tendency of a sober, righteous, and godly life; and that they would in this respect be evidently distinguished from other nations.—When a universal prevalence of genuine Christianity shall terminate wars, oppressions, enfeebling poverty, intemperance, and licentiousness, men will far more generally, than at present, live to old age. (Notes, Lev. xxvi. 3—13. Is. lxxv. 20—23.)

V. 27. Marg. Ref.]

V. 28. The sting of the hornet, or large wasp, is very terrible; they are also exceedingly courageous insects, and not to be got rid of but by destroying them: vast swarms of them might therefore effectually drive away the inhabitants of Canaan, and prove even a more dreadful plague to them, than the frogs, lice, flies, or locusts had been to Egypt.—No account indeed is found, in the subsequent history, of hornets assaulting the armies which fought against Israel: but Joshua attests the fulfilment of the promise, in respect to the two kings of the Amorites, 29 I will not drive them out from before thee ^a in one year; lest the land become desolate, and the beast of the field multiply against thee.

30 By little and little I will drive them out from before thee, until thou be increased, and inherit the land.

31 And ^a I will set thy bounds from the Red Sea even unto the sea of the Philistines, and from the desert unto the river: for I will ^b deliver the inhabitants of the land into your hand; and thou shalt drive them out before thee.

32 Thou ^c shalt make no covenant with them, ^d nor with their gods.

33 They shall not dwell in thy land, lest ^e they make thee sin against me: ^f for if thou serve their gods, ^f it will surely be a snare unto thee.

^a Deut. vii. 22.
Josh. xv. 63.
xvi. 10. xvii. 12.
13. Judg. iii. 4.

^a Gen. xv. 18.
Num. xxxiv. 3.
—15. Deut. xi. 24.
Josh. i. 4.
1 Kings iv. 21.
24. Ps lxxii. 8.

^b Num. xxi. 34.
Deut. iii. 2.
Josh. vii. 7. 18.
x. 8. 19. xxi. 44.
xxiii. 14. xxiv. 8.
1 Sam. xxiii. 4.
1 Kings xx. 13.
^c xxiv. 12. 15.
Deut. vii. 2.
Josh. ix. 14—23.
2 Sam. xxi. 1, 2.
^d Num. xxv. 1, 2.
Deut. vii. 16.
^e 1 Kings xiv. 16.
2 Chr. xxxiii. 9.
Deut. xii. 30.
Josh. xxiii. 13.
Judg. ii. 3. Ps. cv. 36. 2 Tim. ii. 26.

in a manner which proves that it was well known by all the people. (Note, Josh. xxiv. 12.) It may be inferred, from the texts referred to in the margin, that the hornets attacked the devoted nations, either before they engaged in battle, thus weakening and dismaying them; or after they were put to flight, and attempting to hide themselves in caverns or desolate places, to consume the remains of them, or drive them out of the land. And this may account for the silence of the history on the subject. Probably, the three tribes here mentioned, were more dreadfully harassed by the hornets than the rest were.—Learned men have shewn from ancient historians, that traditions prevailed, of nations forced by swarms of different kinds of insects to leave their country; most of which, probably, originated from some confused report, of the Lord's dealings with the Egyptians and Canaanites. (Note, viii. 24.)

V. 29, 30. The Israelites might conclude, from the promises made to their fathers and to them, that the Lord would at once expel or destroy the old inhabitants of the land before them; and, experiencing delays, they might question whether he had not failed of his word. But this consequence was obviated by the intimation here given; and the reason assigned, for a gradual extirpation of the devoted Canaanites, shews that the country assigned to Israel was far more than sufficient for that generation, which yet consisted at least of two millions: and as they could not occupy the whole, till they were still more increased, it would be better for them, that some of the ancient inhabitants should remain, than that the country, lying desolate, should be infested with wild beasts.—Other causes however combined, in preventing the Israelites from at once obtaining possession of the whole country assigned them.

V. 31. The boundaries of the promised land, as here stated, if compared with the passages referred to in the margin, may be thus explained. The northern extremity of the Red Sea was at no great distance from the river of Egypt, which ran into the Mediterranean, on the shore of which the Philistines dwelt. From the extremity therefore of the Red Sea, across to the Mediterranean Sea, and the course of its shore, as far as mount Lebanon, was the western boundary from south to north. The great desert, at the southern extremity of Canaan; and at the south-east of the adjacent countries behind the Dead Sea and beyond Jordan, as far as the great river Euphrates, formed the southern and eastern boundaries; while a line from the Mediterranean Sea, passing by mount Libanus to the river Euphrates, would mark its boundaries on the north. or on the north-west.—There are considerable difficulties, at this distance of time, in ascertaining these limits with any tolerable exactness, and consequently different opinions in some particulars prevail; but this statement seems to accord with the most approved authorities.—It is generally supposed, that the promise of driving out the ancient inhabitants, related only to the devoted nations of Canaan: for when the other countries, included in this grant, were subjected to David and Solomon, they never attempted to expel or extirpate the inhabitants; nor does it appear that they had any command or authority to do it.

V. 32, 33. When the Israelites were forbidden to “make any covenant with the devoted nations or their gods;” it seems to intimate, that individuals or collective bodies, that were willing to renounce idolatry, and to embrace the religion of Israel, might be spared, and admitted into covenant with them; and the subsequent history favours this supposition. But while the devoted nations continued idolaters, they must not be tolerated in the land, if the Israelites could by any means expel or destroy them: for, the Lord's purpose of “driving them out by little and little,” did not excuse the negligence of the people, who willingly allowed them to live among them; the consequence of which was, that they were either tempters or scourges to them.—The last clause may be rendered, “For thou wilt serve their gods; for it will be a snare unto thee.” If idolaters were allowed to live among the Israelites, it would prove a snare to them, and they would be induced to worship their idols.—The latter part of this chapter primarily relates to the national covenant, the solemn ratification of which is recorded in the next chapter.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—9.

How manifold are the temptations, and occasions of sin, in this evil world! He, who would “keep a conscience void of offence towards God and man,” must not only mortify his own covetousness, pride, resentment, envy, and sensuality; but likewise take heed that his judgment be not biassed, and his heart prejudiced, by the authority, example, or reasonings of men, who are held in reputation for wisdom, learning, and virtue; by the influence of the rich and great; by gratitude to benefactors; by natural affection to relations, or by partiality to beloved friends; by fear of offending those on whom he depends, or from whom he has expectations; by reverence to superiors; by popular clamours; by a party-spirit; by vulgar reports; by conformity to the maxims, customs, and fashions of the world; or even by an easy and friendly temper, and com-

CHAP. XXIV.

Moses, being called to go up to the mount, delivers the laws to Israel, and they consent to covenant with God, 1—3. An altar and twelve pillars are prepared, and the covenant is ratified, with sacrifices, and the sprinkling of blood, 4—8. Moses, Aaron, and his sons, and the elders of Israel, are favoured with a vi-passion for the poor and afflicted. For there is no passion or propensity in the human heart, however amiable in its general exercise, which will not betray us into imprudence, injustice, and even impiety, unless it be regulated by divine grace, and subordinated to the fear and love of God.—The laws delivered by Moses, however misunderstood by the Scribes and Pharisees, and by many professed Christians, required the same equity and truth, the same tenderness of men's reputation and comfort, the same regard to their liberty and property, the same love even to enemies, and the same disposition, however injured or exasperated, to mortify malevolence, and to return good for evil, which are inculcated by our blessed Saviour and his apostles. It is likewise very useful, to examine and meditate on these statutes, as select instances, familiarly illustrating the more general rules of equity and love, and teaching us how to apply them in the ordinary concerns of life. Indeed, the more we thus compare one part of Scripture with another, the better we shall understand every part; and the fuller will be our conviction, that the whole is "the word of God."—Integrity, impartiality, and benevolence; a noble disinterestedness; firmness and boldness; an habitual fear of God, and a constant expectation of the great day of retribution; are peculiarly requisite for legislators, magistrates, lawyers, juries, witnesses, or prosecutors, and all concerned in courts of justice. For when human wisdom has done its utmost, they will often be strongly tempted, to wrest or pervert judgment; perhaps to the oppression of numbers, and even to the murder of the innocent and righteous; nor will opportunities be wanting. Such legal murders have in many ages and nations been extremely frequent; but, with considerable confidence and gratitude, we may assert, that they are well guarded against in this favoured nation: how desirable is it that we might without hesitation add, and in all its distant provinces! But, wherever committed, they are the most malignant of all murders, and will be found so, at the day "when the earth shall disclose her blood, and no more cover her slain."—We have all great need to "watch and pray that we enter not into temptation," and to shun all occasions of sin: for the remaining evil of the heart is attracted by the evil that is in the world, with a kind of magnetick force, which increases as they approach each other. Hence it is, that a near prospect of secular advantages so frequently "blinds the wise, and perverts the words of the righteous." Let us then "take heed and beware of covetousness;" pray earnestly for contentment with food and raiment; and learn to expect needful supplies from the Lord, day by day, in the conscientious performance of the duties to which we are called. And, as we must be sensible, (whether we "know the heart of a stranger," by painful experience, or not,) that oppressions would be very galling to us; let us on no consideration, concur in oppressing any human sion of God, and feast before him, 9—11. Moses ascends the mount, Joshua at first accompanying him; he leaves Aaron and Hur to rule the people; and abides in the mount forty days and nights, 12—18.

AND he said unto Moses, ^a Come up unto the LORD, thou and Aaron, ^b Nadab and Abihu, and ^c seventy of the being: on the contrary, "whatsoever we would that men should do unto us, let us do even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets."

V. 10—33.

While we carefully observe the rules of justice, truth, and mercy, in our conduct towards our brethren and neighbours; we must not forget our still higher obligations to the LORD our God: and if we be indeed his people, we shall cheerfully devote ourselves to his service, submit to all his will, and seek his glory, in the conduct of our secular affairs, in the use of our property, and in the spending of our time. We shall count his sabbaths and ordinances, our refreshment and pleasure; we shall readily dedicate to him the first and best of all his gifts, and snare our portion, even if small, with those who have still less than we; depending on his promise and providence for the future.—But in all these things, and even in the government of our tongues, it behoves us to be "circumspect;" for we can neither "work out our own salvation," nor glorify God and do good, without great diligence and attention; and the ruinous consequences of mere heedlessness are seldom duly considered. Let us then put ourselves under the guidance and banner of the great Angel of the covenant, in whom is the name of JEHOVAH: let us obey his voice, submit to his will, fear nothing but his indignation and failing of his forgiveness, desire the comforts of his Spirit, depend on his arm, and expect the fulfilment of his promises; and thus march forwards towards the heavenly Canaan, through hosts of opposing foes, all of which he will enable us to overcome. We shall then learn by experience, that his ways are ways of pleasantness and peace, notwithstanding conflicts and self-denial; that, in the ordinary course of things, obedience to his precepts conduces to health, long-life, and domestick comfort: and that the provisions which he sends, (though often such as the world counts mean and scanty,) being accompanied by his blessing, are far better than the greatest affluence of ungodly men. (Note, Ps. xxxvii. 16, 17.) And though it is not his will to destroy our inward enemies at once, but by little and little; yet they too shall finally be extirpated; and he will make us more than conquerors in the event. Nay, in the mean while, he will take occasion from their existence and opposition, to display his own glory, and to promote our good; so that the whole shall terminate in our deeper humility, and in more admiring love and ardent gratitude, for ever.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXIV. V. 1, 2. After Moses had received the foregoing laws, he was sent down from "the thick darkness where God was," (xx. 21,) to deliver them to the people: and at the same time the Lord gave him directions elders of Israel; and worship ye afar off.

2 And Moses ^d alone shall come near the LORD: but they shall not come nigh, neither shall the people go up with him.

3 And Moses came and told the people all the words of the LORD, and ^e all the judgments: and all the people answered with one voice, and said, 'All the words, which the LORD hath said, will we do.

4 And Moses ^f wrote all the words of the LORD, and rose up early in the morning, ^h and builded an altar under the hill, and ^k twelve pillars ⁱ according to the twelve tribes of Israel.

5 And he sent ^l young men of the children of Israel, which offered ^m burnt-offerings, and sacrificed ⁿ peace-offerings of oxen unto the LORD.

6 And Moses took half of the blood, and put ^o it in basons; and half of ^p the blood he sprinkled ^q on the altar.

7 And he took ^r the book of the covenant, and ^s read in the audience of the people: and they said, 'All that the LORD hath said will we do, and be obedient.

8 And Moses took the blood, and ^t sprinkled ^u it on the people; and said, concerning the subsequent solemn transactions. He and Aaron, with Aaron's two eldest sons, and seventy elders of Israel, were directed to come up into the mount; after they (and probably the congregation with them) had worshipped at a distance, to express their humble reverence of the divine majesty, and to produce in their minds proper solemnity for a nearer approach. Yet only Moses was permitted to ascend the top of the mountain, where the glory of God was peculiarly manifested; while the others must keep at a great distance, though some would be admitted nearer than others.—It is not evident, who the seventy elders were. They are spoken of as part of a larger company. Some think they were a part of the rulers of thousands, hundreds, fifties, and tens, who had been appointed by the advice of Jethro; but these are not called elders: elders are repeatedly spoken of before that time: and the seventy elders mentioned in another place, were evidently appointed some time after. (Marg. Ref. c.) It is, however, very natural to suppose, that in each tribe there were some persons who on one account or another, bore the chief sway; and from these seventy were selected, who were also called "the nobles" or princes "of Israel" (11); and who attended as representatives of their several tribes, in solemnly covenanting with God.

V. 3, 4. When Moses had set before the people "all the judgments," or the judicial law which he had received, with the moral law of ten commandments delivered from mount Sinai, and the promises made to them of special blessings while obedient; they unanimously and willingly consented, and engaged to obey. Accordingly, he wrote in a book the four foregoing chapters, as the conditions of the national covenant, which was now about to be solemnly ratified. For such it certainly was: as 'the covenant of works' has nothing to do with altars, sacrifices, and the sprinkling of blood; and 'the covenant of grace' is not made with whole nations, or collective bodies of divers characters; but only representatively with Christ, as the Surety of those given to him, and personally with true believers. But while this covenant was made with the nation of Israel, in regard to their outward blessings, it was a "shadow of good things to come;" and in many respects their situation under it accorded to that of those, who live under the gospel, and have the benefit of the ordinances and oracles of God.—The day on which Moses went down from the mount having been thus employed, he arose early the next morning, and made the necessary preparations, by building an altar and raising twelve pillars. The altar seems to have been intended to denote JEHOVAH's presence, as a party in this covenant; and the twelve pillars, the twelve tribes of Israel, as the other party; and between the two covenanting parties Moses acted as a typical mediator.

V. 5. Young men.] It does not appear whether these were the persons, before called priests, or not; (xix. 22;) but they acted merely as assistants to Moses, who officiated as priest, on this and several other occasions. The opinion, confidently maintained by some learned men, concerning a primæval right to the priesthood, vested in the eldest son of each family, is destitute of every shadow of scriptural support, and indeed at variance with the only facts to which an appeal can be made. Abel, the younger son, sacrificed at the same time as Cain, and was accepted, while Cain was rejected. Noah, not one of his sons, sacrificed after the flood. (Gen. viii. 20.) Abraham was commanded to sacrifice, and Isaac, instead of being the priest, was to be the oblation: and afterwards Abraham, not Isaac, offered the ram. Israel, not Reuben, nor any of his sons, sacrificed at Beer-sheba. (xli. 1.) Job officiated as priest, and offered sacrifices for his sons. (Job i. 6.) Nor is there the least trace of any thing in scripture, that favours the sentiment, which is a mere human invention, by whomsoever originally devised.—Oxen only are here mentioned: but we learn from the apostle that other animals were sacrificed. (Heb. ix. 18—20.)

V. 6—8. Half the blood of the sacrifices was immediately sprinkled on the altar; and the other half, being reserved for that purpose, was afterwards sprinkled on the people: either on the seventy elders, as personally representing the congregation, or on the twelve pillars which had been erected along with the altar, as an external sign or emblem of the twelve tribes; or, as some think, it was carried in basons, and sprinkled on the people in general: for this part of the solemnity preceded the ascent of the selected company into the mount (9). We learn from the apostle, that the book was also sprinkled. Moses had read, or proclaimed, the contents of it in the audience of the people, as the terms of the covenant about to be ratified with them; and they had renewed their consent to it.

d 15. 18. xx. 21. Num. xvi. 5. Jer. xxx. 21. xlix. 19. Heb. ix. 24. x. 21, 22

e xxi.—xxiii. Deut. iv. 1, 5. 45. v. 1. 31. vi. 1. xl. 1.

f 7. xix. 8. Deut. v. 27, 28. Josh. xxiv. 22.

g Deut. xxxi. 9. Josh. xxiv. 26.

h xx. 24—26.

i Gen. xxviii. 18. 22. xxxi. 45. Josh. xxiv. 27. Gal. ii. 9.

k xxviii. 21. Lev. xxiv. 5. Num. xvii. 2. Josh. iv. 2. 9. 8. 9. 20. 1 Kings xi. 30. Ezra vi. 17. Luke xxii. 30. Rev. xxi. 14.

l xix. 22. m See on xviii. 12. —Lev. i.

n Lev. iii. vii. 11—21.

o 8. xii. 7. 22. Col. i. 20. Heb. xii. 24. 1 Pet. i. 2. 19.

p xxix. 16. 20. Lev. i. 5. 11. iii. 2. 8. iv. 6.

q 4. Heb. ix. 18—23.

r Deut. xxxi. 11—13. Acts xiii. 15. Col. iv. 16. 1 Thes. v. 27.

s See on 3.—Jer. vii. 23, 24. t See on 6.—Lev. viii. 30. 1s. lii. 15. Ez. xxxv. 25. Heb. ix. 18, 19.

^u Zech. ix. 11. Behold "the blood of the covenant, ^z Matt. xxvi. 28. which the LORD hath made with you
^a Mark xiv. 24. concerning all these words.

^b Luke xxii. 20. 9 Then ^x went up Moses and Aaron, ^c 1 Cor. xi. 25. Nadab and Abihu, and seventy of the ^d Eph. i. 7. Heb. elders of Israel.

^e ix. 20. x. 4, 5. 10 And they ^y saw the God of Israel :
^f xiii. 20. and there was under his feet as it were before the sprinkling of the blood on them and on it; and then afterwards he subjoined, "This is the blood of the covenant, which the Lord hath made with you concerning all these words." The whole transaction was calculated to impress their minds with the important instruction, that the covenant was made with them, only through the blood of the atoning sacrifice; that neither their persons, moral obedience, nor religious services, could be accepted by a holy God, except through the shedding and sprinkling of blood; that even the blessings of the national covenant were all of mercy, and that, though they were secured to them only during their obedience, the Lord would deal with them in kindness, and not construe every act of disobedience into a forfeiture of the covenant. In this manner was the business transacted before all the people: and we learn from apostolical authority, that it was intended as a shadow or type of the manner, in which the true Israelites are admitted into covenant with God, through the atoning blood of Christ; and, yielding themselves to his service, willingly receive his commandments as the rule of their subsequent grateful obedience. (Note, Heb. ix. 18—23.)

V. 9—11. After this part of the important solemnity had been concluded, Moses and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and the seventy elders, went up to a higher part of the mount; and there "they saw the God of Israel." Many commentators understand this vision, of an appearance of the Son of God in human form, anticipating his incarnation. And though the expression, "Ye saw no manner of similitude," (Deut. iv. 15.) seems to militate against this opinion; yet it may be answered, that this was spoken concerning the people in general, as receiving the law in an audible voice from the mount; but the words here used relate to a few individuals, and to a subsequent time. It is said of Moses, "The Similitude of the LORD shall he behold." (Note, Num. xii. 4—8.) Christ is the "Image of the invisible God;" the Effulgence of his glory, and the Character of his subsistence. (2 Cor. iv. 4. Notes, John i. 18. Col. i. 15—17. Heb. i. 3, 4.) The two appearances under consideration were a direct contrast: the former was that of the holy Lawgiver and Judge, in terrible majesty delivering to sinners "the ministration of condemnation;" the latter that of a Saviour, through the sacrifice and sprinkling of blood, admitting believers into communion with himself. Now it is only in Christ, that God manifests himself as reconciled to sinners, or admits any of them into communion with him.—No doubt "God in Christ," the Saviour of sinners, was the God of Israel, who manifested himself on this occasion: yet, it may reasonably be doubted, whether it was a visible appearance in human form. The expressions, "There was under his feet as it were a paved work of sapphire-stone, and as it were the a paved work ^z of a sapphire-stone, and ^a as it were the body of heaven ^a in his ^b clearness.

11 And upon the ^b nobles of the ^c children of Israel he ^c laid not his hand:
^d also ^d they saw God, and ^e did eat and ^e drink.

12 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses,
^f Gen. xvi. 13. ^g e xviii. 12. ^h Deut. xii. 7. ⁱ Ec. ix. 7. ^j Luke xv. 23, 24. ^k 1 Cor. x. 16—18.

"body of heaven in his clearness," accord with some passages in Ezekiel's first vision, in which it is evident, the idea of a personal appearance in human form is carefully excluded; and they seem rather to imply some grand display of glory, which might feebly be illustrated by such similitudes. (Note, Ez. i. 26—28.)—It appears therefore more consistent with the narrative, to understand it of a most resplendent manifestation of the divine glory; but in mild majesty, and not with the terrific displays which attended the promulgation of the law; yet even this visible glory itself could not be represented by any similitude: but that which appeared beneath the feet of the God of Israel, (that is, under the resplendent majesty, or as it were beneath the glorious throne on which he manifested his presence, as Israel's King,) might be compared to a pavement of sapphires, which are of a beautiful blue colour; or to the azure sky, as most visible in its splendour, on a bright night when spangled with stars. But, while this was a far more distinct vision of the glory of God, than that which had been made at the giving of the law, when nothing was seen, but clouds, darkness, fire, and tempest: yet, through the sacrifice and sprinkling of blood, and the covenant now ratified, this glory did not inspire terror, but confidence; and the representatives of Israel received no harm, but much comfort, while they feasted on the peace-offerings, in full view of the divine glory. Not only was this the case with Moses, the typical mediator; with Aaron, the intended high priest; and with his two eldest sons, who were next to him in the priesthood; but also with the nobles of Israel, as the seventy elders are called, being the principal persons of their several tribes. Even on them the Lord laid not his hand, to injure them, but admitted them to feast before him with safety and comfort.—Thus the believer, beholding, in the face of Jesus Christ, far clearer discoveries of the glorious justice and holiness of God, than ever he saw under his most terrifying convictions; feels no dismay, as before, and receives no harm: but with humble confidence, through the mediation of the Saviour, enjoys sweet communion with a holy God, and is inspired with comfort, peace, and joy.

V. 12—14. After the national covenant had been thus solemnly ratified, the Lord called Moses, (probably by an audible voice from the visible glory,) to come up to him into the mount, to receive the law, even the commandments, which God himself had now written on two tables of stone, as well as before spoken from the mount. Thus a peculiar honour was put on the moral law, and it was authenticated in another manner, than either the judgments, or the ritual institutions. The people had promised to obey the whole law, and the ten commandments especially contained that law; obedience to which might be considered

Come up to me into the mount, and be there: and I will give thee ^f tables of stone, and a law, and commandments which I have written ^g that thou mayest teach them.

13 And Moses rose up, and ^h his minister Joshua: and Moses went up into the mount of God.

14 And he said unto the elders, ⁱ Tarry ye here for us, until we come again unto you. And behold, Aaron and ^k Hur are with you: ^l if any man have any matters to do, let him come unto them.

15 And Moses went up into the mount, and ^m a cloud covered the mount.

16 And ⁿ the glory of the LORD abode upon mount Sinai, and the cloud covered it six days: and the ^o seventh day he called unto Moses out of the midst of the cloud.

17 And the sight of the glory of the LORD was ^p like devouring fire on the top of the mount, in the eyes of the children of Israel.

18 And Moses ^q went into the midst of the cloud, and gat him up into the mount: and Moses was in the mount ^r forty days, and forty nights.

as the condition of the covenant on their part. But they soon broke the principal requirements of it, by direct idolatry; and then the tables, which God had prepared, and on which he himself had written the law, were broken. Yet the same law was again given them, written by the Lord on tables of stone, prepared by Moses; along with the ceremonial law, which typified redemption and salvation by Christ. This intimated, that the rule of duty remains unchangeably the same, though the covenant of works is broken, and another covenant is mediated by the divine Saviour for the benefit of his people.—Joshua, the minister and intended successor of Moses, and a remarkable type of Christ, accompanied him part of the way up the mount: for he was thus by degrees to be honoured before all the congregation, by being admitted nearer to the manifested glory of God, than any other person, except Moses himself.—But before Moses, attended by Joshua, ascended further up the mount; he ordered the elders of Israel to tarry there for them, that is, at the foot of the mountain; and not in the exact spot where they then were, as it is evident from the appointment of Aaron and Hur, to be the deputies of Moses in his absence; which would have been of no use, had they remained separated from the people.

V. 15, 16. Having given these directions, Moses ascended further up the mount, even to the cloud that covered it: yet he remained six days, before he was called to enter into the midst of the cloud.—The subsequent narrative shews that Joshua attended him, when he parted from Aaron and his sons, and the elders; and that he waited for his return at a distance from the camp. (xxxii. 17.) It is therefore probable, that he continued with Moses during seven days, joining in holy conference and fervent devotion. These do not seem to have been a part of the forty days and nights afterwards mentioned: and as no intimation is given, that Joshua fasted during the time Moses continued in the mount, we may suppose, they both had manna while together, and Joshua had it after Moses had left him. No doubt he spent his time in prayer and holy contemplation.

V. 17, 18. While the divine glory appeared to Israel, from the midst of the cloud, as devouring fire; Moses, being summoned by the Lord, and encouraged by his supporting grace, entered with holy boldness into that very cloud; (Marg. Ref. q;) and there he continued without food, forty days and forty nights, favoured with divine discoveries, and receiving further instructions for the people. (Marg. Ref. r.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—11.

Having in the sacred Scriptures, as now completed by the New Testament, not only the laws which God gave by Moses, but the words of grace and truth which he sent to sinners by his only begotten Son; we are more favoured than Israel of old: and we are invited to join ourselves to the Lord in an everlasting covenant, through our divine Mediator, and in the ordinances which he has instituted as pledges of his love. But alas! numbers profess their consent to the covenant, and attest it by attendance on the most solemn ordinances; numbers will be able to say, “Lord, we have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets;” to whom the Judge at last shall say, “I tell you, I know you not whence ye are, depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity.” (Luke xiii. 26, 27.) When indeed we recollect, that the whole generation of Israel, who at that time consented to the covenant, and engaged to be obedient; with the seventy nobles, who “saw the God of Israel, and did eat and drink” before him; at length, with very few exceptions, perished in the wilderness; and that even Nadab and Abihu were afterwards struck dead by fire from before the Lord; we shall perceive the importance of the apostle’s caution, “Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.” With such examples before our eyes, we cannot surely be so absurd, as to rest in outward privileges, forms, or notions, of whatever kind; or in any thing short of an inward renewal to holiness, which is both the seal of the Spirit, and the earnest of our inheritance.—In this transaction the true Christian can trace the outlines of his own experience. Attending to the holy law of God, he learned to fear his deserved wrath, and could find no peace, till he also heard the sweet words of mercy and grace. But having received instruction concerning the sacrifice of Christ, and the covenant which he mediated, he by faith applied for this salvation, and acceded to this covenant; and thus, by the sprinkling of the Redeemer’s blood, “his conscience was purged from dead works to serve the f xxxi. 18. Deut. v. 22. Jer. xxxi. 33. 2 Cor. iii. 3. 7. Heb. ix. 4.

g Deut. iv. 14. Ezra vii. 10. Matt. v. 19.
h xvii. 9—14. xxxii. 17. xxxiii. 11. Num. xi. 28.
i xxxii. 1. Gen. xxii. 5. 1 Sam. x. 8. xiii. 8—13.
k xvii. 10. 12. 1 xviii. 25, 26.

m xix. 9. 16. 2Chr. vi. 1. Matt. xvii. 5.
n 17. xvi. 10. Lev. xiv. 10. xvi. 42. Ez. i. 28. 2 Cor. iv. 6.
o xix. 11. xx. 10. Rev. i. 10.
p iii. 2. xix. 18. Deut. iv. 24. 34. Ez. i. 27. Heb. xii. 18, 29.
q 17. ix. 29. 39. xix. 20. Prov. xxviii. 1.
r xxxiv. 28. Deut. ix. 9. 18. 25. x. 10. 1 Kings xix. 8. Matt. iv. 2. Mark i. 13. Luke iv. 2.

CHAP. XXV.

The Lord directs Moses concerning an offering from the people, in order to erect a tabernacle, 1—9. The form of the ark of the covenant, and the mercy-seat, 10—22. The table of shew-bread, 23—30. The golden candlestick, with the tongs and snuff-dishes, 31—40.

u xxxv. 5—29, Num. vii. 9—88, Deut. xvi. 16, 17. 1 Chr. xxix. * Heb. take for me † Or, leave offering. Num. xviii. 24. b xxxv. 5. 21. Judg. v. 9. 1 Chr. xxix. 17. Ezra i. 6. iii. 5. vii. 16. Neh. xi. 2. Ps. cx. 8. 2 Cor. viii. 12. ix. 7.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, that ^a they ^{*} bring me an [†] offering: of every man that giveth it ^b willingly with his heart, ye shall take my offering.

3 And this is the offering which ye shall take of them; gold, and silver, and brass,

4 And ^c blue, and purple, and scarlet, and ^d fine linen, and goats' hair,

5 And ^e rams' skins dyed red, and badgers' skins, and ^f shittim-wood,

6 ^g Oil for the light, ^h spices for anointing oil and for sweet incense,

7 ⁱ Onyx-stones, and stones to be set in the ephod and in the breast-plate.

8 And let them make me ^j a sanctuary that ^k I may dwell amongst them.

9 According to all that I shew thee, after ^l the pattern of the tabernacle, c xxvi. 1 xxviii. 31. xxxix. 3. Heb. ix. 19. * Or, silk. Gen. xii. 42. Ez. xvi. 10. Rev. xix. 8. 14. d xxvi. 14. e xxvi. 15. 26. 37. xxvii. 1. xxxvi. 20. f 37. xxvii. 20. xl. 24, 25. g xxx. 29—38. h xxviii. 9—21. i xv. 2. xxxvi. 1—4. Lev. iv. 6. xxi. 12. Heb. ix. 1, 2. k xxix. 45. 1 Kings vi. 13. Is. xii. 6. Zech. ii. 10. viii. 3. 2 Cor. vi. 16. Heb. iii. 6. Rev. xxi. 3. l 40. 1 Chr. xxxviii. 11—19. Heb. viii. 5. ix. 9.

“living God,” while the book of the law likewise, as it were sprinkled with blood, was put into his hands, to be the rule of his future delightful obedience; and with it the Spirit of adoption was given, inclining and enabling him to obey. Thus the covenant was ratified; and now he has access to God upon a mercy-seat, he sees his glory in the face of Jesus Christ, enjoys communion with him, and is encouraged to serve him in righteousness and true holiness. And though his subsequent life be not one continued feast of strong consolations, yet at times he is thus favoured; and he has generally “the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, keeping his heart and mind “through Christ Jesus;” except when by sin he grieves the Holy Spirit, or brings down upon himself the chastening rod of his reconciled Father.

V. 12—18.

They, who would enjoy near and sweet communion with the Lord, must obediently hearken to his words, obey his call, and wait for him in faith and patience: and such as are humbly desirous of being employed by him in useful and honourable services, must cheerfully attend to the duties of the lowest station, if at present assigned them; continue faithful and active in occupying with their one talent; and spend much time in retirement, meditation, and devotion.—The lively exercise of faith, and the encouraging experience of the Lord’s goodness, inspire the soul with a holy but humble boldness in approaching him. The terrors, which once were felt at the discovery of his glorious holiness and justice, are dissipated, even while these awful attributes are more distinctly perceived and steadily contemplated, in the person and atonement of the great Redeemer: and while others tremble at a distance, when convinced that “our God is a consuming fire;” the established believer “has grace to worship him with reverence and godly fear,” combined with adoring, thankful love. And finding that his consolations abundantly compensate the want of outward enjoyments, and at some times enable him to forget the craving even of natural appetites; he is not, in these favoured seasons, in haste to terminate the sweet intercourse, but desires still to commune with his God, till a sense of duty compels him reluctantly to return to the ordinary employments of his station.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXV. V. 1. Moses in the mount, like Paul in the third heaven, without doubt saw and heard very glorious and wonderful things: but it was not lawful or possible to utter them; (Note, 2 Cor. xii. 1—6;) and he reported nothing to the people but what referred to their duty, and to the worship of God which was to be established among them.

V. 2. The Israelites must be exhorted to offer a portion, towards the establishment of religious worship, from the spoils of the Egyptians, or from such other property as they had by any means obtained: yet this oblation, (called a heave-offering, (marg.) probably because lifting it up towards heaven was the ceremony by which it was devoted to God,) was neither exacted by compulsion, nor regulated by prescription; but every one was left to give, as he was “disposed in his heart.” (Note, 2 Cor. ix. 6, 7.)

V. 4—7. Wool, and linen, and goats’ hair, or other materials for working into cloths, dyed of the colours here mentioned, were highly valued.—The Lord so ordered it, that the Israelites had received of the Egyptians all the materials required for building the tabernacle, and setting forward the worship to be there performed, according to the several particulars here mentioned; and this not only intimated favour to the Gentiles, but also represented the use, which God often makes of the abilities and substance of strangers, in supporting and promoting true religion.

V. 8. The word (שְׁכֵנְיָהוּ, from שָׁכַן to sanctify, or make holy,) rendered sanctuary denotes a holy habitation for the Lord’s immediate residence. This was intended for a visible pledge and token that he was present with his people, to protect, instruct, guide, and govern them; to pardon their sins, to accept their services, and to supply their wants.—The tabernacle was also a type of the human nature of Jesus Christ, “in whom dwelleth all the fulness “of the Godhead bodily;” of the Church of God, which, as one with him, is a spiritual house; of every true believer, who, as a part of that great temple, is “a habitation “of God through the Spirit:” and of heaven, where the presence of God is visibly displayed, and he dwells among his holy angels and redeemed sinners, as their everlasting Felicity, and accepts their holy worship.

V. 9. The Lord not only directed Moses by words, how to build the tabernacle, and form its sacred furniture:

and the pattern of all the instruments thereof, even so shall ye make it.

^{m xxxvii. 1-3. Deut. x. 1-3. 2 Chr. vii. 11. Heb. ix. 4. Rev. xi. 19.} 10 ¶ And they shall make ^m an ark of shittim-wood: two cubits and a half shall be the length thereof, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof.

^{n 24. xxx. 3. Kings vi. 20. 2 Chr. iii. 4.} 11 And thou shalt ⁿ overlay it with pure gold, within and without shalt thou overlay it; and shalt make upon it a crown of gold round about.

^{o 15. 26. xxvi. 29. xxxvii. 7. xxxviii. 7.} 12 And thou shalt cast ^o four rings of gold for it, and put them in the four corners thereof; and two rings shall be in the one side of it, and two rings in the other side of it.

^{p 28. xxxvii. 6. xxxviii. 4. xl. 20. Num. iv. 6. 8. 11. 14. 1 Chr. xv. 15.} 13 And thou shalt make ^p staves of shittim-wood, and overlay them with gold.

14 And thou shalt put the staves into the rings, by the sides of the ark, that the ark may be borne with them.

^{q 1 Kings vii. 8. 2 Chr. v. 9.} 15 ^q The staves shall be in the rings of the ark: they shall not be taken from it.

16 And thou shalt put into the ark ^r the testimony which I shall give thee.

17 And thou shalt make ^r a mercy-seat of pure gold: two cubits and a half shall be the length thereof, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof.

18 And thou shalt make ^r two cherubims of gold: of beaten work shalt thou make them, in the two ends of the mercy-seat.

19 And make one cherub on the one end, and the other cherub on the other end: even ^s of the mercy-seat shall ye make the cherubims on the two ends thereof.

20 And the cherubims shall stretch ^t forth their wings on high, ^u covering the mercy-seat with their wings, and their faces shall look one to another: ^x toward the mercy-seat shall the faces of the cherubims be.

21 And thou shalt ^y put the mercy-seat above upon the ark, and ^z in the ark thou shalt put the testimony that I shall give thee.

xxvi. 34. xxxvii. 21. xxx. 6. 36. xxxi. 15. xxxii. 15. xxxviii. 29. xxxviii. 21. Num. xvii. 4. Deut. x. 2-5. xxxi. 26. 1 Kings vi. 9. 2 Kings xi. 12. 2 Chr. xxxiv. 14, 15. Acts vii. 44. Heb. ix. 4. xxxvi. 34. xxxviii. 6. xl. 20. Lev. xvi. 12-15. 1 Chr. xxviii. 11. Rom. iii. 25. Heb. iv. 16. 1 John ii. 2. xxxvii. 7-9. Gen. iii. 24. 1 Sam. iv. 4. 1 Kings vi. 28-29. viii. 6, 7. 1 Chr. xxviii. 18. Ez. x. 2. 20. xii. 18, 19. Heb. ix. ^{*} Or, of the matter of the mercy-seat. ^u Ez. xxxviii. 14. ^x Gen. xxviii. 12. 1s vi. 1-5. Ez. i. 20. Matt. xxiv. 31. John i. 51. 1 Cor. iv. 9. xi. 10. Eph. iii. 10. Col. ii. 10. Heb. i. 14. 1 Pet. i. 12. iii. 22. Rev. v. 11, 12. 17. xxvi. 34. Rom. x. 4. ^z See on 16 but he shewed him a model, exactly representing the form of every part, and the proportion of each to all the rest. It is observable, that this related to the construction of the tabernacle and its furniture alone, or perhaps the priestly garments; and has no reference to the rest even of the ceremonial law, as it is frequently supposed. (Note, 40.) Indeed, it is not easy to form an idea of a pattern, or model, of any thing, which is not material.—During the continuance of Israel in the wilderness, and during four hundred and forty years after their settlement in Canaan, the sanctuary was only a tent, or moveable building; but afterwards a temple was built upon mount Zion, and the typical ordinances were confined to one place. This may mark the difference between the church on earth, and the church in heaven: wandering and journeying through this wilderness, we take our religion, and the ordinances of it, along with us all the way; but in heaven there is rest for the Church of God, and no more removals for ever.

V. 10—21. “The ark of the covenant” was so called, not only as it contained the tables of the law, which were the basis of the national covenant; but also because it was an abiding symbol of God’s gracious presence with his people, and typified those peculiar benefits, which belong to the covenant of peace, mediated by Christ in behalf of the true Israel.—It was a chest, made of wood not liable to rot, of about four feet in length, and two feet and a half in breadth and in depth, plated all over, both within and without, with plates of pure gold, having a border, or cornice, of gold round about it; and covered with a covering all of massy gold, which was called, the covering, or “the propitiatory,” or “the mercy-seat,” and it was kept firm in its place by the cornice, as the word rendered

“crown” seems here to mean. In this ark the two tables of stone, which contained the law of the ten commandments were put: it was placed in the holy of holies; before it the blood of the sacrifices was sprinkled, and the incense burnt, by the high priest, on the day of atonement; and above it appeared the visible glory, which was the symbol of the divine presence.—This was an evident type of Christ, as to his sinless human nature, (which “saw no corruption,”) in personal union with his divine nature, magnifying the law, and covering our transgressions of it, by “having it in his heart,” obeying it in his life, and atoning for the violations of it by his death. Through the sprinkling of his blood, and the intercession which, as our High Priest, he makes in the true holy of holies, God appears to sinners with mild glory upon a mercy-seat; and accepts the persons and services of believers, dwelling among them and abundantly blessing them.—“The testimony,” signifies the tables of the law, which testified God’s authority over the Israelites, his regard for them, and his presence with them: they also testified, that while he was merciful to them, he required them to be obedient: and the same would testify against them, if they neglected or forsook his service and worship. The two cherubim were emblematical representations of the angels, “desiring to look” into the mysteries of redeeming love: they were therefore formed with their faces towards the mercy-seat, as contemplating it and the mysteries which it contained.—Various conjectures have been advanced concerning the form or shape of the cherubim; but the text in this place mentions no more than their faces and wings, and arguments taken from other emblematical parts of Scripture are not satisfactory.—It is thought they were

THE ARK AND MERCY-SEAT.

EXOD. xxv. 10-22.

THE TABLE OF SHEWBREAD.

EXOD. xxv. 23-30. LEVIT. xxiv. 5-9.

THE GOLDEN CANDLESTICK.

EXOD. XXV. 31—40.

22 And there I will meet with thee, ^a and I will commune with thee, from above the mercy-seat, from ^b between the two cherubims which are upon the ark of the testimony, of all things which I will give thee in commandment unto the children of Israel.

23 ¶ Thou shalt also make ^c a table of shittim-wood: two cubits shall be the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof.

24 And thou shalt ^d overlay it with pure gold, and make thereto a crown of gold round about.

25 And thou shalt make unto it a border of an hand-breadth round about, and thou shalt make ^e a golden crown to the border thereof round about.

26 And thou shalt make for it ^f four rings of gold, and put the rings in the four corners that are on the four feet thereof.

27 Over against the border shall the rings be, ^g for places of the staves to bear the table.

28 And thou shalt make the staves of shittim-wood, and overlay them with gold, that ^h the table may be borne with them.

29 And thou shalt make ⁱ the dishes thereof, and spoons thereof, and covers thereof, and bowls thereof ^{*} to cover withal: of pure gold shalt thou make them.

30 And thou shalt set upon the table ^k shew-bread before me alway.

31 ¶ And thou shalt make ^l a candlestick of pure gold, of beaten work shall the candlestick be made; his shaft, and his branches, his bowls, ^m his knops, and his flowers shall be of the same.

^a xx. 24 xxxi. 18. Gen. xviii. 33. Lev. i. 1. xvi. 2. Num. vii. 89. xvii. 4. Deut. v. 26—31. Judg. xx. 27.

^b xxix. 42. 43. xxxi. 6. 1 Sam. iv. 4. 2 Sam. vi. 2. 2 Kings xix. 15. Ps. lxxx. 1. xcix. 1. Is. xxxvii. 16.

^c xxxvii. 10—16. xl. 22. 23. Lev. xxiv. 6. Num. iii. 31. 1 Kings vii. 48. 1 Chr. xxviii. 16. 2 Chr. iv. 8. 19. Ez. xl. 41. 42. Heb. ix. 2.

^d See on 11.—1 Kings vi. 20—22.

^e xxx. 3. xxxvii. 2.

^f See on 12.

^h 14. 27. Num. x. 17. Acts ix. 15.

ⁱ xxxvii. 16. Num. iv. 7. vii. 13. 19. 31. &c. 1 Kings vii. 50. 2 Chr. iv. 22. Ezra i. 9—11. Jer. lii. 18, 19.

^{*} Or, to pour out withal. Lev. xxiv. 5—9. Cant. v. 1. Rev. iii. 20.

^k xxxv. 13. xxxix. 36. Num. iv. 7. 1 Sam. xxi. 6. 1 Chr. ix. 32. xxiii. 29. 2 Chr. xiii. 11. Matt. xii. 4.

^l xxxv. 14. xxxvii. 17—24. xl. 24. 25. 1 Kings vii. 49. Zech. iv. 2. Heb. ix. 2. Rev. i. 12. 20. ii. 1. 5. iv. 5. m 1 Kings vi. 18. vii. 24.

formed of the same mass of gold as the propitiatory, and that this is the meaning of the word rendered beaten-work; though others interpret it to denote the polish and finishing of the workmanship.—As the ark and propitiatory were intended to be carried about, there were golden rings at the four corners, and staves plated with gold; which were not taken out of the rings, even when it was stationary.

V. 22. After the tabernacle had been constructed, and the ark of the covenant had been put in the most holy place, the Lord displayed his glory from above the mercy-seat, between the cherubim; and thence he delivered to Moses the rest of the ceremonial and judicial law; communing with him, probably in an audible voice, and answering all his enquiries.

V. 23—30. Nothing but the ark of the covenant, with the propitiatory or mercy-seat, was put within the most holy place; but without the veil, a table was fixed, of the same height as the ark, but neither so long nor so broad. It was made of the same materials as the ark, and with a golden cornice: but it had also another cornice below the edge and one at the bottom; with a border between the two of a handbreadth; though some think one border only was below the edge, and that this was towards the bottom, to keep the feet or legs more closely united. The table also had rings and staves for the convenience of removing it.—To it were annexed several vessels; as dishes, in which some think the shew-bread was placed; or, according to others, the flour of which it was made, or the oil used for various purposes:—spoons, which were employed about the incense offered on the golden altar, or carried within the veil in a censer on the day of atonement; and some think the word denotes vials, as we read of vials full of odours, or incense: (Rev. v. 8:)—covers, which seem to have been put over both the loaves and the incense; yet some suppose, they were vessels used in drink-offerings; but that is more reasonably considered as the use of the bowls, mentioned in the last place.—The shew-bread will more conveniently be spoken of hereafter: (Note, Lev. xxiv. 5—9:) but, in general, this part of the ceremonial institution seems to have typified the communion, which in his ordinances the Lord holds with his redeemed people; the provisions of his house, and the feasts with which they are sometimes favoured; the food for their souls, which they always find when they hunger after it; and the delight which he takes in their persons and services, as presented before him in Christ Jesus. (Cant. v. 1. Rev. iii. 20.)

V. 31—39. The candlestick was made entirely of pure gold, beaten into plates and burnished. It is generally thought, that it might be taken in pieces, for the convenience of removing it. The shaft, or trunk, is supposed to have had a foot, on which the whole candlestick stood firm; yet no mention is made of this foot. On each side of the shaft were three branches, shaped like reeds, or canes, one above the other, being six in all. Each branch was ornamented by three bowls, shaped like almonds, (which perhaps were so placed as to receive any thing that fell from the lamps;) and by a knop like a pomegranate and a flower. These seem to have been placed above the uppermost bowl, just under the lamp, which was at the top of each branch.—On the shaft, or main pillar, called on that account the candlestick, were four bowls like almonds, and four knops and four flowers.—Three of these are supposed to have been made on the shaft, immediately under the place where each of the three branches arose out of it, on either side; the knop and the flower being above the bowl. And the fourth bowl, knop, and flower, were fixed beneath the lamp, which was on the top of the shaft, and which, with those on each of the branches, made the number seven in all. The height of the candlestick is not mentioned, nor indeed the dimensions of any part: but with its vessels, or the tongs and snuff-dishes for dressing the lamps, it contained a talent of pure gold, or about a hundred weight. This might suffice to direct the workmen in 32 And six branches shall come out of the sides of it: three branches of the candlestick out of the one side, and three branches of the candlestick out of the other side.

33 Three bowls made like unto almonds, with a knop and a flower in one branch; ⁿ and three bowls made like almonds in the other branch, with a knop and a flower: so in the six branches that come out of the candlestick.

34 And in the candlestick shall be four bowls made like unto almonds, with their knops and their flowers.

35 And there shall be a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, according to the six branches that proceed out of the candlestick.

36 Their knops and their branches shall be of the same: all of it shall be one ^o beaten work of pure gold.

37 And thou shalt make the ^p seven lamps thereof: and ^q they shall ^r light the lamps thereof, that they may ^s give light over against ^t it.

38 And ^u the tongs thereof, and the ^v snuff-dishes thereof, shall be of pure gold.

39 Of a talent of pure gold shall he make it, with all these vessels.

40 And look ^w that thou make them after their pattern, which ^x was shewed thee in the mount.

n xxxvii. 19, 20.
Zech. iv. 3.

o 18. Num. viii. 4.
1 Kings x. 16, 17.
2 Chr. ix. 15.
p xxxvii. 23. Rev. i. 12. 20. ii. 1. iv. 5.
q xxxvii. 21. xxx. 8. Lev. xxiv. 2—4. 2 Chr. xiii. 11.
r Or, cause to ascend.
s Heb. the face of it. Num. viii. 2. 2 Chr. iv. 21. 1e. vi. 6.
t xxxvii. 23. Num. iv. 9. 1 Kings vii. 50. 2 Kings xii. 13. xxv. 14. Jer. lili. 18.
u xxxvi. 30. xxxix. 42, 43. Num. viii. 4. 1 Chr. xxviii. 11. 19. Ez. xliiii. 11, 12. Acts vii. 44. Heb. viii. 5.
x Heb. thou wast caused to see.

respect of the proportions to be observed; especially as Moses would remember the model shewn him in the mount.—There were no windows in the tabernacle; but the candlestick being placed over against the table of shewbread, each lamp would cast its light to the part of the tabernacle over against it, and the whole would thus be sufficiently lighted.—This typified the light of revelation, and the teaching of the Holy Spirit, through Christ Jesus, afforded to the church in this dark world, to direct her worship and obedience, and administer to her consolations: but in heaven, “the LORD will be unto her an everlasting Light, and God himself her glory.”—All these sacred vessels were so framed, that the Israelites might take them with them in their journeys; and they were highly decorated. Thus the religion of Christ must accompany his people through life; and it is fitted to be diffused through all nations: there is in him all beauty and glory; and he adorns his church with the graces of the Spirit, and all the beauty of holiness.—They were all made of the most precious metals: for Christ is most precious in himself, and in the estimation of the Father, of his people, and of all the inhabitants of heaven. His Church also consists of the excellent of the earth; he requires us to consecrate unto him the best and most valuable of every thing, of our time, our substance, our abilities, and especially our affections; and he will accept of nothing but that which is the very best of the kind.

V. 40. The ceremonial law was altogether instituted in worship, which derives all its obligation from the express appointment of God. It was likewise in every part typical of Christ and his salvation: but especially the sanctuary and its furniture, were a shadow of him, in his person, righteousness, mediation, and grace; and of our life of faith and communion with him. It was therefore highly proper, that every particular should be fashioned exactly according to the model set before Moses on the mount; and nothing at all left to human invention. Indeed, it is evident, that uniformity in worship, as far as related to the services at the tabernacle, and afterwards at the temple, was prescribed by the law, though it was seldom adhered to: but it is equally plain, that such a uniformity, according to a precise rule, in the externals of worship, was not intended under the new dispensation: and the very disputes, which this subject has so long occasioned, are a complete demonstration that no such exact and explicit rule subsists; for if it did, the controversy must cease of course, or rather could never have been started. The old ritual is evidently antiquated, and nothing of the same kind is substituted in its place; therefore a latitude is allowed us by the Lord, and we have no right to impose our sentiments on others, or to condemn those who differ from us. Yet we must remember, that we are accountable to God for the use which we make of this liberty. We should take heed, that we do not reject the truths or “commandments of God to keep our own traditions;” and that we consider every thing of this kind as a mere circumstance, though in our judgment expedient for the more regular attendance on God’s ordinances, profession of his truths, and obedience to his commandments. (Heb. viii. 5.—Note, 9.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

In all things the Lord prevents us with his bounty, and we can present nothing to him, but what was previously his gift. (Note, 1 Chr. xxix. 10—19.) In the great concerns of salvation, his love suggested the gracious design, and his wisdom formed the wonderful plan: the Father loved the world, and gave his Son for our redemption; the Son loved us, and gave himself a sacrifice for our sins; his word reveals this salvation; his providence by special designation hath sent it to us; the ordinances, in which he will meet us, are of his appointment, and rendered effectual by his blessing; and his preventing grace produces at first the willing mind to attend on them. But while he reveals himself in Christ Jesus, as a reconciled Father upon a mercy-seat, affords us the light of his word, and promises the teaching of his Holy Spirit, to direct us to the Bread of life, and guide us into sweet communion with him, that we may feast upon the plenteousness of his holy temple; he reasonably requires that we diligently attend on his ordinances, come to his mercy-seat, enquire his will, feed upon the Bread of life, walk in the light, and present our bodies, souls, and all we have, to him, to

CHAP. XXVI.

Directions for making the ten curtains of the sanctuary, 1—6. The eleven curtains of goats' hair; and the coverings of rams' skins and badgers' skins, 7—14. The boards, sockets, and bars, 15—30. The veil and pillars to separate the most holy place, 31—33. The arrangement of the furniture in the sanctuary; and the hanging for the door, 34—37.

MOREOVER thou shalt make ^a the tabernacle with ten curtains of ^b fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet; with ^c cherubims of ^d cunning work shalt thou make them.

2 The length of one ^d curtain shall be eight and twenty cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits: and every one of the curtains shall have one measure.

3 The five curtains shall be ^e coupled together one to another: and

^a xxxv. 8. xxxvi. 8—19. xl. 2. 17—19. I Chr. xxi. 29. John i. 14. ii. 21. Heb. viii. 2. ix. 9. 23. 24. Rev. xxi. 3.
^b 36. xxv. 4. xxxv. 6. 35. Rev. xix. 8.
^c See on xxv. 18.
^d Heb. the work of a cunning workman, or, embroiderer.
^e 7. 8. Num. iv. 25. 2 Sam. vii. 2. I Chr. xvii. 1.
9. xxxvi. 10. John xvii. 21. I Cor. xii. 4. 12—27. Eph. ii. 21. 22. iv. 3—6. 16. Col. ii. 2. 19.

other five curtains shall be coupled one to another.

4 And thou shalt make ^f loops of blue upon the edge of the one curtain, from the selvedge in the coupling: and likewise shalt thou make in the uttermost edge of another curtain, in the coupling of the second.

5 Fifty loops shalt thou make in the one curtain, and fifty loops shalt thou make in the edge of the curtain that is in the coupling of the second; that the loops may take hold one of another.

6 And thou shalt make fifty ^g taches of gold, and couple the curtains together with the taches: and it shall be ^h one tabernacle.

7 ¶ And thou shalt make ⁱ curtains of ^k goats' hair to be ^l a covering upon ^f 5. 10. 11. xxxvi. 11, 12. 17.

^g 11. 33. xxxv. 11. xxxvi. 13. 16. xxxix. 33.
^h Eph. i. 22. 25. iv. 13. I Pet. ii. 4, 5.
ⁱ xxxv. 26. xxxvi. 14—18. Num. iv. 25. Ps. xlv. 13. I Pet. iii. 4 v. 5.
^k xxxv. 4. xxxv. 6. 25. Num. xxxi. 20.
^l 14. iv. 5.

be employed according to his will, and for his glory; and that we, with a willing and liberal mind, according to the ability which he giveth us, actually separate to his service, both for the support of religion and communicating to the poor, a proportion of our substance, to prove the sincerity of our faith and love. If we have no inclination to this, we have no proof that we are his true people; but if we have indeed a willing mind, and give the best which we possess in simplicity, we may take the comfort of this good evidence, that God hath bestowed on us his saving grace. Though no exact proportion is prescribed, yet the Lord saith, that "he which soweth sparingly, shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully, shall reap also bountifully,"—in peace and assurance on earth, and in abundant glory in heaven. Finally, let us remember, that if we are true Christians, we are the temples of the Holy Spirit, have the law of God written in our hearts, live a life of communion with God, feast on his ordinances, and are the light of the world. The Lord help us to try ourselves by this view of Christianity, and to walk according to it.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXVI. V. 1—6. As these rich curtains formed the principal covering of the sanctuary, they are called the Tabernacle, or Dwelling-place, namely, of Israel's God and King.—They were made of the finest linen, dyed of the richest colours, spun and woven in the most curious manner, and beautifully embroidered all over with cherubim, the emblematic representation of angels, as joining in the worship of the God of Israel. Each curtain was about fifteen yards long, and something more than two yards wide: but though woven and wrought separately, they were afterwards joined together, into two grand divisions of five curtains each; probably by needle-work. Each of these divisions would be about eleven yards wide; and they likewise were joined together into one tabernacle. Fifty loops of blue tape, or ribband, were fastened to the edge or selvedge of the outermost of the five curtains, on that side by which it was to be coupled to the outermost of the other five curtains; on the selvedge of which, fifty loops were placed exactly answering to the others.—These loops seem to have been joined together, by being passed through each other: and fifty taches, or buttons, or clasps, of gold, were also made, to each of which, two loops, one of either outside curtain, were closely fastened, in order to render the whole compact: yet so that the two grand divisions might easily be separated, when there was occasion to remove it. Thus firmly joined together, it was spread over the top of the sanctuary, and reached on each side, within less than a yard of the ground, covering also the whole length of it. The ten curtains were forty cubits wide, (except any thing should be deducted for the seams and joinings,) yet the sanctuary was not much more than thirty cubits long: hence it has been thought, that one division of the covering was exactly spread over the holy place, which was twenty cubits in length; and that the other covered the most holy place, which was ten cubits square; and that the residue hung over on the west end towards the ground. But this is not here mentioned: and perhaps this inner covering being spread rather loosely over the sanctuary, did not extend much beyond the ends of it; which is the more likely, as mention is expressly made of the surplus of the second curtains.

V. 7—14. The curtains of goats' hair were above a yard longer than the rich curtains, and would therefore extend above half a yard lower on each side, that is, almost to the ground. Being one more in number than the others, and of the same width, they would, when joined, be more than two yards wider, and so much the more would be left to hang over at the ends of the sanctuary: but it seems that the greater part of the additional curtain, was brought to the east end or opening of it; and there doubled up, perhaps for ornament as a festoon; yet some also remained at the west end, to cover the curtains and the boards. They were joined together, as the rich curtains were, except that

^m 1. 9. 12 the tabernacle; ^m eleven curtains shalt thou make.

^a 2. 13 8 The ^a length of one curtain shall be thirty cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits: and the eleven curtains shall be all of one measure.

^o 4 9 And thou shalt couple ^o five curtains by themselves, and six curtains by themselves, and shalt double the sixth curtain in the fore-front of the tabernacle.

^p 4-6. 10 And thou shalt make ^p fifty loops on the edge of the one curtain that is outmost in the coupling, and fifty loops in the edge of the curtain which coupleth the second.

11 And thou shalt make fifty taches of brass, and put the taches into the loops, and couple the ^{*} tent together ^q that it may be one.

12 And the remnant that remaineth of the curtains of the tent, the half-curtain that remaineth, ^r shall hang over the back side of the tabernacle.

13 And ^s a cubit on the one side, and a cubit on the other side [†] of that which remaineth in the length of the curtains of the tent, it shall hang over the sides of the tabernacle, on this side, and on that side, to cover it.

14 And thou shalt make ^t a covering for the tent, of ^u rams' skins dyed red, and a covering above of badgers' skins.

15 ¶ And thou shalt make ^x boards for the tabernacle, ^y of shittim-wood, standing up.

16 Ten cubits shall be the length of the taches were made of brass instead of gold. The language however, describing the way in which they were fastened to each other, is varied: and perhaps may be thus more clearly rendered: "Thou shalt make fifty loops at the border of the first curtain, which is outmost next to the coupling, and fifty loops in the border of the curtain that coupleth, even of the second." For these were the two curtains by which all the rest were coupled together: and on the outmost border of each of these, fifty loops were fixed; which by means of the taches, or clasps, or buttons, were firmly joined together, into one tent or covering.—Thus the coarser curtains completely covered, and concealed, the richer: yet a two-fold security against the effects of the weather was added, in the covering of rams' skins dyed red, and that of badgers' skins, which was spread over all the rest.—The whole represents the person and doctrine of Christ, his true church, and all heavenly things, which are outwardly, and to the carnal eye, mean; but are inwardly, and in the sight of God, exceedingly a board, and a cubit and a half shall be the breadth of one board.

17 Two ^z tenons shall there be in one board, set in order one against another: thus shalt thou make for all the boards of the tabernacle.

18 And thou shalt make the boards for the tabernacle, twenty boards on the south side, southward.

19 And thou shalt make ^z forty sockets of silver, under the twenty boards: two sockets under one board for his two tenons, and two sockets under another board for his two tenons.

20 And for the second side of the tabernacle on the north side, there shall be twenty boards.

21 And their forty sockets of silver: ^a two sockets under one board, ^s 19. and two sockets under another board.

22 And for the sides of the tabernacle westward, thou shalt make six boards.

23 And two boards shalt thou make for the corners of the tabernacle in the two sides.

24 And they shall be ^b coupled together beneath, ^b and they shall be coupled together above the head of it unto one ring: thus shall it be for them both; they shall be for the two corners.

25 And they shall be eight boards, and their sockets of silver, sixteen sockets: two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board.

26 And thou shalt make ^c bars of glorious and precious. The secure protection which he prepares for those who are precious in his sight, may also be denoted: and the unity of the whole, formed of so many pieces, and of such different materials, into one covering of the sanctuary, represents the spiritual temple, formed of persons of different nations, dispositions, abilities, and attainments, compacted together into one church, by the uniting influence of the Spirit of love.

V. 15—29. The sockets of silver, each weighing a talent, that is, about a hundred weight, were placed in rows upon the ground; forty on the south, forty on the north, twelve on the west, and two at each corner on the west end. In every couple of these sockets, and by two tenons fitted to the hollows of them, was fixed a substantial board of shittim-wood, covered with plates of gold: the boards seem also to have been fastened together by mortises and tenons, or by a concave in the one exactly fitted to a convex in the other. The corner boards were also joined to the boards on either side of them, both at shittim-wood: five for the boards of the one side of the tabernacle, 27 And five bars for the boards of the other side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the side of the tabernacle for the two sides westward.

28 And the middle bar in the midst of the boards shall reach from end to end.

29 And thou shalt ^a overlay the boards with gold, and make their rings of gold for places for the bars: and thou shalt overlay the bars with gold.

30 And thou shalt ^c rear up the tabernacle ^f according to the fashion thereof which was shewed thee in the mount.

31 ¶ And thou shalt make ^s a veil of ^h blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen of ⁱ cunning-work: with ^k cherubims shall it be made.

32 And thou shalt hang it upon four ^l pillars of shittim-wood, overlaid with gold: their hooks shall be of gold, upon the four sockets of silver.

33 And thou shalt hang up the veil under ^m the taches, that thou mayest bring in thither ⁿ within the veil, ^o the ark of the testimony: and the veil shall divide unto you, between ^p the holy place and the most holy.

34 And thou shalt ^q put the mercy-seat upon the ark of the testimony, in the most holy place.

35 And thou shalt set ^r the table without the veil, and ^s the candlestick over against the table on the side of the tabernacle toward the south; and thou shalt put the table on the north-side.

36 And thou shalt make an ^t hanging for the door of ^u the tent, ^x of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, wrought with needle-work.

37 And thou shalt make for the hanging five pillars of shittim-wood, and ^y overlay them with gold: and their hooks shall be of gold: and thou shalt cast five sockets of brass for them.

d See on xxv. 11, 12.

e xl. 2. 17, 18. Num. x. 21. Josh. xviii. 1. Heb. viii. 2.

f xxv. 9, 40, xxvii. 8. Acts vii. 44. Heb. viii. 5. ix. 24.

g xxxvi. 38. xl. 8. 21. Lev. xvi. 2. 15. 2 Chr. iii. 14. Matt. xxvii. 51. Mark xv. 38. Luke xxiii. 45. Eph. ii. 14. Heb. ix. 3-8. x. 20, 21.

h xxv. 4. xxxv. 6. 25. 39. xxxvi. 8.

i l. xxxviii. 15. xxxviii. 28.

k See on xxv. 18.

l 37. xxxvi. 38. Esth. i. 6.

m xxvii. 10. xxxvi. 36.

n Heb. ix. 4, 6.

o See on xxv. 16. —xl. 21.

p 1 Kings viii. 6. 10. 2 Chr. v. 7-10. Heb. ix. 2, 3.

q See on xxv. 21. —xl. 20. Heb. ix. 5.

r See on xl. 22.—Heb. ix. 2, 8, 9.

s See on xxv. 31.—37. xl. 24.

t xxxvi. 37. xl. 28. John x. 9. xiv. 6.

u xxxv. 11. xxxix. 38. xl. 29. Num. iii. 25. ix. 15.

x 2 Sam. vii. 6. Ps. lxxxviii. 60.

y See on 31.

top and bottom, by a ring or staple, no doubt of gold.—Thus a wall was formed on three sides of the sanctuary; which was still further strengthened by five bars of shittim-wood, covered with gold, passing through rings of gold. As the middle bars alone are said to “reach from end to end,” it may be supposed that the others were not so long. The whole was so firmly compacted together, that it could not be shaken or thrown down, much more easily than an edifice of stone; though it might readily be taken down, and afterwards put together again; its materials also were very costly.—In all these things, it was a type of the church of God, “built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief Corner-stone, in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord.” Eph. ii. 20, 21.

V. 30. Notes, xxv. 9. 40.

V. 31—33. This veil separated “the holy place,” or what the apostle calls “the first tabernacle,” “from the most holy place;” and it was hung upon pillars fixed in sockets of silver, in the manner of the boards.—It was formed of the same materials, and with the same ornamental work, as the innermost curtains; but it is generally thought to have been made exceedingly thick, that it might completely conceal the most holy place, and the ark of the covenant.—We need only hint, that sin had excluded man from the gracious presence of God, so that nothing short of the death of Christ could remove the obstacle, rend the veil, and give the sinner free access with boldness to the mercy-seat.

V 36, 37. This hanging was suspended on five pillars, overlaid with gold, at the east end of the sanctuary, and served instead of a door; on the removal of which, the priests might enter the sanctuary between the pillars. It seems to have been less ornamented in all respects, than the inner veil, and without cherubim; and the sockets for the pillars were made of brass instead of silver. In veneration of the rising sun, many of the Gentiles worshipped towards the east: but Israel was required to protest against that idolatry, by turning their backs upon the east in worshipping God; for we must disregard the most excellent and useful creatures, when they would divert our homage and affections from the Creator.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

With this typical description of Christ and his church before our eyes, let us ask ourselves what our judgment on these subjects is. Do we see any glory in the person of Christ? any excellency in his character, or preciousness in his salvation, or wisdom in the doctrine of the cross? Do we perceive any beauty in holiness, or any amiableness in the character of Christians? These things are hidden under external meanness, from the carnal eye of the superficial observer, but are spiritually discerned by every true believer; who sees, through the exterior covering, the internal glory, and hidden excellency, of heavenly things. As our judgment, choice, and consequent practice are, so is our state towards God. “To you that believe, Christ is precious.”—Let us also examine ourselves, as to the state of our own hearts; whether we possess a consciousness of dependance on God, love to him, hatred of sin, desire after holiness, and a full purpose of heart, through

CHAP. XXVII.

The brazen altar for burnt sacrifice, and its vessels, 1—8. The court of the tabernacle, its hangings, pillars, and dimensions, 9—19. The oil for the candlestick, and the ordering of it, 20, 21

AND thou shalt make an ^a altar of shittim-wood, five cubits long, and five cubits broad: the altar shall be four-square, and the height thereof shall be three cubits.

2 And thou shalt make the ^b horns of it upon the four corners thereof: his horns shall be of the same: and thou shalt ^c overlay it with brass.

3 And thou shalt make his pans to receive his ashes, and ^d his shovels, and his ^e basons, and his ^f flesh-hooks, and his ^g fire-pans: all the vessels thereof thou shalt make of brass.

^a xx. 24—26. xxiv. 4. xxxviii. 1—7. xl. 10. 29. 2 Sam. xxiv. 18. 2 Chr. iv. 1. Ez. xliii. 13—17. Heb. xiii. 10.

^b xxxix. 12. Lev. iv. 7. 18. 25. viii. 15. xvi. 18. 1 Kings i. 50. ii. 28. Ps. cxviii. 27. Heb. vi. 18.

^c Num. xvi. 38. 39. 1 Kings viii. 64. Lev. xvi. 12. 1 Kings vii. 40. 43. 2 Chr. iv. 11. Jer. li. 18.

^d xxiv. 6. xxxviii. 3. Num. iv. 14. 1 Sam. ii. 13. 14. 1 Chr. xxxviii. 17. 2 Chr. iv. 16.

^e 2 Kings xxv. 15. Jer. lii. 19.

4 And thou shalt make for it ^h a grate of net-work of brass: and upon the net shalt thou make four brazen ⁱ rings in the four corners thereof.

5 And thou shalt put it under the compass of the altar beneath, that the net may be even to the midst of the altar.

6 And thou shalt make ^k staves for the altar, staves of shittim-wood, and overlay them with brass.

7 And the staves shall be put into the rings, and the staves shall be put upon the two sides of the altar to ^l bear it.

8 Hollow with boards shalt thou make it: ^m as ⁿ it was shewed thee in the mount, so shall they make it.

9 ¶ And thou shalt make ⁿ the court of the tabernacle for the south side ⁱ See on xxv. 12.

^k See on xxv. 15—16.

^l xxv. 28. xxx. 4. Num. iv. 13, 14. m xxv. 9. 40. xxvii. 30. 1 Chr. xxviii. 11. 19. Matt. xx. 9. Col. ii. 20—23. Heb. viii. 5.

^m Heb. he shetref. ⁿ xxxviii. 9—20. xl. 8. 1 Kings vi. 36. viii. 64. 2 Chr. xxxiii. 5. Ps. lxxxiv. 10. xci. 13. c. 4. cxvi. 19. Ez. xl. 14. 20. 23. 28. 32. 44. xlii. 3. 19, 20. xlvii. 20—24.

divine grace to glorify him? Will our religion bear examination? and are we more careful to approve our hearts to God, than our characters to men? For, notwithstanding all our imperfections, this state of mind is in the sight of God of great price.—The hypocrite is the reverse of all this: he keeps up a specious appearance before men, but he shrinks from examination; for “his inward part is very wickedness;” and God knows it.—Thus also the Christian’s comfort, and his inheritance, are not an outside shew of mirth and prosperity, covering an aching heart, and a soul doomed to destruction; but an inward sweetness and peace unobserved of men, and a glorious inheritance, reserved within the veil. Nay, the mean appearance of the church, and of the Christian, is often a security from persecution and temptation.—As every part of this spiritual building of God, in subserviency to his power and love, conduces to the stability of the whole, let us consider how much it behoves us, to “endeavour to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace:” let us watch against discontent, envy, ambition, and contention; and, each in his proper place, study to serve the common interests of genuine Christianity.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXVII. V. 1—8. The altar for the sacrifices made by fire, at the entrance into the Sanctuary, was almost three yards square, and above a yard and a half in height. The frame was of shittim-wood, forming a hollow square within. And on each corner was a small turret, or pinnacle, of the same wood: to which, on some occasions at least, the animals to be sacrificed were bound; and to which part of the blood was applied. The frame of the altar was covered with plates of brass, probably of a considerable thickness, both within and without: the horns also were overlaid with brass. Over the hollow in the middle was placed a brazen grate, to receive the fire and the sacrifices, being full of holes, as a net, through which the ashes might fall down under the altar; whence they were removed from time to time. This grate seems to have sloped down on every side, and so to have reached half way to the bottom of the altar within: and by four rings it might be taken up to be cleaned or to be removed, separately from the rest of the altar. By means of this grate, the fire was kept at a proper distance from the wood of which the frame was made; and it had this protection in addition to the covering of brass.—There seem likewise to have been rings to the altar, as well as to the grate, by which it was carried on the staves or bars.—Connected with the altar, were various vessels for different purposes; as pans, into which the ashes were taken to be carried away; basons, to receive the blood of the sacrifices, and the meat-offerings; flesh-hooks, or forks, by which the flesh was put on the altar, or ordered when there: and fire-pans, in which it is supposed the sacred fire was taken, when the altar was removed; but which might likewise be used on other occasions, especially in carrying fire from the brazen altar, with which to burn incense on the golden altar within the sanctuary. The altar, formed of wood, but protected from the fire by the brazen plates, may typify the human nature of Christ, supported under the fire of the divine wrath for sin, by its union with his divinity.

V. 9—19. The tabernacle, when set up, was inclosed in a court, between fifty and sixty yards in length, and between twenty-five and thirty in breadth; formed by curtains hung upon brazen pillars, fixed in brazen sockets, after the manner of the boards of the sanctuary; and having an entrance at the east end, similar to the entrance of that building. The curtains for this court were made of fine linen, spun and woven, after the manner of the rich curtains called the tabernacle; yet neither dyed nor embroidered as they were: but those that formed the entrance into it, were dyed, and wrought with ornamental needlework, though not with cherubim.—The brazen pillars likewise were embellished with chapiters, overlaid or environed with plates of silver; (xxxviii. 17;) and the hooks on

THE BRAZEN ALTAR, FOR BURNT OFFERINGS.

Exod. xxvii. 1-8. Lev. i. 1-9.

^o xxvi. 31—37. southward: there shall be ^o hangings ^{xxxv. 17 xxxix.} for the court of fine twined linen of an ^{40.} hundred cubits long, for one side.

^p See on xxvi. 19
 —21. 10 And the twenty pillars thereof, and their twenty ^p sockets shall be of ^q xxxvi. 38 Jer. brass; the hooks of the pillars, and
 iii. 21. their ^q fillets shall be of silver.

11 And likewise for the north side in length, there shall be hangings of an hundred cubits long, and his twenty pillars, and their twenty sockets of brass: the hooks of the pillars, and their fillets of silver.

12 And for the breadth of the court, on the west side, shall be hangings of fifty cubits: their pillars ten, and their sockets ten.

13 And the breadth of the court on the east side, eastward, shall be fifty cubits.

^r o. xxvi. 36.

14 The ^r hangings of one side of the gate shall be fifteen cubits: their pillars three, and their sockets three.

15 And on the other side shall be hangings fifteen cubits: their pillars three, and their sockets three.

^s See on xxvi. 31.
 35.

16 And for the gate of the court shall be an hanging of twenty cubits, ^s of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen wrought with ^t need^{xxxviii. 39 xxxvi.} ^{37. xxxix. 28.} ^{Judg. v. 39. Pa.} ^{xiv. 14} ^lle-work: and their pillars shall be four, and their sockets four.

17 All the pillars round about the court shall be filletted with silver:
 their hooks shall be of silver, and their sockets of brass.

18 The ^u length of the court shall be ^u 9—12 an hundred cubits, and the breadth ^v fifty every where, and the height five ^w cubits, of fine twined linen, and their sockets of brass.

19 All the vessels of the tabernacle in all the service thereof, and ^x all the pins thereof, and all the pins of the court, shall be of brass.

20 ¶ And thou shalt command the children of Israel, that they bring thee ^y pure oil-olive beaten, ^y for the light, to cause the lamp ^z to burn always.

21 In ^a the tabernacle of the congregation ^b without the veil, which is before the ^c testimony; ^d Aaron and his sons shall order it from ^e evening to morning before the LORD: it shall be ^f a statute for ever unto their generations, on the behalf of the children of Israel.

which the curtains were hung were made of silver.—The pins (19) are supposed to have been intended to hold down the bottom of the curtains to the sockets, that the wind might not blow them aside: and it seems, such pins were also used to hold down the curtains of the tabernacle, which were made of brass, though the sockets were made of silver, and the boards covered with gold. Yet some think, that only the pins for the curtains at the door of the sanctuary, the pillars of which stood in sockets of brass, are meant. Within this inclosure the priests and Levites attended at the altar, and hither the people were admitted, at least such as brought sacrifices: the priests went likewise into the sanctuary; but none, except the high priest, went into the holy of holies, and that but on one day in a year; yet the whole people of Israel was “a kingdom of priests and a holy nation,” compared with the heathen. Surely, this divine appointment is suited to teach us, how far sin has separated betwixt us and a holy God, and what difficulties bar our re-union! Surely it evinces the falsehood of that proud sentiment, which represents man’s poor services, as in themselves acceptable and meritorious before God; since even this “kingdom of priests” could not approach his very mercy-seat, in their own persons, or with their own services, however costly; but only by their representative, their typical mediator, with the sprinkling of blood, and the burning of incense!—These distinctions also represented the difference between the visible nominal church, and the true spiritual church, which alone hath access to God and communion with him.

V. 20, 21. The purest oil, which ran freely from the olives when bruised, and not such as was squeezed out by a press or mill, was required for the seven lamps of the golden candlestick: and they were to be lighted and ordered by Aaron, and by his sons, through successive generations; some of whom probably attended on them all the night. It is said, “Aaron and his sons shall order it from evening to morning,” and from this and some other expressions in the scriptures referred to in the margin, (Marg. Ref. d.) many have concluded that the lamps were not lighted in the day-time. But, as the sanctuary had no windows, and as the priests were required to offer incense twice every day on the golden altar, as well as to order other things within the sanctuary during the day, this construction can scarcely be admitted. Josephus, who was a priest, says, that only three of the seven were lighted in the day-time; and he is an unexceptionable witness to the customs of his own times, but then those customs were often unscriptural. Perhaps, had it not been for an express injunction, the priests might have thought it enough to order the lamps during the day, when wanted; and have left them to go out in the night: but they were particularly commanded to order them through the night, “to cause the lamp to burn always,” and the expressions, before referred to, may only denote, that in the evening they paid an especial at

CHAP. XXVIII.

Aaron and his sons are appointed to the priesthood, 1. The holy garments prescribed for the high priest, 2—5; consisting of the ephod and girdle, 6—14; the breast-plate of judgment with Urim and Thummim, 15—30; the robe of the ephod, the mitre, and the coat of fine linen, 31—39. The garments of the other priests, 40—43

AND ^a take thou unto thee Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him, tention to the lamps, preparatory to their care of them through the night. Upon the whole, it seems probable that the light never went out in the sanctuary, except when the priests neglected or mistook their duty.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS

Of what vast importance, in true religion, must the Person, the priesthood, and the sacrifice of the Son of God be, when they are forced upon our attention in such a variety of types and representations!—He indeed is our Prophet, and we must welcome and submit to his teaching; our King, and we must willingly obey him; our Example, and we must imitate him: but he is also our Altar, our Priest, our Sacrifice, our Mediator; and we have neither been truly taught by him, nor have we rendered him any genuine obedience, unless we have learned to come to the Father, as lost sinners, through him, the Way, the Truth, and the Life; to draw all our sufficiency from his fulness, as the Fountain of grace; and to rely on his merits, as the Foundation of our hope.—We have abundant cause to bless our God, that we are within the inclosure of his visible church, and favoured with the means of grace: let us not however rest in outward profession, but be very earnest and diligent, to be found of the number of those who “truly have fellowship with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ.” We should also recollect, that even the Scriptures will not prove effectual to enlighten our minds, in those things which belong to eternal salvation, without the unction of the Holy Spirit, communicated to us through that great High Priest, of whom Aaron and his sons were types, and who “walketh amidst his golden candlesticks.” But at the same time we must consider, that ministers, by opening and applying the Scriptures, and preaching the gospel continually; and private Christians, in performing the duties of their several stations; and all, by their fervent and frequent prayers; are instrumental in diffusing the divine light in this dark world. Let us then diligently tend the lamp of the sacred Scriptures, that we may walk in the light ourselves, and communicate it to all around us. And may the Lord send forth many able and faithful ministers, to diffuse the light throughout the earth: for, blessed be his name, it is not now confined to the sanctuary in Israel, but is intended to lighten the gentiles in every part of the world.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXVIII. V. 1. Several intimations had before been given of the Lord's purpose; but this is the first express appointment of Aaron and his sons, to the priesthood. The heads of families seem hitherto to have offi-from ^b among the children of Israel, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office, ^c even Aaron, ^e Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar, Aaron's sons.

2 And thou shalt make ^d holy garments for Aaron thy brother, for ^e glory and for beauty.

30. Num. xx. 26—28. Ps. cxxxii. 9. 16. Is. lxi. 3. 10. lxiv. 6. Zech. iii. 3, 4. Rom. iii. 22. xiii. 14. Gal. iii. 27. Heb. vii. 26. Rev. xix. 8. e 30. xix. 5, 6. Num. xxxvii. 20. 21. Job xl. 10. Ps. xc. 16, 17. xcvi. 6. cxlix. 4. Is. iv. 2. Jer. ix. 23, 24. 1 Cor. i. 30, 31

ciated as priests, and to have offered sacrifices; but now that practice was terminated, and the sacerdotal office was restricted to the family of Aaron. Moses not only gave a decided proof of his disinterestedness, in leaving his own posterity in the rank of private Levites, while he confirmed Aaron and his descendants in this important and honourable service; (1 Chr. xxiii. 14—17; Note, 14:) but he also fully evinced, that he acted entirely by divine direction; and this is further proved by the remarkable circumstance, that no provision was made for the succession to the priesthood, in case Aaron's family should be extinct. According to human observation, this was a very probable event, especially after the death of Nadab and Abihu: and it must have been followed by the entire subversion of the religious system at this time established; for it was fundamental to it, that no person, in any age or in any case, should officiate as priest, under the penalty of death, except he were of Aaron's family: yet Moses left the whole dependant on an apparent contingency! This, human policy never would have done. But the providence of God took care of that, which was thus simply committed to him; and the priests of the family of Aaron increased, and continued as long as that dispensation, and until the Christian dispensation was introduced.—The word (אֲהַרְוֶה) rendered “that he may minister in the priest's office,” seems originally to have meant servicing in an honourable station: and therefore it is used concerning the sons of David, who could not be priests, strictly speaking. (2 Sam. viii. 18.) Hence it is in several places in the margin rendered princes. And as princes or courtiers wait on the king, and are honoured by nearer access to him than others; so the priests under the law, both in respect of their office, and as types of Christ, waited on the Lord in his courts, and were admitted nearer to him than other Israelites. Therefore “no man took this honour to himself, but he who was called of God, as was Aaron;” for it was absolutely requisite that the Lord should select the persons, whom he would admit into his special presence, and distinguish as the types of his beloved Son, in mediating between him and his sinful creatures.—Whenever the word (אֲהַרְוֶה) is connected with any of the names of God, it seems always to denote a priest; but when it stands alone, it sometimes means a prince or eminent person.

V. 2. Whatever was separated from common uses, and consecrated to the immediate service of God, was called holy. These garments were intended to distinguish the priests, and to render their persons and ministrations respected by the people: they were also emblematical of that holy conversation and conduct, which should ever be

THE HIGH PRIEST IN HIS ROBES AND BREAST-PLATE, AND
A PRIEST IN THE ORDINARY DRESS OF THE TEMPLE SERVICE.

Exod. xxviii. xxxix.

3 And thou shalt speak unto all that ^{are} wise hearted, whom I have ^{filled} with the Spirit of wisdom, that they may make Aaron's garments to consecrate him, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office.

4 And these are the garments which they shall make; ^a a breast-plate, and an ^{ephod} ephod, ^k and a robe, and ^l a brodered coat, a ^m mitre, and a girdle: and they shall make holy garments for Aaron thy brother, and his sons, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office.

5 And they shall take ^a gold, and blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen.

6 ¶ And they shall make the ephod of gold, of blue, and of purple, of scarlet, and fine twined ^o linen, with cunning work.

7 It shall have the ^p two shoulder-pieces thereof joined at the two edges thereof; and so it shall be joined together.

8 And ^q the ^r curious girdle of the ephod which is upon it, shall be of the same, according to the work thereof;

even of gold, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen.

9 And thou shalt take two ^r onyx-stones, and ^s grave on them the names of the children of Israel.

10 Six of their names on one stone, and the other six names of the rest on the other stone, ^t according to their birth.

11 With the work of an engraver in stone, like the ^u engravings of a signet, shalt thou engrave the two stones, with the names of the children of Israel: thou shalt make them to be set in ^v ouches of gold:

12 And thou shalt put the two stones upon ^w the shoulders of the ephod, for stones of memorial unto the children of Israel. And ^x Aaron shall bear their names before the LORD, upon his two shoulders for a ^y memorial.

13 And thou shalt make ^z ouches of gold:

14 And two ^a chains of pure gold at the ends: of ^b wreathen work shalt thou make them, and fasten the wreathen chains to the ouches.

† xxxi. 3—6. xxxv. 31—35. xxxvii. 1. 2. Is. xxviii. 24—26. Deut. xxxiv. 9. Is. xi. 2. 1 Cor. xii. 7—11. Eph. i. 17.

h xxxix. 8—21. Is. lix. 17. Eph. vi. 14. 1 Thes. v. 8. Rev. ix. 17. i 6—14. xxxix. 2—5. 21, 22. Lev. viii. 7, 8. 1 Sam. ii. 18. xxii. 18. xxiii. 6. xxx. 7. 2 Sam. vi. 14. k 31—34. xxxix. 25, 26. l 34, 40. Lev. viii. 7. m xxxix. 28. Lev. viii. 9. Zech. iii. 5. n See on xxx. 3, 4. —xxxix. 2, 3.

o See on xxvi. 1.

p xxxix. 4.

q 27, 28. xxxix. 5. xxxix. 20, 21. Lev. viii. 7. Is. xi. 5. 1 Pet. i. 3. Rev. i. 13. * C. r. embroidered.

20. xxxix. 13. Gen. ii. 2. Job xxv. 16. Ez. xxviii. 3. 36. xxxix. 6. 2 Chr. ii. 7. Cant. viii. 6. Is. xlix. 16.

i 1—4. Gen. xliii. 23.

j 21. Jer. xxii. 24. Zech. iii. 9. Eph. i. 13. iv. 20. 2 Tim. ii. 13. Rev. vii. 2.

x 13, 14, 25. xxxix. 6, 13, 18.

y 7. Ps. lxxxix. 19. Is. ix. 6. xii. 2. Zech. vi. 13, 14. Heb. vii. 25—28.

a xii. 14. xiii. 9. xxxix. 7. Gen. ix. 12—17. Lev. xxiv. 7. Num. xvi. 40. xxxi. 54. Josh. iv. 1. Is. lxii. 6. Marg. Luke i. 54, 72. Act. x. 4. 24. xxxix. 19.

c 22—25. xxxix. 17, 18. 1 Kings vi. 17. 2 Kings xxv. 17. 2 Chr. iv. 2, 13.

the "glory and beauty," the distinguishing mark, of the ministers of religion; without which they, and the services which they perform, will be had in contempt. But especially they were typical of the glory of the divine majesty, and the beauty of perfect holiness, which rendered Jesus Christ "such a High Priest as became us," and stamped infinite value on his whole work. (Note, Heb. vii. 26—28.)

V. 3. Whoever is endued with skill and ability; to perform the service assigned him, especially in promoting true religion, and does it uprightly and diligently, is wise-hearted, and will give God the glory of making him so; for all natural wisdom is the gift of God: but this seems to have been supernaturally bestowed; as it is added, "whom I have filled with the Spirit of wisdom." (Notes, xxxi. 1—6.)

V. 4, 5. The different parts of the priestly garments will be briefly considered, as they are afterwards more particularly described.—They were made for Aaron and "his sons, that he might minister in the priest's office:" and it is generally thought that the priests never wore the sacred vestments, except when ministering at the sanctuary. All the garments seem to have been made of linen, though some writers, without any scriptural proof, assert that part of them was made of wool. Where no colour is mentioned, the linen was white.

V. 6—14. The ephod, or the outer garment of the priests, which they wore over the rest to keep them close about them, was a short coat without sleeves; but made with two shoulder-pieces, one for each shoulder, to join the whole garment together, and to retain it in its place. Ephods were worn by the inferior priests, and even by others on some occasions; as by Samuel when a child, and by David when he danced before the ark. (1 Sam. ii. 18. 2 Sam. vi. 14.) But these were made only of linen; whereas the ephod of gold was richly dyed and curiously embroidered, and had much gold wrought upon it. According to our translation, and the general sense of expositors, it was likewise girt on with a girdle over the breast, dyed, embroidered, and interwoven with gold, like the other parts of the ephod: but it is not certain, whether the original words mean a girdle; or merely that the whole of the ephod which went round the body, as well as that which was on the breast and shoulders, should be thus ornamented. The ephod, however, was buttoned on each shoulder by an onyx set in gold; and on these two onyx-stones were engraven the names of the twelve sons of Israel, six on each onyx, according to their seniority; that the chief priest might bear their names before the Lord in his ministrations, and thus both remember to plead their cause, and also put the Lord in remembrance of his promises to them. There were likewise two chains of gold, curiously wreathen, and fixed to the ouches, in which the onyx-stones were set: and these chains seem to have served also to fasten the breast-plate on the ephod (22—28).—Thus Christ appeared to the apostle, "girt about the paps "with a golden girdle:" for "righteousness was the girdle "of his loins;" "he was clad with zeal as a cloak;"

^d See on h. 4. 30. —xxxix. 8 Lev. viii. 8.
^e See on G xxvi. 1.
 15 ¶ And thou shalt make ^d the breast-plate of judgment with cunning work, ^c after the work of the ephod thou shalt make it: of gold, of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, and of fine twined linen shalt thou make it.

16 Four-square it shall be being doubled; a span shall be the length thereof, and a span shall be the breadth thereof.

^f See on 9. 11.—xxxix. 10. Mal. iii. 17.
 • Heb. fill in it fillings of stone.
^g Ez. xxviii. 13. Rev. xxi. 19—21.
 † Or, rubys. Job xxviii. 18. Prov. iii. 15. viii. 11. xx. 15. xxxi. 10. Lam. iv. 7.
^h Job xxviii. 19. k Rev. xxi. 20.
^l Is. liv. 11, 12.
^k xxxix. 11 Ez. xxvii. 16.
ⁱ xxiv. 10. Job xxviii. 6. 16. Cant. v. 14. Ez. i. 20. x. 1. Rev. iv. 3. xxi. 19.
^m Jer xvii. 1. Ez. xxxiii. 13.
ⁿ xxxix. 12.
^o Is. liv. 12.
^p Ez. i. 16. x. 9. Dan. x. 6. Rev. xxi. 20.
^q See on 5.
^r Rev. iv. 3. xxi. 11. 18.
 ‡ Heb. fillings. 13.
 § 9—11.
^t 1 Kings xviii. 31. Luke xxii. 30. Jain. l. 1. Rev. vii. 4—8. xxi. 12.
^u 14

17 And ^f thou shalt ^{*} set in it settings of stones, even four rows of stones: the first row shall be ^a a [†] sardius. ^b a topaz, and [†] a carbuncle: this shall be the first row.

18 And the second row shall be an [†] emerald, [†] a sapphire, and ^m a diamond.

19 And the third row ⁿ a ligure, ^o an agate, and an amethyst.

20 And the fourth row, ^p a beryl, and ^q an onyx, and ^r a jasper: they shall be set in gold in their [†] inclosings.

21 And the stones shall be with the names of the children of Israel, ^s twelve, according to their names; like the engravings of a signet, every one with his name shall they be ^t according to the twelve tribes.

22 And thou shalt make ^u upon the breast-plate chains at the ends, of wreathen work, of pure gold.

23 And thou shalt make upon the breast-plate two rings of gold, and shalt put the two rings on the two ends of the breast-plate.

24 And thou shalt put the two wreathen chains of gold in the two rings which are on the ends of the breast-plate.

25 And the other two ends of the two wreathen chains, thou shalt fasten in the two ouches, and put ^v them ^{*} on the ^x shoulder-pieces of the ephod before it.

26 And thou shalt make two rings of gold, and thou shalt put them upon the two ends of the breast-plate, in the border thereof, which is in the side of the ephod inward.

27 And two other rings of gold thou shalt make, and shalt put them on the two sides of the ephod, underneath, towards the fore-part thereof, over against the other coupling thereof, above ^y the curious girdle of the ephod. ^y See on 9.

28 And they shall bind the breast-plate, by the rings thereof unto the rings of the ephod with ^z a lace of blue, that it may be above the curious girdle of the ephod, and that the breast-plate be not loosed from the ephod. ^z 31. 37. xxxix. 30, 31. Num. xv. 38.

29 And Aaron shall bear the names of the children of Israel ^a in the breast-plate of judgment, ^b upon his heart, when he goeth in unto the holy place, for ^c a memorial before the LORD continually. ^a See on 15. 30. ^b See on 12.—Jer. xxx. 21. Rom. x. 1. ^c Cant. vii. 6. 15. xlix. 15, 16.

“the government was upon his shoulders;” and he bears the names of his people before God, as a memorial; while, as their Representative and Advocate, with all his power, he interposes in their behalf, and maintains their cause.

V. 15—29. “The breast-plate of judgment” was so called, because the high priest wore it whenever he consulted the Lord, about the concerns of religion and government, in order to deliver the judgment of God to the rulers in the congregation. It was a piece of fine linen cloth, woven, dyed, and embroidered, like the golden ephod, and being doubled it was a span square. Upon it were fixed twelve precious stones, set in twelve ouches of gold; and on each of them was engraven the name of one of the sons of Israel: these being considered as the representatives of the twelve tribes. It is doubted, whether the name of Levi was engraven, as that tribe might be sufficiently represented by the high priest himself; or whether Manasseh and Ephraim had each a separate stone, as forming two tribes: but the text seems to imply, that the names of all Jacob’s sons were engraven, and no other.—Learned men have formed discordant opinions about the precious stones intended by the original words; but we may as well rest satisfied with our version, which probably is as correct as any. Nor have the endeavours which some have used, to find out a coincidence between the precious stone, and the character or circumstances of the tribe supposed to have been engraven on it, proved at all successful. It suffices, that they were emblems of the divers excellencies, found in the several members of the Church of Christ, who among them possess all that is truly valuable upon earth.—This breast-plate Aaron wore, when he went into the holy place, for a memorial before the Lord, to remind him that he acted in a publick character; and that he must have the interests of all the tribes, whom he represented, near his heart in approaching the Lord, without any prejudice or partiality. This was an evident type of Christ, who has the name even of every individual of his people engraven upon his heart; and within the veil will be sure never to forget or neglect any of them, or of their concerns, however destitute or despicable they may be upon earth.—The breast-plate, thus richly decorated, was firmly joined to the ephod of gold. Two golden rings were fixed on the two uppermost corners of the breast-plate, to which the wreathen chains of gold, (before mentioned in the description of the ephod,) being

30 And thou shalt put in the breast-plate of judgment ^d the Urim and the Thummim; and they shall be upon Aaron's heart, when he goeth in before the LORD: and Aaron shall ^e bear the judgment of the children of Israel ^f upon his heart, before the LORD continually.

31 ¶ And thou shalt make ^g the robe of the ephod all of blue.

32 And there shall be an hole in the top of it, in the midst thereof: it shall have a binding of woven work, round about the hole of it, ^h as it were the hole of an habergeon, ⁱ that it be not rent.

33 And beneath, ^k upon the ^l hem of ^m it, thou shalt make ⁿ pomegranates of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, round about the hem thereof; and ^o bells of gold between them round about.

34 A ^p golden bell and a pomegranate, a golden bell and a pomegranate, upon the hem of the robe round about.

35 And it shall be upon Aaron, to minister: and his sound shall be heard when he ^q goeth in unto the holy place ^d xxxix. 28. 2 Chr. xxvi. 14. Neh. iv. 16 Job xli. 26.

ⁱ John xix. 23, 24. Eph. iv. 3—16.

^k xxxix. 24—26. Or, skirts. ^l 1 Kings vii. 19. ^m 2 Kings xxv. 17.

ⁿ Zech. xiv. 20.

^p Ps. lxxxix. 15. Cant. ii. 3. iv. 3. 13. vi. 7. 11. viii. 2. John xv. 4—8. 16. Col. i. 5. 6. 10.

^q Lev. xvi. 2. Heb. ix. 12.

joined to the ouches of gold on the shoulder-pieces, were fastened. (14. 25.) Then two other rings of gold were placed underneath, and out of sight, at the lowermost corners of the breast-plate; and two answering them on the ephod, at the bottom of the shoulder-pieces, as the word rendered sides (27) evidently means; and these rings on the breast-plate and on the ephod, were tied fast together by a blue lace or ribband on each side, over the curious work of the ephod. Thus it was so completely fastened at all the four corners, that it could not move.

V. 30. The Scriptures nowhere inform us, what the URIM and THUMMIM were; nor was any direction given to Moses how to make them. The original words signify, THE LIGHTS, (or Illuminations;) and THE PERFECTIONS; and a variety of conjectures have been made on the subject. Some suppose that the precious stones, engraven with the names of the sons of Israel, are meant; which are thus called from their brilliancy, and because they were the most perfect of their kind: but the context seems to imply that something further was intended, and this interpretation is not satisfactory. Others think, that the words הוארים ותקמים were either wrought in the substance of the breast-plate, or engraven on a plate of gold, and fixed upon it; as HOLINESS TO THE LORD was, upon the mitre; intimating, that divine illumination and strict integrity or soundness of heart, were requisite in the sacred office of the high priest: or rather, that the clearest light and knowledge, with the most perfect counsel and direction, would be obtained by thus consulting the Lord.—This interpretation seems not inconsistent with the narrative: but it is objected, that no direction is given how these words were to be put into the breast-plate, as there is afterwards concerning the inscription on the mitre (36). Others therefore think, that the URIM and THUMMIM were something given to Moses on the Mount, to be privately inclosed in the breast-plate, as a pledge that the Lord would answer the high priest when he thus enquired his will; and that it was the Lord's express intention, none should know what they were. Several other opinions have been formed, but these seem the most plausible. Yet, after all, it may be doubted, whether any thing were put into the breast-plate, distinct from the things before described; and whether the use to which it was to be appropriated were not principally intended.—When however the high priest, as Israel's representative, wearing the breast-plate, enquired for the ruler and congregation of Israel, what they ought to do; he was illuminated and instructed to give perfect counsel in the most difficult cases. Various opinions are also formed, concerning the manner, in which these answers were given; but only two seem at all probable: either the high priest was answered by an audible voice from above the mercy-seat within the veil, or he was inspired as a prophet, to declare the will of God on the occasion. It is evident that none but the high priest was authorized to enquire of God in this manner; and he only at the tabernacle, in the holy place without the inner veil: but some instances, hereafter to be considered, render it probable, that on particular occasions, the Lord answered enquiries made in this manner, at a distance from the tabernacle. (1 Sam. xiv. 18. 36, 37. xxiii. 1—12.)—The Jewish writers say, that this method of enquiring the will of God was terminated, when Solomon had built the temple; and it is certain, that little is afterwards recorded concerning it: but it seems rather to have fallen into disuse, because the high priests in general neglected their duty; and the prophets, as extraordinary messengers of God, were appointed to supersede them. It however finally ceased at the captivity; till Christ, the great Antitype, arose, as a Priest with URIM and THUMMIM, who communicates to his true Church, from his treasury of divine wisdom and grace, through his word, and by his Spirit, all wisdom, knowledge, and righteousness, and every perfect gift, in measure sufficient for every emergency. And as the URIM and THUMMIM were on Aaron's heart, whenever he entered the sanctuary to enquire the will of God; and he never approached the Lord in this manner, on his own personal concerns, as distinct from those of his people, but as "bearing the judgment of the children of Israel upon his heart continually;" so Christ "appears in the presence of God for us," and ever bears the interests of his whole church and of every believer on his heart, in his unremitting intercession for us.

V. 31—35. The robe of the ephod was the middle garment, which was worn under the ephod, and above the coat (39). It had a hole, through which the head passed when it was put on; and it seems to have been formed carefully of one piece, that it should not be rent. This may remind us of Christ's coat "without a seam, woven from the top throughout," and which was not rent, but cast lots for by the soldiers; an emblem of his perfect before the LORD, and when he cometh out ; that he die not.

36 ¶ And thou shalt make a plate of pure gold, and ^bgrave upon it, like the engravings of a signet, ^aHOLINESS TO THE LORD.

37 And thou shalt put it on ^aa blue lace, that it may be upon the mitre : upon the fore-front of ^athe mitre it shall be.

38 And it shall be upon Aaron's forehead, that Aaron may ^abear the iniquity of the holy things, which the children of Israel shall hallow in all their holy gifts ; and it shall be always upon his forehead, that they may be ^aaccepted before the LORD.

39 And thou shalt ^aembroider the coat of fine linen, and thou shalt make the mitre of fine linen, and thou shalt make ^athe girdle of ^aneedle-work.

40 ¶ And ^bfor Aaron's sons thou shalt make coats, and thou shalt make for them girdles, and ^cbonnets shalt thou make for them, ^dfor glory and for beauty.

41 And thou shalt put them upon Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him : and shalt ^canoint them, ^fand ^aconsecrate them, and sanctify them, p See on 9. 11. q xxxix. 50. Lev. viii. 9. x. 3. xix. 2. Ps. xciii. 5. Ez. xliii. 12. Zech. xiv. 20. Heb. vii. 26. xii. 14. 1 Pet. i. 15. 16. ii. 9. r See on 23. s 4. xxxix. 6. xxxix. 30, 31. Lev. viii. 9. Zech. iii. 5. t 43. Lev. x. 17. xliii. 9. Num. xviii. 1. 16. lvi. 6. 11, 12. Ez. iv. 4. —6. John i. 29. 2 Cor. v. 21. Heb. ix. 28. 1 Pet. ii. 24. iii. 18.

u Lev. i. 4. xxi. 27. xxiii. 11. 4s. lvi. 7. x See on 4. z See on 8. a 1s. xlv. 14. b 4. xxxix. 27.—29. 41. Lev. viii. 13. Ez. xlv. 17. c xxxix. 9. d See on 2.—1 Tim. ii. 9, 10. vi. 9.—11. Tit. ii. 7, 10. 1 Pet. iii. 3, 4. v. 5. e xxxix. 7. xxx. 28.—30. xl. 15. Lev. x. 7. 1s. x. 27. lxi. 1. John iii. 34. 2 Cor. i. 21.—22. 1 John ii. 20.—27. f xxxix. 9. 35. Lev. viii. 33. Num. iii. 3. Ez. xliii. 26. Heb. vii. 28. * Heb. fill their hand. xxix. 24.

uninterrupted obedience to the divine law, and of the unbroken harmony which ought to subsist in his church.—Upon the hem, or lowermost border of the robe, which is supposed to have reached to the aneles, were fixed artificial pomegranates, which were richly dyed, though the rest of the robe was entirely blue; and between every two of the pomegranates was fastened a golden bell. It is not said how many there were of each : but it is much more probable that they accorded to the twelve tribes of Israel, than that there should be seventy-two, as some writers assure us.—These may represent the sound of divine truth, preached or professed, being joined with the precious fruits of holiness, in the ministers of the gospel and in true Christians : but it especially typified the glad tidings which Christ is anointed to preach, and the fragrant fruits of his priesthood which he confers upon his Church.—The bells were also intended to give notice to the people when the high priest entered into the most holy place, perhaps that they might join his ministrations within the sanctuary with their prayers. (Luke i. 10.) It is also added, "That he die not ;" which he might expect to do, if he did not act according to the prescribed rules, in this sacred and typical interposition between sinners and a holy God.

V. 36—38. The mitre was made of fine linen, rolled up, not much unlike the turbans worn at this day in the eastern countries, as the original name evidently indicates. (מִצְנֵף, vertete, volvere, circumdare.) On this crown, or turban, was fastened, by a blue ribband or lace, passed through it and tying behind, a plate of fine gold, beaten into the form of a leaf, or one of the petals of a beautiful flower, and rendered as bright as possible ; for so the word seems to mean. On this plate were engraven the Hebrew words קֹדֶשׁ לַיהוָה, signifying HOLINESS TO THE LORD ; and it was placed on the mitre exactly over the high priest's forehead, so that every one whom he faced might read the inscription. This was suited to remind him of the sanctity of his office and character, as the typical mediator between JEHOVAH and his people ; and so especially required to be in all respects devoted in holiness, to the service of a holy God : and to warn him neither to disgrace, nor attempt to conceal, his sacred function. It likewise instructed the people to honour his person and ministrations.—In wearing constantly, when officiating as high priest, this holy crown, he was also reminded that he "was to bear the iniquity

"of the holy things," which Israel offered to the Lord. If any thing was neglected, or done contrary to law, he must be answerable for it, and should therefore be circumspect ; and their involuntary imperfections must be expiated by his typical services. In all this he represented our great High Priest, whose perfect holiness, and voluntary dedication of himself in our behalf unto the Father, to fulfil his will and magnify his law by his obedience unto death, have prepared the way for his being "made to us "Sanctification," by his Holy Spirit. Through the same he also "bears the iniquity of our holy things," and, by his prevailing intercession, renders our sinful persons and imperfect services acceptable to a holy God.

V. 39. We read before of an embroidered coat, but no particular directions were given how it was to be made. It is supposed to have been the innermost garment worn by the high priest, having sleeves down to the wrists, made rather close to the body, but hanging loose, except as fastened by a girdle. It was made of fine linen, (as the mitre also was,) probably white, but curiously embroidered : and the girdle was not only embroidered, but dyed of various colours. (xxxix. 29.) Some affirm likewise that it was made so long, as to reach many times round the body, like a sash ; and to have ends hanging down almost to the ground, which, when employed, the high priest threw across his shoulder. (Rev. i. 13.)

V. 40, 41. The coats and girdles of the ordinary priests are thought to have been made, in all respects, like those of the high priest : but the bonnets worn on their heads were different from his crown or tiara, as another word is used (מִצְנֵף); but the precise difference is not certainly known. They too had ephods, but of plain white linen ; and the breast-plate, the robe of the ephod, and the golden crown inscribed HOLINESS TO THE LORD, were peculiar to the high priest. Yet the garments of the ordinary priests were made "for them for glory and for beauty," as well as his. They typified the glorious and beautiful holiness of Christ, our great High Priest, which is communicated to all the royal priesthood of his true disciples : and, while it required great care in the priests to keep their garments pure and white, they were reminded of the holiness which they ought diligently to observe in all their conduct.—It is said by the Jewish expositors, that these garments were never washed ; but when soiled, they were used for other ^g See on I. 4. that they may ^e minister unto me in the priest's office.

42 And thou shalt make them linen ^h breeches to cover their ^{*} nakedness: from the loins even unto the thighs they shall [†] reach.

43 And they shall be upon Aaron, and upon his sons, when they come in unto the tabernacle of the congregation, or when they come near unto the altar to minister in the holy place; that purposes about the sanctuary, and supplied by new ones.—The particulars of the arraying, anointing, and consecrating Aaron and his sons, will hereafter be considered.

V. 42, 43. The indecencies, attending the worship of idols, were strongly protested against by the care taken to avoid every approach to them, and every accidental appearance of them, in the ministration of the priests of the true God. They were therefore required to wear linen breeches, or drawers, at all times, when they officiated at the sanctuary; though it does not appear that the Israelites in general wore any other than loose garments, according to the general custom of the east to this day. And it seems especially with reference to this part of the priestly clothing, that the concluding caution was given: if they were negligent in this matter, they would bear iniquity and die; for this was "a statute for ever to Aaron and his sons;" that is, perpetually, as long as that priesthood endured. This was suited to impress both priests and people with a sense of the holiness of God and their own sinfulness; and to shew that he would be sanctified by all who approached him, especially by his priests.—As no shoes or sandals are mentioned among the sacred vestments, it is supposed that the priests always ministered bare-foot; for Moses was ordered to pull off his shoes, when the Lord appeared to him in the burning bush. (Note, iii. 4, 5.)

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Blessed be God, that we have such a High Priest, as is in this chapter typically delineated: one solemnly appointed by God and consecrated to his work; furnished for his high office by the glory of his divine majesty, and the beauty of perfect holiness; who bears the names of all his people upon his shoulders, and upon his heart, presenting them and all their several cases, before the Father in heaven, and ever living, by his continual intercession, to apply the salvation which his sacrifice has purchased: in whom are ILLUMINATIONS AND PERFECTIONS, even inexhaustible treasures of wisdom and grace, to be communicated to them; who, himself HOLINESS TO THE LORD, is made Sanctification to his people, that they may be "holiness unto the LORD also," in their measure in this world, perfectly in that to come. Happy are we, if we are so well instructed in the spirituality of the divine law, the evil of sin, and our own sinfulness, as to be deeply convinced that "such a High Priest became us;" that we can have no access to a holy God, nor acceptance with him, but by Jesus Christ; no light, no wisdom, no perfection but from him; no glory nor beauty, but in conformity to him. If this be our judgment and experience, let us take encouragement from the power, love, and compassion of our High Priest to the meanest of his people, "to draw near with boldness to the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." Yet, "let us have grace to worship him with reverence and godly fear; for our God is a consuming fire:" not forgetting, that garments were at first necessary to hide the shame of our fallen parents; that when we use them for ostentation we glory in our shame; that they who prefer ornament to modesty are still more basely criminal; and that this vanity and indecency is most of all abominable in the courts of the Lord. Let us then make a bold and consistent profession of our devotedness to God, and be careful to adorn it by the fruits of righteousness in our lives; making Christ our Counsellor, by whom we may enquire of the Lord, and learn his truth and will, that we may be wise-hearted for every service to which he shall appoint us. By daily meditating upon his word, let us endeavour, "with open face, as in a glass, so to behold his glory, that we may be changed into the same image from glory to glory, by the Spirit of the Lord."—Clothed in his righteousness for glory and for beauty, who in his death hath borne the iniquity of our holy things, let us, through him, as his "spiritual priests," "offer unto God the sacrifice of praise continually, giving thanks unto his name:" and let us see to it, that "our loins are girt about with truth;" that we wear the breast-plate of righteousness, and that we "are sober, and hope to the end;" for "blessed are those servants, whom their Lord when he cometh shall find so doing."

NOTES.

CHAP. XXIX. V. 1—7. Directions having been given, about making the sacred garments for Aaron and his sons; the manner of their consecration to the priesthood is next prescribed. Though appointed by office, to expiate the sins of the people by the typical sacrifices; they must be reminded that they themselves likewise were sinners, and needed an expiation; a young bullock therefore, (or rather bull,) for a sin-offering, a ram for a burnt-offering, and a ram of consecration as a peace-offering; and bread, cakes tempered with oil, and wafers anointed with oil, all unleavened, for a meat-offering, were first prepared. The distinguishing nature and meaning of these several kinds of sacrifice, with the manner in which they were offered and used, will hereafter be considered.—This preparation having been made, and the meat-offering in a basket, as well as the young bull and the two rams, brought to the door of the tabernacle; Moses, who would officiate as

CHAP. XXIX.

The ceremonies and sacrifices to be used in consecrating the priests, and the altar, 1—37. The daily oblation, 38—41. Gracious promises, 42—46

AND this is the thing that thou shalt do unto them to ^a hallow them, ^b to

Lev. v. 1 17 xx. 19, 20. xxii. 9 Num. ix. 18 xxviii. 22. Matt. xxvii. 12, 13. k xxvii. 21. Lev xvii. 7.

a 21. xx. 11. xxviii. 41. Matt. vi. 9. See on xxviii. 3.

minister unto me in the priest's office :

c Lev. viii. 2. ix. 2. xvi. 3. 2 Chr. xiii. 9. d xii. 5. Lev. iv. 3. v. 15. 16. vi. 6. xxiii. 20. Mal. i. 13. 14. Heb. vii. 26. 1 Pet. i. 19. e See on xii. 8. Lev. ii. 4. vi. 29. 22. viii. 2. 1 Cor. v. 7. f 23. Lev. ii. 4. 5. 15. vii. 10. Num. vi. 15. g Lev. vii. 12. viii. 26. Num. vi. 15. 19. h Lev. viii. 2. 27. 31. Num. vi. 17. i xxvi. 36. xl. 28. Lev. viii. 3-6. k xxx. 18-21. xl. 12. Lev. viii. 6. xiv. 8. Deut. xxiii. 11. Ez. xxxvi. 25. John xiii. 8-10. Eph. v. 26. Tit. iii. 5. Heb. x. 22. 1 Pet. iii. 21. Rev. i. 5. 6. l See on xxviii. 2. 4.-Lev. viii. 7. 8. m See on xxviii. 26-29. - Lev. viii. 9.

^c Take one young bullock, and two rams ^d without blemish,

² And ^e unleavened bread, and cakes unleavened ^f tempered with oil, and ^g wafers unleavened anointed with oil : ^{of} wheaten flour shalt thou make them.

³ And thou shalt put them into one basket, and bring them ^h in the basket, with the bullock and the two rams.

⁴ And Aaron and his sons thou shalt bring ⁱ unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and shalt ^k wash them with water.

⁵ And thou shalt take the ^l garments, and put upon Aaron the coat, and the robe of the ephod, and the ephod, and the breast-plate, and gird him with the curious girdle of the ephod.

⁶ And thou shalt put the ^m mitre upon his head, and put the holy crown upon the mitre.

⁷ Then shalt thou take the ⁿ anointing oil, and pour ^{it} upon his head, and anoint him.

⁸ And thou shalt bring ^o his sons, and put coats upon them.

⁹ And thou shalt gird them with girdles, (Aaron and his sons,) and ^{* put} the bonnets on them : and ^p the priest's office shall be their's for a perpetual statute : and thou shalt [†] consecrate Aaron and his sons.

¹⁰ And thou shalt ^q cause a bullock to be brought before the tabernacle of the congregation : and Aaron and his sons shall ^r put their hands upon the head of the bullock.

¹¹ And ^s thou shalt kill the bullock before the LORD, ^{by} the ^t door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

¹² And thou shalt take of ^u the blood of the bullock, and put ^v it upon ^x the horns of the altar with thy finger, and xxviii. 41. xxx. 23-31. Lev. viii. 10-12. x. 7. xxi. 0. Num. xxxv. 25. Ps. lxxxix. 20. cxxxiii. 2. 1s. lxi. 1. John iii. 34. 1. John ii. 27. o xxviii. 40, 41. Lev. viii. 13. * Heb. bind. p xxviii. 1. Num. xvi. 10. 35. 40. xviii. 7. Heb. v. 4. 5. 10. vii. 11-14. † Heb. fill the hand of. xxviii. 41. xxix. 29. Marg. Lev. viii. 26-28. Heb. vii. 23-28. q 1. r 15. 19. Lev. i. 4. iii. 2. viii. 14. 18. xvi. 21. 1s. liii. 6. 2 Cor. v. 21. s Lev. i. 4. 5. viii. 15. ix. 8. 12. See on 4. Lev. i. 5. t u Lev. viii. 15. ix. 9. xvi. 14. 18. 19. Heb. ix. 13. 14. 22. x. 4. x xxvii. 2. xxx. 2. xxxviii. 2.

priest on this occasion, was directed to bring Aaron and his sons to the same place, and there to wash them with water. Probably, they were at that time washed all over, though on many other occasions they only washed their hands and feet. Moses was then directed to clothe Aaron with the sacred garments; completing the whole, by " putting the holy crown upon the mitre." (Note, xxviii. 36-38.) The golden plate, inscribed HOLINESS TO THE LORD, being called " the holy crown," not only shewed how honourable Aaron's office was, but further intimated that the High Priest, whom he typified, would also be a King; and there seems to be a reference to the two words, used for this plate of gold, in the former chapter and here, when the Psalmist says of the Messiah, " Upon himself shall his crown flourish;" (Ps. cxxxii. 18;) for in the original both the words are used.—When Aaron had been thus arrayed, Moses was directed to anoint him with the sacred oil, the composition of which is afterwards prescribed, which being poured on his head, " ran down to " his beard," and " even to the skirts of his raiment;" or, as some with probability suppose the word to mean, the upper border of his raiment, that fastened round his neck. (Note, Ps. cxxxiii. 2.)—In all this, Aaron was evidently a type of Christ. He indeed, being without sin, was not admitted to his sacerdotal office by atoning sacrifices: but, being " made in the likeness of sinful flesh," he submitted to be baptized by John, before he entered on his sacred work; which ordinance in its general use denoted the washing away of the pollution of sin, as the washing of the priests also did. We have seen that the sacred garments likewise typified his endowments and qualifications for his High Priesthood: and he was also anointed with the Holy Spirit without measure, not for himself only, but for all his people.—The ceremonies of this consecration seem, likewise, to denote the admission of sinners into the spiritual priesthood, to offer " spiritual sacrifices, accept-

" able to God through Jesus Christ." They must be washed in regeneration; clothed in that righteousness, which is upon all them that believe; anointed with the unction of the Holy Spirit; and have an interest in the one great Sacrifice for sin, before they can glorify God as his holy priesthood, or rejoice in their own invaluable privileges.

V. 8, 9. The sons of Aaron, when they had been washed with water, needed only to be arrayed with the garments, prescribed for them; for they were not anointed on the head with the sacred oil, which was peculiar to the high priest. The words rendered " consecrate," literally mean fill the hands. Probably this was done by putting the sacrifice into their hands, to be waved before the Lord. The ministers of God have their hands filled, when they enter upon their office; and will continue to have their hands full of work of one sort or another, if they duly seek for it and attend to it: but far more covet the emolument or honour of the ministry, than its work. Indeed, the case is the same with all Christians: each may have his hands filled with work, if his heart be disposed to do it. (Mark xiii. 31.)

V. 10, 11. " Putting the hands on the head " of the sin-offering, not only implied the surrender of it as an oblation to God; but also, and especially, it denoted a confession of guilt, which was thus typically transferred to the sacrifice that it might be expiated by it: so that the priests thus acknowledged themselves deserving of death, and that they could not offer sacrifices for others, unless the Lord first accepted their sin-offering, and forgave their transgressions.—Moses, as priest on this extraordinary occasion, slew the several sacrifices; though in ordinary cases the offerers themselves might slay them. (Notes, Lev. i. 4-9.)

V. 12. When Moses had slain the bull for a sin-offering, he was required to apply part of the blood, with his finger, to the four horns of the altar of burnt-offering; and then

y Lev. iv. 7. 18. ^y pour all the blood beside the bottom of the altar.

z 22. Lev. iii. 3. 4. 9. 10. 14—16. iv. 8. 9. 26. 31. 25. vi. 12. vii. 3. 31. Ps. xxii. 14. Is. i. 11. xxxiv. 6. xliii. 24.

* Or, midriff.

a Lev. viii. 16. 25. ix. 10. 19.

b 18. 25. Lev. i. 9. 15. xvi. 25. xvii. 6. Num. xviii. 17. 1 Sam. ii. 16.

c Lev. iv. 11, 12. 21. viii. 17. xvi. 27. Heb. xiii. 11—13.

d xxx. 10. Lev. iv. 3. 25. 29. 32. v. 6. 8. vi. 25. ix. 2. xvi. 3. 11. Num. vii. 16. 2 Chr. xxix. 24. Ezra viii. 35.

e 3. 19. Lev. viii. 18—21.

f See on 10.

g See on 11, 12.

13 And thou shalt take ^a all the fat that covereth the inwards, ^a and the ^a caul that is above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and ^b burn them upon the altar.

14 But ^c the flesh of the bullock, and his skin, and his dung, shalt thou burn with fire without the camp: ^d it is a sin-offering.

15 ¶ Thou shalt also take ^e one ram, and Aaron and his sons shall ^f put their hands upon the head of the ram.

16 And ^g thou shalt slay the ram, and thou shalt take his blood, and sprinkle ^h it round about upon the altar.

17 And thou shalt cut the ram in pieces, and ^h wash the inwards of him, and his legs, and put ⁱ them ⁱ unto his ^{Or, upon.} pieces, and unto his head.

18 And thou shalt burn the whole ram upon the altar: it is ^j a burnt-offering unto the LORD: it is ^j a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

19 ¶ And thou shalt take ^k the other ram, ^l and Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the ram.

20 Then shalt thou kill the ram, and take of his blood, and ^m put it upon the tip of the right ear of Aaron, and upon the tip of the right ear of his sons, and upon the thumb of their right hand, and upon the great toe of their right foot, and ⁿ sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about.

21 And thou shalt take of the blood that is upon the altar, and of ^o the

Gen. xxii. 2. 7. 13. Lev. ix. 24. 1 Sam. vii. 9. 1 Kings iii. 4. xviii. 38. Ps. 1. 8. Is. i. 11. Jer. 22. Mark xii. 33. Heb. x. 6—10. Gen. viii. 21. Lev. i. 17. Eph. v. 2. Phil. iv. 18. k 3. Lev. viii. 22—29. l See on 10. m Lev. xiv. 14. Is. l. 5. Mark vii. 33.

n Lev. xiv. 7. 16. xvi. 14. 15. 19. Is. lii. 15. Heb. ix. 19—23. x. 22. xii. 24. 1 Pet. i. 2.

o 7. xxx. 25—30. Lev. viii. 30. xiv. 15—18. 29. Ps. cxxxii. 2. Is. xi. 2—5. Isi. 1—3.

to pour all the remainder at the bottom of it, where no doubt there was a trench, by which whatever was redundant might be carried off. Thus the altar itself must first be sanctified, by sacrifice and blood, before it could sanctify the gift: for every creature of God on earth has been so polluted by man's sin, that none is meet to be set apart for his immediate service, till purged with blood: and all the ministrations of sinners are so defiled, that the best would condemn them, even their most solemn sacrifices, unless sprinkled with the blood of Christ. This was evidently intended to teach the Israelites the holiness of God, the defiling nature of sin, their own sinfulness, and their need of the promised Saviour, who should "take away sin" by the sacrifice of himself."

V. 13, 14. According to the law of the sin-offering, afterwards given, (Notes, Lev. iv. 4—11,) all the fat of this bull was directed on this occasion, as by anticipation, to be burnt on the altar; but the flesh, skin, and dung, were to be burned with a strong fire, (the word is altered,) without the camp. It should be observed, that the fat, which the Israelites always burnt on the altar, was not what is blended with the flesh, in every part of the body; but the suet and loose inward fat. When an animal is opened, the several intestines appear covered with fat, which forms an integument both suited to keep them separate, and to preserve a proper warmth. These integuments, and the suet with the kidneys covered by it, are evidently meant in all the passages in which this is instituted, though learned men have differently explained the terms used on the subject.—The flesh of the other sin-offerings, the blood of which was not carried into the sanctuary, was eaten by the priests: but this was the sin-offering of the priests, who could neither bear nor atone for their own sins. In this incipient state therefore of the Levitical priesthood, though the blood was not carried into the holy place, (the high priest not being yet fully authorized to perform that service,) the flesh was burned without the camp, as it was afterwards appointed in respect of the sin-offerings for the high priest, congregation, or ruler, the blood of which was carried into the holy place.—The word rendered "sin-offering" is merely sin; "It is sin." This implied, that it must be treated with abhorrence, and consumed by the fire, which represented the justice of God, as if it were sin itself: and the expression helps to explain the apostle's energetick language in the following passage, as also other similar passages in the New Testament, "Christ was made Sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the Righteousness of God in him."

V. 15—18. One of the rams, before-mentioned, was directed to be offered as "a burnt-offering," with the ceremonies in that case prescribed. (Notes, Lev. i.)—Every sacrifice of innocent useful animals, implied the sinfulness of the offerers, and prefigured the vicarious sufferings of the Holy Jesus: the priests therefore were required to lay their hands on the head of the ram for a burnt-offering, and even on that of consecration, (as well as on that of the young bull for a sin-offering,) implying the translation of their guilt to the animal about to be sacrificed. The whole of the blood was to be sprinkled about the altar; or, as some suppose, poured on the altar round about, to be consumed by the fire along with the flesh. The entire animal, except the skin, being burnt, no separation was made between the loose fat and the intestines; but the whole, being previously well cleansed, was laid, with the flesh and the head, on the altar. In connexion with the typical import, this sacrifice denoted the offerer's profession of unreserved devotedness, in body and soul, to the service of God, according to the duties to which he was called.

V. 19—21. "The ram of consecration" was evidently a sacrifice of peace-offering, though presented on a particular occasion. (Notes, Lev. iii.) With reference to this occasion, part of the blood was applied, not as that of the sin-offering to the horns of the altar, but to Aaron and his sons; to the tips of their right ears, the thumbs of their right hands, and the great toes of their right feet: implying their obligation to hearken diligently to the word of God, to do his work in the best manner which they could, and to walk in his ways with steady perseverance; and also, that they could not do these things acceptably, exanointing oil, and sprinkle it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon the garments of his sons with him: and he ^p shall be hallowed, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him.

^p See on John xvii. 19. Heb. ix. 22 x. 29.

22 Also ^q thou shalt take of the ram the fat and ^r the rump, and the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and ^s the right shoulder; for it is a ram of consecration:

^q 13. Lev. viii. 25
^r Lev. iii. 9. vii. 2 ix. 19

^s Lev. vii. 32, 33. ix. 21 x. 14 Num. xviii. 18.

23 And ^t one loaf of bread, and one cake of oiled bread, and one wafer, out of the basket of the unleavened bread, that is before the LORD.

^t 2, 3

24 And thou shalt ^u put all in the hands of Aaron, and in the hands of his sons; and shalt ^v wave them for ^w a wave-offering before the LORD.

^u Lev. viii. 27

^v Heb. shake to and fro. x. 26, 27. Lev. vii. 30. ix. 21. x. 14.

^w Lev. vii. 29-31. viii. 28. Ps. xcix. 6.

25 And ^x thou shalt receive them of their hands, and burn them upon the altar for a burnt-offering, ^y for a sweet savour before the LORD; it is ^z an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

^z See on 18.

^a 41. Lev. i. 9. 13. ii. 2. 9. 16. iii. 3. 5. 9. 11. 14. 16. vii. 5. 25. x. 13. 1 Sam. ii. 29.

26 And thou shalt take the breast of the ram of Aaron's consecration, and wave it for a wave-offering before the LORD: and it shall be thy part.

27 And thou shalt sanctify ^b the breast of the wave-offering, and the shoulder of the heave-offering, which is waved, and which is heaved up of ^c the ram of the consecration, even of that which is for Aaron, and of that which is for his sons.

^b Lev. vi. 31-34. viii. 29. ix. 21. x. 15. Num. vi. 20. xviii. 18, 19.

^c 22. 34. Lev. vii. 37. viii. 28-31.

28 And ^d it shall be Aaron's and his sons' by a statute for ever, from the children of Israel: for it is ^e an heave-offering: and it shall be an heave-offering from the children of Israel, of ^f the sacrifice of their peace-offerings, even their heave-offering unto the LORD.

^d Lev. vii. 32-34. x. 14, 15. Deut. xviii. 3

^e 27. Lev. vii. 14. Num. xv. 19, 20. xviii. 24, 25, xxxi. 29, 41. Lev. iii. vii. 11. &c.

29 ¶ And ^g the holy garments of Aaron shall be ^h his son's after him, to be ⁱ anointed therein, and to be consecrated in them.

^g xxviii. 3, 4.

^h Num. xx. 26-28.

ⁱ 5-7. xxx. 30. xl. 15. Lev. viii. 7-12. Num. xviii. 8. xxxv. 25.

30 And ^j that son, that is priest in his stead, shall put them on ^k seven days when he cometh into the tabernacle of the congregation to minister in the holy place.

^j Heb. he of his sons. Heb. vii. 28.

^k 35. xii. 15. Gen. viii. 10. 12. Lev. xiii. 33-35. xii. 2, 3. xiii. 5. Josh. vi. 14, 15. Ez. xliii. 26. Acts xx. 6, 7. See on 27.

31 ¶ And thou shalt take ^l the ram of the consecration, and ^m seethe his flesh in the holy place.

^l Lev. viii. 31. 1 Sam. ii. 13, 15. Ez. xlvii. 20-24.

32 And ⁿ Aaron and his sons shall eat the flesh of the ram, ^o and the bread that is in the basket, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

ⁿ xxiv. 9-11. Lev. x. 12-14. ^o 2. 3. 23.

cept through the atoning blood, received and applied by faith. Then part of the blood reserved upon the altar, probably in a bason for that purpose, was mingled with the holy anointing oil, and sprinkled on the garments both of Aaron and his sons, to hallow them to the Lord. 'This' may be looked upon as a lively representation of our 'purification by the blood of Jesus Christ, and by his Holy Spirit.' Bp. Patrick. We may add, that these always go together. (Notes, Rom. vi. 16-19. xii. 1.)

V. 22-28. In ordinary peace-offerings of the herd, the fat alone was burned on the altar; but of sheep the rumps also, which are often exceedingly large and fat in those countries; and in this particular case, the right shoulder, with a portion of each part of the meat-offering, having been first put into the hands of Aaron and his sons, to be waved by them, were presented by Moses, as a burnt-offering to the Lord, and laid on the altar with the fat. From this circumstance, the sacrifice was called "the ram of consecration," or of fillings, as the hands of Aaron and his sons were first filled with these parts of it, before they were presented to God; implying, that they did not set themselves to work, but undertook their sacred services by his express direction. The breast of the ram, having been waved by Moses himself, was allotted to him, as priest, for his portion of the peace-offering. In other instances however, after Aaron and his sons had been fully initiated in their office, both the right shoulder and the breast of every peace-offering were allotted to the priests. —The heaving these parts of the sacrifices upwards towards heaven, and the waving of them to the right hand and left, or to the four quarters of the globe, implied, that they were thus dedicated to the God of heaven and of all the earth; and were then used by his priests as given by him to them: and perhaps the right shoulder and the breast being thus presented, might intimate, that the priests and offerers also should devote themselves to the service of God, with all their power, and with their whole heart.

Consecration. (26) מִנְחָה, from מָלַא to be full, or to fill. (Note 8, 9.)

V. 29, 30. On this occasion, another general law was given, respecting the appointment of one of Aaron's sons, at his death, for his successor in the high priesthood; who must be clothed in the sacred vestment of his father, that he might be anointed and consecrated in them; and must put them on seven days, before he performed the peculiar functions of the high priest; in order that he might be habituated to the dress, and have time to learn what was necessary to a due performance of these sacred services.

V. 31-34. The remainder of the ram of consecration, with that of the meat-offering, was to be eaten by the priests, as their portion of their own peace-offering: but, as the occasion was peculiar, they must eat it in the court of the tabernacle and not elsewhere, for none, even of their

^p Lev. x. 16—18. 33 And they shall ^p eat those things, wherewith the atonement was made, to consecrate and to sanctify them: but

^q Lev. xxii. 10—13. Num. i. 51. ^r iii. 10. 33. xvi. 40. xviii. 4. 7. ^s Num. xvi. 5. ^t a 22. 26. 28. ^u a stranger shall not eat thereof, because ^r they are holy.

^v xii. 10. xvi. 19. Lev. vii. 18. 19. viii. 32. x. 16. 34 And if ought of ^v the flesh of the consecrations, or of the bread, remain unto the morning; then thou shalt ^w burn the remainder with fire: it shall not be eaten, because it is holy.

^x xl. 12—15. Lev. viii. 4. &c. ^y xxxix. 42. 43. ^z xl. 16. John xv. 14. 35 And ^z thus shalt thou do unto Aaron, and to his sons, ^z according to all things which I have commanded thee: ^z seven days shalt thou consecrate them.

^z 30. 37. xl. 13. Lev. viii. 33. xiv 8—11. 36 And thou shalt offer ^z every day a bullock for a sin-offering, for atone-

^z See on 10—14. Ez. xliii. 25. 27. xlv. 18—20. Heb. x. 11. ^z Lev. xvi. 16—19. ^z 27. Heb. ix. 22, 23. ^z xxx. 26. xl. 9—11. Lev. viii. 19. ^z Num. vii. 1. ment: and thou shalt ^a cleanse the altar, when thou hast made an atonement for it, and thou shalt ^b anoint it to sanctify it.

^z 11. Lev. viii. 19. ^z Num. vii. 1. 37 Seven days thou shalt make an atonement for the altar ^e and sanctify it: and ^d it shall be an altar most holy: whatsoever toucheth the altar shall be holy.

³⁸ ¶ Now this is that which thou shalt offer upon the altar; ^e two lambs of the first year, day by day continually.

³⁹ The one lamb thou shalt offer ^f in the morning; and the other lamb thou shalt offer ^g at even.

⁴⁰ And with the one lamb ^h a tenth-deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an ⁱ hin of beaten oil: and the fourth part of an hin of wine ^j for ^j a drink-offering.

⁴¹ And the other lamb thou shalt ^k offer at even, and shalt do thereto according to the meat-offering of the morning, and according to the drink-offering thereof, for a sweet savour, c xl 10 Dan. ix. 24.

d xxx. 29. Matt. xxiii. 17. 19.
e Num. xxviii. 3—8 1 Chr. xvi. 40. 2 Chr. ii. 4. xiii. 11. xxxi. 8. Ezra iii. 3. Dan. ix. 21. 27. xii. 11. John i. 29. Heb. vii. 27. 1 Pet. i. 19. Rev. v. 9—12.
f 2 Kings xvi. 15. 2 Chr. xiii 11. Ps. v. 3. lv. 16. 17. Luke i. 10. Acts xxvi. 7.
g See on 41.
h xvi. 26. Num. xv. 4. 9. xxviii. 5. 13.
i Lev. xxv. 24. Lev. xxiii. 13. Num. xv. 4. xxviii. 14. Ez. iv. 11. xlv. 24. xvi. 5. 7. 11. 14.
j Gen. xxxv. 14. Lev. xxiii. 13. Num. vi. 15—17. xv. 5. 7. 10. 24. xxviii. 10. 14. 15. 24. xxix. 16. Deut. xxxii. 38. Is. lvii. 6. Ez. xx. 28. xlv. 17. Joel i. 9. 13. ii. 14. Phil. ii. 17. Gr.
k 1 Kings xviii. 29. 36. Ezra ix. 4. Ps. cxli. 2. Ez. xvi. 13—15. Dan. ix. 21.

families, might join with them in thus feasting before the Lord in his courts; and the residue must be burnt, and not be kept till morning. In these particulars it was ordered differently from most other peace-offerings.

V. 35—37. The consecration of Aaron and his sons was to be continued for seven days, during which time a young bull for a sin-offering, according to the form before established, (Notes, 10—14,) was every day offered for atonement, (or rather atonements,) both for them and for the altar, which must thus be cleansed, (or expiated, as the word signifies,) and anointed, before it was fully consecrated as an altar. Some expositors are of opinion, that these seven days for the cleansing of the altar, were distinct from the seven days of consecrating the priests; and that they preceded them, and attended the erection of the sanctuary by Moses. And they argue in favour of this opinion, that the purifying of the altar must have preceded all sacrificing upon it; but that Moses offered a burnt-offering and a meat-offering upon it, when he placed it in the court of the tabernacle. (xl. 29.) The language, however, here used, by no means admits of this construction: as the bull for atonement was offered on each of the days, in which Aaron and his sons were consecrated, and with the blood of these very bulls the altar was expiated. It seems evident that some things, in the first introduction of the Levitical ceremonial, must necessarily have come short of the exact regularity which it required when completed. Moses had never been consecrated to the priesthood, as Aaron was; yet he acted as priest during this interval: and can we wonder, if he sacrificed on the altar before it had been fully dedicated? When the burnt-offering was slain, he would put the blood on the horns of the altar, or sprinkle it round about; and this would be a sufficient confession, that all things, with which sinners have to do, need purging with atoning blood, when used in the service of a just and holy God. And when Aaron and his sons were consecrated, the more solemn expiation or dedication of the altar was carried on at the same time, and by the same sacrifices, from applying the blood of the first sin-offering to the horns of it, till it was finished on the seventh day. Then it was made an altar “most holy; whatsoever touched it should be holy.” None but priests of Aaron’s family might approach it: from that time Moses sacrificed no more, and every oblation presented at it was “holy to the LORD.”

V. 38—41. When the priests had been fully consecrated, and the altar sanctified, two lambs of the first year must be offered daily, one in the morning, the other in the afternoon, as a burnt-offering. This observance might never on any account be omitted, whatever additional sacrifices were appointed for the sabbaths and solemnities, or presented on various occasions by the rulers, priests, or people; for it especially typified “the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world;” the constant efficacy of his one all sufficient atonement; and our continual need of it, in all our approaches unto a holy God. It likewise taught the people, that God must be worshipped every day continually, morning and evening at least, with prayer, and praise, and thanksgiving; and not only on sabbaths and solemn festivals: and that this should be considered as a sacred feast, to which they were admitted, and in which the Lord condescended to meet with them.—To render this idea of communion with God more familiar to their minds, the several particulars requisite to a feast accompanied the sacrifice; especially bread and wine, in the form of a meat-offering and a drink-offering.—The word rendered “tenth deal,” means a tenth, that is, of an ephah, or about three quarts of wine-measure, being the same as an omer. A hin contained the sixth part of an ephah, of about five quarts wine-measure. So that about three quarts of fine flour, mixed up with a quart and half a pint of the

THE ALTAR OF INCENSE.

EXOD XXX. 1-9

CHAP. XXX.

Directions, concerning the altar of incense, 1—10; the half shekel of ransom-money, 11—16; the brazen laver, 17—21; the holy anointing oil, 22—33; and the incense, 34—38.

AND thou shalt make ^aan altar to burn incense upon: of shittim-wood shalt thou make it.

^a xxxvii. 25—28. xl. 5. Lev. iv. 7. 18. 1 Kings vi. 20. 2 Chr. xxvi. 16. Rev. viii. 3.

2 A cubit shall be the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof, four-square shall it be; and two cubits shall be the height thereof: ^bthe horns thereof shall be of the same.

^b See on xxvii. 2.

3 And thou shalt ^coverlay it with pure gold, the ^{*}top thereof, and the [†]sides thereof round about, and the horns thereof: and thou shalt make unto it a crown of gold round about.

^c xxv. 11. 24.

^{*} Heb. roof.

[†] Heb. walls

4 And two golden ^drings shalt thou make to it under the crown of it, by the two ^ecorners thereof, upon the two sides of it shalt thou make it; and they shall be for places for the staves to bear it withal.

^d xxv. 12. 14. 27. xxvi. 29. xxxvii. 4. 7.

^e Heb. ribs.

5 And thou shalt make the ^estaves of shittim-wood, and overlay them with gold.

^e xxv. 13. 27.

6 And thou shalt put it before the ^fveil, that is by the ark of the testimony; before ^gthe mercy-seat, that is over the testimony, where ^hI will meet with thee.

^f xxvi. 31—35. xl. 3. 5. 26. Matt. xxvii. 51. Heb. ix. 3. 4.

^g xxv. 21, 22. Lev. xvi. 13. 1 Chr. xxviii. 11. Heb. iv. 16. ix. 5.

^h 36. xxix. 42, 43. Num. xvii. 4.

7 And Aaron shall burn thereon ⁱsweet incense every morning: when he ^ldresseth the lamps he shall burn incense upon it.

ⁱ Heb. incense of spices. 34—38.

^l xxvii. 20. 1 Sam. ii. 28. iii. 3. 1 Chr. xxiii. 13. Luke i. 9. Acts vi. 4.

8 And when Aaron ^llighteth the lamps ^{*}at even, he shall burn incense upon it; ^ka perpetual incense before the LORD, throughout your generations.

^l Or, setteth up. Heb. causeth to ascend.

^{*} Heb. between the two evens.

xii. 6. marg.

^k Rom. viii. 34. 1 Thes. v. 17. Heb. vii. 25. ix. 24.

9 Ye shall offer no ^lstrange incense thereon, nor burnt-sacrifice, nor meat-offering; neither shall ye pour drink-offering thereon.

^l Lev. x. 1.

10 And ^mAaron shall make an atone-

^m xxix. 36. 37. Lev. xvi. 29, 34. xxiii. 27. Heb. i. 3. ix. 22, 23.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXX. V. 1—6. The altar of incense was made, like the ark of the covenant, of shittim-wood covered with plates of gold. It was something more than half a yard square, and above a yard in height; and from the four corner-posts arose four horns, or pinnacles, which were covered with plates of gold. It was surrounded on the top with a cornice of solid gold, underneath which were placed two golden rings, probably on two opposite corners, for the conveniency of carrying it on staves, during the marches of Israel in the wilderness, and afterwards when removed to different places in Canaan.—This altar, and the incense burnt on it, typified the Son of God in our nature making intercession for us; as the altar of burnt-offering and its oblations typified his sacrifice. The former was therefore placed within the sanctuary, the latter in the court without; for his sacrifice was offered on earth, his intercession is in heaven. But it was not put in the most holy place; because the continual intercession of Christ was represented by the other priests, as well as the high priest, daily burning incense upon it morning and evening. It was therefore placed without the veil, but nearer to it than the table or the candlestick; and in the centre of the tabernacle, directly over against the ark, except as the veil was between.

V. 7, 8. Aaron alone is here mentioned, as burning incense on the altar: but it is generally agreed, that not only succeeding high priests, but also the ordinary priests in their courses, performed this service. (Notes, Luke i. 5—10.) When Aaron or his sons had offered the morning-sacrifice, one of them went into the tabernacle, and on that occasion he trimmed and ordered the lamps for the day, and perhaps cleansed and burnished the candlestick: he also burned incense on the golden altar, while the people were offering their prayers without. In the evening likewise, when the lamb had been sacrificed, the priest again entered the sanctuary, and both lighted the lamps and burned incense on the altar.—It is probable, that no more than one priest at a time entered the sanctuary to burn incense: and that if the high priest were present, and had no impediment, he performed this service, at least in the first ages of the church of Israel. As the oil might be nearly burnt out, and perhaps some of the lamps extinguished; it is here called lighting the lamps: and as Aaron and his sons were directed to “order them from evening to morning,” we cannot suppose that they left them from the time of the evening sacrifice to the ensuing morning; but that the priest, whose office it was to burn incense, ordered them at that time; and that some other of the priests, in rotation, tended them during the rest of night. (Note, xxvii. 20, 21.)—The daily sacrifices represented the perpetual efficacy of Christ’s atonement, and the burning of incense morning and evening typified his continual intercession for us; while the dressing and lighting of the lamps prefigured the preaching of the word, which could only be rendered effectual by that intercession, bringing down a blessing, in answer to the prayers of his people.—As no grate is mentioned in this altar, nor any thing said about cleaning it, expositors generally think, that a censer with coals was placed on it, when incense was burnt.

V. 9, 10. Nothing, except the incense afterwards described, might be offered on the golden altar: but, once every year, on the great day of atonement, the high priest must apply to the horns of it the blood of the sin-offering; to shew that all the services performed at it needed purging with blood, to be accepted by a holy God. This denoted that the intercession of Christ in heaven derives all its efficacy from his sufferings on earth; and that we need no other sacrifice or intercessor but Christ only.

ment upon the horns of it once in a year, with the blood of ^a the sin-offering of atonements: once in the year shall he make atonement upon it, throughout your generations: it is most holy unto the LORD.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 When thou ^o takest the sum of the children of Israel, after ^a their number; then shall they give every man ^p a ransom for his soul unto the LORD, when thou numberest them: that there be ^q no plague among them, when thou numberest them.

13 This they shall give, every one that passeth among them that are numbered; half a shekel, after the shekel of the sanctuary: (^r a shekel is twenty gerahs:) ^a an half shekel shall be the offering of the LORD.

14 Every one that passeth among them that are numbered, ^r from twenty years old and above, shall give an offering unto the LORD.

15 The ^u rich shall not ^t give more, and the poor shall not ^t give less than half a shekel, when they give an offer-

^o xxxviii. 26, 26.
 Num. i. 2-5.
 xxvi. 2-4. 2 Sam. xiv. 2.
 Heb. them that are to be numbered.
^p Num. xxxi. 50.
 2 Chr. xxiv. 6.
 Job xxxiii. 24.
 xxxvi. 18. Ps. xlix. 7. Matt. xx. 28. Mark x. 45.
 1 Tim. ii. 6.
^q 1 Pet. i. 18, 19.
 2 Sam. xxiv. 13.
 15. 1 Chr. xxi. 12, 14. xxvii. 24.
^r Lev. xxvii. 25.
 Num. iii. 47.
 Ez. xiv. 12.
^s xxxviii. 26. Matt. xvii. 24 Gr.
^t Num. i. 3, 18, 20. xiv. 29 xxvi. 2. xxxii. 11.
^u Job xxxiv. 19.
 Prov. xxii. 2.
 Eph. vi. 9 Col. iii. 25.
^v Heb. multiply.
^w Heb. diminish.

ing unto the LORD, to make ^x an atonement for your souls.

16 And thou shalt take the atonement-money of the children of Israel, and shalt ^y appoint it for the service of the tabernacle of the congregation; that it may be ^a a memorial unto the children of Israel before the LORD, to make an atonement for your souls.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

18 Thou shalt also make ^a a laver of brass, and his foot also of brass to wash withal: and thou shalt ^b put it between the tabernacle of the congregation and the altar, and thou shalt put water therein.

19 For Aaron and his sons shall ^c wash their hands and their feet thereat.

20 When they go into the tabernacle of the congregation, they shall wash with water, that they ^d die not: or when they come near to the altar to minister, to burn offering made by fire unto the LORD.

21 So they shall wash their hands and their feet, that they die not; and it shall be ^e a statute for ever to them,

^x Lev. xvii. 11
 Num. xxxi. 50
 2 Sam. xxi. 3.
^y xxxviii. 25-31.
 Neh. x. 32, 33.
^a See on xii. 14.—
 Num. xvi. 40.
 Luke xxii. 19.
^b xxxi. 9 xxxviii. 8.
 Lev. viii. 11. 1 Kings viii. 23, 38. 2 Chr. iv. 2. 6. 14, 15.
 Zech. xiii. 1.
 Tit. iii. 5. Gr.
 1 John i. 7.
^c xl. 7. 30-32.
^d xl. 31, 32. Ps. xxvi. 6. Is. lii. 11. John xiii. 8.—
 10. 1 Cor. vi. 9.—
 11. Tit. iii. 5.
 Heb. ix. 10. 6.
 22. Rev. i. 5, x. xii. 15. Lev. x. 1-3. xvi. 1, 2.
 1 Sam. vi. 10.
 1 Chr. xiii. 19.
 Ps. lxxxix. 10.
 Acts v. 5. 10.
 Heb. xii. 28, 29.
^e xxviii. 48.

V. 11—16. The Israelites were twice numbered, in the days of Moses, by divine command; and doubtless on both these occasions this law was observed. (Marg. Ref. o.) Indeed, the collecting of the half-shekel, if exactly done, would itself be equivalent to numbering them.—Women and minors were exempted from the tax, not being numbered; and so were the Levites, as it is manifest from comparing the number of those who paid the tax, with the sum total of the congregation, besides the Levites. (xxxviii. 26. Num. i. 46, 47.) Indeed it is probable, that the old men, who were incapable of war, were also exempted. (Num. i. 42, 45.) The shekel of the sanctuary, where the standard weight was kept, was nearly half an ounce troy weight; so that the sum paid by each person was about fifteen pence.—This silver was at that time used for the sockets of the sanctuary, and for hooks for the curtains, and for plates, to fillet or cover the chapters of the pillars round the court. (Note, xxxviii. 26—28.) But it is probable, a similar assessment was made as often as necessary, being the same as was demanded of our Lord; (Note, Matt. xvii. 24—27 :) and it was in general expended in purchasing sacrifices, wood, and other things, for the service of the sanctuary; or perhaps in repairs. Other contributions were voluntary, and proportioned to the ability or liberality of the offerer: but this was the ransom of the souls, or lives, of the people, and the same sum was paid by every man, whether rich or poor; and if they refused to pay it, they could have no interest in the sacrifices, and might expect to be visited with the plague for their contempt.

Some think that David's offence, in numbering the people, was enhanced, by his neglecting to raise this capitation-tax. (Notes, 2 Sam. xxiv.)—The law implied, that the souls of all are of equal value, equally forfeited, and equally in need of a ransom; Christ is equally proposed to all who hear the gospel, and all believers have an equal interest in him: but, without this interest in him, we can have no benefit from his sacrifice; and, instead of ransom for our souls, may expect additional vengeance for neglecting so great salvation. And though we can add nothing to the all-sufficient atonement of Christ, which is freely given without money and without price, to all who believe in him; yet we may, by our worldly substance, assist in maintaining the expenses of religious ordinances, which are memorials to us of the atonement made for our souls.

V. 18—21. The laver of brass was a large cistern, probably circular, in which was continually kept a quantity of water; and perhaps the foot was a circular vessel which received the water out of the cistern, by several cocks or spouts, for immediate use. For the priests, though washed at their consecration, were commanded on pain of death, to wash their hands and feet every time they officiated, or at least every day; which intimated the continual guilt, which they contracted in their daily employments and converse with the world. (Note, John xiii. 6—11.) But, besides this use, much water would be wanted for washing the sacrifices, the vessels, and other things about the sanctuary, in order to preserve the court clean and sweet, when so many animals were slaughtered,

THE BRAZEN LAVER.

Exod. xxx. 17-21.

even to him, and to his seed throughout their generations.

22 ¶ Moreover the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

23 Take thou also unto thee principal spices, of pure myrrh five hundred shekels, and of sweet cinnamon half so much, even two hundred and fifty shekels, and of sweet calamus two hundred and fifty shekels,

24 And of cassia five hundred shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary, and of oil-olive an h hin.

25 And thou shalt make it an oil of holy ointment, an ointment compound after the art of the apothecary: it shall be an holy anointing oil.

26 And thou shalt anoint the tabernacle of the congregation therewith, and the ark of the testimony.

27 And the table and all his vessels, and the candlestick and his vessels, and the altar of incense, 28 And the altar of burnt-offering with all his vessels, and the laver and his foot.

29 And thou shalt sanctify them, that they may be most holy: whatsoever toucheth them shall be holy.

30 And thou shalt anoint Aaron and his sons, and consecrate them, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office.

31 And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, This shall be an holy anointing oil unto me, throughout your generations.

32 Upon man's flesh shall it not be poured, neither shall ye make any other like it, after the composition of it: it is holy, and it shall be holy unto you.

33 Whosoever compoundeth any like it, or whosoever putteth any of it upon a stranger, shall even be cut off from his people.

34 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Take unto thee sweet spices, stacte, and onycha, and galbanum; these sweet spices with pure frankincense: of each shall there be a like weight:

35 And thou shalt make it a perfume, a confection after the art of the apothecary, tempered together, pure and holy.

f xxxvii. 29 Ps. xiv. 8. Prov. vii. 17. Cant. i. 3. 13. iv. 14. Jer. vi. 20. Ez xxvii. 19. 22.

g Num. iii. 47. Ez. xiv. 12. h xxix. 40. Jer. xix. 36. Num. xv. 5.

* Or, perfumer. 1 Chr. ix. 30.

l Num. xxxv. 25. Ps. lxxxix. 20. cxxxiii. 2. Heb. i. 9.

k xl. 9-15. Lev. viii. 10-12. Num. vii. 1. 10. 1s. lxi. 1. Acts x. 38. 2 Cor. i. 21, 22. 1 John ii. 20. 27.

xxix. 37. Lev. vi. 18. Matt. xxiii. 17, 19.

m xxix. 7. xl. 15. Lev. viii. 12, 30. Num. iii. 3. n See on xxxvii. 3. xxix. 9. 35.

o xxxvii. 29. Lev. viii. 12. xxi. 10. Ps. lxxxix. 20.

p Lev. xxi. 10. Matt. vii. 6.

q Luke xii. 1, 2. Heb. x. 26-29.

r xxix. 33. s xii. 15, 19. Gen. xvii. 14. Lev. vii. 20, 21. xvii. 4. 9. xix. 8. xxiii. 29. Num. ix. 13.

t xxv. 6. xxxvii. 29.

u Lev. ii. 1. 15. v. 11. xxiv. 7. 1 Chr. ix. 29. Neh. xiii. 5. Cant. iii. 6. Matt. ii. 11. x. Prov. xxvii. 9. Cant. i. 3. iii. 6. John xii. 3.

† Heb. salted. Lev. ii. 13.

so much blood sprinkled and poured out, and so much fat and flesh consumed on the altar.—The laver was placed nearer to the door of the sanctuary, than the altar was; and the Levites replenished it as often as it was necessary.

V. 22—33. The several spices here mentioned, being the very best of those kinds, which were most highly valued at that time, and amounting in all to a hundred and twenty pounds troy-weight, with about five quarts of oil of olive added to them, doubtless of the purest sort, were formed into a rich and highly aromattick ointment, or oil, according to the methods used by the makers of unguents or perfumes. It is generally supposed that it still continued a liquid, and that the dreggy part of the spices was strained out of it.—With this holy oil, all the furniture belonging to the sanctuary was anointed. It was poured on the head of Aaron and his successors, when they were consecrated to the high priesthood: and, with the blood of the burnt-offering, it was sprinkled on the garments both of the high priests, and of the other priests, when admitted to their office. The anointing with this holy oil especially completed the consecration of the priests, and the dedication of the sanctuary and its furniture, as most holy; and therefore it must not be used for any common purposes, or made by any other person, on peril of death.—It is indeed generally supposed that the kings of Judah were by the LORD's express appointment anointed with it: for it is reasonable to conclude, in opposition to Jewish traditions, that it was made, under the inspection of the high priest, as often as it was wanted, which would frequently be the case in successive generations. This sacred oil, or ointment typified the Holy Spirit, especially as given to our great High Priest without measure; and all his personal and mediatorial excellencies, as the "well beloved Son, in whom the Father is well pleased," and whose name is to the believer, "as ointment poured forth." It also intimated, that "if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his," not one of his holy priesthood; and that we cannot attend on any divine ordinance, or officiate in any sacred service, acceptably or usefully, without his sanctifying influences.—The concluding prohibition reminds us, that hypoerisy which counterfeits, and profaneness which ridicules, the sanctifying work of the Holy Spirit, bring swift destruction on the guilty; and, in general, that Christ himself, and his holy gospel, are "a savour of death" to unbelievers. (Note, 2 Cor. ii. 14—17.)

V. 34—38. The spices, or gums, of which this perfume, or incense, (for so the word is elsewhere rendered,) was composed, are not all certainly known; because some of the words are seldom used in Scripture.—The stacte is supposed by the most approved commentators to have been the purest part of myrrh: and the onycha, an odoriferous shell, though some think it was the gum called Ladanum. The galbanum is thought to have been of a different sort from the gum called now by that name, the smell of which is very disagreeable. The frankincense is well known.—The word, rendered tempered together, signifies salted: (marg.) and it is supposed, that salt was mingled with the other ingredients; as indeed it was used in every oblation. This incense, being beaten small, was placed within 36 And thou shalt beat some of it very small, and put of it before ^v the testimony, in the tabernacle of the congregation, ^z where I will meet with thee: it shall be unto you most holy.

37 And as for the perfume which thou shalt make, ^a ye shall not make to yourselves according to the composition thereof: ^b it shall be unto thee holy for the LORD.

38 Whosoever shall make like unto that, to smell thereto, shall even ^c be cut off from his people.

v See on xvi. 34.

z 6. xxv. 2. xxix. 42, 43 Lev. xvi. 2.

a 32, 33

b xxix. 37. Lev. ii. 3.

c See on 33

the sanctuary, probably on the table; that it might be ready for the priests to take and burn on the golden altar, before the testimony, or ark, as nothing but the veil interposed: (Note, I—6:) for this daily burning of incense within the sanctuary was as necessary, in order to Israel's communion with God, as the daily sacrifices on the altar of burnt-offering.—Let the attentive reader compare the language used on these subjects, with the account of the giving of the moral law from mount Sinai; and study the difference, between a sinner meeting God as a Lawgiver and a Judge, and his coming before him on "a throne of grace," as a God of salvation, through the atonement and intercession of the great High Priest of our profession. But they, who corrupt or pervert the doctrine of free mercy, to gratify their own carnal and sensual inclinations, and they who constitute other intercessors, alike violate the spirit of the annexed prohibition.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

If men do not wilfully shut their eyes to the things which are written in the word of God, they cannot but see in these ceremonial institutions, compared with the New Testament, that Jesus Christ is the grand Subject of the Scriptures; and the sum of all true religion, as "made of God unto us, Wisdom, Righteousness, Sanctification, and Redemption." To assert that the language of the New Testament concerning his priesthood, oblation, entrance into the holiest, and intercession for his people, were accommodations to these Old Testament-rites, is to suppose that, in building the spiritual temple, the all-wise Architect, without any previous design, planned and formed a very intricate and unnecessary scaffolding, and then erected the building for the sake, and according to the pattern, of that scaffolding! But "known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world." He first formed the plan of salvation in his own infinite mind, then shewed as much of it as was needful, to Moses in the mount; and according to it, this scaffolding was formed, for the sake of the intended building, which accordingly has since been erected exactly answerable to it.—From this chapter let us observe, that our duty, and our urgent wants call upon us daily to approach our Creator and Benefactor, with our thanksgivings and supplications; but that we are not worthy to draw nigh in our own name, or in any other way than through the meritorious and prevailing intercession of the Son of God. Though we are without on earth, and he is ascended into heaven, and

CHAP. XXXI.

Bezaleel and Aholiab are appointed and qualified to erect the tabernacle, and make the sacred furniture, 1—11. The observance of the sabbath is enforced, 12—17. The tables of the law are delivered to Moses, 18.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 See, ^a I have called by name ^b Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah.

3 And I have ^c filled him with the is out of our sight; let us by faith behold him, and realize him to our minds, as ever living to receive and present our worship, perfumed with the sweet incense of his intercession, before the Father's mercy-seat for acceptance. We must therefore not be slack, unfrequent, or doubtful in our supplications: nay we should ask abundantly and constantly, and expect copious blessings, that our joy may be full, and our God be glorified. Blessed be his name, the Priest, the sacrifice, the incense, and anointing oil, are all ready prepared to our hands, without any concurrence of our's: but, if we know the value of this great salvation, we shall not grudge either time, labour, or expense, which the maintaining, or attending on, divine ordinances may require; and it is to be feared that we have no interest in the sacrifice, if we hesitate to contribute. Nor should we forget, that the poor are as welcome to Christ, as the rich; and the rich as much in want of his ransom for their souls, as the poor: for, in this grand concern, no external distinctions make any difference, and all are alike bound to express their valuation of Christ and of his salvation. Even they who are washed, in their first conversion, from the sins of their past lives, and from prevailing sin in their hearts, have occasion for renewed repentance, forgiveness, and grace, from day to day; and must still approach as sinners washed in the blood of Jesus, anointed by the Spirit, and pleading the Saviour's merits. But let us beware of attempting to render a religious profession subservient to our secular interests; of treating heavenly things with irreverence or contempt; or of gratifying our sinful inclinations under the pretence of Christian liberty: for these are most dangerous and fatal perversions of the gospel of Christ.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXI. V. 1—5. It cannot be supposed that the Israelites, who had been employed as bond-slaves in Egypt, were in general qualified for such curious workmanship as had been described; any more than that the apostles, taken from their fishing boats, and other low occupations, were capable of speaking fluently and correctly in the languages of all nations, to whom they were commanded to preach: but the same Spirit, who gave the apostles utterance in divers tongues, miraculously endued the persons here appointed with requisite skill, or exceedingly improved them in it; for they might have acquired some knowledge in particular branches of these ingenious arts, which are thought to have been very successfully cula xxxiii. 12. 17.

xxxv. 30 Mark
iii. 16—19. John
iii. 27.
b xxxvii. 1. 1 Chr.
ii. 19, 20.
c xxxv. 31. 1a.
xxviii. 6. 2R.
1 Cor. xii. 4—11.

Spirit of God, in wisdom, and in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship,

d xxv. 32-35.
xxvi. 1. xxviii.
15. 1 Kings vii.
14. 2 Chr. ii. 7.
13, 14.

4 To ^d devise cunning works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass,

e xxviii. 9-21.

5 And ^e in cutting of stones to set them, and in carving of timber, to work in all manner of workmanship.

f iv. 14, 15. vi. 26.
Ezra v. 1, 2. Ec.
iv. 9-12. Matt.
x. 2-4. Luke x.
1. Acts xiii. 2.
xv. 39, 40.
g xxxvi. 1.
h xxviii. 3. xxxv.
10, 25, 26. xxxvi.
8. 1 Kings iii. 12.
Jam. i. 5. 16, 17.

6 And I, behold, ^f I have given with him, ^g Aholiab the son of Ahisamach of the tribe of Dan; and in the hearts of all that are ^h wise-hearted I have put wisdom; that they may make all that I have commanded thee:

i xxvii. xxviii. 9-19.
k xxv. 10-22.
xxxvii. 1-9.

7 The ⁱ tabernacle of the congregation, and the ^k ark of the testimony, and the mercy-seat that is thereupon, and all the ^{*} furniture of the tabernacle,

* Heb. vessels.

l xxv. 23-30.
xxxvii. 10-16.
m xxv. 31-40.
xxxvii. 17-24.
n xxx. 1-10.
xxxvii. 25-29.
o xxvii. 1-8.
xxxviii. 1-7.
p xxx. 18-21.
xxxviii. 8, xl. 11.

8 And ^l the table and his furniture, and the ^m pure candlestick with all his furniture, and ⁿ the altar of incense,

9 And ^o the altar of burnt-offering with all his furniture, and ^p the laver and his foot, q xxviii. xxxix.

Rev. vii. 7, 8.
13. Num. iv. 6-14.

10 And ^q the cloths of service, and the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and the garments of his sons, to minister in the priest's office, tivated in Egypt, at this early period.—Neither Moses, nor Aaron, nor any of Aaron's sons were appointed to this service: the honour already conferred must suffice for them; and if they attended to their proper employment, they would find that also sufficient. Nor were Moses's sons appointed; for it was the Lord's will that his disinterestedness and divine legation, should appear illustrious in the obscurity of his posterity! If Hur was (as some think) Miriam's husband, and in consequence Bezaleel a distant relation of Moses; as the Lord expressly called him by name, to preside in the whole business, all occasion of murmuring was precluded.

V. 6. Aholiab was also expressly appointed to be assistant to Bezaleel, and next under him, in this service: yet not only to these two, but to many others, the Lord gave wisdom and understanding, as well as a willing heart, to perform various parts of the work, under their superintendency.—They were not, however, allowed to exercise their ingenuity, in contriving any decorations to embellish the sanctuary; but merely to devise how to execute the commands of God, with exactness, readiness, and elegance.—Dan.] Hiram, the principal workman, in building Solomon's temple, was "the son of a woman of the "daughters of Dan." (2 Chr. ii. 13, 14. iv. 11—18. Note, 1 Kings vii. 14.)

V. 8. Pure candlestick.] Thus called, because it was made entirely of pure gold; and not merely overlaid with gold, as other parts of the sacred furniture were.

11 And ^r the anointing oil, and ^s sweet incense for the holy place; according to all that I have commanded thee, shall they do.

r xxx. 23-33.
xxxvii. 29.
s xxx. 34-38.

12 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

13 Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, 'Verily my sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a ^u sign between me and you, throughout your generations; ^x that ye may know that I am the LORD, that doth sanctify you.

t See on xx. 8-11.
—Lev. xix. 3, 30.
xxiii. 3. xxv. 2.
u 17. Ez. xx. 12.
20. xlv. 24.

14 Ye shall ^y keep the sabbath therefore: for it is holy unto you. ^z Every one that defileth it shall surely be put to death: for whosoever ^a doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

x Lev. xx. 8. xxi. 8. Ez. xxxvii. 28.
John xvii. 17. 19.
1 Thes. v. 23.
y Deut. v. 12-15.
Neh. ix. 14. Is. lvi. 2-6. lviii. 13, 14.
z Is. lvi. 2, 6. Ez. xx. 13. 16. 21. 24.
a xxxv. 2, 3.

15 ^b Six days may work be done, but in the seventh is ^c the sabbath of rest, ^d holy to the LORD: ^e whosoever doeth any work in the sabbath-day, he shall surely be put to death.

b 17. xvi. 26. xxxiv. 21. Lev. xxiii. 3. Ez. xlvi. 1. Luke. xiii. 14.
c vii. 23. Lev. xxiii. 3. 32.
Luke xxiii. 56.
—Heb. iv. 9. Gr.

16 Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the sabbath, to observe the sabbath throughout their generations, for ^f a perpetual covenant.

d Heb. holiness.
e Num. xv. 32-36. Jer. xvii. 24-27.

17 It is a sign between me and the children of Israel for ever: for in ^g six f Gen. ix. 13. xvii. 11. Jer. i. 5.

g Gen. ii. 2, 3. Heb. iv. 3, 4, 10.

V. 10. Cloths of service.] These are supposed to have been the coverings, prepared for the sacred furniture, when it was to be removed. (Num. iv. 6—14.)

V. 13—17. The injunction, to sanctify the sabbath, seems to have been repeated and enlarged on at this time, to shew the people, that the sacred rest must not be interrupted, even while they were employed in erecting the tabernacle. The appointment of the weekly sabbath was a sign, or token, of the Lord's special favour to Israel. Their strict and constant observance of it would not only distinguish them, as the worshippers of God, who created the heavens and the earth in six days and rested on the seventh, from all the surrounding idolaters; but, through successive generations, it would be a sign of their covenant-relation to him, and an important means of bringing them more fully acquainted with his glorious perfections, and of rendering them indeed a holy people devoted to his service. It was therefore, at this time expressly made a part of the judicial law, that every Israelite should hallow the sabbath: if any one violated it, he must be put to death by the magistrate, provided his crime were known; and if he kept it secret, he might expect to be cut off by some divine judgment. Other seasons were set apart, as a kind of sabbath: but this was the principal; "a sabbath "of rest, holy to the LORD;" the publick observance of which by the nation, and the punishment of such as violated it, formed one condition of the national covenant throughout their generations. For it was kept in honour days the LORD made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested, and was refreshed.

g Gen. i. 31 Job xxxviii. 7. Ps civ. 31. Jer xxxii. 41.
h xxiv. 12. 18. xxxii. 15. 16. xxxiv. 1-4. 28. 29. Deut. iv. 13. v. 22. ix. 9-11. 2 Cor. iii. 3.
i viii. 19. xxxii. 16. Jer. xxxi. 33. Matt. xii. 28. Luke xi. 20. 2 Cor. iii. 7, 8.

18 ¶ And he gave unto Moses, when he had made an end of communing with him upon mount Sinai, two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the finger of God.

CHAP. XXXII.

Aaron, at the people's instigation, makes a golden calf, and they worship it, 1-6. God informs Moses, of the Creator, who rested and was refreshed, when he had completed his design: such satisfaction did he take in that display of his glory! Surely then his worshippers ought to find refreshment and delight, in contemplating his works, rendering him the tribute of adoring and grateful praise, and performing the duties of that holy day.

V. 18. After all the preceding laws and instructions, (which probably were given at different times,) when the forty days of Moses's continuance on the mount were nearly ended, the Lord gave him the tables of stone before spoken of, (xxiv. 12;) with the ten commandments written on them by his own immediate power. They are here called, the "two tables of testimony:" because the laws written on them were the substance of that will of God, which he testified to them; and likewise, because by giving this law to them, and by placing it in the ark under the mercy-seat, from above which he displayed his glory, he testified his special favour to that nation, and the way in which it would be continued to them. The stones, on which the law of the ten commandments was written, denoted its perpetual, unchangeable obligation; in which it differed from the other laws, which would after a time be superseded.—By the finger of God, the Holy Spirit may be meant, as the texts referred to shew; (Marg. Ref. i;) and he writes this law in the hearts of all the spiritual children of Israel, having prepared them for that purpose.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The Lord confers his unmerited favours on whom he pleases: but the honour, which cometh from him, is always attended with a work to be done: and to be employed by him is indeed the highest honour, and the noblest privilege. —Men are not now called forth by name, as in the days of Moses: yet our God generally marks out the persons, whom he hath made choice of, by endowing them with correspondent dispositions and qualifications by his Spirit, and opening the way to their work in his providence. We may indeed certainly know that we are not appointed to any service, for which we continue utterly unqualified. Yet there are cases, in which men are unexpectedly and evidently called to situations, and engaged in services, for which they are humbly conscious of being in themselves wholly insufficient: but they may depend upon God to give them "the Spirit of wisdom, understanding, and knowledge" for their work, even after they are engaged in it; if they simply seek his glory, do his will, and are employed by him. He confers different gifts on different persons; that they may feel their need of each other, and who intercedes for Israel, and prevails, 7-14. He comes down from the mount, breaks the tables of the law, destroys the idol, and expostulates with Aaron, 15-24. He commissions the Levites, who slay three thousand of the criminals, 25-29. He again intercedes for the nation, 30-35.

AND when the people saw that Moses delayed to come down out of the mount, the people gathered themselves together unto Aaron, and said unto him, Up, make us gods which shall go before us: for as for this Moses, a xxiv. 18. Deut. ix. 9. Matt. xxiv. 43. 2 Pet. iii. 4.

b Gen. xix. 14. xlii. 4. Josh. vii. 13.
c xx. 3-5. Deut. iv. 15-18. Acts vii. 40. xvii. 29. xix. 25.
d xiii. 21. xxxiii. 3. 14, 15.

receive mutual benefit, as the members in the human body: let then each person mind his proper work, and improve his own talents diligently; remembering that whatever wisdom any man possesses, the Lord hath put it into his heart, to the end that he may do all his commandments. Let no one envy, despise, intermeddle with, or depreciate, the gift or work of his brethren: and let each "study to be quiet, and to do his own business;" and to rejoice in the superior endowments of others, without murmuring or disputing, or by ostentation provoking their envy or resentment.—Every useful work is beautiful in its season; but the more immediate exercises of religion belong especially to the sanctification of the sabbath: and as the appointment itself is an external sign of the Lord's goodwill to sinful men; so our love to it, and delight in hallowing it, is a good internal evidence, that he hath begun and will continue to sanctify our souls.—May the Lord therefore have mercy upon us, pardon all our transgressions, take away the heart of stone, and write this and all his laws in our inmost souls: then, though every sweet season of communion with God on earth must come to a close, we shall at length be admitted into his presence in heaven, where "is fulness of joy, and pleasures for evermore."

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXII. V. 1. Just when Moses, Israel's faithful representative, had transacted all their great concerns upon the mount, and was coming down, fully instructed and authorized, to erect the tabernacle, and set up the worship of God among them, a sad interruption took place, through their shameful disobedience.—They seem to have been weary of waiting so long at Sinai; though had they been so disposed, they might have improved the time very profitably, in reflecting and conversing on what they had heard and seen. While some of them "in heart turned back into Egypt," others were in great haste for the corn and wine, the milk and honey, of Canaan. But the grand evil was this; their carnal minds did not relish the spiritual worship of an invisible holy God. Many of them were infected with idolatry, and doubtless had witnessed in Egypt religious feasts suited to a sensual mind; (Note, Ez. xx. 7-9;) and probably they expected the same, in the feast which they were to hold unto the Lord: but in this they were greatly disappointed, and the whole was a very serious, alarming, and painful employment to them.—In the absence of Moses therefore, they formed the project of a religious feast more suited to their taste, which having solemnized, they intended to leave Sinai, and to MOUNT SINAI AND MOUNT HOREB.

EXOD. xxxi. 18 DEUT. ix. 8, 9.

e 7. 11. xiv. 11. ^e the man that brought us up out of the xvi. 3. Hos. xii. land of Egypt, ^f we wot not what is be-13. Mic. vi. 4. come of him.
f Gen. xxi. 26.
xxxix. 8. xlv.
15.

2 And Aaron said unto them, Break off the ^g golden ear-rings which are in the ears of your wives, of your sons, and of your daughters, and bring them unto me.

3 And all the people ^h brake off the golden ear-rings which were in their ears, and brought them unto Aaron.

4 And he received them at their hand, and ⁱ fashioned it with ^k a graving tool,

march, either back into Egypt, or forward to Canaan.—
They, who duly consider in what manner religious festivals are observed among millions of professed Christians, will readily perceive how agreeable such a religion must be to a sensual mind, as consists “in sitting down to eat and drink, “and rising up to play” (6); that is, to dance, and sing, and divert themselves.—In forwarding this project, they pretended that they “knew not what was become of this “Moses,” of whom they spake with the utmost indifference: they seemed to intimate, that the fire had consumed him, or that he had perished with hunger, or perhaps was taken up into heaven.—Indeed they had no reason to think he delayed longer than was necessary; or to doubt that he was safe, and faithfully employed for them, and that he would in due time return. But, supposing he had been dead, surely a decent respect should have been shewn to his memory: and had they then questioned whether Aaron and Hur should succeed him, or some other persons be appointed, there might have been an appearance of reason in it: but to propose making them gods, because Moses was gone, shewed them “mad upon their idols,” and glad of any pretence to return to them! Not much above forty days before, they had heard God himself speak unto them out of the midst of the fire, while they saw no similitude; and he had expressly prohibited them not to form any image of him: that fire, and the cloud attending it, were still before their eyes; all the other wonders were fresh in their memories; they daily ate of the manna from the clouds, and drank of the water from the rock: yet even “in Horeb they forgot God their Saviour,” ascribed their deliverance out of Egypt, first to the man Moses, and then to the idol which they had formed! (4.) Such was this astonishing transaction!

Gods] אֱלֹהִים; the same word as is every where used for the true God; but it is here, and in other places of this narrative, joined with a plural verb, which is not the case when it means the true God. They wanted a visible representation of the object, or objects, of their worship; and perhaps at first desired more images than one: a single idol, however, satisfied them. It is probable, that the pillar of cloud and fire, which had led them, continued stationary on the mount; and they thence concluded that it would no longer go before them, and so they required other guides.

V. 2—6. If the conduct of Israel as a people was surprising, that of “Aaron, the saint of the Lord,” was still after he had made it a molten ^l calf: ¹ Kings xii. 28 and they said, ^m These be thy gods, O ² 2 Kings x.

Israel, ⁿ which brought thee up out of ²⁹ 2 Chr. xi. 15.
the land of Egypt. ^{xiii} 8. Hos. viii.
4, 5. x. 5. xiii. 2.

5 And when ^o Aaron saw it, he built an altar before it, and Aaron ^p made proclamation, and said, To-morrow is ^q a feast to the LORD.

6 And they rose up early on the morrow, and ^r offered burnt-offerings, and brought peace-offerings: and the people ^s sat down to eat and to drink, and rose up to play.

more so. Many conjectures have been made concerning his reasons for acting as he did; but his conduct seems to have been too unreasonable to be either excused, or accounted for: yet the Lord permitted it, to evince by facts, of what man is capable; and to shew that the priesthood was given to Aaron entirely of grace, when he might most justly have been cut off for his transgression; that he might wear his honours the more humbly ever after, as Peter did after denying his Lord; that when the sin-offering of consecration was offered, he might indeed feel his need of the atonement; and that it might appear, that sinful man wanted a High Priest of another and a nobler order.—
The Jews indeed have a tradition that Hur was killed for opposing the project, and that Aaron feared the same fate:
but if so, he would have had a better excuse to make before Moses. (Note, 21—24.) He might indeed be frighted, but he had not so just cause: for, however disposed the people had shewn themselves to rebellion, it is not intimated that they assembled seditiously, or with violence, on this occasion. The demand of the golden ear-rings has been considered, as an attempt to put the people off from their purpose; and as there was much gold in their camp besides this, and such ornaments are reluctantly parted with, it is probable he entertained some hope, that they would not comply with so self-denying and expensive a proposal. But it was a feeble measure, and far from that decision which became him: for they readily and zealously parted with their ornaments, which they had newly acquired as the spoil of Egypt; and he as readily, however he acquired his skill, formed it into the shape of a calf, or ox!—The words rendered, “He fashioned it with a graving “tool, after he had made it a molten calf,” are variously interpreted. ‘The order is inverted. ‘The first cast ‘the calf, then he formed it with a graving tool or scrap‘ing instrument, cutting away the redundancies, and ‘polishing it.—Or, preserving the right order, it may be ‘explained; He framed, or marked out with a graving ‘instrument, the image to be made, namely, that the ‘mold might be fashioned, into which the gold should be ‘poured; and he thence, in this manner, made the molten ‘calf.’ In Pool’s Synopsis.—It is likewise much disputed, what induced Aaron to make the image in this shape.
Some deny that the Egyptians worshipped either an ox, or the image of one, at this early period: but they can only shew, that we have no positive evidence they did, and for the same reason we have no proof they did not; for we t xxx. 24. xxxiii.

 1. Deut. ix. 12
 u 1. 11.
 x Gen. vi. 11, 12.
 Deut. iv. 16.
 xxxii. 5. Judg.
 ii. 19. Hos. ix.
 9.
 y Deut. ix. 16.
 Judg. ii. 17.
 z xx. 3, 4.
 a See on 4.
 b Deut. ix. 13.
 Jer. xlii. 27.
 Hos. vi. 10.
 c xxxiii. 3. 5.
 xxxiv. 9. Deut.
 ix. 6. x. 16. xxxi.
 27. 2 Chr. xxx.
 8. Neh. ix. 17.
 Ps. lxxviii. 8.
 Prov. xxix. 1. Is.
 xlvi. 4. Zech.
 vii. 11, 12. Acts
 vii. 51.
 d Gen. xviii. 32.
 33. xxxii. 26—
 28. Num. xiv.
 19, 20. xvi. 22.
 45—48. Jer. xiv.
 11. xv. 1. Jam
 v. 16.

7 And the LORD said unto Moses, ^aGo, get thee down: for ^athy people, which thou broughtest out of the land of Egypt, have ^acorrupted themselves.

8 They ^bhave turned aside quickly out of the way ^awhich I commanded them: they have made them a molten calf, and have worshipped it, and have sacrificed thereunto, and said, ^aThese be thy gods, O Israel, which have brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

9 And the LORD said unto Moses, ^bI have seen this people, and behold, ^cit is a stiff-necked people.

10 Now therefore ^dlet me alone, that ^emy wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them: and ^fI will make of thee a great nation.

11 And Moses ^gbesought ^athe LORD his God, and said, LORD, ^hwhy doth thy wrath wax hot against thy people, ⁱwhich thou hast brought forth out of the land of Egypt, with great power, and with a mighty hand?

12 Wherefore ^kshould the Egyptians speak and say, For mischief did he bring them out, to slay them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth? ^lTurn from thy fierce wrath, and ^mrepent of this evil against thy people.

have no records so ancient, except the Scriptures, which favour the conclusion that they did. Some indeed imagine, that Aaron took the hint from the cherubim, which they suppose to have had faces as oxen: but, whatever may be decided as to this, they forget that the cherubim, on the merey-seat and tabernacle, were not yet made, or known of except by Moses.—It is therefore probable, that Aaron complied with the wishes of the people, and formed the resemblance of a calf, in conformity to what they had seen in Egypt. (Ez. xx. 8. xxiii. 8.) With this they were mightily pleased; and, though probably but a rude representation of a beast, they stupidly considered it as a very proper similitude of the God, or gods, who brought them out of the land of Egypt! They evidently intended to worship JEHOVAH by it, however ignorant and inconsistent their language might be. But this was infinitely dishonourable to his incomprehensible majesty, and no better than “turning their glory into the similitude of an ox, that eateth grass.” Our surprise, however, at Israel’s and Aaron’s conduct may be somewhat abated, when we consider how great a part of the professing Christian Church hath for ages concurred in, pleaded for, and vindicated similar practices, in as direct opposition to every part of the word of God, as this was to the law which Israel had just heard from mount Sinai; and with no better excuses than Aaron could have pleaded, had not Moses silenced him. But when the word of God does not coincide with our interests, inclinations, and prejudices, the chief discovery of man’s ingenuity is manifested in explaining it away.—When Aaron therefore found, that the people were so well satisfied with his performance, he was induced still further to concur in their designs; and perhaps he vainly hoped by compliance to retain them within some bounds, and by allowing the use of an image, to keep them from directly worshipping other gods. He therefore proclaimed, that on the morrow a feast would be held to JEHOVAH: and the people, with great alacrity, brought burnt-offerings and peace-offerings; (for the use of these was known before;) and having offered sacrifices to the image of the calf, they feasted on the residue of the oblations, and were engaged in mirth and diversion, if not more gross sensuality, when interrupted by the return of Moses.

V. 7—10. The Lord had before given Moses the tables of the law, in order that he might go down from the mount: but at length he urged his departure, in language which implied, that the people had rejected JEHOVAH, as their Deliverer out of Egypt; and thence Moses might conclude that he had rejected them. Considering the short time which had passed, since they heard the law from mount Sinai, and promised obedience, and afterward were warned not to “make to them gods of silver or of gold;” (xx. 23;) it might well be said, they “had turned quickly out of the way:” and though they intended their idol as a representation of an invisible deity, or deities; yet they must have had very confused, and erroneous notions of the divine Unity, when they used the language here ascribed to them. Their conduct therefore formed an additional proof, after all preceding instances of their rebellion, that they were “a stiff-necked people:” that is, stubborn and untractable, like unruly bullocks, upon whose neck the yoke could not be put, without great difficulty.—But, as Moses was preparing to intercede for them, the Lord said to him, “Let me alone;” for should his faithful servant interpose, he could not, as it were, proceed to execute deserved vengeance upon them. This, which seemed to forbid, in reality encouraged the prayer of Moses.—The proposal of exceedingly multiplying his posterity, that the promises made to the patriarchs, which Israel had forfeited, might be entailed on his family, was intended to prove and manifest the sincerity and fervour of his love to his people, and the extent of his disinterestedness.

V. 11—14. Instead of at all mentioning the proposal, which God had made to him, or neglecting to pray for his people, Moses interceded for them with such earnestness, as put him into an agony of mind; for so the word (פָּחַד) seems to signify. He did not, however, attempt to palliate or excuse their sin; but he pleaded the glory of the divine perfections as concerned in the event: for if the Lord should destroy Israel, (of whom he says, “thy people whom thou hast brought out,”) the Egyptians would impeach his justice and goodness. The destruction of the nation could not apparently be reconciled with his promises and oath to Abraham, Isaac, and Israel: and, whatever their sin deserved, surely JEHOVAH would not give occasion to any injurious reflections being cast upon his own

^a Lev. xxvi. 42. ^b Deut. vii. 8. ix. 27. Luke i. 54, 55. ^c Gen. xxii. 16. xxvi. 3, 4. Heb. vi. 13. ^d Gen. xii. 2, 7. xiii. 15, 16. xv. 5. 18. xxvi. 4. xxviii. 13, 14. xxxv. 11, 12. xlviii. 16. ^e 2 Sam. xxiv. 16. 1 Chr. xxi. 15. Ps. cvi. 45. Jer. xviii. 8. xxvi. 13. 19. Joel ii. 13. Jon. iii. 10. iv. 2. ^f xxiv. 18. Deut. ix. 15. ^g See on xvi. 34.—xl. 20. Deut. v. 22. Ps. xix. 7. t Rev. v. 1. ^a xxxi. 18. xxxiv. 1, 4. Deut. ix. 9.—11. x. 1. 2 Cor. iii. 3, 7. Heb. viii. 10. ^x See on xvii. 9. xxiv. 13. ^y 18. Ezra iii. 11.—13. Ps. xlvii. 1. ^z Josh. vi. 5, 10, 16, 20. Judg. xv. 14. 1 Sam. iv. 5, 6. xvii. 20. 52. Job xxxix. 25. Jer. ii. 14. Am. i. 14. ii. 2. ^{*} Heb. weakness. ^a xv. 1. &c. Dan. v. 4, 23.

13^a Remember Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, thy servants, ° to whom thou swarest by thine own self, and saidst unto them, ^p I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven, and all this land that I have spoken of, will I give unto your seed, and they shall inherit it for ever.

14 And the LORD ^q repented of the evil which he thought to do unto his people.

15 ¶ And Moses ^r turned, and went down from the mount, and the two tables of ^s the testimony were in his hand: the tables were ^t written on both their sides; on the one side and on the other were they written.

16 And ^u the tables were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God graven upon the tables.

17 And when ^v Joshua heard the noise of the people as ^w they shouted, he said unto Moses, ^x There is a noise of war in the camp.

18 And he said, It is not the voice of them that shout for mastery, neither is it the voice of them that cry for being overcome: ^y but the noise of them that sing do I hear.

great name. (Note, Deut. xxxii. 26, 27.) This regard to the divine honour was well pleasing to the Lord, who graciously intimated his design of sparing them, as he had before seemed determined upon their destruction; which change, in the external discovery of his purpose, is called “repenting of the evil, which he thought to do to his people.” (Note, Gen. vi. 6, 7.)—Thus Moses did not go down from the mount till mercy was promised; and his example instructs us in the most affecting manner, how to pray, what pleads to urge, and whence to deduce encouragements for persevering in our supplications.

V. 15. On both their sides.] This is differently interpreted. Some think, that the ten commandments were written on only one side of each table, part on the one and part on the other; that so they might close together as a book, when laid in the ark: but others are of opinion that each table was written on both sides.

V. 17. Joshua had waited patiently, during all the forty days, in the place where Moses had left him; below the summit of the mount, at a distance from the people, and out of the way of temptation.

V. 19. Moses’s anger was hot, and he intended to express his abhorrence of Israel’s crime: yet his breaking of the tables of the covenant was no rash sally of passion, as some have imagined; but a significant action, done probably by a divine suggestion, to denote that the covenant was broken; and that the people lay exposed to the severest vengeance of God.

19 And it came to pass as soon as he came nigh unto the camp, that ^b he saw the calf, and ^c the dancing: and Moses’s ^d anger waxed hot, and he cast the tables out of his hands, and ^e brake them beneath the mount.

20 And he ^f took the calf which they had made, and burnt it in the fire, and ground it to powder, and strawed it upon the water, and ^g made the children of Israel drink of it.

21 And Moses said unto Aaron, ^h What did this people unto thee, that thou hast brought so great a sin upon them?

22 And Aaron said, Let not the anger of my lord wax hot: thou ⁱ knowest the people ^j that they are set on mischief.

23 For ^k they said unto me, Make us gods which shall go before us: for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

24 And I said unto them, Whosoever hath any gold, let him break it off. ^l So they gave it me: then I cast it into the fire, and there came out this calf.

V. 20. The people seem to have been overawed by the presence of Moses, and not to have attempted any resistance, while he took away their idol to destroy it.—As it is very difficult to reduce gold to powder, many conjectures have been formed on the manner, in which it was done on this occasion: but the text leads us to consider Moses, as first destroying the form of the idol, by melting it down; and then proceeding to reduce it, by violent friction or filing, to a fine powder. (Marg. Ref.) No doubt this would require much labour; but many might assist him, both of those who had kept clear of this vile idolatry, and of such as were brought to a sense of their guilt; and it is absurd to suppose that it was impossible to be done.—It was proper that the treasure, thus employed in idolatry, should finally perish, as an accursed thing; and that the idol itself should be rendered as contemptible as possible, before its stupid worshippers. By strewing the powder in the stream, which ran perhaps rapidly from the rock, the people would be forced to drink some of it with the water: which intimated, that they must expect to experience the fatal effects of their sin, as bringing a curse upon all their comforts.

V. 21—24. Moses did not enquire of Aaron, what induced him to concur with the people in this detestable idolatry; but in what they had offended him, that he should revenge himself by leading them into so great a wickedness. This most emphatically declares his judgment of Aaron’s conduct, and confutes all the pleas, which t xix. 24. xxxiii.

 l. Deut. ix. 12
 u l. 11.
 x Gen. vi. 11, 12.
 Deut. iv. 16.
 xxxii. 5. Judg.
 ii. 19. Hos. ix.
 9.
 y Deut. ix. 16.
 Judg. ii. 17.
 z xx. 3, 4.
 a See on 4.
 b Deut. ix. 13.
 Jer. xlii. 27.
 Hos. vi. 10.
 c xxxiii. 3, 5.
 xxxiv. 9. Deut.
 ix. 6. x. 16. xxxi.
 27. 2 Chr. xxx.
 8. Neh. ix. 17.
 Pa. lxxviii. 3.
 Prov. xxix. 1, 14.
 xlviii. 4. Zech.
 vii. 11, 12. Acts
 vii. 51.
 d Gen. xviii. 32.
 33. xxxii. 26—
 28. Num. xiv.
 19, 20. xvi. 22.
 45—48. Jer. xiv.
 11, xv. 1. Jam
 v. 16.

7 And the LORD said unto Moses, ¹Go, get thee down: for ^athy people, which thou broughtest out of the land of Egypt, have ²corrupted themselves.

8 They ³have turned aside quickly out of the way ⁴which I commanded them: they have made them a molten calf, and have worshipped it, and have sacrificed thereunto, and said, ^aThese be thy gods, O Israel, which have brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

9 And the LORD said unto Moses, ^bI have seen this people, and behold, ^cit is a stiff-necked people.

10 Now therefore ^dlet me alone,

have no records so ancient, except the Scriptures, which favour the conclusion that they did. Some indeed imagine, that Aaron took the hint from the cherubim, which they suppose to have had faces as oxen: but, whatever may be decided as to this, they forget that the cherubim, on the merey-seat and tabernacle, were not yet made, or known of except by Moses.—It is therefore probable, that Aaron complied with the wishes of the people, and formed the resemblance of a calf, in conformity to what they had seen in Egypt. (Ez. xx. 8. xxiii. 8.) With this they were mightily pleased; and, though probably but a rude representation of a beast, they stupidly considered it as a very proper similitude of the God, or gods, who brought them out of the land of Egypt! They evidently intended to worship JEHOVAH by it, however ignorant and inconsistent their language might be. But this was infinitely dishonourable to his incomprehensible majesty, and no better than “turning their glory into the similitude of an ox, that catch grass.” Our surprise, however, at Israel’s and Aaron’s conduct may be somewhat abated, when we consider how great a part of the professing Christian Church hath for ages concurred in, pleaded for, and vindicated similar practices, in as direct opposition to every part of the word of God, as this was to the law which Israel had just heard from mount Sinai; and with no better excuses than Aaron could have pleaded, had not Moses silenced him. But when the word of God does not coincide with our interests, inclinations, and prejudices, the chief discovery of man’s ingenuity is manifested in explaining it away.—When Aaron therefore found, that the people were so well satisfied with his performance, he was induced still further to concur in their designs; and perhaps he vainly hoped by compliance to retain them within some bounds, and by allowing the use of an image, to keep them from directly worshipping other gods. He therefore proclaimed, that on the morrow a feast would be held to JEHOVAH: and the people, with great alacrity, brought burnt-offerings and peace-offerings; (for the use of these was known before;) and having offered sacrifices to the image of the calf, they feasted on the residue of the oblations, and were engaged in mirth and diversion, if not more gross sensuality, when interrupted by the return of Moses.

that ^emy wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them: and ^fI will make of thee a great nation.

11 And Moses ^gbesought ^hthe LORD his God, and said, LORD, ⁱwhy doth thy wrath wax hot against thy people, ^jwhich thou hast brought forth out of the land of Egypt, with great power, and with a mighty hand?

12 Wherefore ^kshould the Egyptians speak and say, For mischief did he bring them out, to slay them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth? ^lTurn from thy fierce wrath, and ^mrepent of this evil against thy people.

e 11. 19. xxii. 21
 f Num. xiv. 12
 Deut. ix. 14.
 g Deut. ix. 18—20
 h Num. xvi. 22.
 i Heb. the face of the LORD
 j Num. xi. 1. xvi. 22. Pa. lxxiv. 1, 2. 14. lxxii. 17. Jer. xii. 1, 2.
 k Num. xiv. 13—15. Deut. ix. 28. xxxii. 27. Josh. vii. 9. Pa. lxxiv. 18. lxxix. 9, 10. Ez. xx. 9, 14, 22
 l Deut. xiii. 17. Josh. vii. 25. Ezra x. 14. Pa. lxxviii. 38.
 m 14. Gen. vi. 6. Deut. xxxii. 36. Pa. xc. 13. cvi. 45. Am. vii. 3. 6. Jon. iii. 9. Zech. viii. 14.

V. 7—10. The Lord had before given Moses the tables of the law, in order that he might go down from the mount: but at length he urged his departure, in language which implied, that the people had rejected JEHOVAH, as their Deliverer out of Egypt; and thence Moses might conclude that he had rejected them. Considering the short time which had passed, since they heard the law from mount Sinai, and promised obedience, and afterward were warned not to “make to them gods of silver or of gold;” (xx. 23;) it might well be said, they “had turned quickly out of the way:” and though they intended their idol as a representation of an invisible deity, or deities; yet they must have had very confused, and erroneous notions of the divine Unity, when they used the language here ascribed to them. Their conduct therefore formed an additional proof, after all preceding instances of their rebellion, that they were “a stiff-necked people:” that is, stubborn and untractable, like unruly bullocks, upon whose neck the yoke could not be put, without great difficulty.—But, as Moses was preparing to intercede for them, the Lord said to him, “Let me alone;” for should his faithful servant interpose, he could not, as it were, proceed to execute deserved vengeance upon them. This, which seemed to forbid, in reality encouraged the prayer of Moses.—The proposal of exceedingly multiplying his posterity, that the promises made to the patriarchs, which Israel had forfeited, might be entailed on his family, was intended to prove and manifest the sincerity and fervour of his love to his people, and the extent of his disinterestedness.

V. 11—14. Instead of at all mentioning the proposal, which God had made to him, or neglecting to pray for his people, Moses interceded for them with such earnestness, as put him into an agony of mind; for so the word (פָּנָה) seems to signify. He did not, however, attempt to palliate or excuse their sin; but he pleaded the glory of the divine perfections as concerned in the event: for if the Lord should destroy Israel, (of whom he says, “thy people whom thou hast brought out,”) the Egyptians would impeach his justice and goodness. The destruction of the nation could not apparently be reconciled with his promises and oath to Abraham, Isaac, and Israel: and, whatever their sin deserved, surely JEHOVAH would not give occasion to any injurious reflections being cast upon his own

^a Lev. xxvi. 42. ^b Deut. vii. 8. ^c Luke i. 54, 55.
^d Gen. xxii. 16. ^e xxvi. 3, 4. Heb. vi. 13.
^f Gen. xii. 2. 7. ^g xiii. 15, 16. ^h xv. 5. ⁱ 18. ^j xxvi. 4. ^k xxviii. 13. ^l 14. ^m xxxv. 11. ⁿ :2. ^o xviii. 16.

13^a Remember Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, thy servants, ° to whom thou swarest by thine own self, and saidst unto them, ^p I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven, and all this land that I have spoken of, will I give unto your seed, and they shall inherit it for ever.

^q 2 Sam xxiv. 16. ^r 1 Chr. xxi. 15. ^s Ps. cvi. 45. ^t Jer xxviii. 8. ^u xxvi. 13. ^v 19. ^w Joel ii. 13. ^x Jon. iii. 10. ^y iv. 2. ^z xxiv. 18. ^{aa} Deut ix. 15.

14 And the LORD ^a repented of the evil which he thought to do unto his people.

^b ¶ And Moses ^c turned, and went down from the mount, and the two tables of ^d the testimony were in his hand: the tables were ^e written on both their sides; on the one side and on the other were they written.

^f 18. ^g xxvii. 1. ^h 4. ⁱ Deut. ix. 9. ^j —11. ^k x. 1. ^l 2 Cor. iii. 3. ^m 7. ⁿ Heb. viii. 10.

16 And ^a the tables were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God graven upon the tables.

^x See on xvii. 9. ^y xxiv. 13.

17 And when ^a Joshua heard the noise of the people as ^b they shouted, he said unto Moses, ^c There is a noise of war in the camp.

^d 18. ^e xxvii. 1. ^f 4. ^g Deut. ix. 9. ^h —11. ⁱ x. 1. ^j 2 Cor. iii. 3. ^k 7. ^l Heb. viii. 10.

18 And he said, It is not the voice of them that shout for mastery, neither is it the voice of them that cry for being overcome: ^a but the noise of them that sing do I hear.

^a Heb. weakness. ^b xv. 1. ^c &c. Dan. v. 4. 23.

19 And it came to pass as soon as he came nigh unto the camp, that ^a he saw the calf, and ^b the dancing: and Moses's ^c anger waxed hot, and he cast the tables out of his hands, and ^d brake them beneath the mount.

20 And he ^a took the calf which they had made, and burnt it in the fire, and ground it to powder, and strawed it upon the water, and ^b made the children of Israel drink of it.

21 And Moses said unto Aaron, ^a What did this people unto thee, that thou hast brought so great a sin upon them?

22 And Aaron said, Let not the anger of my lord wax hot: thou ^a knowest the people ^b that they are set on mischief.

23 For ^a they said unto me, Make us gods which shall go before us: for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

24 And I said unto them, Whosoever hath any gold, let him break it off. ^a So they gave it me: then I cast it into the fire, and there came out this calf.

^b 4—6. ^c Deut. ix. 16. ^d xv. 20. ^e 2 Sam. vi. 14. ^f 1 Sam. v. 15. ^g 11. ^h Num. xii. 3. ⁱ Matt. v. 22. ^j Mark iii. 5. ^k x. 14. ^l Eph. iv. 26. ^m Deut. ix. 17. ⁿ xxvii. 26. ^o Jer. xxxi. 32. ^p Zech. xi. 10. ^q 11. ^r 14. ^s Deut. vii. 5. ^t 25. ^u ix. 21. ^v 2 Kings xxiii. 6. ^w 15. ^x Prov. i. 31. ^y xiv. 14. ^z Gen. xx. 9. ^{aa} xxvii. 10. ^{ab} Deut. xiii. 6—8. ^{ac} 1 Sam. xxvi. 19. ^{ad} 1 Kings xiv. 16. ^{ae} xvi. 22. ^{af} 2 Kings xxi. 9—11. ^{ag} xiv. 11. ^{ah} xv. 24. ^{ai} xvi. 2—4. ^{aj} 20. ^{ak} 28. ^{al} xxvii. 2—4. ^{am} Deut. ix. 7. ^{an} 24. ^{ao} 1 Sam. xv. 24. ^{ap} Ps. xxxvii. 4. ^{aq} Prov. iv. 16. ^{ar} See on 1—4. 8. ^{as} 4. Gen. iii. 12, 13. ^{at} Luke x. 29. ^{au} Rom. iii. 10.

great name. (Note, Deut. xxxii. 26, 27.) This regard to the divine honour was well pleasing to the Lord, who graciously intimated his design of sparing them, as he had before seemed determined upon their destruction; which change, in the external discovery of his purpose, is called "repenting of the evil, which he thought to do to his people." (Note, Gen. vi. 6, 7.)—Thus Moses did not go down from the mount till mercy was promised; and his example instructs us in the most affecting manner, how to pray, what pleases to urge, and whence to deduce encouragements for persevering in our supplications.

V. 15. On both their sides.] This is differently interpreted. Some think, that the ten commandments were written on only one side of each table, part on the one and part on the other; that so they might close together as a book, when laid in the ark: but others are of opinion that each table was written on both sides.

V. 17. Joshua had waited patiently, during all the forty days, in the place where Moses had left him; below the summit of the mount, at a distance from the people, and out of the way of temptation.

V. 19. Moses's anger was hot, and he intended to express his abhorrence of Israel's crime: yet his breaking of the tables of the covenant was no rash sally of passion, as some have imagined; but a significant action, done probably by a divine suggestion, to denote that the covenant was broken; and that the people lay exposed to the severest vengeance of God.

V. 20. The people seem to have been overawed by the presence of Moses, and not to have attempted any resistance, while he took away their idol to destroy it.—As it is very difficult to reduce gold to powder, many conjectures have been formed on the manner, in which it was done on this occasion: but the text leads us to consider Moses, as first destroying the form of the idol, by melting it down; and then proceeding to reduce it, by violent friction or filing, to a fine powder. (Marg. Ref.) No doubt this would require much labour; but many might assist him, both of those who had kept clear of this vile idolatry, and of such as were brought to a sense of their guilt; and it is absurd to suppose that it was impossible to be done.—It was proper that the treasure, thus employed in idolatry, should finally perish, as an accursed thing; and that the idol itself should be rendered as contemptible as possible, before its stupid worshippers. By strewing the powder in the stream, which ran perhaps rapidly from the rock, the people would be forced to drink some of it with the water: which intimated, that they must expect to experience the fatal effects of their sin, as bringing a curse upon all their comforts.

V. 21—24. Moses did not enquire of Aaron, what induced him to concur with the people in this detestable idolatry; but in what they had offended him, that he should revenge himself by leading them into so great a wickedness. This most emphatically declares his judgment of Aaron's conduct, and confutes all the pleas, which

25 And when Moses saw that the people were ^m naked; (for ^a Aaron had made them naked unto their ^o shame, amongst ^a their enemies;)

26 Then Moses stood in the gate of the camp, and said, ^p Who is on the LORD's side? let him come unto me. And all the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him.

27 And he said unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Put every man his sword by his side, and go in and out, from gate to gate, throughout the camp, and ^q slay every man his brother, and every man his companion, and every man his neighbour.

28 And the children of Levi did according to the word of Moses: and

' there fell of the people that day about three thousand men.

29 ^r For ^a Moses had said, ^c Consecrate yourselves to-day to the LORD, even every man upon his son, and upon his brother, that he may bestow upon you a blessing this day.

30 And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses said unto the people, ^t Ye have sinned a great sin: and now I will go up unto the LORD; ^u peradventure I shall make an ^x atonement for your sin.

31 And Moses ^v returned unto the LORD, and said, Oh, this people have ^y sinned a great sin, and have ^z made them gods of gold.

Ezra ix. 6, 7. 15. Neh. ix. 33. Dan. ix. 5. 8. 11

^m xxxiii. 4—6. Gen. iii. 10. Hos. li. 3. Rev. iii. 17, 18. xvi. 15.
ⁿ Deut. ix. 20. 2 Chr. xxviii. 19.
^o Ez. xvi. 63. Dan. xii. 2 Rom. vi. 21.
^p Heb. those that rose up against them.
^q Josh. v. 13. 2 Sam. xx. 11. 2 Kings ix. 32. Matt. xii. 30.

^r 26. 29 Num. xxv. 5. 7—12. Deut. xxxiii. 8. 9. Luke xiv. 26. 2 Cor. v. 16.

Num. xvi. 32—35. 4. 1 Cor. x. 8. Heb. ii. 2, 3.
^r Or, And Moses said, Consecrate yourselves to-day to the LORD; because every man hath been against his son and against his brother, &c.
^s Num. xxv. 11—13. Deut. xiii. 6. 18—22. Zech. xiii. 3. Matt. x. 37.
^t Heb. Fill your hands.
^u 31. 1 Sam. ii. 17. xii. 20. 2 Sam. xii. 9. 2 Kings xvii. 21. Luke vii. 47.
^v 2 Sam. xvi. 12. Am. v. 15. Jon. iii. 9. 2 Tim. ii. 25.
^w 32. Num. xvi. 47. xxv. 13. Rom. ix. 3. Gal. iii. 13. xxiv. 28. Deut. ix. 18, 19.
^x See on 30—31. a. xx. 4. 23.

have been invented to palliate it. Indeed, no wise man ever made a more unmeaning and foolish excuse, than Aaron did. We should never have supposed "that he could speak well," were we to judge of his eloquence by this specimen. If the people were bent upon mischief, Aaron, the saint and servant of the Lord, who was entrusted with authority over Israel, should have ventured and suffered all extremities in opposing their mad design: but while he was as pliant as they could wish, and very active in the business, he charged all the blame on others, and spake as if the golden calf had been produced almost by accident, without his concurrence, and beyond his expectation; and he seemed only intent to deprecate the anger of Moses, not that of God!—No wonder that "the LORD was angry with him also to have destroyed him:" but Moses prayed for him too; (Deut. ix. 20;) and we may be sure that he was ever after deeply humbled, and greatly ashamed of his conduct.

V. 25. The sin of the people had despoiled them of all claim to the Lord's protection, and had left them exposed without excuse to his righteous vengeance, and the scorn and rage of their enemies. They had stripped themselves of part of their ornaments to make the golden calf; and they were ordered to lay aside the rest in a way of humiliation, on this shameful occasion. (Note, xxxiii. 4—6.) Perhaps also, in their dancing and sensual festivity, many of them had uncovered themselves in an indecent and shameful manner; as well as exposed themselves to the danger of being assaulted, and ignominiously scattered by their enemies.—Idolatrous feasts have scarcely ever, in any age or nation, been free from shameful indecencies.

V. 26—29. The Levites with one consent, having come promptly at the call of Moses, as decidedly "on the Lord's side," in this general defection, were commissioned to slay the ringleaders in this wickedness, without respect to friendship, relation, or any other social tie: for idolatry was a crime to be punished by their magistrates. Yet it seems none were executed, but those who openly and boldly stood forth as disposed to vindicate their conduct: while those who retired as ashamed were spared. This commission, being faithfully executed, brought a great blessing upon the tribe; and was a preparation for its being appointed to the service of the sanctuary, which was a very honourable and advantageous distinction. For, however men might blame them, they made it manifest, that though doubtless some individuals were guilty, as the words, "Every man upon his son, and upon his brother," imply; (Note, Deut. xxxiii. 9;) yet, as a tribe, they had been peculiarly free from this national idolatry, notwithstanding Aaron had set them so bad an example; and that they were valiant for God and for his honour. And as they were seconded by the divine power, which confounded and intimidated the transgressors, no opposition was made to the execution. It does not however appear, that any from the other tribes joined the Levites; and it is thence supposed, that all the rest had concurred in the idolatry.

V. 30—33. It may be supposed, that Moses expatiated before the people on the exceeding heinousness, and the many aggravations, of their crime; and attempted to bring them to humble themselves in deep repentance on account of it, while he went to intercede in their behalf before God. His words were suited to preserve them in a due medium between desponding fear and presumptuous confidence: "Peradventure I shall make an atonement for your sin." Perhaps he expected that a sin-offering for the nation might be appointed, and that through this typical atonement their crime might be pardoned: or he referred to the proposal which he was about to make. His words however imply, that without an atonement there could be no forgiveness; and that they could make no atonement for themselves. He had received some intimation from the Lord, that he would spare the nation, before he went down from the mount; yet he was so affected by a nearer view of the guilt which they had contracted, that he seems almost to have questioned, whether this could consist with the honour of God. When therefore he went to meet him, (probably not on the top of the mount Sinai, but at a distance from the camp,) he mournfully deplored the great sin of his people; and pleaded for them in an imperfect sentence, implying rather an ardent desire, than a direct request. The meaning of his vehement language has been much disputed: and some extend, that he ex-

^b Num. xiv. 19. ^c 32 Yet now, ^b if thou wilt forgive their sin—; and if not, ^c blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book which thou hast written.

^d 10. Deut. ix. 14. ^e 33 And the LORD said unto Moses, Whosoever hath ^d sinned against me, him will I blot out of ^e my book.

^f 11. Ps. cx. 3. 14. ^g 34 Therefore now go, lead the people unto the place of which I have spoken unto thee: behold, ^f mine angel shall go before thee: nevertheless, in ^g the day when I visit, I will visit their sin upon them.

^h 35 And the LORD plagued the people, because ^h they made the calf, which Aaron made.

pressed his willingness to be blotted out of the book of life, and finally to perish, provided this might be accepted as an atonement for the sin of his people; and they put the same construction on the words used by St. Paul, on a somewhat similar occasion. (Note, Rom. ix. 1—3.) But this interpretation seems inadmissible; for the spiritual law of God requires us to “love our neighbour as ourselves,” and not more than ourselves, which surely is implied, in being willing to be for ever miserable, either for their temporal or eternal salvation. Even Christ, of whom Moses is supposed to be a type in this proposal, was only willing for our salvation to die a temporal death, with every possible circumstance of inward and outward suffering; not to be eternally miserable: and the apostle says, “We ought to lay down our lives for the brethren;” not that we ought to devote our souls to destruction for them.—No doubt, zeal for the honour of God glowed in the heart of Moses, when he thus expressed himself; and perhaps he could not conceive, how that could be secured and manifested, either by destroying or sparing his people. But it should be remembered, that not only final misery, but final desperate enmity to God, is implied in the proposal, if thus understood; and it is wonderful how any man could ever think, that a willingness to be eternally wicked, and a desperate hater of God, can spring from love to him, and be a proper expression of zeal for his glory!—If therefore Moses referred to this proposal, when he said, “Peradventure I shall make an atonement for your sin;” the words may be thus paraphrased; ‘O Lord, instead of destroying Israel as a sacrifice to thy justice, and making of me a great nation; let me be the sacrifice, and spare them: and if it may not consist with thy glory to spare them otherwise, and my death may suffice for that purpose, exclude me from Canaan, and take me out of life, in any way which thou seest good, that my people may be preserved and thy name glorified.’—Or perhaps he only meant to say, ‘If my people must be destroyed, cut me off also, and let me not survive or witness their destruction.’—The expression, “Blot me out of thy book;” is an allusion to the affairs of men, which is used in various senses in the Scriptures. (Marg. Ref. c.)—Whatever Moses meant by the request, the Lord did not accede to it, at least on that occasion; but only answered, that he would “blot those who had sinned out of his book;” that is, he would punish the guilty, not the innocent: yet, when Moses afterwards offended God, and was excluded from Canaan while his people inherited it, he would no doubt remember this request.

the people to Canaan, and in merely promising that his angel should go before him, intimated that he would not immediately pour out his vengeance upon them, to destroy them; but at the same time he declared, that their national violation of the covenant would be remembered against them, when their other crimes should induce him to visit them in anger. The Jews have to this day a saying current among them to this effect, ‘That all the calamities, which have ever since befallen the nation, have in them a measure of the Lord’s indignation for the sin of the golden calf.’—It is not said, in what manner he plagued the people at this time; but in some way they sensibly felt the effects of his displeasure: and it is particularly to be noticed, that however Aaron endeavoured to exculpate himself, and whatever things have since been urged in his excuse; yet God expressly mentioned him, as a principal agent in this heinous transgression of Israel.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—14.

It is not in general advisable for magistrates, ministers, or heads of families, to be long absent from their respective charges; and if they have no good reason for such absence they will in great measure be answerable for all the consequences.—They who are so soon weary of waiting upon God, as to be eager to return to their worldly interests and pleasures, have evidently profited very little by instruction: and as the people rushed into wickedness, because they did not expect the return of Moses; so unbelief, as to a future judgment, lies at the root of the ungodliness of vast multitudes. (Matt. xxiv. 48—51. 2 Pet. iii. 4.)—High affections, urgent terrors, confident professions, and transient comforts, are not sufficient evidences of true conversion; for they frequently go off, and leave the heart more hard, and the conscience more callous, than before: nor can any external means, mercies, or judgments, change the heart, or for any long time win or awe men even into exterior good behaviour.—The servants of God should not expect much gratitude or respect from those, who ungratefully and contemptuously rebel against him: and after being favoured with sweet fellowship with him, they must often return to witness, to mourn over, and to bear testimony against, the wickedness even of those among whom they have laboured, and for whom they have poured out their souls in prayer.—No carnal heart can long endure the humbling truths, the holy precepts, and the spiritual worship of God: and they who hate his glorious perfections, must dislike his image in his faithful people. But a god, a priest, a worship, a doctrine, and a sacrifice, suited to a carnal mind, will always meet with abundance of devotees: nay, the very gospel itself may be sophisticated, so as to suit their taste; its hearers, having

If thou wilt, &c. (32) Εἰ μὲν ἀφεῖς αὐτοῖς τὴν ἁμαρτίαν, ἀφεῖς, εἰ δὲ μὴ, κ. τ. λ. Sept.—‘If thou wilt forgive them their sin, forgive; but if not, &c.’ Comp. Luke xiii. 9. Gr.

V. 34, 35. The Lord, in commanding Moses to lead

CHAP. XXXIII.

The Lord orders Moses to lead the people to Canaan, under the conduct of an angel, refusing himself to go with them, 1—3. The people express sorrow and humiliation, 4—6. Moses removes the tabernacle out of the camp; and the Lord there displays his glory, and communes with Moses, while the people worship at their tent-doors, 7—11. Moses prevails with the Lord to accompany them, and desires to behold his glory, 12—23.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, ^a Depart, ^b and go up hence, thou and the people which ^b thou hast brought up out of the land of Egypt, unto ^c the land which I swore unto Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, saying, ^d Unto thy seed will I give it: ^e 2 And I will send ^e an angel before thee; and I will drive out ^f the Ca-offered their sacrifice, “will sit down to eat and drink, and “rise up to play;” and while they can render selfishness, self-gratification, and dissipation, consistent with religion, by their views of Christianity, they will cry them up as loudly and zealously, as Israel did the golden calf, and call the whole “a feast unto the LORD!” Yea, their example, influence, persuasion, and discourses, will draw in some ill-judging, compliant Aarons, to sanction and give credit to this motley religion; though the whole be as contrary to that of Christ, as “the works of the flesh are to the fruits of the Spirit!” We have the more need to be upon our guard against such delusions, when we consider that “the heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked;” and that Satan can easily blind the understanding, pervert the judgment, and mislead the conscience of the best of men, if left to themselves. Soon do we, when in this case, forget the terrors of mount Sinai, and the more affecting scenes which Gethsemane and Golgotha exhibit, yea, all our sweet experience of the love of Christ: while some golden or gilded idol usurps his throne and his worship; and we are easily induced to disgrace his gospel, and gratify his enemies.—Well is it for us, that the “Prophet like unto Moses,” but infinitely more powerful and merciful, once veiled his majesty, made atonement for our souls, and interested the glory of the Father in our salvation, and now effectually intercedes in our behalf; else we should in a moment be consumed by his hot displeasure.

V. 15—35.

While we rejoice in the intercession and grace of Christ, we should recollect, that the law is now written in the hearts of the true Israel, who love and obey its precepts, and deeply repent whenever they break them; and we should enquire whether we have this good evidence, that our sins are pardoned, and that the everlasting covenant is ratified with us; for otherwise sin hath “made us naked “to our shame,” and hath left us without protection in the hands of our enemies, yea, exposed us to the wrath of God himself.—However sinners may now rejoice in iniquity, when Christ returns to judgment, the stoutest hearts will fail, and their mirth will be turned into “weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth.” Then every vain excuse will be silenced; every one’s sin will find him out; consent in wickedness will be turned into mutual recriminations; and the tempters and the tempted will be involved in one common, though not equal, condemnation. Let us now therefore cast ourselves humbly on the divine mercy, thankfully accept of the chastisement of our sins, and earnestly seek deliverance from the wrath to come; and, as a pledge of it, deliverance from the power and love of sin in this world.—Of all the crimes which we commit, none are so injurious to man, as those which tempt or encourage others to sin: and if we would shew ourselves decidedly on the Lord’s part in this rebellious world, we must not shrink from any service, however difficult, dangerous, or contrary to our natural feelings; nor must we in such a case “know any man according to the flesh.” Yet we have a cause for thankfulness, that our testimony against sin, and our service for God, are not now of that nature, which were frequently required in these ancient times. But though his judgments are, under the Christian dispensation, more spiritual, let presumptuous sinners remember, that they will at length be on that very account the more dreadful.—Our abhorrence of sin, and indignation against it, are never too strong, if we be able, in the midst of our hot displeasure, to pray earnestly for sinners, and labour disinterestedly to do them good: and as the glory of God may be pleaded with him as a good argument, why he should not destroy his people; may it not be also pleaded with them as a cogent argument why they should not sin against him, and cause his holy name and religion to be blasphemed?—He will surely honour those, who are preserved from prevailing sins, and who boldly protest against them: and retirement and communion with him are happy means of keeping us out of the way of temptation.—Yet, if we have been thus preserved, we must give God the glory, and become supplicants in behalf of others; for “the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth” sometimes to the saving of a nation. But alas! the most zealous may often be ashamed, when they compare the assiduity, liberality, and earnestness of idolaters, and of the idolatrous devotees of worldly interests, pleasures, and preferences, with their own supineness, lukewarmness, and want of generosity in the service of God.

NOTES.

CHAP. XXXIII. V. 1, 2. Moses had pleaded the promise and oath of God to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; and interested his glory in preserving Israel, and putting them in possession of Canaan: therefore he was commanded to lead them directly thither, without any mention of erecting the tabernacle, or establishing the worship of JEHOVAH among them. As if he had said, ‘Let them have the land flowing with milk and honey; and an angel shall go before them, and put them in possession of it: but let them have it without any special blessing, or further religious advantages, to distinguish them from the nations around them.’—It is observable, that as Moses, when he had seen their wickedness, did not call them the Lord’s people, but said, “Oh, this people;” (xxxii. 31;) so the g xlii. l. Lev. xx. 24. Num. xlii. 27. xiv. 8. xvi. 13. Josh. v. 6. Jer. xl. 5.

 h 15—17. xxvii. 10. 14. Num. xiv. 12. Deut. xxxii. 26, 27. 1 Sam. ii. 30. Jer. xviii. 7—10. Ez. iii. 18, 19. xxxiii. 13—16. Jon. iii. 4. 10.
 i xxxii. 9. Deut. ix. 6—13. Ps. lxxviii. 8. Acts vii. 51.
 k xxiii. 21. Num. xvi. 45. Am. iii. 13, 14.
 l Num. xiv. 39. Hos. vii. 14. Zech. vii. 3. 5.
 m Lev. x. 6. 28am. xix. 24. 1 Kings xxi. 27. 2 Kings xix. 1. Ezra ix. 3. Esth. iv. 1—4. Job i. 20. ii. 12. 1s. xxxii. 11. Ez. xxiv. 17. 23. xxxvi. 16. Jon. iii. 6.
 n Num. xvi. 21. 45. Job xxxiv. 20. Ps. lxxiii. 19. Lam. iv. 6.
 o 1s. xxii. 12.
 p Gen. xviii. 21. xxii. 12. Deut. viii. 2. Ps. cxxxix. 23.
 q 4. xxxii. 3. Jer. ii. 19.

naanite, the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite :

3 Unto ^ga land flowing with milk and honey: ^hfor I will not go up in the midst of thee, for thou ⁱart ^ja stiff-necked people; ^klest I consume thee in the way.

4 And when the people heard these evil tidings ^lthey mourned: ^mand no man did put on him his ornaments.

5 For the LORD had said unto Moses, Say unto the children of Israel, Ye ⁿare a stiff-necked people: I will come up into the midst of thee ^oin a moment, and consume thee: therefore now ^pput off thy ornaments from thee, that I may know what to do unto thee.

6 And the children of Israel ^qstripped themselves of their ornaments, by the mount Horeb.

7 And Moses took the tabernacle, and pitched it without the camp, ^rafar off from the camp, and called it ^sthe Tabernacle of the congregation. And it came to pass, ^tthat every one which ^usought the LORD, ^vwent out unto the tabernacle of the congregation which ^wwas without the camp.

8 And it came to pass, when Moses went out unto the tabernacle, ^xthat all the people rose up, ^yand stood every man ^zat his tent-door, and looked after Moses, until he was gone into the tabernacle.

9 And it came to pass, as Moses entered into the tabernacle, the ^{aa}cloudy pillar descended, and stood at the door of the tabernacle, and ^{ab}the LORD ^{ac}talked with Moses.

10 And all the people saw the cloudy pillar stand ^{ad}at the tabernacle-door:

r Ps. x. 1. xxxv. 22. Prov. xv. 20. 1s. lix. 2. Hos. ix. 12.
 s See on xxxix. 42, 49.
 t Deut. iv. 29. 2 Sam. xxi. 1. Ps. xxvii. 8. 1s. lv. 6, 7. Matt. vii. 7, 8.
 u Heb. xliii. 11—13.
 x Num. xvi. 27.
 y See on xiii. 21. 22.—Ps. xcix. 7.
 z 11. xxv. 22. xxxi. 18. xxxiv. 3. 9. Gen. xvii. 22. xviii. 23. Num. xi. 17. Ez. iii. 22.

Lord calls them, "the people whom thou hast brought up out of Egypt," as though he disdained to have any more to do with them: but Moses, having thus far prevailed, was encouraged still further to urge his intercession.

V. 3. I will not, &c.] Such declarations rather shew, what God justly might do, what it would become him to do, and what he would do, were it not for some intervening consideration, than his irreversible purpose; and they always imply a reserved exception, in case the party offending be truly penitent. The Lord therefore expressed himself, as if he would not have a tabernacle, or dwelling place, among the people, or in any way manifest his special presence and glory in the midst of them; seeing that they were disposed to treat him with such insufferable contempt, that these favours would only serve to increase their guilt, and to provoke his jealousy to their destruction.

V. 4—6. The people had parted with some of their ornaments to make the golden calf; yet doubtless they had generally arrayed themselves in festive garments to worship the idol; but they laid the whole aside, when they heard of the Lord's hot displeasure against them, and no more attempted to resume them. For the Lord had intimated an intention of destroying them in a moment; yet at the same time he had ordered them to assume the habit of mourners or penitents, while he, as it were, deliberated how to act towards them. This implied a design of mercy, provided they shewed signs of repentance; and as they complied without hesitation, and seemed more grieved because the Lord refused to go with them, than on account of the terrible execution recorded in the foregoing chapter, it may be supposed that several of them were truly humbled; and the others, by an external humiliation, gave glory to God, which made way for him honourably to avert the national judgment. (Note, 1 Kings xxi. 27—29.)—The words (בְּהַר הֹרֵב) rendered "by the mount Horeb," seem to mean, at a distance from the holy mount; which was another token of humiliation.

V. 7. The tabernacle, here mentioned, seems to have been a tent that Moses had prepared, in which he administered justice, and answered the enquiries of those who applied to him. It is also probable that before the Tabernacle was erected, as prescribed on the mount, the people assembled here to worship, and the pillar of fire and cloud appeared on the top of it. We may suppose that Moses did not inform the people, how far he had succeeded in making up the breach; as it was his purpose to bring them to repentance: and, in removing this tent to a distance from the camp, no doubt by divine direction, he gave them another indication of the Lord's heavy displeasure, who, as it were, refused to dwell any longer among them.—On this occasion he called it "The Tabernacle of the congregation," or of meeting (אֶהְיֶה מִתְּוֹכָם); that is, the place where the Lord met his people; the name given to the sanctuary afterwards erected. But the Israelites in general were not worthy of being thus honoured and favoured: and if any were desirous of seeking God and humbling themselves before him, or of offering sacrifice to him, they were required to follow the tabernacle out of the camp.

V. 8—11. When Moses left the camp, and went to the tabernacle now pitched at a distance, the people in general came out to see what the event would be, and kept their eyes on him till he had entered the tabernacle. It is probable, that after the making of the golden calf, the cloudy pillar had disappeared; but now it again descended, and rested at the door of the tabernacle. This re-appearance of it, not over the camp, but at a distance, where Moses was, ratified all that he had done; and the people were so impressed by it, that they prostrated themselves in solemn worship, at the door of their tents, before the symbol of the divine presence.—In the mean while,

iv. 31. 1 Kings viii. 14, 22. Luke xviii. 13. and all the people rose up and ^a worshipped, every man in his tent-door.

b J. Gen. xxiii. 30. Num. xii. 8. Deut. v. 4. xxxiv. 10. 11 And the LORD ^b spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto ^c his friend. And he turned again into the camp; but ^d his servant Joshua, the son of Nun, a young man, departed not out of the tabernacle.

c 2 Chr. xx. 7. Job xvi. 21. Is. xlii. 8. John iii. 29. xi. 11. xv. 14, 15. Jam. ii. 23. d xvii. 9. xxiv. 13. xxii. 17. 12 ¶ And Moses said unto the LORD, See, ^e thou sayest unto me, Bring up this people: and thou hast not let me know whom thou wilt send with me. Yet thou hast said, ^f I know thee by name, and thou hast also found grace in my sight.

g See on 17.—xxxiv. 9. h Ps. xxv. 4. xxvii. 11. lxxxxvi. 11. cxix. 33. Cant. i. 7, 8. Is. xxx. 21. i 18. John xvii. 3. Eph. i. 17. Gal. i. 10. 2 Pet. iii. 18. l xxxii. 7. Deut. ix. 28. 29. Is. lxviii. 17. 19. Joel. ii. 17. Rom. xi. 28. k xliii. 21. xl. 34.—28. Josh. i. 5. Is. lxviii. 9. Matt. xviii. 20. 13 Now therefore, I pray thee, ^s if I have found grace in thy sight, ^h shew me now thy way, ^l that I may know thee, that I may find grace in thy sight: and ^j consider that this nation is thy people.

14 And he said, ^k My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest.

15 And he said unto him, ^m If thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence.

16 For wherein shall it be known here, that I and thy people have found grace in thy sight? Is it not ⁿ in that thou goest with us? So shall we be ^o separated, I and thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth.

17 And the LORD said unto Moses, ^p I will do this thing also that thou hast spoken: for ^q thou hast found grace in my sight, and I know thee by name.

18 And he said, I beseech thee, ^r shew me thy glory.

19 And he said, I will make ^s all my goodness pass before thee, and I will ^t proclaim the name of the LORD before thee; and will ^u be gracious to

1 Deut. li. 20. Josh. xxi. 49. xxv. 4. xxvii. 1. Ps. xcv. 11. Jer. vi. 16. Matt. xii. 28. Heb. iv. 8, 9. m 3. xxxiv. 9.

n Num. xiv. 14. Matt. i. 23. o xiii. 22. xix. 5, 6. xxxiv. 10. Num. xxiii. 9. Deut. iv. 7, 34. 2 Sam. vii. 23. 1 Kings viii. 53. Ps. cxlvii. 20. 2 Cor. vi. 17.

p Gen. xviii. 32. xix. 21. Is. lxxv. 24. John xvi. 23. Jam. v. 16. 1 John v. 14, 15.

q 12. Gen. vi. 8. xix. 19, 21. 20. Ps. iv. 6. John i. 18. 2 Cor. iii. 18. iv. 6. 1 Tim. vi. 16. Tit. ii. 13. Rev. xxi. 23.

r Neh. ix. 25. Ps. xxv. 13. Marg. lxx. 4. Jer. xxxi. 12, 14. Zech. ix. 17. Rom. ii. 4. Eph. i. 6—8. See on iii. 13—15. xxxiv. 5—7.—Is. vii. 14. ix. 6. xii. 4. Marg. u Rom. ix. 15—18. 23.

the Lord conversed with Moses, not as in a dream or vision, but by an audible voice, in the most familiar manner; even as when a man speaketh face to face with his friend. There does not seem to have been any visible appearance in human form at the time: but it may be supposed, that the cloud appeared within as well as above the tabernacle; and that the voice came from the cloud, as when our Lord was transfigured. After some time Moses returned to the camp, probably to instruct and encourage the people: and, as it does not appear why Joshua should remain at the tabernacle when Moses left it, the latter clause has been thus rendered by some expositors; “He turned again to the camp with his servant Joshua, the son of Nun, a young man.” But “He” (that is, the Lord, as appearing in the cloud) “departed not out of the tabernacle.” Thus the Lord still refused to manifest himself in the camp of Israel.—Joshua was at this time about fifty-three years old; but he was a young man compared with Moses, and this was a common title for those who acted as servants to others.

V. 12—16. This is either the substance of the conference before spoken of (11), or else Moses returned to the tabernacle, and thus pleaded and prevailed for his people.—The Lord had promised to send an angel with him, to put Israel in possession of Canaan: but his refusal to accompany them implied that this would be merely a created angel, the minister of his providence. (Notes, 1—3.) Moses therefore pleaded, that God had not informed him whom he would send with him; though he had given him the fullest assurances of his special grace and favour. But if indeed he was thus distinguished, as one known by God; he prayed that he would “shew him his way,” the method according to which he purposed to deal with Israel, or the way in which he would have his people walk before him; that he might more fully know him, and continue to enjoy his special favour. Yet even this was not all he desired; for he earnestly requested the Lord to consider, that Israel was his people whom he had chosen, and who alone of all nations worshipped him. He could not endure to have his interests separated from those of his brethren: and this emphatically implied a request, that the Lord, though offended, would vouchsafe his special presence with his people, and set up his tabernacle among them, over which the cloudy pillar might rest, and in which his glory might appear above the mercy-seat. This plea, resulting from disinterested love to Israel, united with zeal for the honour of God, prevailed: and the Lord assured Moses, that his gracious presence should accompany him, in leading Israel to Canaan, the promised rest. But he, desiring still more particular and explicit assurances, intreated that they might proceed no further without that presence, and the religious advantages which it implied: as these only could fully prove, that the Lord specially favoured him and his people; and thus alone they would be distinguished and kept separate from all other nations on earth.

V. 17. The Lord at length, well pleased with Moses’s impertunity, fully granted his requests; and for his sake, (who was in this transaction a remarkable type of Christ,) the breach was made up. Accordingly, in the following chapters we read, that the tabernacle was erected, and the ordinances appointed, by which Israel was separated from other nations: and though Moses never entered the rest of Canaan, he found rest to his soul in the ways of the Lord, and in the comfort of his presence; and entrance into “the rest, which remaineth for the people of God.”

V. 18, 19. Encouraged by the condescending mercy of God, Moses ventured to request that he would “shew him his glory,” as a pledge of his special favour, and an earnest of the accomplishment of his promises.—He seems whom I will be gracious, and will shew mercy on whom I will shew mercy.

20 And he said, ^xThou canst not see my face: for there shall no man see me, and live.

21 And the LORD said, Behold, there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand upon a rock.

22 And it shall come to pass, while my glory passeth by, that I will put thee ^yin a cleft of the rock; and will ^zcover thee with my hand while I pass by.

23 And I will take away mine hand, and ^athou shalt see my back-parts: but my face shall not be seen.

to have meant something distinct from the external displays which he had witnessed, and of a more spiritual nature. Accordingly, the Lord promised to "cause all his goodness to pass before him;" that he might have a clear discovery of his holy perfections, which, though transient in itself, would leave a permanent impression on his mind.—The goodness of God may either mean, in general, the holy excellence of his nature, which is altogether lovely; or his kindness to sinful men, in all its varied exercises; but especially his unfathomable love and mercy, as manifested, in harmony with infinite justice and holiness, in the salvation of Christ: for this is the grandest display which we are capable of beholding, and to us by far the most interesting. (1 John iv. 8—10.)—At the same time, the Lord promised to proclaim his name before Moses; and an account of this transaction is recorded in the next chapter. He also added, "And I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and I will shew mercy on whom I will shew mercy." As if he had said, 'I will pardon what sinners I please; nor shall any degree of guilt bar this sovereign exercise of my mercy.' (Note, Rom. ix. 15—18.) Thus, while some, whose crimes appear to us of inferior malignity, are left to hardness of heart, and suffer the deserved punishment of their evil deeds; in other instances, "where sin hath abounded, grace much more abounds."

V. 20—23. "No man hath seen God at any time," for he "dwelleth in the light which no man can approach unto;" so that "no man hath seen him, or can see him." It is therefore evident, that all the appearances of God, spoken of in Scripture, were far different from a visible display of his essence, or essential glory, which in its own nature is invisible: and this applies equally to the familiar appearances with which the patriarchs were favoured; the more awful and glorious manifestations which were made to the prophets in vision; the Shechinah, or visible glory which appeared above the mercy-seat; and the manifestations vouchsafed to Moses, when "the LORD spake to him face to face, as a man speaketh to his friend." And not only must the divine essence always continue invisible to our bodily eyes; but even the full discovery of the divine glory to our souls, or such an external splendour as might be rendered visible, would overwhelm and dissolve the feeble frame of man in his present state. In this sense, it seems to have been, that the Lord said to Moses, "Thou canst not see my face: for there shall no man see me, and live." Yet, as far as mortal man could endure the sight, Moses should have his request granted. In some place, near the spot where he was communing with God, he should stand upon a rock; (perhaps the rock in Horeb, whence the waters miraculously flowed;) and while the Lord passed by, in some most august display of his glory, he would put him in a cleft of the rock, and "cover him with his hand," or shelter him by his power, or perhaps veil the glory by a cloud. But when the overwhelming splendour was past, he would remove his hand, that Moses might behold his glory; as if a man should see, not the countenance, but the back of some august personage who passed by him.—It is not agreed what external appearance attended this display; but there is no sufficient reason to conclude that it was in human form, as the words, face, hands, and back-parts, seem to be used figuratively. The transaction, however, was doubtless emblematic. We can, in this world, see the glory of God, only as reflected from his works, or as revealed in his word: for the more direct display of his essential glory to the soul is reserved for the beatific vision.—The rock on which Moses stood, and in the cleft of which he was sheltered, was doubtless an emblem of Christ; in whose person, character, and salvation alone, we sinners may by faith see the glory of God and live: for there it appears in softened splendour; as the sun, when his brightness is diminished by a mist, is beheld more distinctly by the human eye.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS.

V. 1—11.

While multitudes of professed Christians perish in sin, God knows how to secure the honour of his faithfulness.—He often confers outward prosperity in anger on wicked men, who take it as their portion and look no further. But, while the conscience remains tender, prosperous ungodliness, and the removal of divine ordinances, will be dreaded as the heaviest judgments.—Yet obstinate wickedness, under the means of grace, ensures the severest vengeance.—Every commandment of God to sinners implies some degree of encouragement; and in humble obedience they should wait to see what the Lord will do with them.—When he calls to weeping and mourning, those enjoyments and ornaments, which at other times are allowable, will be laid aside and slighted by the true penitent: and indeed it is most shameful, if Christians refuse to part with their ornaments, in compliance with the demands of decency, charity, and perhaps justice, while idolaters give up theirs for the sake of their worthless idols!—Yet alas! external expressions of humiliation do not always, or indeed generally, prove that the heart is truly humbled before God.—When the Lord appears about to leave a degenerate church or people, we must be decided in protesting against prevailing iniquities, in withdrawing from obstinate offenders, and in following the word and ordinances of God, whithersoever they go, let who will stay behind: and when young persons love his courts, it promises a useful and honourable old age. (Note, Ps. xcii. 13—15.)

CHAP. XXXIV.

Moses is commanded to hew two tables of stone, and to ascend mount Sinai alone, 1—4. The Lord proclaims his name, and Moses worships, 5—9. The Lord renews his covenant with Israel, and repeats many laws before given, 10—27. Moses, after forty days' fasting, returns with the tables of the law: his face shines, and he covers it with a veil, 28—35.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, ^a Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first: and ^b I will write upon these tables ^c the words that were in the first tables, ^d which thou brakest.

2 And be ready in the morning, and come up in the morning unto mount Sinai, and present thyself there to me ^e in the top of the mount.

3 And no man shall ^f come up with thee, neither let any man be seen throughout all the mount: neither let the flocks nor herds feed before that mount.

4 And he hewed two tables of stone like unto the first; and Moses rose up early in the morning, and went up unto mount Sinai, as the LORD had commanded him, and took in his hand the two tables of stone.

5 And the LORD ^g descended in the e xix. 20, 24. xxxiv 12. Deut. ix. 25.

f xix. 12, 13. 21.
lev. xvi. 17.
1 Tim. ii. 5.
1 Heb. xii. 20.

g xix. 18. xxxiii
9. Num. xi. 17.
25. 1 Kings viii.
10—12. Luke ix
34, 35.

a See on xxxi. 18.
—xxxii. 16.
Deut. x. 1.
b 29 Deut. x. 2—4.
c 1's. cxix. 80.
d xxxii. 19. Deut.
ix. 15—17

V. 12—23.

The Lord will shew such tokens of his favour to his approved servants, as shall be evident to all their opposers; and in communion with himself will make them rich amends for all their troubles.—Whatever interest we have at a throne of grace, we should improve it in behalf of others; remembering that our God delights in and honours importunity: and we should take encouragement from success, to request still more and more.—If we have any useful knowledge of him, it arises from our having been first noticed by him with distinguished regard: and it will lead us to desire to know more of him, of his ways, and of his special grace, day by day. We shall therefore in every undertaking, and in all our removals, urgently desire to be under his guidance; earnestly pray, “that unless his presence go with us he will not carry us up thence;” and be careful that covetousness or conveniency do not draw us from our proper place, or to a distance from his ordinances. Nor should we forget, that as the Lord's people are distinguished and separated by peculiar privileges from others; so they are called to separate themselves, that they may “be unto him a peculiar people “zealous of good works;” which is both the effect of divine teaching, the evidence of divine grace, the present rest of the soul, and the earnest of everlasting rest.—They, who have been favoured with a glimpse of the Lord's glory and a taste of his goodness, will ardently desire more full discoveries and communications; and, as here “they see through a glass darkly,” they will by that desire be gradually rendered willing to depart hence, that they may “see him face to face.” In the mean time they will thankfully, as sheltered in the rock of salvation from the consuming fire of his holiness and justice, contemplate his footsteps and the discoveries made of his glorious perfections, in all his works, but especially in the work of redemption: and these views are peculiarly suited to humble them; to wean them from the world, and to eclipse all its vain splendour; and gradually to transform them into the image of him, whom they thus contemplate by faith, through the teaching of his Holy Spirit. (Note, 2 Cor. iii. 17, 18.) If then he causes all his goodness to pass before us, and makes us acquainted with his NAME, as a God of grace and mercy; while we acknowledge our obligations to our heavenly Advocate, who by his prevailing intercession hath completely repaired the breach which sin hath made; we may well be willing to wait for further discoveries, till we depart hence to be with him.—Finally, let not sinners forget, that “he, who is gracious to whom he will be gracious, and hath mercy on whom he will have mercy,” hath also assured us, that “him, who cometh unto him, he will in no wise cast out.”

NOTES

CHAP. XXXIV. V. 1. (xxxii. 15, 16.) To remind the people of the sin, through which the former tables had been broken, the Lord would not prepare these himself, but Moses was ordered to hew them, or prepare them, for the writing; which it seems was not a work of very great labour or exactness, for it was speedily performed.—When God made man in his own image, the moral law was written in his heart without any external created concurrence: but since the covenant then made with him was broken, the ministry of men has been used, both in giving the Scriptures, and in bringing sinners to believe and obey them. Yet the whole writing is the Lord's: all Scripture was given by inspiration from him; and he alone can write the law in the heart, so as to produce true conviction of sin, penitent faith in Christ, and willing and unreserved obedience.

V. 2, 3. The people were tried forty days more, whether they would wait for the return of Moses, though they “knew not what was become of him:” and the injunctions given on a former occasion, being now rendered still more strict, would tend also to impress them with an awful sense of the divine holiness, their own exceeding unworthiness, and the Lord's special regard for Moses. (Marg. Ref.)

V. 4. It does not appear whether any persons were left in authority at this time, or not. Aaron had greatly offended, and Hur is no more mentioned in the history. (xxiv. 14.)

V. 5—7. According to the promise made in the preceding chapter, the Lord met Moses in a cloud on the mount, and thence proclaimed his NAME, or concerning his NAME; that is, those perfections, and that character, which are denoted by the name JEHOVAH. This was proclaimed in an audible voice, that Moses, and from him Israel, and all the earth, might know the God with whom they had to do: not only that there was a God, but what cloud, and stood with him there, and proclaimed ^h the name of the LORD.

6 And the LORD ^l passed by before him, and ^k proclaimed, ¹ The LORD, the LORD God, ^m merciful and gracious, long-suffering, and ⁿ abundant in goodness and ^o truth, his moral perfections were; and consequently what he must require of them, and what they might expect from him. When the Lord made himself known to Moses by the name, I AM THAT I AM, he declared unto him, (as in this passage by the words, “the LORD, the LORD God,”) his self-existence, unchangeableness, eternity, omnipotence, omniscience, and omnipresence; with his authority, as everlasting, absolute, and universal Sovereign, Lawgiver, and Judge; who, having created the whole world, and still upholding and providing for it, demands all love, worship, and obedience from his rational creatures. But here especially are made known the moral perfections of this eternal God: for he first, in a variety of expressions, declared his mercy and grace, with which sinners are especially concerned; that they may both be certified there is hope, and know from whence that hope arises. “The LORD “God is merciful;” that is, condescending and compassionate, as a father to his children; ready to relieve the indigent, and to rescue the miserable: gracious, or propense to bestow unmerited benefits, nay, to be kind to such as deserve his hot displeasure: and long-suffering, or slow to anger, patiently bearing the multiplied provocations of his rebellious creatures, affording them space for repentance, and not delighting in their misery; but only punishing when the honour of his name and law, and the welfare of his universal and everlasting kingdom, require it. He is also “abundant in goodness and truth;” that is, the riches of his liberality and bounty are infinite; the whole creation is replete with his benefits; all creatures, even sinners, abundantly receive them, though they abuse them and are ungrateful for them: and all that he reveals is infallible truth; all that he proposes, is in absolute sincerity; and all that he promises, is in perfect faithfulness; while he hath revealed, proposed, and promised, even to us sinners, such abundant goodness, as can neither be expressed nor conceived.—“Keeping mercy for thousands;” that is, continually shewing mercy in all its various exercises, to thousands of sinners, and having still inexhaustible treasures for thousands more, yea, for increasing numbers till the end of time: doing all good to those who trust in his mercy at present, and reserving good for them in future, even to eternity: and not for them only, but for their “children’s children;” “for his mercy endureth for ever.”—“Forgiving iniquity and transgression and “sin:” because all his mercy and goodness either make way for the full, free, and everlasting forgiveness of every kind and degree of sin which can be specified; or they consist in it, or result from it.—“And that will by no “means clear the guilty:” all this mercy and grace consist with the most entire hatred of all moral evil, and the most absolute determination to punish it: indeed, the holiness and justice of God are a part of his goodness and 7 ^p Keeping mercy for thousands, ^q forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin, and that ^r will by no means clear the guilty; ^s visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children’s children, unto the third and to the fourth generation.

